RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

R.C.A.F. Wolf Squadron Leaders in Britain Set Grand Records in Best Tradition of Air Force

(By F/L. BASIL DEAN)
(RCAF Public Relations Officer Overseas)

This is the story of a tradition. Not a tradition which goes back for years and centuries, but one which was built in a few months amid the roar and the splendor of the air war over Europe.

It is the story of one of the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadrons in Britain, and is linked closely with the name of a brilliant commander who is now missing—shot down while attacking enemy E-boats from low level over the North Sea. His name is Wing Commander Leslie Sydney Ford, D.F.C. and bar, son of a physician in Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

Ford had left the squadron with which this story is concerned before he was shot down; he had been promoted to acting wing commander and given charge of a Canadian Spitfire wing in the northeast of England. But he left his imprint so strongly on the formation which he once commanded that his name will be associated with it for the rest of the present war.

The story begins in the early months of 1941 when, under a new policy, the first of a series of Canadian squadrons was formed from R.C.A.F. personnel serving in Britain.. It started off with American-built Tomahawk fighters; but soon afterwards switched to what was at that time the finest single-seat aircraft in the world— the Spitfire Mark Vb. That summer, it began operations.

The Battle of Britain was long over; no longer did the bombers, the fighter-bombers or even the fighters of the Luftwaffe across the English coast in force, and combats, if they were to be found at all, had to be sought over the enemy's own airfields. It has been that way ever since.

And so it is that all the air fighting that the pilots of this squadron have ever done has been carried out in enemy territory. The forty-six and a half confirmed victories with which, early in the summer, it had been credited, were won over the airfields of Occupied Europe.

A few months ago, the squadron decided on a name for itself—the "Wolf" squadron, so named because of the wolf's head which is part of the unit's badge. The name is famous in Canada now, and the exploits of the men who have helped make it famous are relatively well known. The squadron has a tradition of air fighting of which Canada should be proud; but it is as well to remember, now that the war is still in progress, that it was built at the cost of much labour and many lives.

The Wolf squadron got little chance to knock down Huns until August, 1941—to be exact, on August 19th., precisely one year before Dieppe. That day, four enemy fighters were destroyed. Another three were knocked down on September 27.

But it would be foolish to dream that the progress of fighter squadrons is one long string of victories over the Hun. Men are lost in the course of sweeps over France. Some of them bale out in enemy territory and spend the rest of the war as prisoners; others are killed in their cockpits by enemy fire and their Spitfires crash in the fields of France. Some, fortunately, reach the English coast in their damaged aircraft; others, baling out over the Channel, scramble into their dinghies and are picked up by the magnificent British Air-Sea Rescue Service.

The Wolf squadron has had its share of tragedy. One of its commanders, an English squadron leader in the R.A.F., went down over France in the spring of 1942; he is now a prisoner. Two flight commanders were lost at about the same time, with the result that only a few "old hands" with long experience of sweeps, were left. Much rebuilding was needed.

HE ADDED LUSTRE TO R.C.A.F. WINGS

Wing Commander L. S. Ford, D.F.C., and Bar, of Liverpool, Nova Scotia, now reported missing, who led the "Wolf" squadron of the R.C.A.F. into the creation of brilliant tradition. — (R.C.A.F. Photo).

It was done, mainly, by the new squadron commander, a brilliant New Zealand squadron leader who had destroyed 18 enemy aircraft during the Battle of Dunkirk and the Battle of Britain. This was Squadron Leader Alan Christopher Deere, D.F.C. and bar—later to become a Wing Commander and to win the D.S.O. When Deere took over, the squadron was naturally shaken by its succession of losses; but Deere's confidence, and his terrific fund of knowledge in matters of aerial combat, soon helped to fuse the squadron once again into an expert fighting team. It looked as though a scintillating chapter in its history was about to be written.

But by one of these sombre chances of war, most of Deere's work was ruined by another tragedy. Although, as the world can see plainly for itself, the air armies of the United Nations control the skies over Northern Europe, mischance will sometimes give the enemy a limited local superiority, especially as the Luftwaffe is careful to do its fighting over its own bases.

One day in the summer of 1942, Deere led his squadron across the Channel. It ran smack into a horde of between 40 and 50 Focke Wulfs, which darted out of cloud cover from all directions. There was little that oculd be done except to extricate the squadron as well and as quickly as possible. But the best skill in the world could not have averted tragedy that day; five Spitfires were shot down. It was not until some time later that the rest of the squadron heard that several of the pilots were safe and prisoners of war.

It was a blow from which no squadron could have readily recovered, and the Wolf squadron was withdrawn from the front line and sent to a quiet area to re-form its order of battle. There it stayed for several weeks.

On August 12, 1942 Ford came into the picture. He had served with the squadron at the time of its formation, just after finishing his operational training. (He had given up his course in philosophy at Acadia University to enlist with the R.C.A.F. as an A.C.2). Then he had gone to a Canadian Hurricane bomber squadron, and after that to another Hurricane bomber squadron of the R.A.F. which was just forming and which needed, as a nucleus, men with previous experience in a difficult and specialized technique. His record of victories included one destroyed sunk with bombs, one destroyer and several merchantmen damaged.

Seven days after Ford took over, he led his squadron into the furnace over Dieppe on August 19th. In the 12 months that followed its first victories on August 19th, 1941, luck had run so strongly against it that it had added only eight more enemy aircraft to its score, which now stood at 12 destroyed. Its pilots were hot for vengeance; and vengeance they obtained.

Over Dieppe, flying Spitfires which the engineer officer had tinkered with until he succeeded in giving them greatly enhanced performance at low altitudes, the Wolf squadron pilots destroyed six enemy aircraft for certain. Ford himself scored two. There were many probables and damaged. It retired from the front line again the next day, with its self-confidence back, to continue training in a quiet sector, and Ford began the process of moulding a collection of newly-blooded pilots into a trim fighting unit.

The task is in any event difficult. A fighter squadron is like a great professional symphony orchestra—a formation of expert, sensitive temperamental virtuosi who resent any discipline except the self-imposed discipline of their art.

A squadron commander, like the conductor of an orchestra, is required, firstly, to fuse and mould these varying skills and temperaments into a combination which will perform like a single instrument; and then to impose upon them the discipline of his own leadership so that the performance of the instrument has point and direction. But the comparison ends there, and ends abruptly. The orchestral conductor is flirting only with the plaudits of his audience; the fighter squadron flirts with death.

As the Wolf squadron trained together in the fall of 1942, with the lessons of the Dieppe victory and of those tragedies which had preceded it constantly in their minds, Ford infused his pilots with that enthusiasm for a high and difficult calling which is characteristic of flyers generally. His men knew what the stakes were, and under their leader they trained to the utmost limit. And when, in early 1943, the squadron moved into the Canadian fighter wing and thus, once more, into the front line, the perils which they knew were present were faced with the unstudied and nerveless precision of the skilled craftsman.

Around him, Ford had three experienced men who were soon to prove themselves outstanding. All three came from Toronto, and all now have won the D.F.C. Their names were: Charles Magwood, Hugh Godefroy and H. Deane MacDonald.

Magwood had been with the squadron longer than any other pilot, and had flown and fought with it throughout the summer of 1942. Godefroy was on his second tour of operations; he had completed one tour during 1942 and, in the interim, had served with a development flight and flown more than 40 different types of aircraft, ranging from Tiger Moth trainers to Liberator bombers. MacDonald, before joining the Wolf Squadron, had served in another Canadian fighter unit—the squadron which came overseas as No. 1 Canadian Fighter. He also had completed one tour of operations.

From the time it joined the Canadian fighter wing until the end of June, 1943, the squadron—flying the new Mark IX Spitfire—destroyed 28 1-2 German aircraft. (The half means" that the 29th was shared with a pilot from another squadron). Of these, 19 were destroyed by the four key pilots: Ford, (four); Magwood, (five); Godefroy, (four); and MacDonald (six).

Bu these individual scores give only a part-measure of these men's skill. They do not measure the qualities of leadership which combined to make the Wolf squadron a brilliant instrument of air combat.

The Canadian wing as a whole, which was led during the latter part of the spring and the early part of the summer by an English member of the R.A.F., Wing Commanded J. E. Johnson, D.S.O., D.F.C. and bar, was performing magnificently. Johnson's aggressive and utterly fearless leadership suited the Canadians perfectly; his own score mounted at the same time, and by the end of June had reached a total of 13 enemy aircraft, virtually all of them over enemy territory.

In the meanwhile, Ford was promoted and transferred to another station, where he became wing commander flying. One episode during his excellent leadership of his squadron stands out above all others. In two days during April, the Canadian wing destroyed 10 enemy aircraft; of these, eight were brought down by the Wolf squadron—two by Ford and three by Magwood.

On Ford's posting, Magwood became commander of the Wolf squadron; and under his guidance it continued as before. It was with great sorrow that the pilots learned a short time later, that Ford had been shot down while attacking enemy shipping in the North Sea and had been posted as missing. But they had the satisfaction of knowing that his work was being continued. The total of enemy aircraft destroyed by the squadron continued to mount, Magwood adding another to the three he had destroyed previously, before he became due for a rest from operations.

Godefroy succeeded Magwood as commander of the squadron, and its tradition continued unbroken. The men who are flying with it now know only too well how much they owe to that former leader, now missing, who set their standards for them and who gave them the confidence and courage to seek out and destroy the enemy in his own lair. The story is not finished, and will not be finished until the war is won; but that part of it which has been written here is an example of how Canadian history is being written in vapour trails, high in the blue above the storm and the stress of war.

VETERANS WHO HAVE HELPED BUILD R.C.A.F. FIGHTING TRADITION

Linked closely with the name of a brilliant commander — Wing Commander L. S. Ford who is now missing — are these three leaders who have contributed much to the fame of the Royal Canadian Air Force "Wolf" squadron. All of them have high scores of enemy aircraft destroyed and all have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. Squadron Leader Charles Magwood (CENTRE) now at home in Toronto on leave, succeeded W/C Ford as commanding officer [illegible] the squadron now under Squadron Leader Hugh Godefroy (RIGHT) of Toronto, the Spitfire squadron is continuing to add lustre to its tradition. Flight Lieut. H. Deane MacDonald (LEFT) is a flight commander in the squadron, is on his second tour of operations and at last reports had a personal score of seven enemy aircraft destroyed.— (R.C.A.F. Photo).

KISKA ISLAND OCCUPIED

Mountain Front Line Cracked Wide Open by Allies

Abandon Heavy Guns in Hasty Flight To Inner Defences Of Strategic Post

TAKEN JANUARY, 1942

By WILLIAM F. BONI
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 21 (AP). — The Japanese are in headlong retreat before bomb-battered Salamaua.

Their mountain front line cracked wide open, they have abandoned heavy guns in precipitous flight toward the last defences barring the Allies from that highly-prized air base on New Guinea's northeast coast.

Bomber almost daily for months by Allied planes, shelled by accurate mountain artillery and under relentless pressure of Australian and American jungle troops, the enemy at last has been routed from long-held ridge positions as near as two miles from the coveted air field.

Heretofore, the Allies have inched forward. Yesterday, they surged ahead in a general advance.

Enemy Poorly Supplied.

The enemy, poorly supplied and in dire need of re-enforcement, is "in full retreat to his inner citadel of defences at Salamaua itself," said today's communique from Allied headquarters.

"Machine-guns and artillery were abandoned along with more than 350 buried dead. Our troops are mopping up," the communique added.

The town of Salamaua, in Japanese hands since January, 1942, is built out on an isthmus. Its airdrome is two miles south near the point where the Francisco river empties into Bayern bay.

The solid line now held by the Australians and Americans below Salamaua roughly forms the letter "V". It is anchored on the coast at Buiambum where the Roosevelt Ridge begins. The easternmost end of this ridge is three miles from the southwestern end of the air strip.

GEN. ALEXANDER PRAISES CANADIAN FORCES IN SICILY

Allied Victory in Sicily Has Put Germany "In a Jam"

AMERICANS PRAISED

Allied Headquarters in Sicily, Aug. 21—(CP) — Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander of the 15th Allied army group in Sicily, today said the Canadian forces had done "extremely well" in the fighting that ended with complete occupation of the Italian island.

He also praised the American conquest of Northern Sicily as "magnificent," saying that during the fighting the Americans had performed engineering feats which "I would have never imagined possible."

"It was a wonderful feat," he continued. "The Americans went all the way from Palermo to Messina in a fortnight. Why, you would not hike that distance in a fortnight in peacetime. They built many miles of road overnight. In one instance, 15 bridges were blown up in 20 miles, but it delayed the Americans only a matter of hours."

The Allied victory in Sicily has put Germany "in a jam," Gen. Alexander said, referring particularly to the problem of defending the Italian mainland. "She (Germany) does not dare to entrust the key defence points to the Italians, but must depend upon the Italians to help man the coasts. We are closing in on them from all directions."

He cautioned also against expectations of an early end of the war in Europe, but added "Germany is fighting on two fronts—in Russia and the Mediterranean, and she is having to use a very great deal of men while in the Mediterranean. The Luftwaffe is fighting on three fronts. So, in fact, you've already got your second front."

Soldiers Give Praise to Medical Units for Work in Sicilian Drive

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 19 (delayed)—(CP).—From Pachino Beaches to Mount Etna Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps units moved forward with the infantry, gunners and tank men, tending the wounded in the front line under fire and evacuating them for treatment behind the line. They saved hundreds of lives.

In every front line unit you heard praise for stretcher bearers and medical officers for the way in which they have carried on during battles. Behind these forward medical sections, there were large and competent organizations to care for the wounded.

Operating with the Canadian force were three field ambulances, two field dressing stations, two surgical units and one field transfusion unit. At a Sicilian base there is a Canadian General Hospital and a British casualty clearing station is an intermediate point between the field ambulances and the general hospital.

A feature of the Canadian medical organization in the field was the employment of surgical units close to the front line enabling badly wounded to be treated more rapidly than normally. The head of the Canadian Medical Services with the field formations, a colonel from Hamilton, Ont., developed the advance surgical centres, established ten or fifteen miles from the front and sometimes even ahead of a brigade headquarters.

Units Concentrated.

A centre includes a field ambulance, a field dressing station, at least one field dressing station and a transfusion unit. These units are concentrated together and casualties coming down from regimental first aid posts on the front receive the quickest possible treatment.

At divisional headquarters, handling the administration and direction of all medical units, is the Hamilton colonel. With him is Major J. K. Bell, Sarnia, Ont.

One field ambulance which handled casualties in some of the heaviest fighting is commanded by a lieutenant-colonel from Hamilton, Ont., with Major Don Young of Montreal and Ottawa, former McGill football star, second in command.

Other doctors include Capt. W. T. McFadyen, Brantford, Ont., and Capt. G. H. Midgley, Galt, Ont., the adjutant.

Major P. A. Scott, Picton, Ont., commands a hygiene section. Among other workers in field units is Capt. Phil Ryan, Port Hope, Ont.

Recently I spent some time at a Canadian advance medical centre and saw how the casualties are handled.

Jeeps Used For Ambulances.

The wounded were brought down from regimental aid posts at the front in ambulances or jeeps fitted with special racks to carry stretchers. Frequently car outposts were established in forward areas to aid the evacuation of medical centres.

The ambulance-jeeps were a great success and carried scores of wounded out of places where no other vehicle could get through. Some patients get complete treatment at the field ambulance and return to their unit while the more serious are sent back to a casualty clearing station or the general hospital.

Cases which require resuscitation, transfusion or emergency surgery are turned over to a field dressing station a couple of rooms down the hall. Surgical teams are right here, too, and major operations are performed by skilled surgeons. There are dentists at the medical centre to deal with jaw wounds and normal dental treatment.

A rest centre has been established behind the lines with Major A. M. Doyle, Kingston, Ont., neuro-phychiatrist, in charge. Here nerve shocked soldiers regain their health.

THE GREEK NAVY DESTROYED IN '41 IS NOW REVIVED

Half-Dozen Daredevil Destroyers in the Vanguard of Allied Sea Offensive

RESISTANCE FLAMING

By DANIEL DELUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 21 (AP).—The Greek navy, destroyed 28 months ago when blitzkrieg swept the little country, has been revived.

The Greek flag flies today from a force of some half-dozen daredevil destroyers that are in the vanguard of the Allied sea offensive against Italy and axis outposts elsewhere in the Mediterranean.

Greek surface raiders have run the gauntlet of the massive guns lining the strait of Messina.

A Greek naval vessel participated in the recent British Commando operation against Crete, an island that is certain to be Greek again, possibly before the last of its grapes are harvested this fall.

The Greeks are not only great sailors but great soldiers and, at home, Greek resistance is flaming to new heights.

Two key towns deep in the interior, Kalabaka and Servia, are officially reported by the Hellenic government to have been occupied by two Greek brigades and to be strongly held.

Many Greek villages back in the mountains have not seen an axis soldier for 18 months, officials say.

German troop commanders have been disinclined to keep forces stationed in isolated sections of the interior, especially if the population is violently hostile. When violence oc-

MARY CHURCHILL VISITS KITCHENER

Thrilled by Mounties in Their Bright Scarlet Uniforms

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 21. (CP)—Mary Churchill's enthusiasm and eager interest in the work of the Canadian Women's Army Corps was the topic of conversation today among the more than 1,000 girls in training at No. 3 Basic Training Centre she visited here yesterday.

The 20-year-old daughter of the British Prime Minister spent an informal afternoon inspecting the Camp. Friendly and cheerful, she puts groups quickly and completely at their east and within 15 minutes of her arrival had 47 A.T.S. girls here from the British West Indies singing native Calypso songs, joining with gusto in the choruses.

Tawny-haired and blue-eyed, she wore the uniform of a subaltern in the Auxiliary Territorial Services. She expressed delight with her stay in Canada. "I'm trying to get in as much as I possibly can. I love it", she declared enthusiastically.

The C.W.A.C. she termed "absolutely terrific".

"I met many Canadian service men and women when they first came over to England. Now, of course, they're rather busy elsewhere—to say the least".

Has Picture Snapped.

She stopped obligingly to have her picture snapped by Sgt. Pauline Morse of Providence, R.I., and to give a left-handed autograph to Joyce Spencley of Peterborough, Ont.

Miss Churchill answered without hesitation when asked what had impressed her first on her arrival in Canada. "Mounties," she confessed. "First their red coats, then their fine physical stature. I didn't realize they wore red coats except in the movies."

Being her father's aide-de-camp she finds great fun. "I'm used to being in a rush constantly so I don't find it too hard to keep up with him," she said. Beyond that she would say little of her father, explaining, "it's difficult to talk of one's parent."

In a brief address before the assembled personnel of the training centre, she spoke of her pride in being a member of the A.T.S., particularly in the anti-aircraft command. C.W.A.C. training was much the same as A.T.S., she said.

Political and Economic Problems That Follow Victory Are Taken Up

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Quebec, Aug. 21 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt today had completed their consideration of at least some stages of the military problems which brought them together here, and were deep into the political and economic considerations which follow inevitably in the wake of victory at arms.

Last night at dinner Mr. Churchill, Mr. Roosevelt, Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, and Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, met at dinner and talked far into the night.

Presumably the political and economic aspects of the war situation were given their first innings at that meeting.

Obviously the military problems facing these leaders, wherever they may be, are endless. But the assumption here is that the larger questions of strategy are settled and the rest remains with the general staffs who have already been together here for a week.

Based on Facts

These assumptions are based on the following facts:-

1. Yesterday morning at 10:30 Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt, who had been together all the previous evening and until 2:35 yesterday morning, left for a picnic and fishing expedition at a lake some 50 miles from Quebec, feeling they could take a holiday. Their immediate business was cleaned up.

2. Mr. Hull arrived in Quebec at about 1:45 p.m. E.D.T. to enter the conference which had been joined Wednesday by the British Foreign Secretary, Mr Hull's opposite number in the British cabinet. The two met with Mr. Churchill and the President at dinner last night.

Previously Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt had the benefit of reports from their chiefs of staff who have been together since a week ago yesterday.

Presumably it was those reports upon which they had been busy through Thursday night and early Friday morning.

The leaders, before they separate, probably on Tuesday, are expected to meet the press correspondents and tell them what they may send to their newspapers through the world.

Roosevelt Going to Ottawa

President Roosevelt is going to Ottawa, arriving there early next Wednesday morning to spend a day as guest of the Governor-General and the Princess Alice, and of Prime Minister Mackenzie King who will take the President on a motor tour Wednesday afternoon.

President Roosevelt will deliver an address which will be broadcast from a stand at the foot of the Peace Tower of the parliament buildings at 12 noon Wednesday and it is understood members of both Houses of Canada's parliament have been invited to go to Ottawa for that occasion.

After the Ottawa visit—probably late Wednesday evening — Mr. Roosevelt's train will move off toward the United States, in the "direction of Washington."

Prime Minister Churchill will not go to Ottawa on that occasion and probably not during the present visit, but he is expected to see other parts of Canada before he leaves this continent.

GERMANY BRINGS HEAVY PRESSURE AGAINST HUNGARY

Demands Immediate Help Against Russia or in Southeast Euurope

WANTS EIGHT DIVISIONS

Istanbul, Aug. 19 (Delayed)—Reports reaching Turkey from the Balkans said today Germany was bringing heavy pressure against Hungary for immediate help either on the eastern front against Russia or in southeastern Europe.

The German demand, the reports said, was for eight Hungarian divisions. If the help is forthcoming for use against Russia the Nazis would withdraw a corresponding force from the east to use in southeastern Europe.

The German-controlled Paris radio in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press in London said Col. Gen. Ludwig Von Osata, Hungarian Minister of War, had arrived at Hitler's headquarters and that Assil Mitakov, Bulgarian Minister of Justice, will leave Sofia for Berlin tonight to conclude what were described as "judicial agreements" with the German government.

The German radio, in a broadcast heard by the British Ministry of Information, reported the Bulgarian Minister to Berlin had returned to Sofia and was received in audience by King Boris.

German Airmen Flying Captured Flying Fortresses

U. S. Headquarters in Britain, Aug. 21 (AP)—German airmen are flying captured American Flying Fortresses alongside invading formations over France and Germany, but thus far have made no attempt to interfere with operations, it was disclosed here today.

What the enemy's plan is has not emerged—perhaps the hope is to sneak one or more ships into the raiding squadrons and open the guns against all those about.

The system if identifying Fortresses among each other is being changed at irregular intervals, however, and the formations fly so closely together that there is little opportunity for a successful effort to sneak into them.

So far the German-flown captives have been kept a good distance away.

U.S. TO BUILD 20 MILLION TONS SHIPPING IN '44

Combined Chiefs of Staff Give Approval to This Plan

2,000 VESSELS

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—The combined Chiefs of Staff of Britain, Canada and the United States have given final approval to a United States merchant ship construction program calling for more than 20,000,000 deadweight tons of shipping in 1944.

Although no public announcement was made, informed officials said today the Chiefs of Staff put the seal of approval on the Maritime Commission's new program last week.

How much higher than 20,000,000 tons the 1944 program was set has not been disclosed. Net year's schedule would produce around 2,000 vessels.

As disclosed by the Commission, the 1944 schedule calls for delivery of 319 of the speedy, new-type "Victory" cargo ships and about 200 of the Superior fast merchantmen of the C-type. Most of the other vessels will be the familiar mass-built Liberty ships.

Much of the credit for making available the powerful geared turbines needed to propel the new Victory ships, which will run 15 knots or faster compared with 11 knots of the slow moving Liberties, was accorded by officials to a quietly functioning British-Canadian Committee set up by the combined Chiefs of Staff.

The first task of the committee, charged with standardizing designs and speeding production, was finding gears and turbines for Victory ships at a time when the entire capacity output of manufacturers was going into naval vessels. The committee brought producers, shipbuilders and government offiicals builders and government officials the 26 types of turbines being manufactured to nine. Types of gears were reduced from 77 to 17.

NEW BLOWS AIMED BY DAY, NIGHT AT BATTERED ITALY

Objective to Knock Out Strategic Rail Connections in the North

WARSHIPS ACTIVE

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 21 (AP) — The sky battle for Southern Italy has fully begun, with the Allies shifting the focus of their overwhelming bomber power to the objective of knocking out the strategic railway connections in the north.

While American warships, moving along the Italian toe, poured concentrated fire into the left side of the 'Hell's Triangle" of the lower peninsula, Allied headquarters announced today that heavy new blows were struck by day and night bombers at already battered railway lifelines of the defenders in the Naples area.

The American naval units again hammered fortified points and railway targets at Gioia Tauro on the Gulf Gioia, 20 miles northeast of Messina, in a blasting of the mainland, while British sea forces sank eleven landing craft off Scalea in a night action.

All in Naples Area

Aversa, Benevento and Villa Literno—all in the Naples area—were swept by waves of medium bombers and fighters in day assaults and by R.A.F. and Canadian Wellingtons striking at night.

In another operation American fighters, in a slash at the enemy's air stroke, bombed the vicinity of Monserrato airdrome in southeastern Sardinia.

Meanwhile fighter-bombers and intruders held their dominant position in the sky over the Italian toe, attacking trains and small boats off the coast.

The naval announcement said that after capitulation of the Lipari Prison Islands north of Sicily to an American naval expedition on August 17 it was found that the islands "had been used by the Germans for military purposes."

Military Personnel Departs

All German military personnel had departed a few days before the surrender, however.

The American ships, hurling their shells into targets at Gioia Tauro, added their weight to the daily pounding of that place by Allied aircraft.

Aversa and Benevento railway junctions, 20 and 40 miles respectively northeast of Naples were hit by a medium bomber raiding force with fighter escort. Strong opposition was met and 14 enemy fighters were shot down. The Villa Literno railway yards north of Naples was left to night bombers.

Sir Samuel Hoare Received by Franco

La Coruna, Spain, Aug. 21—(delayed)—(AP) — Gen. Francisco Franco and Foreign Minister Count Francisco Gomez Jordana received Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador, at 6 p.m. today at Caudillo's villa in Pazo de Leiras near here.

Later this evening no communique had been issued, either by the British Embassy in Madrid or by the Spanish Foreign Office.

It is possible no communique will be issued at all, other than a brief note saying the ambassador called on the Spanish Chief of State.

Sir Samuel is returning to Britain next week. It is at about this time that he has made similar visits to Britain in previous years. It seemed likely his talk with El Caudillo and his Foreign Minister was concerned mainly with a routine review of Anglo-Spanish affairs.

(London dispatches quoted the evening news as declaring that "one thing we shall demand of him (Franco) is that Spain shall at least exhibit complete and careful neutrality from now on and not harbor any Axis war criminals, and we are in a position at last to make these demands.")

Canadian and U.S. Forces Take Island, No Opposition

King and Roosevelt Issue Joint Statement

(By J. F. SANDERSON, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

QUEBEC, Aug. 21 (CP)—A joint Canadian-American force has recaptured the Aleutian Island of Kiska, the last segment of North American soil occupied by the Japanese it was announced here today in a statement issued by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt.

LANDINGS MADE AUGUST 15th.

In reporting this victory today, the U.S. Navy said landings on the narrow beaches of the rocky island were made on August 15 and "no Japanese were found."

Originally, there were 10,000 Japanese on the island but many of them must have been killed by the air and sea bombardments and it was impossible to estimate how many were evacuated.

Indications were, the Navy said, that the Japanese only recently had fled from their positions laboriously built in the rocky terrain and along the beaches.

"Presumably," the Navy's communique said, 'the heavy bombardments by our ships and planes that have been carried on for some time and the danger to their supply lines by our capture of Attu made the enemy positions on Kiska untenable."

Heaviest Bombardment

Those bombardments, unreported in the last three weeks, were among the heaviest ever made on enemy positions in the Pacific.

Army and Navy bombing planes during the period from Aug. 1 to Aug. 14, the Navy said, struck 106 times, dropping ton after ton of bombs on the Japanese at Kiska.

Surface units joined in the pounding of the enemy garrison, standing off shore and hurling shells from their big guns onto the island in 15 separate bombardments.

How the Japanese escaped from Kiska under the heavy bombings and bombardments was not explained. The Navy said, however, that it was possible that enemy surface ships, taking advantage of the heavy fogs of the North Pacific, slipped in to evacuate remnants of the garrison estimated at one time to have included 10,000 Japanese troops.

Japs Slipped Away

A communique issued here at the same time by the United States Navy indicated the rocky, fog-bound island was taken without fighting, the Japanese having slipped away before the landings which started Aug. 15.

The size and make-up of the Canadian force was not made known here but President Roosevelt said he was gratified that American troops worked side by side with splendidly-trained and equipped Canadians.

This is the first time that Canadian and American soldiers have been on operations together in the long history of the two nations that they have combined to repel an invasion of North American soil.

The Canadian troops used in the Kiska operation were drawn from the Pacific Command, Prime Minister King announced.

Silence Explained.

Explaining the three weeks of silence on the Aleutians campaign, the Navy Department said that air and surface bombardments in the latter part of July had destroyed Japanese radio equipment, cutting Kiska off from communication with the enemy's homeland.

Any mention of progress of the campaign, the navy continued, "would have conveyed information to the enemy which he otherwise would not have had."

Silence, the navy said, particularly was desirable during the period immediately prior to the landings when transports were in areas exposed to submarine attack and while they were unloading troops and equipment.

The enemy evacuation represented the first time officially reported in the war that the Japanese have given up a major base without a fight. Previously on Attu they had fought almost to the last man, and in the final organized resistance on Attu some enemy soldiers had battled with bayonets tied to sticks.

The last resistance reported on Kiska was on August 13 when light anti-aircraft fire was encountered by bombers and fighters which that afternoon carried out nine bombing and strafing attacks on the island, destroying buildings at Gertrude Cove and North Head by direct hits and setting others afire.

The bombing assault was light, however, compared with other attacks during the August 1-14 period on August 10, the bombings reached a peak with 24 separate assaults on the enemy's installations. The bombers carrying out those missions encountered light anti-aircraft fire and started many fires.

WANTED: ONE SEAGULL

A telegram from a studio today asked if Utah, famed for its seagulls, could produce one to portray a supporting role. "No harm would come to the bird," it added.

17,000-Ton 'Floating Naval Yard' Keeping Warships Fit for Combat

(By HAROLD V. BOYLE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in the Mediterranean, Aug. 21. (CP)—A 17,000-ton "floating navy yard", that can repair everything from the mainspring of a watch to a battleship is keeping British and American ships in the Mediterranean fit for combat.

She is 600 feet long, 75 feet wide, and the 1,000 crewmen she shelters have been trained to fix almost everything that operates by bolt, nut, screw, wheel or electricity. She is unique. There is nothing like her afloat but there are more like her a-building.

"She can generate enough electricity to provide current for a city of 50,000 people and she can distill 63,000 gallons of fresh water a day from the sea", said Lieut. John H. Hart, chief engineer.

The ship is armed and could take care of herself in most emergencies with her deck and anti-aircraft guns, but she was built to service and repair other fighting ships rather than fight herself.

Her equipment includes two 50-ton deck cranes that can lower damaged equipment directly into the machine shops or foundry quarters in the bowels of the ship.

APPLE THIEVING QUITE PREVALENT

Although it is becoming somewhat of a bane to some citizens, the time-honored prank of young boys stealing apples is at its height in Belleville and causing city police no end of trouble.

Yesterday several city residents, in various parts of the community complained to police that mischievous youths were not only destroying private gardens by trampling over them in their attempts to steal apples, but in some cases actually breaking off tree limbs in their pilfering efforts.

In several cases police were successful in obtaining the identity of the responsible youths and stern warnings were issued by the boys in blue warning the lads to refrain from the actual destruction of property and stealing of other persons' fruits.

The red glow in the sky to the east of the city early Friday night, which many thought was a building aflame, was caused by the burning of brush along the Front Road. The fire was under control and no buildings were damaged, it was reported.

HASTINGS CANNERIES GET LABOR SUPPLY

The local branch of the Selective Service Board has announced that a sufficient number of women workers for the canning season have been found and that the canneries in Hastings County will be able to open and operate at full capacity as soon as the tomatoes are ready.

Some difficulty is being experienced in arranging for enough women to do this important work in Prince Edward County, but it is believed that by the time the canneries open there will be no trouble in supplying them with workers. The need for women, unaffected by the compulsory drafting into war work, to volunteer for this vastly important work cannot be stressed too highly and all volunteers will be doing an important war-time job by offering their time for the short season which will last from four to six weeks.

Tomatoes Feature Saturday Market

Again, as on Thursday, tomatoes predominated on the Belleville Market, bringing 40c a basket. Plums and peaches were being offered by one marketer at $1.10 and $1.35 per basket and muskmelons for 65c and 75c were to be seen for the first time this year. Watermelons increased in size and number sold for as low as 25c each to 75c each for the large ones. Green corn maintained its price of 40c per dozen ears, and cucumbers remained at the same prices as during the last two weeks, 75c the basket for gerkins, 50c the basket for medium pickling cucumbers and 5c each to three for 10c for the large sizes. A few pails of honey were sold on order for 70c the 4-pound pail.

Celery was 10c and 15c a head, sugar tomatoes and plum tomatoes were 20c and 10c a box. A small quantity of butternuts were 15c a box and were soon purchased. Melba and Duchess apples were plentiful and brought 45c for the former and 30c a box for the latter. Blueberries were still 35c a box or $1.75 for the six-quart basket. Stringbeans dropped in price to 10c a box and beets, carrots, and onions were 5c and 2 bunches for 15c.

Potatoes Lower

Potatoes came down in price for the first time on the market and sold for 50c instead of the ceiling price of 57c per bushel. A reported blight on the potato crop was investigated among the farmers on the market place and was confirmed by several. At present, they say, it has not become uncontrolable or serious, but with further hot winds and sultry nights it might easily affect the unmatured fall crop and retard the growth of the early variety. A practical spraying agent was given by one farmer who has successfully used it and saved his potato patch which had been touched by the blight, it is: 2 lbs. blue stone to 4 lbs. of lime mixed into 40 gallons of water and sprayed on the plants in the evening. This spraying should be done at least once each week.

Eggs 48c

The prices of eggs remained at 45c per dozen for medium grade and 48c per dozen for the large. Chickens rose from as low as 75c for broilers to $2.10 for large spring birds. Whitefish at the price of 36c per pound and were the only fish available on the market.

Many Attractions To Feature Fair

At the recent meeting of the Fair Board, under President Ben Bleecker, extensive plans were made for the 1943 Belleville Fair.

The board has placed at the disposal of the Race Horse Committee sufficient money to attract the best horses in Canada. There will also be a free-for-all running race.

Conklin's midway, which is attracting tremendous crowds in Toronto at the present time, at the "Fair for Britain" will be here. Garden Brothers and the military display will entertain the patrons each day and evening. Col. Donnan, O.C., of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) is arranging for a very prominent military man to open the fair on Monday evening, September 20th.

The horse show last year was the best in Eastern Ontario. Prizes in all classes are very attractive.

The various patriotic organizations are expected to have booths and serve light lunches, etc.

At this time of year, the Fair Grounds, with the bowling green, the fountain and lovely flowers, present a very attractive appearance. There are excellent buildings for exhibits of all kinds.

The secretary, Erle Denyes, states that inquiries for prize lists are coming in at a greater rate than usual.

On account of the war, the ladies' work and domestic science classes have been revised to accommodate a good deal of war work, for which good prizes and excellent specials will be paid. Included in the Red Cross division, which is open to all patriotic organizations are, socks, scarves, sweaters, helmets, mitts, pneumonia jackets, pyjamas, hospital shirts and machine-made quilts from wool, flannelette and print scraps. The secretary states he will gladly furnish all organizations with a prize list on request. He also states that for the Red Cross division, there will be no entry fee.

Red Cross Report for June and July

The regular meeting of the executive of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society for the combined months of June and July was held on Thursday with the president, Mr. M. P. Duff, in the chair.

Mrs. Mikel gave a report of the meeting she attended in Toronto on June 15th for conveners of Women's War Work Committees. Mrs Mikel felt she had learned much by her visit to the shipping depot. There is plenty of wool in the warehouses of the Red Cross Society. The work now requested is for "Capture Parsels," to be sent immediately to each prisoner as soon as he is reported captured.

Mr. Duff read considerable correspondence of a general character.

The treasurer, Mr. Zeran, reported for the combined months of June and July. Receipts $2166.57; Bills $557.06.

Miss Lynch reported sending letters to Hungary for local residents who have relatives in enemy occupied territory and answering enquiries concerning prisoners of war in Italy.

Women's War Work Com.

Mrs. Mikel reported for the Women's War Work Committee as follows:

Belleville Branch

During June and July 34 cartons of Red Cross goods were sent from the Belleville Branch to headquarters in Toronto, containing 3,331 articles. Knitted comforts numbered 848, of which there were 293 sweaters of all types and 105 pairs of socks.

Included also were 1,022 pieces of new clothing for British Civilian Relief, 1,053 rolled bandages, 35 leather jackets and 94 quilts and afghans. The attendance of workers in the several groups fell off sharply during the summer, but it is hoped that they will be back very shortly in full strength.

At the meeting held in June of the Chairmen of Women's War Work Committees of Ontario, much stress was made by Mrs. Fraser, the chairman of the Ontario Division, on the fact that the theatre and type of the war changing daily, consequently the demands for clothing and surgical supplies will be greatly increased. At present the Belleville Branch are working on clothing for Greek Relief. We are also working on aviators' belts, and hope to get this branch of work in much fuller organization soon. Word has come from the National Red Cross that a quota of hospital supplies is to be given shortly.

The different branches are busy with articles to be knitted for 5,000 "Capture Parcels." These contain everything a man needs who has become a prisoner of war, and one will be sent by the Red Cross to each man, addressed under his own name, as soon as he is reported prisoner.

Our present quota for knitting among other things, calls for 75 Air Force turtle neck sweaters and 75 pairs of khaki gloves. We hope the women who can knit these will apply at once for the wool, as this quota is marked "urgent." This means the quota must be finished as quickly as possible. You do not have to belong to any group in order to work in the Red Cross and anyone who is able to knit and sew at home will be supplied with material and instructions.

During July Mrs. Fraser made a visit to the Belleville headquarters. She was very much impressed with what she saw and commented on the splendid wock being done by the different groups. She asked that each and every group be conveyed her appreciation and delight with the quantity and quality—particularly the latter—of the work accomplished.

Respectively submitted,
(Lilian E. Mikel)

Chairman, Women's War Work Committee Belleville Branch.

Hastings County Heads All Ontario In July Production of Cheese

Hastings County again leads all the Counties in Ontario in the production of cheese for July. 1,613,540 lbs. of cheese were produced in July. This is a slight reduction in the amount of cheese made in July, 1942, when 1,732,191 lbs of cheese were produced. Hastings County also leads in the total production of cheese made in 1943.

The total production of cheese for the 7 months ending July, 1943 is 4,545,486 as compared with 5,730,686 for the same period of last year, although cheese production is down as compared with last year, butter production is up. For the 7 month ending, 1943, Hastings County produced 1,585,007 lbs. of butter as compared with 1,152,843 lbs. for the same period of last year.

At the present time pastures over the county are generally good and the milk flow is holding up very well for the time of year. Cheese factories were late in starting to manufacture cheese this spring and this accounts to a very great extent for the decreased production of cheese in Hastings County this year.

The War Today— Terrific Bombardment Will Herald Opening of Offensive in West

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Just before I sat down to write this column a New York banker stopped me in Rockefeller Plaza and asked the question which seems to be fairly seething in every mind.

"Do you believe the western Allies will be able to get ahead with the big job—the invasion of France—this year?" he said.

I took that jump cautiously, for it's one of those spots where you can have a nasty spill.

"The indictions are that it's possible," was my reply. "One might make it a bit stronger and say it's even probable, but there's nobody outside the Allied High Command who can give a definite answer to that right now."

So that's precisely the way this momentous issue stands. We must wait and see, but I believe we shall get fair advance warning of any invasion of western Europe.

That will be in a terrific bombardment of the invasion coast from the air, and perhaps from the sea as well. The German coastal defence will have to be paralyzed before we can drive the noses of our barges up on the beaches.

When that moment arrives we are likely to get a solution of the mystery of where the Nazi bomber force—if any—has been hiding out these many moons. Many observers incline to the idea that Hitler has been holding his depleted air fleet in reserve for just this great emergency upon which hang the immediate fortunes of Germany.

That strikes me as a logical assumption. While we don't know the exact condition of the Nazi air force, we do know that some time ago the Nazis cut their bomber production down to a skeleton in order to permit the manufacture of more fighter planes. This means, of course, that the Nazis have gone on the defensive, since fighters are a defensive weapon.

Pending the time of invasion, the Anglo-American allies are going ahead with their job of softening up Germany by bombing of an intensity and destructive power never before seen. We thought the Hitlerian blitz over England in 1940-41 was terrible—and it was—but it was mild as compared with what the Boche are getting now.

CAPTURE WOULD MENACE ENEMY SET-UP IN UKRAINE

Russians Encircle All but Thirteen Miles of Kharkov Itself in Fierce Battle

London, Aug. 21. (CP)—Pointing apparently for Konotop, Key Junction on the Kiev-Bryansk railway, 170 miles northwest of Kharkov, Russia troops today were on the march deep into the heart of the Ukraine.

They stormed into Lebedin, 100 miles northwest of Kharkov and midway between captured Akhtyrka and Sumy, in a series of smashing tank and infantry attacks, Moscow announced in a special communique. Konotop lies 70 miles to the northwest of Lebedin and its capture would menace the whole Nai supply set-up in the Ukrainian theatre.

London reports, meanwhile, indicated Soviet troops had encircled all but 13 miles of Kharkov itself.

A Berlin broadcast, quoted by BBC, said the Russians "are attacking furiously at six widely separated points along a 1,000-mile front" between Leningrad and Murmansk, along the Finnish border. The report, if true, means the Russians are opening a new offensive in the north.)

A total of 6,100 Nazi troops were killed in Friday's fighting on all fronts, according to a Moscow communique.

Stronger Enemy Forces

On the Bryansk Front, the Germans were throwing strong forces against the steadily advancing Soviet columns, but the Russian war bulletin said they were forced to fall back to "well-prepared" positions after abandoning valuable war dumps. In the Spas Demensk offensive where the Russians were striking out for Smolensk, they pressed on despite fierce counter-attacks by fresh German reserves. This advance threatened a whole segment of German defences between Bryansk and Smolensk.

Northwest of Kharkov a fierce battle of tanks resulted in 45 German units being knocked out by accurate Soviet fire, and the enemy gave way before the slashing Red drive which occupied more than 20 towns and villages.

To the southwest of Kharkov, the Germans were falling back road by road and village by village. It was here the Germans were striving desperately to hold their single railway escape line and the battle raged with unabated fury. Soviet warplanes smashed German pill-boxes and strong points.

WAR CONFERENCE LIKELY TO END BY MONDAY

Expect Roosevelt Will Spend Tuesday at Ottawa as Guest of Mr. King

HARD WORK AHEAD

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 20 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, with their immediate advisers, today seemed settled in for a weekend of solid, hard work which observers here think will bring their sixth war conference to a conclusion by Monday at the latest.

After the conference President Roosevelt will spend a day in Ottawa and the best guess here is that it will be Tuesday. Definite details of the visit are still awaited from Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Roosevelt's host here.

It was announced this morning at the regular press conference that Mr. Churchill definitely will not go to Ottawa with President Roosevelt.

This does not preclude the possibility of him visiting other parts of Canada or the United States before his return to London, it was said.

Steve Early, President Roosevelt's press secretary, attended this morning's meeting with the correspondents and told them that when President Roosevelt leaves for Ottawa it will not be his intention to return to Quebec.

A meeting was in progress at the Citadel this morning between Prime Minister Mackenzie King, conference host, and his immediate advisers, completing plans for the visit to the Canadian capital.

These details were expected to be completed this afternoon, a spokesman said. Plans have not been made public but it is believed likely Mr. King will send or has sent messages to members of both Houses of Parliament inviting them to be in Ottawa in the event President Roosevelt agrees to address a meeting of both houses.

Soldier Suffers Gunshot Wound Stopping Hold-Up

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 20.—(CP)—Sgmn. David Smith, 26, of Ancaster, Ont., near Hamilton, suffered a gunshot wound in his right side early today when he attempted to stop four men from stealing his automobile parked in front of his rooming house.

He was rushed to hospital suffering loss of blood but after a blood transfusion was reported "doing nicely".

Sgmn. Smith's wife, who joined in the scuffle, obtained the licence number of the automobile said by police to have been stolen, in which the men escaped.

Police said it was thought bullet which struck Smith was fired by a man standing on the running board of stolen car. It grazed the soldier's hip bone and embedded itself in the ground.

Mrs. Smith did not require hospital attention and is recovering from shock at her home.

Sgmn. Smith was stationed at Vimy Barracks, Barriefield, Ont.

Restrict Movements Of Hockey Players

Port Arthur, Aug. 20—(CP)—Restrictions on the movement of Canada's younger hockey players were announced today by Frank Sargent, President of the C.A.H.A., as a result of conferences held recently at Toronto.

No branch to branch transfers will be granted to juveniles, bantams or midgets, unless a player can qualify for a transfer as follows:

(a) Player whose parents and family change their residence and the player continues to reside with his family;

(b) Bona fide students in attendance at any recognized preparatory school, university or college, provided that they be in residence at such institution by Jan. 6.

No transfer, however, will be granted a student if there should be a school, of equal status in the town or city in which he now resides to the one which he plans to attend.

All transfers must be approved by the Registration Committee of the C.A.H.A. before being granted, and if a player should have obtained his release from his former club, it does not necessarily mean a transfer will be granted.

Sir Bernard Paget Ranked as General

London, Aug. 21 (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Sir Bernard Paget, commander-in-chief of British home forces, was promoted to the rank of general yesterday the War Office announced. A similar promotion was given to Lt.-Gen. Sir William Platt, commander-in-chief of East Africa.

Some British sources predicted today the promotion for General Paget meant that he will be Britain's invasion commander from the west.

He has commanded home forces since 1941. In 1940 he directed the evacuation of British troops from Andalsnes, at the conclusion of the brief campaign in Norway.

His duties in the last two years have thrown him much in contact with the Canadian army in Britain and its commander, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

Lieut. and Mrs. Arthur Kerr and son, Teddy, have returned to their home in Kingston.

Among the graduates in medicine at Queen's University was Dr. Laurence O'Connor, husband of the former Louise O'Leary of Tweed. Dr. O'Connor, who is a member of the R.C.A.M.C., has been stationed in Western Canada, for the past few months.

Miss R. A. Porritt, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Maunders and Mr. Maunders of Almonte, returned on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sager and Master David Goldie of Peterboro, attended the "Fair for Britain" at Riverdale Park on Wednesday.

The following five girls have contributed $10 to the Tweed branch of the Red Cross: —Marian Hall, Colleen Colgan, Helen Orr, Margaret Bateman and Audrey Dales. This is an example for others to assist such a worthy cause.

Miss Pauline Quinn and Mr. Guy Hughes, who are to be married shortly, were honored by a number of their friends on Monday night at Miss Rayburn's cottage now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Quinn, who were host and hostess for the affair. Thirty guests were present.

Mrs. (Dr.) J. T. Davis, Kingston, is the guest of her brother, Dr. J. F. Doyle and Mrs. Doyle.

Miss Mary Quinn is visiting friends in Kingston this week.

WAR CONFERENCE LIKELY TO END BY MONDAY

Expect Roosevelt Will Spend Tuesday at Ottawa as Guest of Mr. King

HARD WORK AHEAD

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 20 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, with their immediate advisers, today seemed settled in for a weekend of solid, hard work which observers here think will bring their sixth war conference to a conclusion by Monday at the latest.

After the conference President Roosevelt will spend a day in Ottawa and the best guess here is that it will be Tuesday. Definite details of the visit are still awaited from Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Roosevelt's host here.

It was announced this morning at the regular press conference that Mr. Churchill definitely will not go to Ottawa with President Roosevelt.

This does not preclude the possibility of him visiting other parts of Canada or the United States before his return to London, it was said.

Steve Early, President Roosevelt's press secretary, attended this morning's meeting with the correspondents and told them that when President Roosevelt leaves for Ottawa it will not be his intention to return to Quebec.

A meeting was in progress at the Citadel this morning between Prime Minister Mackenzie King, conference host, and his immediate advisers, completing plans for the visit to the Canadian capital.

These details were expected to be completed this afternoon, a spokesman said. Plans have not been made public but it is believed likely Mr. King will send or has sent messages to members of both Houses of Parliament inviting them to be in Ottawa in the event President Roosevelt agrees to address a meeting of both houses.

Soldier Suffers Gunshot Wound Stopping Hold-Up

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 20.—(CP)—Sgmn. David Smith, 26, of Ancaster, Ont., near Hamilton, suffered a gunshot wound in his right side early today when he attempted to stop four men from stealing his automobile parked in front of his rooming house.

He was rushed to hospital suffering loss of blood but after a blood transfusion was reported "doing nicely".

Sgmn. Smith's wife, who joined in the scuffle, obtained the licence number of the automobile said by police to have been stolen, in which the men escaped.

Police said it was thought bullet which struck Smith was fired by a man standing on the running board of stolen car. It grazed the soldier's hip bone and embedded itself in the ground.

Mrs. Smith did not require hospital attention and is recovering from shock at her home.

Sgmn. Smith was stationed at Vimy Barracks, Barriefield, Ont.

Restrict Movements Of Hockey Players

Port Arthur, Aug. 20—(CP)—Restrictions on the movement of Canada's younger hockey players were announced today by Frank Sargent, President of the C.A.H.A., as a result of conferences held recently at Toronto.

No branch to branch transfers will be granted to juveniles, bantams or midgets, unless a player can qualify for a transfer as follows:

(a) Player whose parents and family change their residence and the player continues to reside with his family;

(b) Bona fide students in attendance at any recognized preparatory school, university or college, provided that they be in residence at such institution by Jan. 6.

No transfer, however, will be granted a student if there should be a school, of equal status in the town or city in which he now resides to the one which he plans to attend.

All transfers must be approved by the Registration Committee of the C.A.H.A. before being granted, and if a player should have obtained his release from his former club, it does not necessarily mean a transfer will be granted.

'Bomb, Burn, Destroy'

In language which the enemy can understand, especially those who are responsible for the calamity of war which the Axis brought upon mankind, the Rt. Hon. Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information, said at Quebec that the Allied chiefs now conferring at the Citadel in Quebec, are planning to "bomb, burn and ruthlessly destroy, in every way available to us, the people responsible for creating this war." What those plans are and how they will be carried out will be seen in action.

He explained that when the time comes, Hitler and Tojo and their tribe of gangsters will get the news of what is being planned at the Quebec Conference. But it will not come from the correspondents here nor indeed from the newspapers. It will be given them by admirals and generals and air marshals commanding fierce and well-equipped fighting men of the Allied Nations.

Blows that smash them will be a language the enemy can understand. The cries of justice of the overrun peoples they did not regard, they showed no pity, no mercy, they murdered and executed innocent men, women and children.

Well might the British Minister say that plans are being made to "bomb, burn and ruthlessly destroy in every way available to us the people responsible for creating this war."

The United Nations have the power and the might, they have the law of justice on their side and they have the will to bring the criminals to judgment and the determination to make the post-war world one in which no aggressor will dare to raise his head or hand.

'The Principle Remains Unchanged'

Prime Minister Churchill is outstanding as a wit and humorist and a master of English phrase.

Mr. Churchill a few days ago was at Niagara Falls, before he crossed the boundary line to go to meet President Roosevelt. A reporter asked him if he noticed any difference about Niagara Falls since his first visit forty years ago.

His answer was, "the principle remains the same."

That reply contains a wealth of truth and shows how deeply the great statesman and leader was thinking. It was a unique Churchill way of stressing a great truth — the lasting quality of great principles, in nature and in human conduct and in the relations between men and between nations.

"The principle remains the same" in Niagara as in life.

Many will always strive for liberty and for freedom. The great principles of right and justice will endure and outlast the petty aims and objects of individuals. The principle of nature remains the same through the ages. True to principle men will fight for liberty against aggressors and it is true to principle of the law of life that the tyrant must fall. The great principles of life in the Ten Commandments stand for all time as they deal with man's relation to God and to his neighbor and fellow-being. These are unchanged.

Perhaps as Mr. Churchill looked upon the mighty cataract of Niagara he saw in it the symbol of the principle in life that remains unchanged. It can be a picture of life in action and Mr. Churchill knows better than probably any other man in the world what life in action is, for he has seen action and has participated in action and has always been on the side that remains the same, enduring through time, the principle of right, justice and freedom.

A reply like Mr. Churchill's may of course be looked upon in as many different moods as there are people. One may say it was a light witty remark implying that the water still flows—a statement which anyone could understand but more likely he was also thinking of deeper things, even while he was on the brief outing while waiting the resumption of his journey into the United States, for he clothes his thoughts in words of richness and beauty and truth.

Record to be Proud Of Canada must be proud of her shipbuilding record in the merchant ship branch. Her naval construction has been large and now the merchant class of ships has reached the total of two hundred turned out in the course of the war. A new record was set the other day when in one yard three 10,000-ton merchant vessels slipped down the ways.

Canada's people have shown their enterprise, craftsmanship and skill and foresight.

The war has impressed the importance of the merchant marine and its peace advantages, too, are known. Canada has done heroically in this regard and has proven that she realizes her obligation as a power with immense possibilities in the world of the future.

Two hundred 1,000-ton cargo vessels make an aggregate tonnage of two millions which Canada has built in the less than four years of war.

But this is not all for a new keel was laid as the launching took place.

Now the same shipyards are going after a record for the time in putting a ship into commission. The record held at present on the Pacific coast is 89 days. It is hoped to make it in 59 days.

Royal Rations

(London People)

Food rationing is strictly observed by the King and Queen, Princess Elizabeth and all members of the Royal household and staff. Food and produce from the Royal gardens supplement the Palace rations.

The Queen herself supervises fruit bottling and jam making for the winter.

She also takes close interest in her household's rationing problems.

The Royal ration books are the same as those issued to the general public, except that the King and Queen and the Princesses have travellers' ration books.

When they go away to stay, the King and Queen take their food with them for the unexpired part of the week, and then receive their allowances in the ordinary way in the district where they are.

Love Ends Elephant

Increasing madness due to love-sickness made it necessary to shoot the elephant Dalia, which, despite the name, was a male, in the Zoological Gardens in Buenos Aires, Argentina. When all means of calming the pachyderm failed, Director Holmberg called in police, among whom was the crack shot. J. Duran. Duran fired two shots. Dalia did not fall, but rushed to his drinking trough, filled his trunk with water, and poured it over his bleeding head. He was still on his feet after six police bullets hit behind his ear and 26 buried themselves in his shoulder. Duran then fired a third shot, which entered the elephant's heart. He staggered and fell, dying some minutes later. Dalia was 60 years old and had been in Argentine 22 years. His madness began to develop soon after his mate died several years ago.

Women in Adversity

(London Times)

Lord Woolton, after watching a march-past of hundreds of East Suffolk members of the Women's Land Army at Ipswich, said he could confirm the opinion of the American woman who, after returning home, said that her outstanding impression was the endurance, patience and fortitude of British women.

They had, said Lord Wooton, been brilliant in adversity and, what was infinitely more difficult, patient in the daily routine of restriction. Girls in the Land Army had joined the fourth of the defence services of the country.

He thought of them not as agricultural workers but as a body of women who had bound themselves together in order to try to stave off starvation.

MIDDLE-AGE GARDEN

A garden in its middle age turns brown
instead of gray,
And rather stout the phlox appear; their charms all blown away.
The roses look a trifle worn, though still to bloom they try.
The peonies have done their task and wait the time to die.

The asters and the dahlias seem to dominate the place,
Though marigolds are at their best and show of age no trace,
But all the glory of the spring has vanished with the days
And every sign of middle age the garden now displays.

'Tis very plain that autumn soon will hint of coming frost,
When summer's final rose will pass to join its lovely lost.
The tall delphiniums will droop, the sunflowers fall to seed,
And age at last will close the toil of blossom and of weed.

MUCH CONJECTURE OVER ALLIED PLAN FOR FREE EUROPE

Anglo-American Parleys in Quebec Seen by Some as Growing Answer

POLITICAL ANGLES

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 21. (CP)—British parliament is in recess, likely to be called back only if Italy surrenders, but the question of what will happen politically to Italy when she capitulates or is beaten finally in the field of battle by the allies is provoking strong comment, particularly from critics of the government.

Every day editorial columns of many of the nation's newspapers are given to statement and conjecture about British and American political plans, and lack of an Anglo-American-Russian plan, for liberated Europe.

It is generally assumed the European political course for the next two decades may be guided or set entirely by the political policies the allies follow in countries they have occupied, or will occupy within the next few weeks or months. The question generally raised is this: should not Britain, the United States and Russia be combining on formation of this political policy before the necessity for its application arises?

The Anglo-American conference in Quebec was given by some observers as likely to provide the answer. Such political questions are considered likely to come second only to the immediate military plans.

Political Situation

The present war-front political situation is this:

1.—Britain and the United States continue to operat Amgot, which is non-politica and has instructions to suppress all political activity, antagonistic or otherwise.

2.—A body recently set up in Russia, the National Committee of Free Germany, may be the organization to which Russia will entrust civil administration if and when its armies enter Germany from the east. Its policies are not known, but it has no American or British representatives, just as Amgot has no Russian representative.

3.—Canada, and others among the smaller nations are taking preliminary steps to train occupation personnel. The Canadian Army has a short course for officers designed to fit them to meet preliminary problems of military occupation. A recent part of this course was concentrated on France, her political background, beliefs and problems.

While such influential newspapers as the Glasgow Herald and the Irish Telegraph of Belfast are commenting little on this lack of political cohesion, apparently willing to trust the government's silence, other publications hammer a ray at this situation almost daily.

Demand For United Policy

Most heated dissent comes from Aneurin Bevan's Radical Socialist Tribune, a National Weekly, and similar political journals. Their demands are for an immediate united policy, one which will allow the liberated peoples an immediate opportunity to create their own governments by election.

Pointing out that war "cannot by won by military means alone", the middle-left Daily Mirror of London said the allies need not only unity of military command, but "a resolute determination to stand together politically for the settlement that may not be very far off".

Late comment from the Liberal News-Chronicle was that Russia is anxiously waiting to see what sort of government will come into being in Italy", and "without previous consultations have begun to forge the political instrument by which they plan to prise out the remnants of Hitlerism after Germany's military defeat."

The authoritative London Times and Manchester Guardian also have swelled the rising tide of comment. The Times said that if Premier Stalin finds it impossible to leave his country while the enemy is still on his soil "other means of personal consultation exist or must be found; for the magnitude of the issues precludes any thought of allowing them to go by default".

Moscow, Aug. 20. (AP)— The Labor Magazine "War and the Working Class" declared today a Russian representative sent to Algiers to meet the French committee of National Liberation has been unable to do so for more than two months because he "met objections from Anglo-American authorities for supposedly military reasons".

The magazine published the article under the title: "French question awaits its solution". It said the Soviet Union had recognized Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Fighting French Committee and had all the more reason for a positive attitude toward the new committee, representing both de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud, because of the wider French circles involved.

36 R.C.M.P. (R) Men Help Guard Mr. Churchill

Toronto, Aug. 21 —(CP)—Three dozen Toronto businessmen, lawyers, insurance executives, war workers and others are helping guarding Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt at the Quebec conference, it is learned. The men are members of the Reserve Force, Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Powers Model Rises to Fame As Movie Star

(By ARLENE WOLF)
(Associated Press Writer)

New York (CP)—When a movie company invests $2,000,000 in a pretty girl that's news. And when it gives the same pretty girl the leading roles in three class A pictures, and released them in as many months, that's even bigger news.

But Marguerite Chapman, for whom all these bells toll, takes it all very calmly. Those blue eyes of hers may spell romance under the Klieg lights, but off the set, she's just a gal who knows where she's going—and knows how to get there.

A couple of years back, the 22-year-old star of "Destroyer" got tired of saying "White Pla-yuns, long distance," for the benefit of the telephone company. She put down her earphones, and invested the savings from her $18 a week in a modelling course.

"The school wanted me to model in wholesale houses," she says. "But I wanted commercial work. So I saw Mr. Powers."

It would be more accurate to say that Mr. Powers saw her. Marguerite met him in an elevator, and by the time they had walked down the hall to his office she was a Powers girl—making more than $100 a week.

On To Hollywood

That satisfied her for about 8 months. "Then I realized," she says, "that I couldn't go any higher in modelling. So I decided to go to Hollywood."

Thousands of pretty young things decided to go to Hollywood, and thousands got there. The thing that's different about Marguerite is that she didn't get stymied taking orders in a drive-in, or serving the celebrities in a restaurant. She entered Hollywood with a bang.

"At first I did everything wrong," she laughs. "The first party I went to at Jack Warner's house, I fell down a flight of stairs and landed right on my face in the middle of a bunch of stars. Then I told the actor I had enjoyed his pictures as a child."

Marguerite doesn't have to worry about the star's room any more, for it's hers. It took four years, and 20 smaller parts before she graduated to top billing, but she made it. In 18 months, she's filmed "Destroyer". "Appointment to Berlin," and My Kingdom for a Cook."

Conference to Consider Position of Students

Ottawa, Aug. 21 (CP)—A conference of Selective Service officials and Canadian university heads will be held here Aug. 30 to consider the position of 18-year-old students affected by last weekend's extension of the military call-up, it was announced Friday.

The extension dropped from 19 to 18 the age of those eligible for compulsory military training, although the announcement said 18-year-olds would not receive their medical orders papers until they reach the age of 18 years and six months.

Labor Minister Mitchell said that the position of the youths was under consideration by his department.

The Causes of Meniere's Disease—Dizziness Ear Noises, Loss of Hearing

Where there is a partial loss of hearing, dizziness, ringing in ears, nausea and vomiting, it is called Meniere's syndrome or group of symptoms.

The fact that many of these cases are relieved by blowing open the eustachian tube, others by cutting down on table salt, and still others by use of certain drugs, show that there must be various causes for this group of symptoms. It also shows that patients with these symptoms must not expect relief at once because finding the cause may take some time.

In Archives of Otolaryngology (ear and throat diseases), Dr. A. Atkinson, New York, states that there are two important reasons for the failure to find the cause—partially closed eustachian tube, too much water in ear tissues adjoining the ear; second, failing to remember that none of the single known causes or the presence of more than one of the usual causes cannot explain every case of Meniere's disease. Thus there are a very large number of cases that will not respond to the usual treatment. This large number of cases can be divided into at least two divisions, each with a different cause. Some may be caused by allergy (sensitiveness to various substances) and others (the largest number) may not be sensitive to these substances, that is they are not allergic.

In other words, in those who are allergic, the blood vessels are more widely open than normal ,whereas in the non-allergic the blood vessels are not as widely open as in the normal. In the first class there is a disturbance of the nerve supplying the part and in the second or large class there is a disturbance in the structure of the are due to pressure, spasm, hardening of the bloodvessels, and finally to infection.

The first thought then is to consult your family physician who may refer you to an ear specialist or to a dentist, or both.

As the largest number of cases are caused by disturbance (pressure) on balancing canals and this disturbance and pressure is caused by too much water in the tissues in the ear region, the cutting down on liquids and salt foods which hold water in the tissues should be kept in mind. Some of these foods rich in salt are corned, pickled, smoked and salted foods.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

The fish became the symbol of Christianity because the first letters of the Greek words for "Jesus Christ, son of God, Saviour," spell "Ichthus," fish. This symbol occurred on seals, rings, urns, tombstones and on the walls of the catacombs and is supposed to have been used by the early Christians in the days of Roman persecution.

In 1855 a handbook was published in Paris entitled, "A Guide to English Conversation for the Use of Portuguese Students." The specimens of English given in the book were so grotesque that when Andrew White Tuer reprinted the book in London in 1883 he gave it the title: "English As She Is Spoke."

Some amphitheatres in Rome in the time of the Caesars were air-conditioned. Canals filled with cold water from the mountains were run among the seats to keep the spectators cool on hot days.

After the close of the Revolution, the War of Independence, John Adams, afterwards President of the United States, was the first American minister to England and he was the first American official to be presented to King George III; after the War of 1812, the Second War of Independence, John Quincy Adams, son of John Adams and also afterwards President, was the first American minister to England and was the first American official to be presented to the king —the same George III.

While John Quincy Adams was in St. Petersburg as American minister to Russia, President Madison nominated him to membership on the Supreme Court and the Senate confirmed him, but he declined the appointment just as soon as he heard about it.

In ancient Rome crucifixion as a method of execution was reserved for condemned slaves and malefactors of the lowest order.

A yokel, simpleton or dunce is called an Abderite. The Abderites, the inhabitants of Abdera, a town in ancient Thrace, were proverbial for their stupidity. Oddly enough, however, Abdera produced such notable ancients as Democritus, the laughing philosopher, Protagoras, the great sophist, Anaxarchos, the philosopher and friend of Alexander the Great, and Hecataeus, the historian, who was quoted by Herodotus, the father of history. Scoffing laughter is called Abderitan laughter, from Democritus, the laughing philosopher, who was a native of Abdera.

Legend notwithstanding, cocks are utterly undependable as alarm clocks.

The belief that the past flashes through the mind of a drowning person has never been proved or disproved to the satisfaction of scientists.

Two Nazi Generals Reported Dead

London, Aug. 21 (CP) — The Berlin radio last night reported the deaths of two Nazi generals, Col.-Gen. Hans Jesschonnek, 44 year old chief of staff of the German airforce, and Maj.-Gen. Chamler-Glisezenski, whom it identified as "inventor of many German secret weapons."

Jesschonnek died at the headquarters of Marshal Goering as a result of a "serious illness," said the broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press.

Chamler-Glisezenski was identified as head of the Peenemuende research laboratory, which was heavily bombed by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. on August 17.

The broadcast, recorded by the Ministry of Information, gave no details of Chamler-Glisezenski's death but London newspapers printed dispatches from Stockholm saying the General was murdered during the air attack by a revolver bullet fired from the rear.

Thieves Discard $8,000 in Bonds

Cobourg, Aug. 21—(Special)—Believed to be the work of the same gang which broke into Orono Creamery on Wednesday morning, the office of the Public Utilities in Brighton was robbed of $8,000 in bonds and cash Thursday night or Friday morning. The thieves lugged a 500-pound safe to the back of the building, and as the combination was not turned, had no trouble opening it.

The $8000 in bonds were discarded and left on the ground near the safe as they were registered bonds made out to the Brighton Public Utilities. A total of 426.94 in cash and cheques was taken away. Entrance was effected by forcing the rear door with a crowbar, the same way as the Orono Creamery robbery. Provincial Constable David Adair of Cobourg, who is investigating, stated that he believed the same gang did both jobs.

Sir Bernard Paget Ranked as General

London, Aug. 21 (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Sir Bernard Paget, commander-in-chief of British home forces, was promoted to the rank of general yesterday the War Office announced. A similar promotion was given to Lt.-Gen. Sir William Platt, commander-in-chief of East Africa.

Some British sources predicted today the promotion for General Paget meant that he will be Britain's invasion commander from the west.

He has commanded home forces since 1941. In 1940 he directed the evacuation of British troops from Andalsnes, at the conclusion of the brief campaign in Norway.

His duties in the last two years have thrown him much in contact with the Canadian army in Britain and its commander, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

Northern Italy Described As "More Chaotic"

On the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Aug. 21 (AP) — Northern Italy was described as "more chaotic than ever" in a dispatch yesterday to the Zurich newspaper Die Tat which told of the arrival of German reinforcements as Italian army guards patrolled city streets to prevent civilian peace demonstrations.

Intensification of military preparations was reported at Como where a military government resigned.

The newspaper added the Italian people were wondering what "negotiations certainly in progress in Rome" can accomplish toward peace while the Germans were "constantly reinforcing their position in Italy."

If the Italian government seeks peace the Germans would certainly occupy a northern defence line, the report said, and Italy would be caught between two armies fighting on its soil.

WO1 F.J. LaFrance Awarded D.F.C.

Trenton, Aug. 21—(Special) — The first D.F.C. to come to Trenton has been awarded to WO.1 Frank J. LaFrance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael LaFrance. A brother, Pte. Harry, serving with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment, is reported wounded in Sicily, but today the extent of his wounds has not been learned, while another brother, Charles is a bombardier at Pingal, Ont. Mr. LaFrance, Sr., is a returned veteran of the Great War.

The citation regarding Warrant Officer LaFrance read: "This Warrant Officer has completed many successful operational sorties during which he has displayed exceptional ability as an air bomber and has been instrumental in obtaining several splendid photographs. On one occasion his aircraft was subjected to two attacks by enemy night fighters and was badly damaged, but this airman rendered valuable assistance to his pilot, and so enabled him to fly the aircraft home and effect a safe landing."

Four Hours Required To Land 22-lb. Channel Cat on Light Tackle

Trenton (Special)—Catching a twenty-two pound fish at any time is considered some experience but while visiting here during the past week Pilot Officer George Muat, whose home is in Middlesboro, England, had the unique experience of landing a twenty-two pound channel cat with an ordinary light line and rod used in fishing for bass. He was trolling at the time with a live frog for bait at the mouth of the Murray Canal. Realizing the size of the fish which he had hooked, when it almost upset the boat as he tried to reel it in, he called to his friend, Pilot Officer Bill Rupert who was on the canal pier at the time.

Rupert, being a native of Trenton and realizing that his English friend was liable to get into difficulty if the boat upset, discarded his clothing and without any hesitation swam out to the assistance of Officer Muat. Rupert manoeuvred the boat and assisted his brother officer in planning technique and strategy to effect a landing but with frail trackle this was no easy task and it was not until four hours later at exactly 12.30 a.m., that the fish was landed. By this time they had drifted and rowed some three miles from the mouth of the canal to the shore of the Bay of Quinte at the R.C.A.F. station.

Found Air Cool

When Pilot Officer Rupert left his clothes on the pier he little expected to be away four hours. The night was exceedingly chilly and though Pilot Officer Muat gave Rupert his shirt to keep him warm still this was not sufficient and it looked as if he might suffer considerably from cold, but they were both determined that they would not give up the struggle until the fish was finally landed. Mr. A. Rickett, camping at near-by Twelve O'Clock Point, realizing that Rupert was without his clothing, took a boat and rowed out to them with a blanket, but it was not until they had almost reached the airport that he was able to catch up with them.

Unfortunately the call of duty prevented these two officers from displaying their catch to their most intimate friends as their leave had expired and they were leaving in the early morning for an unknown destination. The fish was proudly turned over to a passing milkman.

This spirit of determination and splendid co-operation will no doubt serve them in good stead at some future date when they meet up with the Hun.

In talking with experienced anglers in Trenton and Bay of Quinte district we were unable to find anyone who had ever landed a channel cat on a troll of this kind before.

MOUNTAIN FRONT

The Allied line then dips down to Mount Tambu region which is 4½ miles south and slightly west of the strip's southwest end. From there, the positions run north to Komatum, about four miles below and slightly west of the strip and to Orodubi, about the same distance from the strip but more to the west.

From Orodubi, the Allied line extends up to the Francisco river at Bobdubi Ridge. This ridge, now controlled by the Allies, is only two miles at its easternmost end from the airfield.

The Japanese crackup at Salamaua was hastened by the virtual wiping out of Wewak, 350 miles up the coast, of an airforce of 225 planes most of them trapped on the ground by Allied bombers Tuesday and Wednesday.

Yesterday, big bombers with fighter escort went back to Wewak with 66 tons of bombs and added 24 more planes to the 215 previously destroyed there.

Advice for Visitors At Summer Cottages

We really like you or we wouldn't have invited you here, therefore:

1.—The water that we drink won't hurt you either.

2.—We aren't personally responsible for the mosquitoes or the rain so don't make us feel we are.

3.—If you do the dishes for us, do the pots as well.

4.—If we tell you the water isn't deep, believe us.

5.—Don't yell every time you see a bug and ask us to kill it—we hate them too.

6.—Don't think we are mean if we ask you not to peel the birch bark—the poor tree may be thin skinned too.

7.—Don't look in the cupboard to see where the next meal is coming from, we will feed you.

8.—Don't give us an over abundance of advice as to how to run the cottage we want you for a guest not an efficiency expert.

9.—Please don't leave your clothes around, we are sorry about the lack of cupboard space.

01.—And above everything else don't make us feel we have to apologize for our cottage and for inviting you to visit us.

New Colors And New Sets Coupons In No.3 Ration Book

New colors as well as new sets of coupons will face consumers when they open the No. 3 ration books which are soon to be distributed under the direction of the Local Ration Boards.

In addition to the familiar sheets of green, red, purple, brown, blue and grey coupons which appear in the No. 2 book now in use, the No. 3 books will carry orange and light yellow coupons whose use has yet to be designated.

Another change that the consumer will remark will be the disappearance of the word "spare" as applied to certain sets of coupons. While tea or coffee, sugar, butter and meat coupons are so labelled, the remaining sets will be simply marked "C", "D", "E" and "F" without the prefix "spare" being found. Incidentally, the new series of grey "C" coupons will be much smaller than any of the ration coupons previously in use and they will number 32 to a sheet, two sheets being provided.

The new books will come into use for the purchase of rationed goods on September 2 and they are intended to last consumers for a period of eight months thus removing any necessity of a further distribution being made during the winter season.

Athletic Injuries Preventable

School athletics have contributed much to the health and welfare of our children. Yet sometimes, in the excitement of athletic competition, parents, as well as children, lose their sense of proportion in measuring both the likelihood and the possible seriousness of some injury. At the risk of permanent injury, boys and girls are sometimes allowed to play in games when medical advice would decree they should not play.

Participation in athletics, while not as universal as it was prior to the war, should be encouraged because of the great value of athletics in furthering general health and fitness.

A number of things can be done to help prevent injuries that may occur because of participation in athletics. First of all, those who take part in athletics should have a physical examination, to make sure that they have no defects or weaknesses which should prevent their taking part in sports. It is necessary that the athlete have a sound heart and good lungs, that his eyesight and hearing be good, and that he does not have a rupture.

If defects are found which can be corrected, these, of course, should be taken care of before the person takes part in athletics. For example if he has a rupture, this should be repaired. If he has trouble with his knee, which causes it to lock or to give way, it may be that there is a loose piece of cartilage in the knee joint. This can be removed by means of an operation. Sometimes, if the wrists or ankles are weak, they can be strapped.

If the eyes are defective, the wearing of shatter-proof glasses may be of help. Some athletes find contact lenses to be quite satisfactory. These lenses fit directly over the eyeball, and cannot be broken during athletic contests. If the person has a weak or damaged heart, vigorous exercise should be avoided.

Another side in the prevention of injuries, is to make sure that all persons undergo a period of conditioning before they take part in vigorous sports. Setting up exercises are helpful and, according to Doctor Marcus H. Hobart of Evanston, Illinois, the individual should be taught to warm up before each game. The use of proper equipment will be helpful in protecting weak and vulnerable parts. For example, the head guard and hip pads, in football; ;and the proper shoes for tennis and basketball, are important. Strapping various joints with adhesive tape may also be of great value. For example, the shoulders ,wrists, elbows and even the knees, can be protected in this way.

Athletes should be taught to report immediately to the physician any injuries or disabilities. If these injuries are promptly treated, a great deal of damage may be avoided. So often, following an injury, the wrong type of treatment is given. Bystanders or others, perceiving that an injury has occurred, think that something is just out of place, so they jerk the arm or the leg in an effort to put it back. As a result of such faulty treatment, injury which cannot be repaired may occur. The use of splints and casts may be necessary in correcting many of the injuries which occur. If one must decide between the use of a splint or a cast, Doctor Hobart advises a cast, because the athlete cannot remove it at will, and it may be worn as long as necessary to bring about complete healing.

Proper treatment of injuries which occur to athletes is important in conserving the health of the nation's manpower.

Fashion Flashes

WATCH OUT for many pretty varities on the theme of the short-skirted dress-up frock. A smart model has a low-necked bodice of nude pink wool jersey embroidered in rosy pink beads and rose sequin in a leaf, flower and bud design, attached to a black crepe skirt.

Handsome is the word for the new fur-trimmed cloth coats. A black woollen coat has black Persian in wide revers to the waist where the fur rolls under to form a muff effect. Wide fur turn-back cuffs.

Dress up late summer black sheers with an early autumn touch such as a big halo cartwheel of red velveteen with big matching handbag. The under side of the brim is stitched and the loose edge rippled back for softness.

If you are searching for prettiness and warm comfort when cold weather comes along you'll find some grand blouses designed to go with tailored suits or separate skirt. Black wool jersey is used for a blouse with a tie collar and modified bishop sleeves. The end of the collar band is trimmed with bell-shaped tassels and shirring from the neckline gives a draw-string effect.

It's nice to have one suit that can go anywhere during the day and always be in the picture. Beige medium wale corduroy is used for a useful suit made with bolero slashed up the sides and a trouser-pleat skirt with self buttons down the front and slit pockets. Worn with a suede finished jersey shirt in bright red.

Young daughter will like the fur-lined coats specially designed for teen-agers. Tan herringbone tweed with wide peaked lapels and a raglan sleeve has a button-in three-quarters length lining of nutria.

World Traveller

Ottawa—A Russian girl, Corporal Helen Robinson, and her English husband, recently residents of South America, chose enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force as their way of serving their respective countries.

This corporal of the R.C.A.F. Women's Division was born in Moscow, lived in Germany for six years, and expects to return with her husband to their South American home after their "job" is done. A hospital assistant at the R.C.A.F. station at Trenton her maiden name was Helen Proskouriakoff. Her husband, Flying Officer Dennis Alexander Robinson, is on the staff of an Eastern Canadian training station.

Corporal Robinson is tall, slender and blonde. Her competency and cheerfulness have won her the respect of medical officers and sister-airwomen alike. She spent her childhood in Germany and went to school and took training as a masseuse in Berlin. In 1937, Cpl. Robinson went to South America and settled in Uruguay. There she met her husband who worked for an American company.

She likes Canada and Canadians very much, but nevertheless intends making her post-war home in South America. "We're used to life in South America," she says, "and we feel more at home there."

Flying Officer Robinson and his young wife came to Canada last year and joined the R.C.A.F. at Toronto. Following basic training at Rockliffe R.C.A.F. station, she was posted to St. Thomas for a course. On December 22nd, she assumed duties at Trenton where she confesses, she has "lived happily ever since."

Her parents and an uncle still reside in Moscow, and the grimness of the war has a double significance for her. Her husband's parents still reside in England, his father being a member of the Merchant Marine.

"We are a service-minded family," she said soberly, "and all are in it now. After the war — we will return to South America, my husband and I. We will be doubly happy then, for both of us will have served our countries — England, Russia and Canada, three great Allies for all time to come."

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section,
Dominion Department of Agriculture

The pale yellowy-green marrow and the sleek purple egg plant are two vegetables which are not always appreciated as they deserve to be.

The Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests cutting the marrow in rings and steaming it. Sprinkle the marrow rings with finely chopped parsley and fill the centre with some colourful vegetables, diced beets, creamed carrots and peas, or golden corn cut from the cob.

You'll have a distinctive decorative effect as well as something that tastes pretty fine.

Egg plant is usually dipped in egg and breadcrumbs and sauted or fried, or else cooked en casserole. It is also delicious when stuffed and baked. Cooked by any of these methods, egg plant teams particularly well with lamb.

Further recipes for these vegetables come from the Consumer Section's testing kitchen.

Vegetable Marrow Casserole

Cut a medium sized marrow into pieces of convenient size to handle. Peel and remove the seeds. Cook the pieces in a small amount of boiling water or steam for ten minutes and drain. Use alternate layers of marrow and the following mixture to fill a greased casserole.

1 cup finely chopped ham, left-over meat or grated cheese
2 cups medium cream sauce
2 tablespoons chopped green peppers.
Salt and pepper

Cover with buttered crumbs and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate over 350 degrees Fahrenheit. This makes a delicious supper dish serving 6 to 8.

Stuffed Vegetable Marrow

Cut a small marrow in half lengthwise and remove seeds. Place marrow halves on a greased baking sheet and fill with the following mixture.

2 cups soft stale bread crumbs
1 small onion
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1-2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons melted fat

Bake for 1 hour in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Six servings.

Scalloped Egg Plant

1 medium egg plant, peeled and cut in 1-2 inch cubes
2 tablespoons mild flavoured fat
1-2 onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley

Cook egg plant in small amount of boiling water until tender. Drain. Cook onion in fat until yellow, add parsley and egg plant. Put in greased baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in moderately hot oven 375 degree Fahrenheit until crumbs are brown. Serves six.

Egg Plant Creole

1 medium egg plant, peeled and diced
3 tablespoons mild flavoured fat
1-2 small green pepper, cut in strips
2 tablespoons chopped onion
5 large tomatoes
Salt and pepper

Melt fat in a frying pan. Add chopped green pepper and onion, and cook for a few minutes. Add egg plant. Cover and steam for about five minutes. Peel and chop tomatoes add to egg plant and cook, uncovered, 15 minutes, or until egg plant is tender. Season to taste.

Carmel

Bride Elect Honored At Several Functions

Carmel.—A very large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hicks on Tuesday evening for a surprise party for their youngest daughter, Hazel, who was married the following Saturday, Aug. 14.

At 9 o'clock, Mr. Selfion Homan called the gathering to order with a few remarks to the bride. A short program was given after which Hazel and Earl were asked to take the seats of honor. Miss Ruth Brintnell read a very suitable address. The gifts in a large basket, were carried in by two little girls, and kept the bride-to-be busy unwrapping them and thanking each and everyone of her friends for them. The groom-to-be also thanked them all on behalf of Hazel and asked them, one and all, to visit them in their new home at Plainfield.

The invitation of the bride and groom was quickly answered for on their return on Wednesday, approximately sixty of their friends invaded the home of the newlyweds, with everything from a cow bell to a tin whistle.

Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe treated them all to tea, sandwiches and cake. After a real jolly time they all dispersed to their home wishing Earl and Hazel the very best of happiness.

On Wednesday evening August 11th., Miss Maragret Hicks, sister of the bride, held a trousseau tea in honor of her sister, Hazel.

The Experts Say

... (By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Aug. 20 (CP)—Hints to promote the smooth running of Canada's wartime households:-

GRAIN CEREALS—Canada's official food rules call for one serving of whole grain cereal every day, and in the winter time a dish of steaming oatmeal porridge fills the bill satisfactorily, and is enjoyed by many Canadina families.

In warm weather, says Marion Harlow of nutrition services, there are other ways of reaping the benefits of whole grain cereal. Here are some of them: the use of whole grain bread, bran or whole wheat muffins; the use of wheat germ in biscuits, soups and casserole dishes and on prepared cereals; the use of oatmeal as a meat stretcher in cookies and desserts, and a wise choice of ready-to-eat cereals which are made from the whole grain.

SAVING BUTTER—Corn on the cob is delicious but hard on butter. The consumer section of the agriculture department offers this recipe for corn off the cob which doesn't use so much butter.

To make corn pudding, which makes an excellent main dish for lunch or dinner when served with a garden salad, cut two cups of cooked corn from the cob (four or five medium ears. Beat three eggs thoroughly, add two cups of milk, the corn, two tablespoons melted butter or mild-flavored fat, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon salt and one-quarter teaspoon pepper.

Turn into a greased casserole and bake in a moderate oven—350 degrees Fahrenheit—until the pudding is set, which will be in about 45 minutes. A little grated cheese or left-over chopped meat, finely-minced parsley or a few chopped mushrooms may be added for variety.

FUR FASHIONS—Cadadian women should feel perfectly at home in their old fur coats this coming winter, for fashions in furs have been standardized for the duration of the war. A recent prices board order "froze" styles of fur garments to those made by each manufacturer during 1942.

Moreover, each furrier's style range has been reduced to two-thirds of the number of styles he produced in 1941. Consequently, wearers of fur coats should have no qualms about donning their old models.

RE-MAKE CENTRES — To show housewives how to remodel and put into use old garments which they have stored away in attics and under beds, 25 additional re-make centres will open in Canada next month. There are 15 centres in operation now under the clothing conservation program of the prices board.

Every yard of material saved, the board points out, benefits the fighting forces, and the "make over and make do" project is spreading across the country.

LACK OF DOCTORS CAUSES STRIKE

Stellarton, N.S., Aug. 21 (CP)—Carrying out a strike threat caused by absence of two Stellarton doctors, coal miners employed by the Acadia Coal Company refused to work Friday morning. About 1,200 men in four collieries were involved.

The doctors left about 14 days ago for two weeks trainingg at a Reserve Army camp. Claiming only one doctor remained for the 7,000 persons in Stellarton, the miners voted Wednesday night to go on strike Friday morning if the physicians did not return last night.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

And Groomsmen to "Match Up"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please answer some questions that are troubling me concerning my wedding plans.

1.—I have already purchased my costume. It is rather "dressy" . . but what real wedding dresses aren't? Since my fiance is in the service we decided to have a strictly military wedding. That is, with the groom, best man, and ushers in uniform. Does it make any difference if they wear their uniforms, regardless of how dressy my costume is? They cannot wear civilian clothes for the occasion, can they?

2.—Is it all right to have only a maid of honor and one bridesmaid? I'd like to have more, but due to the fact that passes and furloughs are uncertain, we can't be sure my fiance will have more than two attendants.

3.—Do I have to wear gloves? If I do, no doubt I will get fingerless gloves. Then during the ceremony would I remove the glove on my left hand?

4.—What may I give my attendants?

P.A.

1.—All servicemen must wear their regular uniforms. You may appropriately wear a "real" bridal costume. How "dressy" your costume is you didn't tell me. But let's say you are planning a semi-formal wedding, in which case you would wear a wedding gown with no train or perhaps a short sweep, a short veil (finger-tip or shoulder-length) and carry a small bouquet or carry, as so many brides are doing these days, a Bible or Prayer Book.

2.—It is not necessary, for the bride to have the same number of bridesmaids as the bridegroom has ushers. For in the best-planned recessional, the bridesmaids are not "paired off" with the ushers. If furloughs are possible for, say, two ushers, you may have a maid of honor and one bridesmaid; or two or four bridesmaids, who would walk in pairs.

3.—Gloves are optional . . . especially for summer weddings. If it is necessary with the type of glove you may plan to wear, remove your left glove during the ceremony.

4.—These are appropriate gifts for your attendants: a piece of jewelry, "real" or "costume" a compact or vanity-case; gold or silver bill-clip; pen and pencil set; framed photograph of bride or bridal party; evening bag; cigarette-case; perfume bottle; comb with jewelled top or "handle", in case for evening bag; identification bracelet, engraved with name and address.

No Need to Invite Minister

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is being married in church, and after the ceremony we are having a reception at our home. Do I invite the officiating minister and his wife to the reception?

R. J.

That depends. If it is to be a large reception, you would invite the minister and his wife. If it is to be a very small reception, perhaps with only the families and a few close friends invited, you wouldn't invite the minister and his wife unless they happen to be very close friends of your family.

Home Manners

Mothers and fathers please note: If in your home you gossip about your neighbors, discuss the intimate affairs of your friends, it is the most natural thing in the world that your children will pick up this dangerous habit and will think that this kind of talk is the proper kind of talk. You've only yourselves to blame, then, if outside your home, your children repeat remarks you have made, to your embarrassment.

The Marry-Go-Round

The "Smile That Never Comes Off"

The most amazing thing to me about the C.W.A.C.S., WRENS, and WAAFS, is their ability to keep their faces straight when marching or drilling. Have you noticed it?

A large aggregation of comely and attractive girls—and not a smile among them! That is a great feat, in these days, when the art of smiling like a tooth-paste advertisement is carefully cultivated from the cradle by the average girl. But it is a revelation, to see how radiant and pretty a company of young women can look, when their faces are in repose. Natural!

And it is a real relief from the dental grins, which fill the pages of every magazine and newspaper, and overflow into the ads and billboards. Did you ever see a photograph of a debutante, a screen star, a glamour-girl or even a gun-moll, which did not look as though she were posing for a popular dentrifice? Oh, how happy, HAPPY they all look!

Why? A man doesn't smile or look pleased, unless he feels like it. But smiling is woman's metier. No matter what Fate hands her, a girl is expected to receive it with a gladsome smile, whether it's a husband, a ten-cent bridge prize or a telephone call from the wrong man.

Every girl has a special telephone voice—"the voice with a smile"—ready and on tap for boresome calls. But did you ever call a man at the wrong moment, and get a gushing answer full of sweetness and light? I'll say not. A man doesn't even try to look cheerful and pleasant, at his OWN WEDDING! He's scared and flustered and uncomfortable, and he's not going to grin about it! So, what?

But, no matter how nervous she feels, a bride is supposed to look "radiant"—and she always does. The pictures on the society page always show her, smiling like a beauty-prize winner, while the bridegroom usually looks as though he needed an aspirin. In fact the only smiling, happy-looking pictures of bridegrooms I've ever seen, were those of service-men. Perhaps they have steadier nerves and can "take it" more calmly.

A girl sometimes wonders how she ever managed to go on smiling and "looking pleasant", when she stops to look back over her life with its heartaches and disappointments. But the smile is automatic with her, and her facial muscles just naturally spring into the glad, glad expression at the required moment. She's a WOMAN—and she's gotta look "radiant"!

That's why it's so refreshing to see the calm, serene faces of the WRENS and WAAFS in absolute repose, without a forced smile or an artificial simper or a grin to mar their charm. It's been so long since I've seen a girl who didn't bare both rows of teeth at me, that I'd forgotten how interesting and characterful a woman can look, when she's natural.

A beautiful smile is the loveliest thing in the world—but Mona Lisa was the only woman who could smile twenty-four hours a day and get away with it!

CAUSED BY WAR

London, (CP)—Much of Britain's increased prison population is due to wartime offences created by defence regulations, Home Secretary Morrison said in a London address. He said the prison population in 1942, was 12,400, increase of 2,000 over 1939—the year war began.

Tough Canadian Soldiers of Veterans Guard Defend Empire Outpost on Bahamas

Overlooking rooftops and harbor of Nassau, Bahamas, Veterans Guardsman J. Saddler of Sherbrooke, Que., is silhouetted against sunset as he stands sentry before Government House. Statue at right is of Christopher Columbus.

Inspection occurs in balmy morning air 'neath palm trees. Ex-soldiers' Veterans guard protects vital non-combat zones, releases active army regiments.

Changing the guard. These men, though veterans of the last war, are lean, tough and fit. They enjoy same rate of pay, rank and promotion as active army.

Privates E. E. Wilkie, La Havre, N.S., and W. H. Jackson of Montreal go through mortar practice, part of their daily duties in the defence of the Bahamas.

Col. A. W. De Wolf of Halifax (at desk) is the officer in command of Canadian Veterans Guard and the Bahamian Forces on these Atlantic Isles.

The vets are ready for any attack. Every day they have gas mask drill, gunnery and mortar practice and defensive manoeuvres as part of their duties.

Sgt. G. E. Spencer, Edmonton; Pte. A. G. Fraser, Qualicum Beach, Vancouver Island; Corp. G. Breme, Listowel, Ont.; Pte. A. J. White, Timmins; and Corp. F. M. Middleton, Nanaimo, leave headquarters, Royal Montague Hotel, for swim.

Successful European offensive increases need for Veterans Guard to protect Empire outposts not in battle zones. Pte. W. Bell, Vancouver, aims mortar.

Corporal I. L. Parker of Shubenacadie, N.S., has nine children of his own. He gets a little homesick for them sometimes, and can't resist playing with the tots who gather on Bahamas beaches to admire Canadian soldiers.

Baseball Men Are Wondering How Mort Cooper of Cardinals Will Fare in World Series

Stopped in All-Star Games and Twice Last Year by Yanks

YANKEES WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY

With St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees leaving so little to be said about the Major League Pennant races, baseball men already are turning to discussing the world series and wondering where Mort Cooper will fit into Billy Southworth's strategy.

The ace of the world champions has failed four times against American League hitters—twice in the all-star games and twice in last year's World Series.

This has caused a lot of observers to question whether or not he will be the Chief of Staff for the Cardinals in the forthcoming classic.

Last night the big righthander worked for the Cardinals against the Phillies and pitched five-hit ball that took him into the ninth inning leading 5-1. But when the Phillies loaded the bases against him with one out, Southworth quickly called in Howie Krist to relieve Cooper. Krist, who only needs to walk to the mound to beat the Phillies, made the next two batters pop up and saved Cooper's 17th victory.

The Yankees, who have not yet oeen able to draw as far ahead of the American League as the Cardinals have done in the senior circuit, looked like pennant-winners in conquering Cleveland Indians 10-5 with a 14-hit attack.

Washington Senators, however, trounced Cnicago White Sox by the same, 10-5 in a night game to maintain their distance behind the Yanks. The Senators made eight runs in the eighth inning.

In the only other American League game Detroit nosed out Boston Red Sox 1-0 on a single by Rudy York in the ninth inning.

Truett (Rip) Sewell, who has become famous for his "parachute pitch," tumbled to defeat as Pittsburgh Pirates dropped two games to New York Giants 3-2 and 7-4.

Sewell's setback in the first game, his third in his last four starts, was the result of Mel Ott's 17th home run with one on the sivth inning.

The second-place Cincinnati Reds were edged out 3-2 in 12 innings at Boston when Whitey Wietelmann single home a run.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 21 (CP).—Orestes and Fair Fame, the two best two-year-olds in Britain, carry the silks of two women famed for the thoroughbreds they have purchased in recent years.

The owners are the Hon. Dorothy Paget, internationally-known racing figure who has purchased an estimated $660,000 worth of blood-stock in the last fifteen years, and Mrs. Betty Lavington, a comparative newcomer to the sport who resides in the spa town of Bath.

Miss Paget owns Orestes who, as winner of the Coventry Stakes at Newmarket, a semi-classic sprint for youngsters, rates as the outstanding two-year-old colt of the season so far.

Mrs. Lavington showed rare knowledge of blood-stock for a beginner. She purchased Fair Fame, a fast filly that didn't take kindly to a starting gate. That nervousness was cured before the animal went to the post in Mrs. Lavington's colors. Since then Fair Fame has galloped to three successive victories, including the strongly-contested Queen Mary Stakes, a five-furlong affair that held second-billing to the classic Oaks at a Newmarket meet last June.

Orestes won the Coventry for Miss Paget less than an hour after she took her first Derby triumph in years of trying. And just to refresh the memory, Straight Deal was the name of the Derby winner.

Probably the biggest individual owner of thoroughbreds in Britain, Miss Paget has shown interest in most sports throughout her career. Latest to catch her fancy is greyhound racing and she took her first triumph at Dublin a few weeks ago when her dog, Valiant Lad, won a $30 stake race.

Several years ago, Miss Paget owned a fleet of racing automobiles and had some of the best drivers in Britain under contract. Coursing also interested her and one of her greyhounds reached the semi-final of the International Cup last season.

In addition to her strong racing interests in England, Miss Paget has been one of the mainstays of war-time racing in neutral Eire during the last four years. Her large stable at Epsom is managed by a young trainer, Walter Nightingall.

Racing authorities called it a prelude to a post-war boom in bloodstock when Britain and Eire shipped 30 race horses to Spain and Portugal. All the horses or their sires are race winners.

The animals reached the two neutral countries by neutral ship from Eire to Lisbon. Commenting on the Spanish purchase, one authority said "our information is that the government in Spain want to replace bullfighting by racing as the national sport."

Among the horses shipped were three-year-olds, including Brehon Law, grey son of the Aga Khan's Bahram, a triple crown winner in England. Brehon Law was sent to Spain.

Claybourne Meets Al Dunlop in Main Wrestling Bout

The demand by Belleville wrestling clientelle for the return of the popular colored wrestler, "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne of Cape Town, has been answered by Promoter Frank Tunney, who announced today he had signed the sensational colored lad to meet the villainous Al Dunlop in the main bout of next Wednesday's card at the Hume Arena.

"Claybourne is seeking a shot at Watson's British Empire title as a native of South Africa. If he can hurdle over Dunlop it would be a big feather in his wrestling cap towards gaining recognition as a logical contender," pointed out Marse Tunney as he added any claims of Claybourne would be considered and he was of the opinion that Belleville would be a good place for Claybourne's Empire baptismal.

For those rasslin' fans who like 'em rough, tough and nasty Tunney signed John Katan and "Texas Dick" Bishop for a battle of ruffians. Last time here Bishop became so enraged he chased patrons all over the seats in the local palace de sport, but next week he will be too busy evading the Palermo assassin to be bothered with biased fans.

Sgt. Jim Turnesa Proves To Be Dark Horse of Tourney

(By The Canadian Press)

Sgt. Jim Turnesa of Staten Island, N.Y., member of a famous golfing family, proved to be the dark horse of the Victory National Golf Meet over the Beverly Hills course, Chicago, yesterday when he topped a field of 41 starry performers with a score of 67 at the close of the initial round.

The U.S. army contender held a one-stroke advantage over Sam Byrd of Philadelphia, who made sport fame as an outfielder of the New York Yankees before turning to the links, and the same margin over Byron Nelson of Toledo. The latter looked good with a two-under-par 34 for the first nine holes but missed a series of putts under eight feet during the rest of the journey.

Among those who carried 69 were Craig Wood, 1941 U.S. open champion from Mamaroneck, N.Y., Harry Cooper of Minneapolis and Jimmy Demaret of Detroit. The leading amateur in yesterday's fray was Sgt. Jim McHale, formerly of Philadelphia but now stationed at Baltimore.

The Conference and Fishing

(By IZAAK HUNTER in Montreal Gazette)

Anglers have been keenly interested in the fact that President Roosevelt tuned up for the Quebec Conference with a fishing trip in Canada. Letters coming to this department indicate a regret on the part of many that published details of his quest for bass and 'lunge in Ontario waters have been so few. Knowing something of fishermen, I should not care to guess as to whether these inuiries were prompted by a desire to applaud the presidential prowess as an angler, or the less laudable urge to see that one of such eminence is not immune to that "Fisherman's luck" which we ordinary fishers have to contend with so often. I did see in an American paper a story to the effect that he was using a pearl spoon for bass and maskinonge. The yarn indicated he had pretty good luck and let's hope he did—in spite of the pearl spoon.

This conference may do more than hasten the end of the Axis. There are indications, aside from President Roosevelt's fishing tri;, which suggest it may also stimulalte fresh and important interest in the rare possibilities our country presents for the angler. While the Quebec parley is being held at a time of year when both trout and salmon fishing in Quebec is at its lowest ebb, several distinguished participants in the conference have qfound time to visit briefly the .nsurpassed trout territory north of Quebec, with satisfactory results.

Sir Charles Portal Fine Caster.

Our Guy Cunliffe, covering the Quebec pow-wow, reports that last week-e ntdi meout-p.5dgreel-Wm week-end time out for a four-hour fishing trip in the Holt Renfrew Fishing and Fur Preserve, north of the city, was taken by Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, Lord Louis Mountbatten, Chief of Combined Operations; and Air Chief Marshall Sir Charles Portal, Chief of Air Staff.

Reports by those who went along on the expedition were that Sir Charles displayed an amazing ability to make long casts, ranging up to 60 and 70 feet, with his left hand. In less than two hours of fishing, The Gazette was told Sir Charles netted 33 fighting trout. Sir Dudley Pound and Lord Louis Mountbatten, it was said, had some success but nothing to match that of Sir Charles.

Their guide was Joseph Bastien, descendant of Huron chiefs and manager of the Holt Renfrew store at Quebec. He said today that Sir Dudley in particular had been warmly enthusiastic about Canada's attractions for anglers, remarking that he could thing of "nothing better than having the leisure to enjoy this fisherman's paradise."

Host to the visitors was Col. C. H. L. Jones, president of Price Brothers and Cmpany, who commented that in a few hours his guests seemed to have been "completely sold on the trout fishing resources of Quebec province."

Essence of Democracy.

We hope all these visiting anglers will return. There are fish enough to go around the places enough to fish. And there is on crowding. By the time their big job is ended most of these gentlemen will be ready for, and entitled to, an extended fishing trip. In the meantime, there is something of the very essence of democracy in the realization that men like Roosevelt, Pound, Mountbatten and Portal get just as much, (but can get n more) thrill out of angling than can you or Raoul Pilon, r I. And we are as free to enjoy those delights as they. But, of course, this sentiment will not mean much to anyone but a fisherman.

Toronto, Aug. 21—(CP)Death of Wes Champ in Regina this week recalled the Prairies' greatest hockey era—1921-25 when the Western Canada Hockey League functioned with teams from Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina forming a major professional circuit. Champ was owner and manager of the Regina Caps. His players included some of the greatest names of hockey: Dick Irvin, George Hay, Art Gagne, Eddie Shore Charlie McVeigh, Spunk Sparrow, Duke Dutkowski, Amby Moran, Puss Traub, Red McCusker. One of Champ's most-prized possessions was Shore's first professional contract. It was Wes who induced Shore to leave an amateur team in Melville, Sask., and sign with Caps in the 1924-25 season. The contract provided a salary of $1,500 for the season. After selling the Caps to Portland, Ore., in 1925 when the Western Canada League folded, Champ dropped out of professional hockey but he sponsored amateur teams in Regina. Champ was born in Galt, Ont., 57 years ago. He moved to Regina in 1911 and became a prominent hotelman there.

Hey Frank!

Bill Walshe, Sports Editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, fishing in the St. Lawrence off Kingston last weekend, landed a giant Maskinonge 57 inches long and weighing somewhere between 20 and 120 pounds depending, as Bill put it, "on the strength of the lifter or his imagination." This catch inspired Walshe to pen an open letter "Dear Mr. Roosevelt; you still made a major mistake in your fishing trip to the Manitoulin. We repeat you should have visited Frontenac county. . . ."

Incidentally:

George MacKintosh of the Edmonton Journal says that contrary to reports that Neil Colville is being posted to Alberta, the former New York Rangers hockey star will go to Camp Borden along with Ken Reardon as soon as he ends a furlough in Edmonton. MacKintosh confirms that Mac Colville, Eddie Slowinski and Jim Henry are being posted to Alberta. Their destination is Red Deer, which had a team in the Alberta Services League last winter. Jack McGill will accompany the four to Red Deer. . .Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail reports that Pop Poplowski, Jim Partridge, Ed Sarvis and Jack Parry, stars of last season's Toronto R. C. A. F. football team, now are overseas.

BRISTOLS TAKE FIRST DECISION IN SEMI-FINALS

Defeat Bell-Sargent 15-3 With Pee Wee Colden Having a Field Night

LUSTY HITTING

Garnering eight runs in the first three frames Bristol Aircraft lassies took a 15 to 3 decision over the Bell-Sargent gals in the semi-final playdowns of the Belleville Ladies Softball League at the Armouries Lawn Friday night.

Lusty hitting paved the way for an early lead for the Bristol lassies, but the night's honors went to Pitcher Pauline Colden, who not only fired a six-hitter, but added to her prowess by taking the attack with two doubles, a single and a two-run circuit smash to pretty much win her own game.

Sargents got an unearned run in the third, hits by Doolittle and Benn gave the losers one in the fifth while an error, Benn's single and Garrow's double accounted for the final Sargent run in the seventh.

As for the winning Bristol gals they got three in the first Waite's one hit, a walk and two errors. Then they added a trio more in the second on hits by Marg Zebedee, L. Carter, P. Colden and C. Elliott. It was just as bad on the attack in the third, when Bristol wielded potent willow with Allison, Hubble and Colden again hitting to produce a pair of runs. "Pee Wee's" fifth inning circuit smash and Glad Waite's seventh inning round-tripper added to the Bristol score with players aboard as the Bristol gals added to their count with five runs in the seventh.

Girls' softball continues at the Armouries Monday when SWACO and Reliance battle in their second meeting.

DAVIS OF BEARS BLANKS TORONTO TO EVEN SERIES

Jersey Giants Approaching Lost Record Held by the Montreal Royals

ORIOLES WIN TWO

(By The Associated Press)

Despite their best efforts, Jersey City Giants are gradually approaching an International League record that has withstood all assaults for 36 years.

The Little Giants were shut out last night, the 23rd time they have finished a game this season without a run. The present mark, which Montreal was unfortunate enough to establish in 1907, is 26 blankings and the Giants have three weeks more of play remaining.

Jack Tising, of Buffalo Bisons, limited them to four hits in the opening of their twin bill last night and applied the brakes to all their scoring intentions, 5-0. George Harley hurled for the Bisons in the second contest and blanked Jersey City for five frames.

But then the dam burst. Before a single Giant was retired in the sixth, seven runs had scampered across the plate, Barley was under the showers and Tising was back on the mound. The Hartnettmen went on from there to win, 11-4.

Baltimore repeated its double victory of Thursday night at the expense of Rochester, young Al Heuser besting Blix (no-hit) Donnelly in the opened, 4-0 and Clyde Smoll surviving a three-run assault in the first to win, 7-3. Jim Davis of Newark Bears, stopped Toronto, 4-0, and Millard Howell, of Syracuse Chiefs bested Al Sherer, 1-0, in a 13-inning mound duel in the other games.

Buffalo—(AP) — Rufe Gentry, leading twirler of the Buffalo Bisons in the International League, was rejected in his medical examination yesterday for entry into the U.S. Army. He was rejected for unstated physical reasons.

New York—(AP) — Sgt. Peter Dunne Garvan, owner of My Own Brucie, late champion show Cocker Spaniel, was reported missing in action while serving as an aerial gunner on a U.S. heavy bomber in a raid on Hamburg, Germany. The famous dog died a few weeks ago.

Cornwall—(CP)—Canadian Army team of Valleyfield took the lead in the Quebec senior lacrosse loop by administering a 16-11 win over Cornwall-St. Regis last night, coming from behind to take the match. Charlie Phillips of Valleyfield was leading scorer with six goals.

Halifax—(CP) — Homer Lesser, formerly of Windsor and Chatham, Ont., was the winning pitcher when Shipyards scored a 6-5 in over Army last night in a Halifax senior baseball fixture to equalize the semi-final play-off series at one game apiece.

The ragged bum entered the doctor's office. There was a worried look on his face.

Ragged man: Doc, you've got to help me. I swallowed a half-dollar piece about 15 years ago.

Doctor: Good Lord, man, why have you waited 15 years? Why didn't you go to see a doctor the same day you swallowed the half-dollar piece?

Raggd Man: To tell the truth, Doc, I didn't need the money at that time.

Reliance in O.A.S.A.

Secretary Ted Schwab, of the city softball league, announced today that Reliance A.C. would represent Belleville in the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns, the No. 5 ITS "Fliers" having waved all rights to compete in the provincial softball playdowns this year. However, FO. Warren made it quite well understood that the Fliers are far from out of the City League softbll hunt as they intend to continue in quest of the Bank of Commerce Trophy and the city league championship. In the meantime Reliance will play the Kingston champions here early next week in the first game of the provincial playdowns.

Confronted with the possibility of having to play two games on successive nights and then meet Kingston on a third evening prompted Vice President Joe Samain to contact Wing Commander A. T. Snetsinger relative to some solution whereby the Belleville champions would not b leg-weary when they met Kingston, had it been Reliance or the "Fliers."

Solution simple

The answer to the league's problem was quite simple. Wing Commander Snetsinger assured Mr. Samain that the Flyers did not intend to compete in the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns in the event they won the City league title. Later FO. Warren relinquished any and all rights of being the local OA.S.A. entry and immediately Secretary Schwab announced Reliance as in

"Our softball team is entered in the No. 1 Command R.C.A.F. softball playdowns and already we are in the Bay of Quinte finals. As you know our team advanced to the finals last year only to lose out in the last game to St. Thomas. This year we hope to win the Command softball championship. We intend to try and capture the Belleville City League title and the Bank of Commerce trophy also, so you see with so many studies and our extensive training at No. 5 ITS, it would be utterly impossible for us to play in a provincial playdowns," explained Wing Commander Snetsinger, but only after assuring league executives that the Fliers were still very much in the hunt for that covetted Bank of Commerce trophy. Incidentally the heads of the Fliers' softball team wish Reliance "good hunting" in the O.A.S.A. and also hope for the continued support of their civilian friends in the remaining city league games, that are to be interspersed between the Reliance O.A.S.A. games.

In the meantime the No. 5 ITS Fliers have been ordered to meet the strong Trenton Air Station team in their Command softball eliminations on Monday, where a win for FO. Warren's local Airmen should just about advance them to the Command semi-finals. Naturally Belleville softball fans will be behind the Fliers in the Command games and in the event any future such games are payed at No. 5 ITS, a goodly gallery of Belleville patrons can be assured.

Couldn't be worse

NNoting that Manager Burleigh Grimes of the Toronto club wants to bring the spitball back, Fresco Thompson, Montreal pilot, who has been plagued by the wildness of his pitchers, is wondering how some of the boys would fare trying to control the moist delivery.

The other day, Newark and Montreal each drew 11 passes in one game, the Royals winning the walkahton, 8 to 7. Neither team showed much that day, although both uncovered stellar "passing attacks."

On his last visit here, Clyde Sukeforth of the Brooklyn coaching staff averred that "any pitcher who can throw the ball over the plate can get by."

Remember when—

The baseball world mourned the death at Santa Barbara, Calif., three years ago today of Ernest L. Thyer who wrote the famous poem "Casey at the Bat". The lines which have become an American sport classic were written in 1888 and brought into prominence by the late De Wolff Hopper, ahe noted actor.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 154

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Partnership means just the same in a business or a game. You should always strive to do what is best for both of you. That's how it is in bridge.

If you are ever in doubt, it is better to be safe than sorry. If you have the urge to take a chance, remember that what you lose goes double. You drag your partner down with you.

You have this responding hand:

♥K 7 6 3
♣A Q 7 4

Before you bid, you are assumed to hold two tricks. Each raise in suit shows another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid shows another no-trump trick.

Your hand contains four suit tricks; three no-trump tricks. Thus, you have enough for two suit raises; one voluntary no-trump bid.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one club. With no new suit to show and support for clubs, assist to two clubs. That shows three of your four suit tricks.

Suppose partner then bids two no-trump. You still have no take-out suit. But you have an unshown suit trick. So you assist clubs again. You bid three clubs and show your fourth trick.

You have an unshown no-trump trick. That entitled you to make a voluntary no-trump bid. Why, then, did you not bid three no-trump instead of three clubs?

You know that by following the order of choice of bids in T-A-N; takeout, first, assist, second; no-trump, last. In other words, you bid no-trump only when you have no more suit bids.

With an expert partner, you might be tempted to gamble with a bid of three no-trump instead of three clubs. But as you lay down the dummy hand, remark: "I wouldn't do this, partner, except for your ability with the pasteboards."

That last crack is what we call taking out a little insurance.

AT THE BELLE

"Five Graves to Cairo"

For the first time film fans are going to have a chance to see the famous Nazi soldier, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, portrayed on the screen. Paramount has given him an important role to play in its adventure film, "Five Graves to Cairo," which is due today at the Belle theatre with Franchot Tone, Anne Baxter, Akim Tamiroff and Erich von Stroheim playing the Field Marshal.

That arch delineator of Prussian soldier-villains, Erich von Stroheim, has never had a better role into which to sink his experienced acting teeth, and those who have seen him in the picture, say that he outdoes himself.

The story of "Five Graves to Cairo" takes place behind Rommel's lines during the African campaign when he was having things pretty much his own way. A British tank soldier, played by Franchot Tone, accidentally stumbles into Rommel's staff headquarters in an erstwhile British hotel in Sidi Halfaya. How he gets out of the place with Rommel's secrets thanks to the aid of the only girl in the hotel is said to make this a highly exciting and diverting film, well worth seeing.

Ottawa, Aug. 21—(CP) — Diplomatic row in Ottawa, sometimes slender in years gone by, has become definitely imposing. The increasing representation of nations at the Canadian capital has been taken by officials here as a demonstration of the growing stature of the Dominion in the family of nations.

Legations in Ottawa are maintained by Belgium, China, Poland, Norway, Yugoslavia, Greece, Czecho-Slovakia, Brazil, Chile, the United States, Sweden, Argentina, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Netherlands.

There are five representatives of governments of the British Commonwealth of Nations — Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom; Ma.-Gen. the Hon. Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner for Australia; D. de Waal Meyer, accredited representative of South Africa; John J. Hearne, High Commissioner for Ireland and R. M. Firth, acting High Commissioner for New Zealand.

Peru and Cuba have consuls-general in Ottawa and representatives of the Fighting French have offices in the city.

Question of Procedure

There was a slight question of procedure at the opening of a sitting of the National War Labor Board the other day.

A Labor representative said cheerfully that the request of himself and his colleagues was "so minor" that it would not delay the board for long.

"A diplomatic opening, anyway," said Mr. Justice C. P. McTague, board chairman, as he nodded for the hearing to proceed.

"The early Wren gets the worm," is the latest quip in these parts.

It developed from the decision of the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service (composed of Wrens) to observe its first anniversary on Aug. 29 with a dance at the H. M. C.S. Bytown Station in Ottawa. When the question arose about partners, it appeared the average Wren wanted a Navy man as her escort. This led on to the further question of the plight of a Navy man invited by a Wren rating who later received an invitation from a Wren officer. Or if a Wren officer asked the man the Wren rating was going to ask, what should he do? What should she do? What should they all do?

"Apparently commissioned rank is no advantage at this time," said a final authority. "The early Wren gets the worm."

Little Benny's Note. Book

Pop and ma were waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Spruance to come and play bridge, and ma said, I do hope Mr. Spruance will inspire you this evening, William?

How can he, that bird's bridge is worse than mine, pop said, and ma said, I dont mean his bridge, I mean his Victory garden. It's the most successful one in our whole circle of Victory gardens, so I thought perhaps with his superior experience Mr. Spruance might inspire you to a bran new fresh start on another Victory garden of your own. After all it takes more than one failure to make a success, she said.

And it takes more than one back ake to make permanent lumbago, pop said.

Which just then the doorbell rang and it was the Spruances, and they all started to talk while pop got out the bridge table, ma saying to Mr. Spruance, We were just speaking admiringly of your Victory garden, I'm sure you can give Mr. Potts a few general hints that would make him realize his past errors and his future possibilities.

I'll be glad to, Mr. Spruance said, Gardening has its pitfalls as well as its rich rewards. Now just take beans for example, he said, and pop said, Do you mean leguminoso podamus? I think if you go in for this sort of thing you might as well be thorough about it and get to know the vegetables by their fundamental Latin names. Gardening is one thing that ought to be learned from the ground up, that seems only logical. Okay, what about leguminoso podamus? he said.

I was going to say there's nothing more tricky than beans, Mr. Spruance said. Compared to beans carrots are mere child's play, he said, and pop said, Oh, carrots, you mean carrotus spreadacious. Why be superficial? he said.

Oh, let's play bridge, Mr. Spruance said, and ma said, For land sakes let's.

Which they did.

Cabinet Shake-Up In Finland Likely

Stockholm, Aug. 21 (AP).—Another cabinet shakeup is being discussed informally in Finland as the demand intensifies for some steps to make a separate peace with Russia.

Juhu Paasikivi, 75-year-old former minister to Moscow, is being mentioned as a successor to Prime Minister Edwin Linkomies, former Latin professor, who does not have the pro-Allied outlook of Pasikivi. Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay who entered the cabinet in a shake-up five months ago with Linkomies also may be a target for the group pressing a peace offensive.

A week ago Paasikivi offered his services to President Risto Ryti and it is now disclosed that a committee representing various Finnish political parties delivered a petition signed by 50 prominent persons requesting a formal investigation into the opportunities for a separate peace with Soviet Russia.

Nazis' Institute New Measures Of Security

London, Aug. 21. (CP)—German occupation authorities in France instituted new measures of security today amid increasing Axis tension at the prospect of allied invasion of the continent.

An ultimatum has been issued to Frenchmen to hand over their firearms and the Axis has announced a new law is being prepared to provide a special summary trial which may inflict the death penalty for the destruction of crops.

The ultimatum, as quoted by the Ministry of Information from a Paris broadcast, warned French patriots if they have not surrendered arms and ammunition by Tuesday they will be liable to the death penalty. Amnesty was promised to all who obey the call in.

The statement said "it is known to authorities that extensive arms dumps exist all over France", and added that "allied planes have repeatedly dropped war material"

The announcer, commenting on arson and sabotage in France, said "this wave of sabotage is spreading all over France".

CHAPTER 9

When I left for the office at quarter of three, the place was still full of people, but when I came back around six, the measuring, photographing and all the rest of it, was over and Jan's studio looked just the same as usual except for the big rug that had been removed and the canary which I had taken upstairs to our apartment.

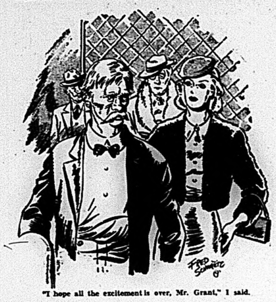
A woman who got in the elevator with me asked to be directed to the furrier, please, and from the fourth floor came the sound of one of Mr. Fissel's violin pupils, squeakier than ever, and Madame Hurd's star soprano repeating four notes over and over. Ha, ha, ha, ha . . . ha, ha, ha, ha, ha . . . ha, ha, ha, ha.

Business as usual, and from the strong aroma of cabbage that followed us up the elevator, dinner as usual, too.

"I hope all the excitement is over, Mr. Grant," I said.

He just shook his head. He was still too dejected to talk.

Peggy heard me come in, and



FRED SCHMITZ

"I hope all the excitement is over, Mr. Grant," I said.

rushed in from the workroom.

"Mary, somebody at the Castle's house phoned and said that Mrs. Castle would see you right away. I called the office, but you'd just left. They said for you to grab a taxi and go right over and then go on back to the office. Gosh, I'd hate to have to talk to that fellow's poor mother. What in the word willl you say to her?"

I wondered, all the way over in the taxi.

It was a surprise that Gil's mother had consented to see me, a surprise that she remembered me at all. I only saw her three times in my life, and that nearly five years ago.

The first time was the little dinner party that I expected to be eventful and was not. Then I called on her one afternoon shortly afterward and once, several months later, she asked me to tea. By that time I knew where I stood with Gil and I never went back, though she asked me to.

I think I sort of blamed her for coming between Gil and me. I thought that if he did not have a rich, ambitious mother he would have time for me. It was common gossip that old Mr. Castle had left the entire fortune to her and instead of making a settlement on Gil she kept her hands on all of it, making him dependent on her. She gave him everything but she made him sing for his supper and though she said that she wanted him to marry, she found fault with every girl he might have married.

I don't think that she knew she was cruel. She was a lonely old woman with nothing to live for but Gil and he, who might have been everything, was nothing, because she killed his spirit.

It wasn't entirely the money. He had had a marvelous training in art and architecture and could have made his own way, but she destroyed his faith in himself and in some queer, warped way he was dependent upon her for approbation of everything he did.

I thought of the things Josh Beane, our city editor, had been telling me about Gil Castle, and the women in his life. What would his mother think about tomorrow's papers, I wondered.

The thought did not make me feel any more at ease as I walked up the wide old marble steps and rang the bell. The same tall, thin butler, that I'd seen each time I'd been in the house, admitted me and in a stage whisper told me that Mrs. Castle would see me in her room.

I had a glimpse of large, formal, rather out-moded rooms, dark tapestries and tall gold framed mirrors as I followed the man upstairs. The shades were all drawn and the house spoke eloquently of mourning.

Mrs. Castle, lying on a chaise-lounge before a pleasant fire in her large Victorian bedroom, was dressed all in black, and her eyes were swollen and red with weeping. But she greeted me almost eagerly and sent the nurse from the room. "My poor Mary," she said and cried a little.

I know I blushed to the roots of my hair. I had not realized until this moment that she had known my little secret all along. I stretched out my hand, and she took it in her soft fat, ringless one. She had removed all her jewels for her mourning and her hands that I had always seen laden with heavy old fashioned stones, looked strangely naked.

She wanted to talk and I was only too glad to have her do the talking.

"Of course it was one of his women," she said and her handsome, florid face set into a hard, vindictive fold.

"One of—what?" I faltered. It turned out later that everyone who knew Gil Castle knew about his affairs. Everyone but me. Somehow the idea had never occurred to me. Certainly I had never expected to hear it from his mother. It was one thing to hear it from a city editor on the trail of a good story, and another to hear it from this elderly woman, with her fat, powdered face, her faultlessly dressed hair, her low, well modulated voice going on and on, telling these unspeakable things about her son, who was dead.

"But why," I asked miserably, would one of these girls want to kill him? A jealous husband, or an irate father or brother would seem much more likely to me."

"No, no! It was a woman, I tell you."

"But wouldn't blackmail or something like that—"

"Oh trash," she said, "Gil was different. He made them love him." She looked at me shrewdly. "Why, more than one of his NICE girl friends—Betty Green and that little 'Sugar' Hastings and even Kit Reimers, who is older and should have more sense, came here to me and ranted and threatened in the most sickening manner. They lost their heads. Now if they, well-bred young women, would come and cry and beg and threaten, what do you suppose the other kind would do?"

"But in our studio building—in Jan Proust's studio, of all the places in the world—"

"That is why it was chosen. That is exactly why."

"But it's locked after 9—you need a key to get in!"

"A key. A girl like that would knock the door in."

Proper Care and Good Feed Main Factors in Raising Chicks Central Ontario Poultrymen Told

Peterborough — The grade 'A' milkfed chicken and its relative, the sunshine egg, were extolled as ultimate ideals of their industry at the Central Ontario poultry production conference this week, reports the Peterborough Examiner.

Among consumers the market reputation of this chicken is so generally recognized and accepted that literally it stands without a peer in a class by itself. So does the sunshine egg, for that matter, but the phrase is unfamiliar and is beyond the hope of practical trade use and popularity.

The sunshine egg is a term signifying a highly desirable exactness in combination of color, especially of the yoke framed in its background of white, a conception of perfection that might have inspired Dr. W. R. Graham's aphorism "You taste with your eyes." And Dr. Graham one of the galaxy of poultry experts on the conference program, was introduced by the chairman, Garnet S. Taylor of Bloomfield, Prince Edward county as "the most beloved man in the poultry industry on this continent."

So, the sunshine egg expresses a delicate balance of color as the egg comes from the pan on to your plate, usually an accompaniment of a round of ham which the consumer himself has held as an ideal all along. And at any divergence from that combination in its precision of color tends to raise at a doubt that all is not well with the appetizing ham and egg, although the slight difference at which the fussy and possibly pampered consumer may lift a silently enquiring eyebrow may be only a slight shade off the sunshine ideal.

But, that otherwise trifling variation is one of the fine points of production which causes uneasiness in the trade, because they feel and know that the public may doubt the entire and inherent quality of the egg if it strays from the sunshine standard.

That was one of the topics which emerged in the conference discussions which covered a broad range of subjects in the production of chickens and eggs on a basis of quality that will ensure and command price.

500 Attend.

Five hundred men and women from the Central Ontario counties from Prince Edward to Ontario county attended this regional meeting which packed into morning and afternoon sessions ideas and problems and methods which could easily have been spread through two days deliberations.

For the assistance of producers the conference committee offered the knowledge and experience of some of the industry's leaders in this country. Among them were Dr. Graham formerly of O. A. C. and now retired and living at Burlington; Dr. P. N. Barcellus, head of the poultry department of the Ontario Agricultural College and Prof. E. S. Snyder of its poultry husbandry department.

Also Norman S. Schultz of Brantford, one of Canada's outstanding poultrymen; E. D. Bonyman, chief market poultry inspector of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and George Robertson, Dominion Poultry Husbandman of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa; Dr. C. H. Weaver of the poultry pathology laboratory, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The program included addresses on practical phases of the industry, a demonstration of killing, plucking and grading of poultry, and a concluding question and answer period with James G. Wharry of Peterborough as chairman.

Norman Robinson, Toronto, conference manager, told the Examiner that a similar conference for Western Ontario producers would be held at London in the near future.

Ernest C. Braund was chairman of the local management committee with Robt. M Pierson, J. G. Wharry, R. H. Carter and Frank C. Paterson.

Mr. Pierson was chairman of the program committee with George Lockington, C. Gould, G. Matthews, M. McIntyre, F. W. Horton, F. Bell and G. Nicholls.

Close to forty questions were answered by the visiting speakers and the sessional chairman, Mr. Taylor.

Mayor Hamilton greeted the visitors at the opening of the afternoon conference, extending them a hearty welcome to Peterborough.

Raising Chickens

The subject of the talk by Mr. Schultz was "Management of Layers," and it was packed with practical advice from his own experience in building up one of the largest poultry farms in the country.

"When you are handling chickens, remember that they are babies," Mr. Schultz advised. "When you get them home, assuming that you have bought them as chicks, if you can't put them directly under the brooder, take them into the house, put the boxes on the table in a room of about 70 degrees temperature. Lift the lids occasionally to make sure the chicks are comfortable. At one farm we like to put the chicks under the brooder just after dark, so that the birds will settle down directly and be very little trouble for the first night. By morning they are accustomed to the brooder and know which way to go to get warm, and are ready to go to work.

Don't Mention Luck

Luck does not enter into this business in any way. It is good management that produces results.

Get the chicks out on the ground as quickly as possible. In the case of late chickens this may be done by the time they are a week or ten days old. With earlier chicks it will be necessary to provide windbreaks of some sort, and if the ground is too cold and wet for the chicks, you might spread straw so that they will have dry feet. As they get older don't forget they need more air and less temperature.

Poultry Pasture

Pasture is one of the most important items in developing good layers. If you will think of a nice, well kept lawn, you will have some idea of what we mean by suitable pasture for birds. In the early season this can be produced by sowing oats frequently. Later on it is usuually a case of depending on a permanent pasture, kept short.

Don't forget the birds are growing all the time, and need more room.

When they are done with the brooder, you had better take out part of the birds from the brooder house, and put them in shelters, spread them out. Probably about one hundred birds will be enough to leave in a good sized brooder house. The rest should be put in shelters.

From now on we like to depend more and more on the pasture as feed stuff for the growing birds. That is, cut down the growing mash, and also on the amount of the grain. The birds will grow a bit slower but they will be better layers when it comes time to put them in the pens.

Some Shade Needed.

Along with the pasture the birds need some shade during the hot weather. This can be provided by apple trees, corn or sunflowers.

We have found at the farm that it pays to provide the birds with nest boxes on the range. It not only saves a lot of eggs and keeps them cleaner, but also teaches the birds to lay in nests.

About July 1 take pullets of the year before, put them out in range shelters, on good pasture again and leave them out for a couple of months. When they come back in the fall, they will do a first class job of production.

..In the cleaning the laying. pen use plenty of elbow grease. Oil the roosting equipment and spray the pen .completely. with. whitewash. If you can let the pen stand idle for six weeks or two months before the new crop of birds come in, so much the better."

Moving To Pens.

The early hatched birds will be ready to move from range into laying quarters some time in August. Let the birds run from the laying pen for three or four weeks, so that they gradually become accustomed to confinement. It will be time well spent if you supply them with some sort of green stuff; also take in some fresh earth every few days, and the odd sheaf of oats thrown in the pen will also help to ease them over the change to the laying pen.

For winter production, pullets should be gradually changed over from the feed used on range to the laying ration.

The Schultz Method.

Our program at the farm is as follows:

First thing in the morning we give them all the germinated oats they will clean up in half an hour's time. At ten o'clock they are fed dry mash, enough to last them until about 7 or 8 o'clock the next morning, and then at 5 o'clock they are fed scratch grain. This can be fed either in troughs, on top of the dry mash, or in the littler. We like to feed it in the trough's because you can see at a glance whether the quantity is right or not.

We watch the birds for body weight, some time between September 21 and October 1. We start the morning lights, turn them on about 4 a.m. About this time or a little later we start in with moist mash. This is mixed 24 hours ahead of time, and kept warm so as to produce fermentation, and then is fed about one o'clock. Make sure it is all cleaned up within half an hour.

Along in December or January if you find there is a tendency toward a slump in production, we would advise increasing the light to all night, one 60 watt bulb to each 100 birds, and this should be located over the water vessel.

Providing Litter.

Litter is important. We start in August or September putting in a few wheelbarrow loads of topsoil, then start to add straw. Each week or ten days following we add some more. Keep on building up the litter, so that by the time cold weather comes you will have a good depth that will keep moisture from condensing on either cement or wood floor. This litter is cleaned out the following summer when the pullets are moved out on the range."

Importance of Pastures.

Dr. Marcellus expanded the subject of poultry pasturage upon which Mr. Schultz touches in his address.

Good pastures, said Dr. Marcellus, constitute a valuable source of protein material, which is in short supply at present. This protein content will vary considerably with the different species of plants, ranging from 15 to 25 per cent, and in some cases might even come slightly higher.

"Present information indicates that good pasture may be the source of from 15 to 30 per cent of the birds' feed requirements.

There are numerous cases on record where operators have discontinued the feeding of growing mash after ten weeks of age and have grown their chickens to maturity from this period on whole grain and pasture.

It is extremely important that for greatest nutritional efficiency the pasture crops be kept short either by pasturing with other classes of live stock or by frequent mowing and clipping of the pasture. It is also well to remember that in extremely hot, dry, weather when growth is practically at a standstill, even although the crop may appear green its nutritional value will be definitely down when compared with a pasture which is in an active state of growth and there is an abundance of new leafy growth coming along continuously.

Many operators are finding it a help to supplement the permanent pastures with annual crops such as oats, wheat, barley and fall rye. It will require in an average season thirty days from the time the oats are sown until the crop is ready for pasturing.

Repeated seedings are necessary so that new growth will be coming along continuously to supply pastures of the greatest value.

In preparing permanent pastures, various mixtures of grasses and legumes have been used.

A Sample Mixture.

A mixture that has proved satisfactory is one, composed of white Dutch clover, two pounds; alsike clover, two pounds; alfalfa, three pounds; timothy, six pounds; red top, two pounds; Kentucky blue grass, three pounds.

This makes a total of 18 pounds and for some persons sufficient for seeding an acre.

One of our leading Ontario poultry men sows timothy seed at the rate of 22 pounds to the acre in the fall with fall wheat. By freuent clipping or mowing, this seeding in the following year it is kept short, producing a very abundant leafy growth.

In using oats for spring pasture, sow early at the rate of 4 to 5 bushels per acre. A new seeding of oats must be made every two or three weeks in order to maintain a continuous supply of tender green food. The area sown at one time should be limited to the amount of pasture that would be required to feed the birds for two or three weeks. It is not advisable to continue oat seeding much beyond the first of June.

Corn and rape may be sown for the hot midsummer period.

A pasture might carry up to 500 birds to the acre, but in a dry season the limit might be 200."

Effect On Yolk.

There is no question of the value of pastures in the poultry program, Dr. Marcellus said. Care, however, in the use of such pastures for laying stock must be observed owing to the probable effect on egg yolk color as most of these green forage crops will intensify the yellow colorization of the yolk and probably affect the grade.

Sanitation.

In addition to fragment clipping, especially of the permanent grasses, to insure maximum nutritional value of the crop, it should also be emphasized that maintaining fresh short growth not only of the grasses but of the clovers and alfalfa is an essential part of the sanitation program. Housing and feeding equipment should be moved frequently to avoid smothering and killing of the pasture growth. Where using annual pastures such as seedings of cereal grass, it is important that as soon as an area becomes eaten off sufficiently that there is not vegetation to make it of further value, the bare ground should be cultivated and if possible reseeded, not only to increase the green feed supply but as a sanitation measure in keeping the surface soil fresh and clean."

GIVES UP BABY

Attractive psychiatrist Norma Schoener Kunstler, TOP, 29, obtained a decree in New York Supreme Court relieving her of the custody of her six-year-old son Stephen, so that she'd be free to join the U. S. Women's Army Corps. The child was turned over to her former husband, Charles Kunstler.

Cool Eggs Quickly For Best Results Producers Advised

Peterborough.— Professor E. S. Synder of the Ontario Agricultural College, who address the poultry convention on Wednesday, said that at the University of Missouri it was found that when eggs were taken freshly laid from pens and placed in a room of 50 degrees temperature, it took only about one hour for the eggs to cool down to 60 degrees, a desirable holding temperature. If they were placed in an ordinary galvanized pail, it took about fourteen hours for the same condition to result, and if placed in an egg case it took twenty-four hours.

"We can cool our eggs quickly. That means we should put them in wire baskets and get them down to a temperature somewhere between 50 and 65 degrees, and we should strive to have as high humidity as possible".

A group of workers in Pennsylvania found from investigating a number of farms that temperature and humidity in holding rooms had the following effects: On nine farms where the temperature was under 65 degrees and the relative humidity was 75 per cent, 97 per cent of the eggs were A grade.

On those farms where the temperature was a little high and the humidity correct only 92 per cent graded as well.

Eggs stored at the Ontario Agricultural College showed practically the same results. On farms where the humidity was too low, and it is too low in many of our storage rooms, only 45 per cent were grade A, though the temperature was correct.

Gather Eggs Quickly.

If you want to lose money, gather eggs infrequently and store in a poor place. Eggs should be gathered two or three times a day and should be cooled as quickly as possible. They should be kept in a place that has some moisture rather than a place that is dry. It has been found that inside two hours there is a measurable difference in the quality of an egg left in the nest. Cool quickly and put in a storage that is clean, free from mould and free from odors, and keep them cool. Eggs should be treated like milk and cream".

Prof. Snyder said it was highly important that farmers should send their eggs to market at the peak of their quality.

Often Spoil.

The average egg going from the farm to the city consumer was kept as long as a week on the farm, and then was taken to the grading station, and if the station was not properly controlled as to moisture in the air, or humidity, and temperature, and the truck was not properly controlled taking the eggs out, then rapid deterioration followed. Also if they were placed in an open window or retail store for some hours at a time the quality was further reduced.

"It is imperative that eggs be got to the market of the consumer as quickly as possible after being laid, and that in the interval they be kept under proper conditions".— Peterborough Examiner.

Canadian Army Briefs

The intelligence test given new recruits in the Canadian Army is a combination of the best features of similar examinations given by the British and American armies.

Training films created by Walt Disney, "father" of Mickey Mouse, are used by the Canadian army.

Soldiers in the Canadian Army are protected against foot trouble by regular foot inspection before and after each route march.

The five things most wanted as gifts by Canadian soldiers overseas, according to an officer just returned, are: Cigarettes, toilet soap (rationed in England), shaving soap, chocolates and candies and more cigarettes.

A film is being prepared for national release showing the work of the three women's auxiliary services.

Not only is the Canadian Army University Course given without charge to students, but they receive boys' pay up to seventeen-and-a-half years of age and thereafter regular Army pay, uniform and free medical and dental care while attending the 33-weeks' course.

The age limit for appointment to the Veterans Guard of Canada is 55 years.

All personnel of the Canadian Army are being reboarded under the recently inaugurated "Pulhems" system.

That red, white and blue colored wire ribbon you see on the lapels of civilians these days denotes they're soldiers of Canada's Reserve Army.

Six members of the British Army in the British West Indies were among officer candidates at a recent course at the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville.

Corporal Murray Armstrong, former New York American hockey player and most valuable player on the champion Regina Capitals last season, is now a second-lieutenant in the Canadian Army.

A choice of more than 50 trades is offered girls enlisting in the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Men skilled in 34 trades linked with railroading—from stokers to crane operators—are in units of the Canadian Railway Troops.

A reciprocal agreement, covering the provision of medical and dental care in Canada and the United States to the armed forces of both countries, is in effect.

Next of kin of soldiers in Canada's Active Forces are reminded by National Defence Headquarters to notify NDHQ of any change in their addresses.

If you want to test that parcel you're sending to a soldier friend Overseas the most effective way, according to the Canadian Postal Corps, is to stand on it. If it won't take your weight it won't take the weight of several thousand bulging mail bags.

For the first time in the history of any Army, Canadian women are now staff officers on an equal footing with men.

A special depot has been set up in Geneva, Switzerland, to arrange distribution of Canadian Legion Service Courses, including those at the University level, to all British prisoners-of-war in Germany.

Members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps will be taking their place with men behind anti-aircraft artillery as the result of a plan to train women 'plotter-telephonists." Women in England have been used on similar duty for some months.

Each black service chevron on a soldier's sleeve means a complete year of service in the present war. A silver "stripe" below them means that the officer or man was appointed or enlisted before September 10, 1940.

More than two million parcels of cigarettes and tobacco were sent to Canadian soldiers overseas during 1942 and of that number only about three per cent were lost due to enemy action.

All soldiers of the Canadian Active Army will have dental treatment completed before retirement, discharge or reverting to Reserve Status.

Soldiers are not permitted to solicit rides by the "thumb" method on highways, but may accept lifts offered to them.

Veteran Flier Tells Graphic Story Of Landing Burning Plane Off Sweden

Editor's Note: Last January PO. C. P. (Chuck) MsDonald of Toronto, took Louis Hunter of The Canadian Press London Staff as a passenger in his Lancaster on a Berlin bombing raid. Engine trouble over Denmark forced them to turn back. Then, on the night of April 20 on his way to Stettin on his 42nd operational flight, McDonald was shot down in flames and is now interned in Sweden.

In his crew were: Sgt. T. J. Parrington, R.A.F., veteran of 32 trips and a flight engineer; PO. Vic Nunn, R.A.F.V.R., 33 trips, navigator; Sgt. Cy Paley, R.A.F., 37 trips, bomb aimer; Sgt. Maxie Coles of R.C.A.F., 33 trips, wireless operator-air gunner; Flt. Sgt. Chris Ford, R.A.F., 38 trips, midupper gunner, and FO. Johnny Crebbin, D.F.C., R.A.F., 42 trips, rear-gunner.

In the following story McDonald tells the story of that Stettin flight.

Written for The Canadian Press
By PO. C. P. McDonald, D.F.C., D.F.M., Royal Canadian Air Force

On April 20 we briefed to go to Stettin. I was to take "F for Freddie" and at 9.30 p.m. after circling the airdrome a few times we set course for Denmark at 4,000 feet.

Everything went well until we reached the Danish coast. The fireworks really got underway there, but most of the flak was five to six miles south of us on my starboard side. We saw five bombers get the "chop" (shot down).

The moon lit up every ground detail brilliantly and we were "bag on" track as my bomb aimer, Cy Paley, repeatedly got pin points. We had just crossed the German coast at about 16,000 feet when things began to happen.

Hit by Shell

"Turn to starboard, go," yelled Johnny. I heeled her over into a 70-degree bank and shoved the nose down, watching for other bombers who might be in my path. The next thing I knew there was an explosion behind me and in front of Vic. I knew then we had been pranged. Then many holes appeared in my windscreen right in front of my face. These I knew were machine-gun bullets.

The explosion I had heard I thought to be a cannon-shell, which afterwards proved to be correct.

"Mac, oh Mac, I've been hit," yelled Chris Ford from the mid-upper turret.

"Okay, Chris boy, just hang on for a minute longer and we'll be out of this mess," I said.

"Dam," I thought, "this is grim."

"Okay, straighten out Mac," said Johnny.

It sure took some straightening. The airspeed was no 405 knots at 8,000 feet, which is a true airspeed of close to 500 miles an hour. However, we coped all right, old "F for Freddie" and I, and we were under control at 6,000 feet.

Fire in Wing

Just then, Chris, who was in great pain, reported a fire in the port wing. That meant only one thing, we had been hit in one of the petrol tanks in the port wing by incendiary bullets.

Hells bells! The fire had spread by now to two more places in the same wing. Chris was on the rest bed and had a badly mangled left arm. He had been hit by a cannon shell. Maxie and Tommy reported this to me.

"Prepare to abandon aircraft," I yelled at the crew.

Now came the time for the major decision—what to do now. We now had three fires burning fiercely in the port wing. I knew she would never hold together long enough to get back to England. I headed back for the German Baltic coast and told everyone to be ready to bail out on a second's notice.

"Poor Chris," I said to myself, "I wonder if he can bail out."

The thought then struck me that maybe we could make Sweden. When I thought I was directly south of Sweden, I told Cy to map-read me to it. Visibility was still perfect.

Like Swiss Cheese

Old "F" for Freddie was hard to keep on an even keel. The starboard fin and rudder had been partially shot away. The side and top of the fuselage were like a Swiss cheese. The wind from the holes in the windscreen cut my face. All top wireless aerials had been shot away, too.

Now I could see the lights of many cities and towns like tiny pinpoints miles ahead. This must be Sweden.

The fires had spread to five places now. I almost lost hope. She must blow up any minute. Either that or the wing would drop off, breaking the port inner and outer engines.

"It won't hurt much when we prang," I thought, "but gosh, I hope I haven't boobed and sacrificed seven men when we could have bailed out over Germany and at least have been live prisoners of war."

Near Sweden

Still, maybe poor old Chris couldn't have jumped. Thus I tried to flannel myself into thinking I had done the right thing.

"Yes, skipper, this is Sweden," said Cy, who apparently had just got a fresh pinpoint on one of the many Baltic islands.

"Bail out," I ordered, "and one of you can cope with Chris. Pull his ripcord with some of the trailing aerial after you have thrown him out of the rear door."

Not one of them moved.

"Get out you fools. This wing isn't going to stay on forever. Tie Chris to the rest bed for he and I in a crash-landing."

Crew Stays on Ship

"Go to hell," was the answer. "We're staying with you."

Now, I ask you, what can you do with a gang like that?

"Good boys," I thought. "They know I'll never be able to lift Chris out alone before we are burned alive."

He was unconscious now from the loss of blood, I guess.

Well, if you've ever played baseball and the score is tied, and it's the last half of the ninth; the bases are full; there are two out and you're at bat with three balls and two strikes on you, you will get some idea of how I felt. The difference being that we were playing for keeps.

"I must not let these guys down."

Now I spotted what looked like a natural shallow bay just off the coast. I came down to what I figured was about 300 feet, examining as best I could in the moonlight my intended forced-landing path.

"The landing must be smooth enough so that the petrol won't splash too much on the burning part of the wing, or so that the burning fragments will not drop into the tank and explode the remaining fuel".

All of these things flashed through my mind as I made my approach. I put down 30 degrees of flap and in we came with the under-carriage up.

She touched the water and I jerked the control column back as hard as I could. Everything seemed to shake and quiver in front of me.

Flames 30 Feet High

Flames now shot 30 feet into the air as some of the petrol splashed up onto the burning wing. I was sure the fire would destroy the aircraft.

The flames were all around and I was in no mood to be fried (not yet). I was out of the hatch like a shot. The rest of the crew were helping Chris into the dinghy, which had functioned properly.

We were soon taken in tow by Swedish military officials and Chris was sent to the nearest hospital. His arm is going to be O.K.

I think all my crew should be given gongs for the guts an determination they showed when they really faced death. They stuck with me for one and one for all sort of thing when they twice had the chance to bail out.

But now? I'd give anything to be back on the job again, to be in a Lanc. again with places to go and some bombing to do.

MARY CHURCHILL VISITING KITCHENER

Kitchener, Aug. 20—(CP)—Mary Churchill, daughter of the British Prime Minister, was expected in Kitchener today in time for luncheon, Lt.-Col. Mary Dover, Officer Commanding at the Canadian Womens Army Corps Training Centre, said today.

Miss Churchill, accompanied by Capt. Marcelle Paul, C.W.A.C. staff officer of M. D. No. 5, Quebec, is travelling by plane and will motor here from Brantford, Col. Dover said.

Troop Ship

By

Marcel Wallenstein

She lay beside the dock of an American Atlantic port—in the twilight of a summer evening—a vast grey mass towering above the sheds. She was grey all over—even her proud name had been painted out with the same dull color.

Once she had been shining with brasswork and gleaming paint in many shades and gay with the chatter of tourists on their way to Europe. Orchids in the staterooms—champagne cocktails in the bars—the crew in fresh linen ready to cast off—a band playing on the promenade deck. In those days crowds lined the decks—waving hats and handkerchiefs—shouting last messages.

A puffing and straining of tugs warping her from the berth and she would be away with deep blasts of her whistle—a blaze of lights against the evening sky.

So it had been in days of peace.

Now she was an Atlantic drab—loaded throughout her immense bulk with fighting men and their tools—dark — furtive — ready to go out against the submarine pack waiting along the three thousand-mile stretch of blue water.

The last of the processions of fatigued deadened men unravelled itself across the dock. Each man was numbered with a chalk mark on his helmet. Then the line disappeared into the black mouth at the top of the gangplank. The last army nurses in deep blue followed. Now the dock was empty, except for a few officials—the feverish activity attending a troopship's departure dying away. The lights went out.

We went up the gangplank.

The entrance hall had once been a place of banked flowers, deep carpets, satinwood. Now all these were stripped away. Men milled about in this space in what seemed hopeless confusion, but soon we saw was nothing of the kind. Every detail had been worked out.

Weary officers steered even more weary men below or to the decks. Military policemen—armed and alert—at the stairways, untangling snarls: "Shake it up there! Form another line! Form another line!"

A doctor, two nurses and an army chaplain hurried through a corridor to the hospital. For one man the voyage to war was beginning with ether and a surgical knife. His appendix was coming out.

A steward—the dependable turtlenecked Liverpool type all ocean travellers knew and liked before the war—handed us life jackets.

"Keep these on whenever you leave your cabin. Boat drill in the morning."

We would eat two meals a day with a ten hour fast between. There was food in abundance, but even this arrangement meant galley crews working day and night.

For hours the clump of feet sounded throughout the liner. Then it stopped. What had once been the promenade deck was now a carpet of human forms—sleeping men—their faces upturned, pale — almost inhuman in the weak lights. They had slept where they dropped, some on blankets, many on bare boards. Carbines, water bottles, web equipment, life jackets, mess kits, overcoats heaped in piles.

Hundreds slept on the open deck above. A few had lashed their half shelter tents to stanchions or rails or in the lee of lifeboats. Up here it seemed almost a ship of the dead, lying still at dock without lights. They might have been dead—these boys from all the states who had been brought together to sprawl on the boards of this liner. They were so tired not a sound came from their inert ranks, not a whisper or snore. The dreamless sleep of fighting men.

The stern gun pointed aft. Around it the occasional movement of helmeted silhouettes who stood their quiet watch told that all out here on the high decks were not asleep.

The big fellow and I drew a two-berth room. The door had been removed. If anything hit us doors might jam. People kept coming in to see the big fellow. A young, yellow haired captain stood in the entrance with a pen and an autograph book and said, "I've come to get John Steinbeck's autograph."

The big fellow got up from his bunk and obliged. Then he stretched out again and began to write in a note book. Once he leaned out, looked up and said:

"Those steel hats all bunched together looked like a field of mushrooms."

Somebody came through the corridor, stuck his head in and said we'd probably lie in the dock for days. Troopships sometimes did that.

That night the ship crept away from the dock so silently we did not know we were under way. In the morning when we struggled through the unbroken lines of men waiting with their mess kits we were out of sight of land. Behind us as far as eye could see stretched a violet, white-flecked wake. Out there below the horizon were Europe and the war.

Mess lines in the morning—shuffling feet and the clank of metal equipment. Snakes of men winding through the ship. Traffic cons in khaki—directing, guiding, admonishing in all the accents from Oregon to Florida. Feet. They stuck out in all directions. They thumped and clatered on the stairways.

Boat drill and the feet again — this time to emergency stations as the siren wailed.

"Tie on that lifebelt, soldier! four deep on the promenade deck! Form another line! Form another line!"

Sailors and soldiers and British marines, R.A.F. men. A few lost civilians. A red tabbed British staff officer with an eyeglass and a magnificent moustache. He was an Irishman. A Dutch naval lieutenant who had been serving in the islands of the Pacific.

Mess lines—boat drill lines — air raid drill, men swarming in from the decks for shelter from imaginary enemy aircraft. Men who had grown up and never before looked on sea water. Some had never before been within fifteen hundred miles of it. Songs in the officers' lounge. They sing the old songs—the songs of their childhood—"Anchors Aweigh", "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia", "Melancholy Baby", "In the Evening by the Moonlight." This is not a singing war. Its tunes die young or are never born. Cribbage and poker and bridge in the lounge. Crap games and blackjack on the decks outside.

Rumors — gossip — more rumors. You always get them at sea. Now in wartime they are intensified.

Did you see the submarine? No, I didn't, but Joe saw it. It came out of the water and signalled us with a light and went back down again. One of ours. Did you see the plane? It came down right over us. One of ours.

Did you know the last time this boat crossed they shot the front end clean off her? It's a fact. Heard a sailor tell it to the captain. They had to put on a new front end. Rumors.

We're going to Africa. Naw — Russia. I heard a guy say—

Long grey days with the grey ship on a grey sea and rolling grey clouds overhead. Nights with men lying all the lengths of all the decks. The stern gun rising and falling with the movement of the ship—a rising wind—salt spray blowing in your face. A phosphorescent tail in the night sea — thousands of little flashes from microscopic fish—like the twinkling of marine stars.

From the deck where the negro troops are quartered comes the hymn "Rock of Ages" in hundreds of perfectly blended voices, followed by 'When the Saints go Home." It is beautifully done and here on this waste of ocean has a quality of its own. Fine singing from the throats of black men.

The loud speaker: "We are now in the so-called danger zone. Dress yourself as warmly as possible."

We are supposed to remain fully clothed from now until the end of the voyage. The magician who can do almost anything with a pack of cards and some squares of colored silk, can't find his sea legs.

You have the feeling something is going to happen. The ship's loud speaker intensifies the feeling:

"Attention all troops. Attention all troops. Show no lights. No smoking on deck."

The feeling or premonition or whatever it is ends in a furious clatter of gunfire from above. The troops pour in from outside. The gunfire goes on for a few minutes longer. A practice shoot. They do it once every voyage.

The voyage shakes itself down into the routine of the sea. All those thousands of feet find places for themselves. The crap games that began with dollar bills dwindle to small affairs of silver and copper. In every corner of the ship men bury their noses in little books issued by the War Department telling them how to behave in England. They read it from cover to cover—they are astonished to learn that in Britain the same words sometimes mean different things. They know now they are going to Britain or perhaps Northern Ireland.

Some of their grandparents or mothers came from there.

The days slide into one another —eating, sleeping, boat drill, kitchen, police, guard duty—the endless vigil at the guns. The days go by.

In the old times this would have been the night of the Captain's dinner, with champagne, paper caps, dancing and half a ship-load of drunks. Instead we have the U.S.O. theatrical troupe in the lounge. A slip of a girl from Chanute, Kansas, a dancer, times her acrobatics to the plunging roll of the ship and just escapes accident. She is rewarded with cheers, whistles and handclapping.

Halfway through the next morning a bird picks us up, a powerfully winged sea-gling gull. It perches on the rigging, rests there for a bit and takes off towards the east. It is the first sight of life from the old world. At sunset two destroyers come up over the hill of grey water. They bore in and out of the waves—digging in their noses—seahounds drawing the coverts.

Next a scouting aircraft. First a speck in the distant sky—then a drumming multiple-engined warplane. The plane comes in, dives, signals, circles the ship. thousand men on the open deck shout and wave, the plane goes off.

We pass a coastal freighter, then another. From aloft a voice calling: "Land on the port bow."

There it is a distant bluish smudge on the horizon—it might be a cloud. It is our destination. The Spitfire patrol is with us now, sweeping overhead in a wide protective circle. Slowly the bluish smudge turns green. A rocky island with a white lighthouse rises out of the sea.

Behind it is a harbor entrance—ships flying the war flags of the British navy. We are there.

A voice calls over the loudspeaker: "British control to all gun crews. Unload and uncock your pieces!"

Another troopship has arrived.

A soldier in a plaid kilt—a common enough sight in any British port—stands on the dock.

"Look!" Exclaims Private S. M. Feeley of Shalbyville, Missouri, as the ship edges in. 'Look at that guy in the red drawers! Boy, I seen everything now!"

Russians Provide Comfort at Front For Newsmen

(By HENRY CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 20 (AP)—When you read stories under the dateline, "With the Red Army", don't feel sorry for the correspondents over any hardships you may imagine they are undergoing.

We take it in the neck—and various other parts of us—going to and from the front but, while there we loll in luxury.

I have just been on a trip which reached a new high point in the Soviet organization of visits to the front. New York had nothing on the Russian front for comfort.

We stayed in a camp which could well serve as a rest resort for the tired businessman. It rose as though by miracle on a bank of the Oka river opposite the ruins of Orel.

The roomy tents had four iron cots each with snowy white sheets and khaki blankets. These super-special tents with double flaps at the door had sliding windows.

On the river bank was the bath tent providing hot showers.

A special mess tent had service provided by a squad of white-robed girls who heaped the tables twice daily with cold sausage, salmon, cheese, tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes, hot hamburger steak, potatoes, rice, vodka and hot milk.

There was also a "master barber" who entered the tent in the morning. An accordonist played Red Army marching songs and selections from the opera, Aida, while the barber worked.

Prize attendant of all was Medical Corps Lieutenant Dora who acted as orderly, kept the tents neat in the day, tucked in the correspondents at night, and saluting briskly, left them to slumber.

LOSS OF KHARKOV ADMITTED BY GERMANS

Railway Yards At Salerno, Italy, Left Sea Of Flames

Greatest Position In All S. Russia In Soviet Hands

Ukrainian Industrial Centre Changed Hands 4 Times in Less Than 2 Years

"ORDERLY" EVACUATION

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 23 — (AP) — The Germans admitted today the loss of Kharkov, their greatest position in all the south of Russia in what appeared to be a general retreat.

Fall of the city was presented by DNB, German news agency, as an "orderly" evacuation in which Russian pressure had no part. In a broadcast announcing withdrawal from the base, DNB said Kharkov was no longer a "valuable centre of traffic and supply" and declared all important installations there had been destroyed before the Nazis pulled out.

Kharkov, Ukrainian industrial centre, has changed hands four times in less than two years.

It represented the major Nazi position east of the Dnieper River and has been used for the base of a salient from which the Germans could thrust out to menace the Russians anywhere from Moscow to the Caucasus.

Russian broadcasts and reports from the Germans themselves indicated violent fighting west of the city now rising toward perhaps some fateful conclusions.

The Russians have declared German commanders were so hard-pressed they were throwing new formations into the battleline at the moment of their arrival and without rest.

Kharkov was added to the lengthening list of Russian triumphs—the list including Orel and Belgorod—won by the same slashing flank attacks which relieved Stalingrad. Two Russian armies enveloped Kharkov from north and south.

The German announcement Kharkov was again in Russian hands was broadcast in the overseas service report but not to Nazis at home. They were told "there is nothing new."

Larger Force Used Than At Spitzbergen

Ottawa, Aug. 23 (CP)—The Canadian representation in the joint Canadian-American force which occupied the Aleutian Island of Kiska Aug. 15 constituted a much larger Dominion force than that which—on Aug. 25, 1941—landed at Spitsbergen, and went into action as a "compact self-containing and fully-equipped formation," Defence Headquarters said today.

Participating in the Kiska expedition were five noted Canadian regiments, together with artillery, medical corps and engineer units.

The units represented in the Spitsbergen expedition included a field company of the R.C.E., a detachment of the Edmonton Regiment, and one of machine gunners of the Saskatoon Light Infantry, together with signals, medical corps and pay corps detachments.

An indication of the respective sizes of the Kiska and Spitsbergen expeditions was afforded by the reference in an army statement to "big grey transports" in a west coast harbor for the use of the Kiska force, while only one transport was required to carry the Spitsbergen force from the United Kingdom.

No official statement has been made upon further moves for the Canadian and American forces now occupying Kiska, but an unofficial view is that their disposition will depend upon the decisions reached by American authorities.

In a broadcast address reviewing the progress of the Kiska operation Saturday, Prime Minister King made it clear that the United States navy, under Allied strategy, has the primary responsibility for the North Pacific area.

The entire operation against Kiska was carried out under United States navy command.

Tank Force Operated With Canadians Throughout Campaign of Sicily

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 23—(CP Cable)—During the entire Canadian campaign in Sicily, a tank force operated with the Canadian 1st Division, fighting along winding roads, in towns and climaxing its actions with a big success in front of Aderno.

Its Sherman tanks with cannons and machine-guns were constantly with the infantry, prodding away at enemy defences and giving the infantry every support they could. Several times they clashed with enemy tanks at close range but generally in the narrow confines of this mountainous territory they concentrated on staunch support for the Canadian infantry.

The tanks fought at Grammichelle, Piazza Armerina, Leonforte, Nissoria and Agira, played a part in the capture of Regalbuto and finally went down the plains to the Simeto River Valley with the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada to sweep the Germans back at Aderno.

The Aderno fight was the force's biggest job but on the slopes outside Nissoria the tanks saw some of the wildest times of all.

A squadron commanded by Maj. Pat Mills of Toronto was in the thick of the attacks there.

One night it went in with the Princess Patrica's Canadian Light Infantry and reached the objective to wind the enemy also was there with some tanks. The Canadians spent the entire night with the enemy infantry sometimes only 12 yards away and the enemy tanks not more than 100 yards away.

The Canadians kept blazing away with machine-guns and even cannons at everything that moved. Frequently the crews got out of the tanks or lifted the turret tops to lob grenades at the Germans. The enemy fired on the tanks for hours from five or six angles but their infantry never rushed them.

Throughout the nightmare night the Canadians clung firmly to their objective, near the top of a slope over which the Royal Canadian Regiment and the 48th Highlanders of Canada had fought bloody actions during the two previous nights with some tank support.

Everyone was keyed up to fever pitch when dawn came for they knew they would be tangling with enemy tanks. As the first glimmer of light showed, they could dimly see the enemy tanks. The Germans, apparently nervous, opened fire first, giving away their positions. Then the Canadians went after them.

A tank carrying Capt. Ed. Smith of North Bay, Ont., knocked out the first one at 80 yards. A tank with Lieut. Art Waldron of Lloydminster, Sask., followed by knocking out two German tanks at ranges of 700 and 1,500 yards. Waldron also knocked out an 88-millimetre gun on a tractor and some machine-gun posts.

The German infantry were beginning to pull out at this stage because of this tank pressure as well as advances by the Princess Pats and the Seaforths.

In addition to these three German tanks knocked out a Nissoria, the force also got three at Leonforte, and two at Gramichele as well as a pom-pom half-track, probably accounting for more enemy tanks than any other tank unit of the 8th Army.

Other officers in Maj. Mills' squadron included Capt. Reg Yelland, Peterborough, Ont.; Lieuts. Jack Wallace, Barrie, Ont.; Bill Armstrong, London, Ont., and Donald Gordon, Chatham, Ont. Second in command was Maj. Frank Schmidlin, Kingston, Ont. Others on the headquarters staff were Capt. Orval Roberts, Hamilton, Ont., and Lieut. Ted Steinbyckl, Chatham, Ont.

Maj. Walker's squadron was to the fore in the big show with Seaforth Highlanders. Among his officers were Lieuts. Louis Maraskas of Belleville, Ont., Tom Downey of Windsor, Ont., and John Jemmett of Kirkland Lake, Ont.

In a bitter fight at Leonforte (captured July 22) tanks actually joined in street fighting and on the main street Lieut. Maraskas' tank knocked out a German tank, ambushing it from an alleyway.

CHEMICAL WORKS AT LEVERKUSEN SPECIAL TARGET

R.A.F. and Canadian Bombers Continue Crushing Attacks on Germany

DUESSELDORF ALSO HIT

London, Aug. 23—(CP)—R. A. F. and Canadian bombers returned to their crushing attacks on Germany last night after an interval of two nights and the air ministry announced that the chemical works at Leverkusen, six miles north of Cologne, were the special target.

The German radio said that Duesseldorf in the Rhineland also was attacked and that 11 British fighters and "number" of bombers were shot down in "random" attacks on other objectives in the Western Reich. The Air Ministry described these as intruder patrols over railway targets and airfields.

The Air Ministry said five bombers were lost in the night's activities.

R. C. A. F. Headquarters announced one of the missing bombers was Canadian. It was several squadrons of the R. C. A. F. bomber group were out with the R.A.F. and that at the same time R. C. A. F. Mosquitoes on intruder patrol attacked railways and air fields in France and Belgium.

Over Leverkusen and other targets, heavy cloud made it difficult to see results, the Air Ministry communique said.

Leverkusen was bombed twice in 1940, but has not been a specific target since.

Hardly had the night raiders returned than light bombers and fighters sped out by daylight today to resume the assaults.

Conference Ponders On Plans to Intensify War Against Japan

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 23—(CP)—Plans to intensify the war against Japan in the Pacific were under review here today when President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill conferred with Dr. T. V. Soong, Foreign Minister and No. 2 man of the Chinese republic.

The Chinese diplomat, brother-in-law of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, flew in from Washington yesterday a few hours after the arrival of the American Secretary of State for war, Henry L. Stimson. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox is expected here today, the third member of the Roosevelt cabinet to attend the Quebec conference.

Steve Early, White House Press Secretary, revealed Sunday night that Pacific strategy was under close study by military leaders.

This led to unofficial suggestion that one of the first steps that might be taken by the Allies would be the creation of a strategic Air Force in China to co-operate with submarines and surface vessels in patrolling the China Sea, to Japan's sea link with her outlying garrisons and source of raw materials.

Few Planes in China

At present a few American planes were in China, used as a tactical force on occasional bombing raids against Japanese-held cities like Canton.

If the Allies decided to step up the pace of the air war against Japan from Chinese bases, in line with a promise made months ago by President Roosevelt, it will be one of the greatest tests of logistics ever attempted because all supplies will have to be flown from India.

It has been apparent to military observers in Washington for some time that Japan's supply line through the China Sea, connecting her factories with the raw materials required to keep her war machine running, would be extremely vulnerable to land based, long-range planes operating from Chinese fields in sufficient numbers to constitute a blockade when combined with submarines.

HONEY, JELLIES, JAMS, MARMALADE TO BE RATIONED

Prices Board Announces Suspension of Sales Until September 2nd.

DETAILS IN WEEK

Ottawa, Aug. 23—(CP)—The Prices Board announced Sunday night that rationing of honey, jams, jellies and marmalades will go into effect Thursday, Sept. 2, and ordered suspension from midnight Sunday until the opening of business Sept. 2 of all sales or deliveries of those commodities to consumers.

The announcement said details of the rationing plan will be announced within a week.

The suspension order means that no further sales of these commodities, or deliveries on orders already accepted, may be made to householders, hotels, restaurants, institutions, industrial users or others who buy these commodities for consumption. Hotels, restaurants, eating places and institutions which normally serve these commodities to their customers may continue to do so, but may not buy or accept delivery of supplies during the suspension period.

FALL OF AIRFIELD AT SALAMAUA APPEARS NEAR

Allies Reach Ridge Which Overlooks Airdrome Objective.

FORCE JAPS BACK

Allied Headquarters, The Southwest Pacific, Aug. 23 — (AP) — Allied ground troops pressing inexorably on enemy holdings in Northeastern New Guinea stood today on a ridge overlooking the Salamaua airdrome, and the fall of that important objective seemed almost within sight.

Capture of the airfield probably will not come without a bitter and perhaps costly battle. The Japanese, aware by now that the Allies' devastating air blows in this sector have cut them off from virtually all hope of reinforcement or relief, may be expected to fight to the finish.

But with Australians and Americans in possession of the ridge dominating the Salamaua airfield, only the forest-covered downward slopes and the tidewaters of the Francisco River still stand as barriers to the Allied frontal advance.

KISKA'S CAPTURE REMOVES MENACE TO NORTH AMERICA

Canadian Forces Used In Assault Led by Brig. H. W. Foster of Picton

COMMANDERS NAMED

Quebec, Aug. 23—(CP) — Withdrawal of the big Japanese garrison from Kiska and the bloodless occupation of that Aleution Island by Canadian and United States troops has removed a "menace" to North America and aided in the United Nations' South Pacific defence, says Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

In an address broadcast Saturday night over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Prime Minister disclosed that the Canadian troops involved in the Kiska show were commanded by Brig. H. W. Foster of Halifax and Picton, Ont., 41-year-old former commander of an overseas infantry brigade.

The initial statement by Mr. King and President Roosevelt, issued here Saturday morning, told how naval and air bombardment of Kiska, largest and most important of the Aleutians, had made that position untenable to the Japanese; and how Canadian and American soldiers found no Japanese on the island when they started landing Aug. 15.

A short time later it became known that the entire operation was under command of Vice-Admiral Thomas C. Kincaid of the U.S. Navy. Details of the Canadian participation were not given out until Mr. King spoke Saturday night.

Nazi Pressure Blocks Peace Italians Admit

Berne, Aug. 23—(CP)—An open admission that Italian efforts to withdraw from the war are being blocked by German pressure on the Badoglio government was contained in the Italian press for the first time during the weekend.

A Swiss telegraph agency dispatch from Chiasso on the Italian frontier said that the Italian press is "clearly stating that the first aim of the Badoglio government is to remove the country from war, but Rome is seeking to prevent the peninsula from becoming the theatre of a gigantic battle among the Germans there and the Anglo-Saxons threatening to enter."

The clamor for peace was echoed by the Corriere Della Sera at Milan which urged the government "not to let even the least favorable chance to take the country out of war escape."

The Swiss telegraph agency dispatch, which reported German troops flooding into Italy through the Brenner Pass, added that the Italian press "has now admitted that Italy considers herself an element in submitting to war, rather than waging it."

(From Madrid came word that Rome dispatches indicated that the Italians do not intend to resist Allied invasion but will not oppose German resistance because they feel that conflict with the Germans would result in larger loss of life and property than remaining aloof.

(All of Italy, said the Madrid newspaper A.B.C., is suffering a bad case of jitters as a result of the loss of Sicily, the suspense over making Rome an open city, and the heavy bombing of the country's industrial centres.)

Toronto, Aug. 23. (CP) — Alex McKinney, Jr., of Brampton, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, in an interview today said that "because of a reduced yield of field grains on Ontario farms this year, it will be necessary to import two and a half times as much grain from Western Canada as was brought east last year".

Enemy Loses 34 Planes in Efforts To Stem Attacks

Germans Use Many Fighters to Defend Key Points of Their Lifeline

ALLIES LOSE 7 PLANES

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters North Africa, Aug. 23 (AP)—The mighty Allied aerial juggernaut rolled over Salerno, another important point in the Italian mainland railroad system, virtually smashing the city in day and night raids and leaving marshalling yards a sea of flame, headquarters announced today.

Salerno is on the coast south of Naples, around which Allied heavy and medium bombers left a trail of ruin in railway centres in raids Friday and Saturday.

The Germans, determined to defend the key points of their lifeline, threw in about 100 fighters to battle the marauders and their escort.

Although today's Allied headquarters communique said 28 of the enemy fighters were shot down at Salerno, later reports placed the number at 33. Altogether 34 enemy planes were shot down yesterday for a total of five Allied aircraft lost.

114 Aircraft Lost in 4 Days

In the heavy air fighting of the past four days 114 enemy planes have been downed, it was stated here. The marauder squadrons in their Sunday raid destroyed 31 fighters, topping the 22 shot down by these bombers in the Naples area on Saturday.

In the new raids on Salerno, Allied bombers were forced to fight their way through increasingly strong fighter opposition. Flying without escort they shot 28 of the enemy out of the sky.

While the northwest African forces were slashing at Salerno, R.A.F. heavyweights from the Middle East bombed Italian rail switching yards Saturday at Crotone, a port on the arch of the Italian boot.

The British fliers observed explosions and fires, some near a chemical factory, a Cairo announcement said.

Seven Allied aircraft were reported missing from the Saturday night and Sunday raids, two of them from the Middle East force.

British Wellingtons gave Salerno its initial going over Saturday night and the American medium bombers returned to the same targets yesterday.

Big fleets of bombers returned Saturday to important communication centres near the west coast Italian port and concentrated their explosives on some of the targets first given a thorough going over on Friday.

YANKEES WIN FIRST ONE

Detroit, Aug. 23. (AP)—Joe Gordon's two-run homer and Nick Ettens' single, driving in two more tallies, gave New York Yankees a 4-1 victory over the Tigers today in the morning game of a "swing shift" doubleheader. The second game was scheduled to start at 5.30 p.m., E.D.T.

'Do We Still Hold Danzig?' Sarcastic Slogan of Nazis

Istanbul, Aug. 15 — (Delayed) — (AP) — "De we still hold Danzig?" was reported today to have become the siege slogan of Germans under the hail of Allied high explosive and phosphorous incendiary bombs.

A German who recently arrived here told a friend that Germans who meet among the ruins of their homes and factories now greet one another with that question of whether Germany still holds her original war objective, the once free port on the Baltic.

The catch phrase reputedly developed after an aged professor in Hamburg, when dug out of his smashed home, asked, "Do we still hold Hamburg?"

THREE YOUTHS HELD IN TORONTO

Charged With Looting Safe of Orono Creameries and Stealing $3,000.

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)—Three Toronto youths—Henry Peterson, 18; Gerald Gouldby, 17 and Norman Spence, 17—were arrested today and charged with breaking into the Orono Creamery near Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 17, when the safe was looted of $3,000 in cash and $5,000 in bonds. Toronto and Provincial Police who made the arrests say this may solve an outbreak of some 20 safe-crackings at various Central Ontario points during the past three months. The trio are to appear in Cobourg Police Court tomorrow.

Constable Wilson, of Colborne, has been sent to Toronto by Inspector H. Storey, of Belleville, to bring the prisoners back for trial.

Six of Family Serve, Five of Them Girls

Ottawa, Aug. 23 (CP)—Six members of one family in uniform is a record in any man's language but when five are girls and all in the R.C.A.F. there is something to write about, the Air Force said last night in a press release

Erma Culligan, daughter of Mrs. William Culligan of Waterloo, Ont., became the fifth when she was graduated recently from No. 7 Manning Depot at nearby Rockcliffe.

Her four sisters are leading airwoman Olive, timekeeper in Calgary; Ruby, chef at Rivers, Man; Carol, a clerk general at Trenton; and AW1 Pearl, a hospital assistant at Centralia, Ont.

The sixth member of the family, Carl, is a corporal in the United States air corps at Oklahoma

French Now Very Polite to Germans And Lavalites Who Don't Like It

Madrid, Aug. 23—(AP) — The mass of the French people have suddenly become extremely polite, cheerful and pleasant towards the Germans and Laval government officials, and neither the Germans nor the Laval followers like it.

This is part of an extraordinary picture of a new atmosphere in France brought to Spain by Frenchmen, neutrals, Italians and even Germans who travelled from Paris since the allied radio first began to warn Frenchmen that the hour of action was close.

Nothing has worried occupation authorities and the Lavalties so much recently as the sudden decrease in acts of sabotage and violence and the excessive concern over the Germans' welfare.

Frenchmen from several regions, one from Albi, another from Lyon, and a third from the Riviera—reported that Allied broadcasts urging Frenchmen to acquaint themselves with their own districts in order to aid Allied forces when the time came had an obvious reaction.

Italians and even Germans reported to their neutral friends in Spain that the new atmosphere in France was one of "excessive collaboration".

"They wouldn't speak to our troops before", a German from Bordeaux told a Bilboa industralist Saturday, referring to Frenchmen living and working in the Bordeaux area.

"Now they keep coming up to our soldiers offering to help them and trying to start pleasant conversations. It's frightening".

HAY FEVER VICTIMS HAVING HARD TIME

With the maturing of ragweed and other pollen-laden weeds in the country, persons, afflicted with hay ever are having their distressing late summer and early autumn spasms of their annual malady. During the past week the distressing symptoms of coughing, running eyes and irritation of the chest and nostrils have been becoming increasingly evident among those susceptible to the distressing summer malady. What to do for hay fever? That's what many of the sufferers would like to know. What the majority do is merely suffer, though not ni silence, and wait patiently for the season to pass.

FRUIT BEGINNING TO RIPEN IN SICILY

"Fruit is beginning to ripen in Sicily, the weather is very warm and the flies and ants are very bad", so writes Cpl. Douglas Ruttan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Canniff Ruttan, 83 Great St. James Street, in a letter recently received by his parents. The letter was written on August 3rd.

In the letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Ruttan from their son in Sicily, the writer assured his parenst that he was safe and well despite the heavy going engaged in by the Canadian forces on the now fully Allied occupied island. Cpl. Ruttan is a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

COUNTRY LAWNS IN FINE CONDITION

Benefited by a season during which more than the usual amount of rainfall was received, country lawns have never appeared to better advantage in the latter part of August than at the present time. Lawns in all parts of the country are still green as in the spring, while owners have to get the lawn mower out at least twice during the week to keep ahead of the growth. Without the advantages of watering facilities available in the city, country lawns at this time of year are normally almost completely dried.

CHILDREN BELIEVED RESPONSIBLE FOR BLAZE

Children playing with matches are believed responsible for a small blaze which required the attention of the fire department to control as only one alarm was rung in over the weekend. On Sunday afternoon firemen were called to 100 South John Street, where a blaze starting outside the building, scorched the one wall of a small frame barn. The blaze was brought under control with the use of hand pumps with no material damage being reported.

WEEKEND TRAFFIC UNUSUALLY HEAVY

Pleasure driving in the Bay of Quinte area was reported the heaviest this season by members of the Ontario Highway Traffic Department.

In all directions out of Belleville, especially Highway No. 14, south to Prince Edward County, there were steady streams of automobiles on Saturday with the influx of vehicles reaching its peak Sunday evening with the return of pleasure-seeking motorists following a weekend of relaxation at various summer resorts.

SEARCH FOR AIRMAN

Police throughout the district were asked to assist in the capture of an airman, who escaped from his R.C.A.F. escort from a C.N.R. train at Brighton on Saturday afternoon. The airman's name was given as LAC. Bonsaint, 27, with light hair. He is a French Canadian by birth. Bonsaint was being escorted by R.C.A.F. Service police from Montreal returning to his base in Toronto after being reported absent without leave from his unit. He evaded his escort as the train was leaving Brighton.

YOUNG BOY RETURNED TO BOWMANVILLE TRAINING SCHOOL

Apprehended after allegedly stealing money from milk bottles left for collection in the Octavia Street area over the weekend, a lad from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School was returned to that institution after being captured by Allan G. Meagher, Octavia Street, and turned over to city police on Sunday. Mr. Meagher had observed the boy acting suspicious-like and told police he saw him take money before he was taken into custody. At the police station it was learned the 11-year-old boy had left the Sidney Township farm where he had been employed from the Bowmanville School and placed on parole. Today he was returned to the training school.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS FOUND TWISTED

A few motorists crossing the Four Corners may have experienced some confusion this morning if they paid any attention to the traffic lights, especially the one facing north. Police Officer Taylor was the first to discover that during the night this light had been twisted somehow; its new position controlling traffic in and out of the Bank of Montreal. The light must have been struck by a truck sometime last night, causing the green light glass to be smashed and the whole signal box pivoted askew. Police Office Taylor secured a stepladder and made an attempt to straighten the light but was unable to do so without using a wrench and the Maintenance Department was notified.

CARELESS CYCLIST MEETS WITH MISHAP

Not all accidents have such a humorous ending as did the one which occurred on Pinnacle Street in front of the Lafferty Service Station on Sunday morning. Two young lads, both riding the same bicycle, a girl's bicycle, interested in what they were doing but not paying much attention to where they were going, collided with the curb and came a cropper. Serious damage could have resulted to life and limbs, but nothing so tragic did happen. . . when the noise had quieted and the dust of the collision had settled, one lad sat bewilderedly surveying the destruction. . .with the front wheel, tire and tube encircling his neck. The crash had broken every spoke in the wheel, the rim was bent like a pretzel and the tire and tube had sprung their moorings. A few bruises and sadly let down feelings were bad enough, but when the girl who owned the bike showed up on the scene, and womanlike, pointed an accusing finger first at the unseated riders and then at the once perfectly good bike, and cried: "I told you it would happen", the boys wished they were elsewhere.

JUNIOR FARMERS' FIELD DAY TO BE STREAMLINED

As the result of wartime exigencies with junior farmers and farmerettes working steadily in the harvest fields or in the factories, the Hastings County Junior Farmers' Field Day will be a streamlined event this year, according to Mr. H. Lynn Fair.

In place of the lengthy agenda of softball events in which both boys' and girls' teams participated, it is anticipated that only four boys' township teams will take part this year. The events will be held on Labor Day at the Stirling Agricultural grounds. The principal object of holding the day will be to keep the event alive until after the war, it was stated.

The 10-section decree giving the first major plan for restoration of devastated areas provided for the return of evacuate livestock, rebuilding ruined structures, financial relief for hard-hit populations, and a new system of education for children.

Tires Stripped From Car in Ditch During Dense Fog

Heavy mists and fogs blanketed highways in Eastern Ontario over the weekend as motorized traffic was brought to a halt along Highway No. 2 east of Marysville and through to Odessa early Sunday morning, Traffic Patrol Officer Harry Caldwell reported today. The fog was also in evidence early Monday morning east of the city.

Several motor vehicles were driven into the ditch as the result of the heavy fog, while during the early morning periods vehicles on the highway were driven in second gear.

Traffic Officer Caldwell came upon a lone motor car that had accidentally been driven into the ditch in such a manner the driver apparently could not get back on the roadway. During his absence for help thieves, using the cover of darkness and fog, completely stripped the motor car of the five tires, tubes and rims. Police were helpless to investigate at the time as driving conditions would not suggest any degree of speed. The tire-stealing episode occurred east of Napanee along Highway No. 2.

Artificial Leg Scares Driver

Did you ever come on a complete human leg, apparently severed from a body?

Such would be horrible enough in daylight, but as Mrs. George Wilson, 111 Chatham Street, was about to drive her car into the family garage the other night, the lights of the vehicle shone upon a full-length leg lying alongside the driveway.

Unable to believe her own eyes, Mrs. Wilson finally managed to bring the car to a full stop never taking her eye off the leg lying before her. Alighting from the car Mrs. Wilson cautiously approached the leg naturally relieved to find it was an artificial one.

The artificial leg was given into the custody of police officials over the weekend, but strangely enough no reports of any person losing such a leg has reached police authorities. So if any person is minus a leg, report the loss to the police where all that is needed is identification for recovery.

POLICE BLOTTER

Harry McLuskie, No. 3 Grove Street, employed as night chef at the New Service Lunch on Front Street reported the theft of his wrist watch to city police early Monday morning.

McLuskie told investigating police he had taken off his watch while making pastry in the cafe kitchen early Monday morning. When he finished his work the watch was gone. Several persons were questioned by police, but without results.

Gas Siphoned From Car

Samuel Goodman, 307 1-2 Front Street, complained to police that gasoline thieves had apparently siphoned petrol from the tank of his motor car sometime Saturday night while the vehicle was parked. Mr. Goodman obtained his usual weekend supply of gasoline early Saturday evening, but the car tank registered empty Sunday afternoon before the motorist had driven sufficient distance to account for the gasoline.

Otherwise activities were purely routine in and about city police circles over the weekend.

Italian Prisoners Soon Captured

St. Jacques Le Mineur, Que., Aug. 23—(CP)—Two Italian prisoners of war, who escaped from a Montreal district prison camp Friday night, were captured near here Saturday by the prompt action of a housewife.

The men, Giovani Malverni, 39, and Pietro Trizza, 31, called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jean Baptiste Baudin and asked for some water. Mrs. Baudin's suspicions were aroused by their appearance and their accent and after they left she telephoned the Army Provost Corps, who overtook the Italians.

Nancy Oakes De Marigny Flies to Nassau to Visit Her Husband

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 23—(CP)—Nancy Oakes de Marigny flew to Nassau from Miami Saturday and went immediately to the Bahamas prison to visit her husband, Alfred de Marigny, who is charged with the bludgeon murder of her father, Sir Harry Oakes.

She was accompanied by Raymond Schindler, identified as "an American investigator." He declined to comment on his mission.

The girl has been in the United States on a visit which she said was connected with her husband's defence.

She stayed 20 minutes with de Marigny, who has been held since July 9.

Messina Residents Regret All Nazis Were Not Killed

This despatch is by Angelo Gioe, chemist for United States Steel mills and resident of Messina during the extended Allied aerial bombardment preceding the capitulation of that Sicilian city.

By ANGELO GIOE

Messina, Aug. 23—The people of Messina were thanking God today for the peace that comes after battle.

For weeks we have been living in hell.

Allied planes crushed one of the newest and finest cities of Italy. We are ready to begin tomorrow to rebuild.

But so that people in North America may know something of the power of bombers to destroy a city body and soul, I would like to tell the story of Messina.

By my count, bombers attacked us at least 200 times. For two weeks before the Germans finally left we didn't have a single day's peace. It is impossible to sleep, eat or even think when you know that bombs may be falling the next moment. Nothing on earth could be worse than what we have been through.

As a Government employee, it has been my job to survey the destruction and make recommendations for repairs. Hence I am in a position to report faithfully that every single building within the limits of the city proper has been damaged to some extent. We halted all reconstruction work early in May. For the last two weeks I have not even been trying to keep up my job. I couldn't possibly complete a survey of the damage of one raid before another began.

Train Ferries Smashed.

I have been told that the main object in bombing Messina was to halt supplies coming into Sicily from Italy. I estimate you were 75 per cent successful. There used to be four train ferries running between here and the mainland, only small boats.

Three days before your soldiers came, the Germans brought in a small ferry which was used to take away guns, trucks and things like that. But that was only at the very end.

There is one big mole in the harbor where all the ships formerly tied up. The dry dock, submarine base, petroleum tanks, cranes, the Admiralty headquarters, all were there. Now nothing is left but wreckage. I can say conservatively that at least 1,000 bombs made direct hits. The mole has been useless for two months.

We used to have one of the finest railroad stations in Italy. Its walls are standing— that's all. The last train to Catania left two months ago. There has been none to Palermo since just before the invasion. The marshalling yards in the city and the tracks themselves have been torn up by bombs. We tried desperately to keep these lines open but found it hopeless.

Historic Cathedral.

One building the Sicilian people hated most to see damaged was the Messina cathedral. It was built originally in 1200 but was destroyed in the 1908 earthquake. We took 10 years to put it up again, finishing in 1935. Its Byzantine doors and altar of precious stones are priceless. Bombs that hit on the roof went right on through.

But in spite of the damage, not many people were killed—probably about 200. Only about 25,000 out of a normal 200,000 stayed after the bombings began in earnest.

Nearly all the people who stayed behind moved to the vicinity of air raid shelters. The largest of these was 60 feet under rock near the centre of Messina and could hold 8,000. It really was the only home hundreds of people had. They marked off sections on the floor with pieces of chalk and brought chairs, tables and mattresses in. During the final 10 days they had no lights except candles and lamps. It must have been much like living in the catacombs in the days of Imperial Rome.

Pistol of Protection.

Under your armies I know looting will stop, and I no longer will have to guard my supply of macaroni with a pistol. And if they portion out the rice, salt, potato meal, figs and peas that the Germans left behind in warehouses it will be some remuneration for what we've gone through.

That's the only thing the people of Messina hold against you. If you had killed every German who tried to get to Italy we wouldn't care what happened to the city.

Reviewing the whole campaign against Messina I can see where you made only one big mistake—you let the Germans get away. They all seemed to go from one place, Faro at the tip of the island. They took the biggest boats—Siebel ferries — and left the rest to the Italians. I heard about 40,000 got across. The last went on the night before your troops came in.

High Command Confirms Loss

The German High Command later confirmed the loss of Kharkov in a communique broadcast from both domestic and foreign consumption, saying:

"Kharkov, which in the course of the eastern campaign has changed hands several times and is today only a heap of ruins, was again evacuated in the course of planned detaching movements."

The broadcast was recorded by The Associated Press.

The Germans asserted they had repulsed all Russian attempts at a break-through in the Mius and Izyum sectors.

"The numbers of prisoners and booty captured are increasing," the communique asserted. "The Bolsheviks on the eastern front yesterday lost 409 tanks and 73 planes."

A London military observer said the fall of Kharkov was "extremely good and extremely important news," opening up the possibility the Germans may be forced from the whole Donets basin, the Kuban bridgehead and the Crimea.

This observer added the withdrawal demonstrated the Germans lacked the necessary reserves to mount counter-attacks in the face of the Russian offensive.

He said the Germans might be expected to fight stubbornly back toward the Dnieper.

The taking of Kharkov secures a double rail line from Moscow through Orel, Kursk and Belgorod and gives offensive strength to any chosen point in the central southern sector.

Destroy Installations

The announcement, made by the German News Agency DNB, said:

"In the course of last night German troops have evacuated Kharkov after having destroyed all vital installations in the town and without being pressed by the enemy.

"Since the town has changed hands several times in the course of the fighting it does not represent any longer a valuable centre of traffic and supply.

"German positions are being considerably shortened and improved by the evacuation."

Kharkov had been in the hands of the Germans since Oct. 24, 1941, with the exception of a brief period last winter when the Russians retook it only to be driven out almost immediately.

The city represented one of the most important German bases in southern Russia and was the point from which they launched their 1942 summer drive on Stalingrad.

The German announcement of the evacuation was not immediately confirmed by the Russians.

The Soviet communique today announced that Russian troops had shoved the Nazis back 3 1-2 miles and captured 30 villages north of Kharkov. The advance apparently brought the Red army to within seven miles of the city in this sector.

The war bulletin said the Red army also had pushed forward at Spas Demensk and Bryansk in the north as well as in the Donets Basin, killing 9,500 Nazis, smashing 187 tanks and destroying 53 planes in aerial combat or by anti-aircraft fire.

RECALL LITVINOFF AS AMBASSADOR

Moscow's Purpose Is Not Known and Stirs Some Speculation.

Moscow, Aug. 23—(AP)—The retirement of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Ambassador to the United States and the appointment of Andrei A. Gromyko as his successor was announced here today in a brief notice published on the back pages of the newspapers.

Quebec, Aug. 23—(AP)—As nearly as it could be accomplished without a forthright official statement, the recall of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Ambassador to Washington was divorced today from proceedings of the British-American war conference here.

Moscow's purpose in making known at this time that Litvinoff would not return to the United States remained obscure in the absence of any explanation from the Russian capital.

The questioning was occasioned by speculation here, as well as in dispatches from London, that Russia was replacing Litvinoff as a gesture of disapproval with the work of British-American leaders and also as a means of emphasizing her repeated demands for an invasion of Western Europe.

In this regard it was noted that Nicholas Zhivaynov, representative of Tass, the Russian news agency, had checked out of press headquarters here. But Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, said no significance was to be attached to his departure.

Real Purpose Only Guessed At

The real purpose of Litvinoff's withdrawal, of course, could merely be guessed at. The possibilities mentioned in discussion here, outside the second front speculation, were mainly concerned with the theory that he was needed for some other assignment.

One suggestion was that Russia might be manoeuvering to join in the next Allied war conference, at least to the extent of having a highly-placed observer present. Litvinoff, with his record of British-American friendship and his long espousal of international collaboration to maintain peace, might be the man for that job.

There remained, too, a possibility that with the changing fortunes of war, Russian foreign policy was on the thrshold of some new development which lay within the field of Litvinoff's special skills.

Furthermore, there was always the chance that the Ambassador's performance in Washington had in some way displeased the Kremlin and he was being removed for that reason.

Brief Mention

Moscow broadcast the announcement of Litvinoff's recall early yesterday and newspapers there published a brief notice on the back pages. No indication was given of a new assignment for Litvinoff, but he retained the title of Vice Commissar for foreign affairs.

London morning newspapers appeared to accept the view that Litvinoff's removal meant an change in Russian policy but declared that "more open diplomacy and plain speaking" were needed.

Swiss editors said they regarded the recall as part of political manoeuvering by the Russians to hasten the opening of an attack on Western Europe.

Roosevelt's Speech To Deal With U.S.-Canadian Relations

Quebec, Aug. 23 — (CP) —President Roosevelt's speech in Ottawa Wednesday will deal largely with Canadian-American relations, it was suggested here today by sources close to the President.

He will speak 10 or 15 minutes from a stand in front of the Parliament Buildings, to crowds assembled on the lawns below. The speech also will be broadcast.

It is not expected that the President will make any revelations about the Quebec conference.

The President was looking today for a break in conferences and meetings to spend some time in preparing the speech.

Among those he will see today are Dr. T. V. Soong, the Chinese Foreign Minister and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Little Island Of Segula Seized

Washington, Aug. 23, (AP)—Spreading out from recaptured Kiska, Canadian and American troops have seized the little island of Segula and are consolidating positions on Kiska and in the adjacent Aleutian area.

Segula, 20 miles east of Kiska, could have been used by the Japanese as an outpost for their main base, but the only information available, the Navy said today, was that the landing had been made "with no Japanese being found".

A communique telling of the landings also reported that three Japanese Midget submarines, which the enemy apparently had attempted to destroy with bombs before fleeing from Kiska, had been found on the marine railway at the submarine base there.

Lull Since Thursday Ended

The night attack ended a lull that had lasted since Thursday night when Mosquitoes struck at Berlin.

During these night operations, it was learned today, Sqdn.-Ldr. G. W. Northcott of Minnedosa, Man., was credited with shooting down an enemy aircraft over France.

Enemy raiders scattered bombs in East Anglia and also rumbled over southeast England last night. At least two were shot down. An alarm sounded in London soon after midnight, but no incidents were reported.

Late yesterday Marauder medium bombers of the United States 8th Air Force attacked an enemy airfield at Beaumont le Roger in occupied France. Escorting R. A. F. and R. C. A. F Spitfires and the bombers knocked down nine enemy fighters. One bomber and eight Allied fighters were listed as missing, but all the Canadian aircraft returned safely.

During Sunday, British and Canadian intruders attacked enemy shipping, airfields transport and communications, continuing the Saturday night train-busting expeditions that saw R. C. A. F. pilots smash up a number of engines and enemy aircraft.

Locomotives Blown up

Flt. Lt. Charles H. (Smokey) Stover of Sarnia, Ont., destroyed a Junkers 88 at Le Bourget, and later teamed up with another pilot to shoot up an enemy tug and four locomotives.

Sqdn. Ldr. Herbert P. Peters of Edmonton and FO. Bill Blakeney of Toronto each accounted for two engines, while Flt. Lt. R. T. Hutchinson of New Liskeard, Ont, and FO. J. C. Davison of Plaster Rock, N.B., got one apiece.

The weekend lull in heavy bombing attacks—a period in which there was nothing to indicate the weather over the continent was keeping the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. at home, suggested that new and bigger air blows might be in preparation.

The possibility that some new targets, deeper in Europe, might have been placed on the bomb list was seen in the fact that the BBC warned Slovak workers to get out of factories working for the Nazis or risk being bombed.

Those drowned were returning in a small rowboat from Hopkins Point, Que., to Summerstown. Four others who had been aboard the rowboat were saved.

The tragedy occurred about a mile and a half across the St. Lawrence River from Summerstown, near the Quebec mainland. While still in sight of Hopkins Point, the rowboat filled with water and overturned, throwing its occupants into the river. The four men rescued were taken back to Hopkins Point.

Santa Fe, N.M., Aug. 23 (AP)—Will Shuster, rationing board member, has been too busy helping others with their rationing troubles. Today he ran out of gasoline, and realized he had forgot to sign up for new coupons.

HONEY, JELLIES,

The only sales now permitted are those to wholesalers and retailers, or other persons who buy for resale. In other words, sales to the consuming public are halted, but the normal flow of these commodities to the distributive trades will be permitted, pending the announcement of the new rationing plan which will control all sales.

The announcement said that honey producers are "specially notified" that all sales of honey to consumer customers must cease during the period of suspension, and also that any orders they may have accepted for future delivery of honey may not be completed during that period. After Sept. 2 these sales will be governed by the new rationing plan.

FALL OF AIRFIELD

The ridge, stretching seaward perhaps two miles south of the airdrome from Allied-held Komiatum, was occupied yesterday morning, today's Allied communique announced.

Attack planes bombed and strafed enemy troops.

Under the pressure of these blows, said headquarters reports, the Japanese withdrew deeper within their last circle of defences, continuing the general retreat begun two days before. Allied troops moved up all along the semi-circular front to invest the enemy's evacuated positions.

In the Solomon prong of the Southwest Pacific offensive, American forces cleaned out an element of enemy resistance on Baanga Islet.

In the Solomons American light naval units sank or damaged all of a Japanese force of six barges in Kula Gulf. Bombers strafed barge hideouts along the coast of Vella Lavella Island to the northwest and dropped 29 tons of explosives on two such harbors.

On Saturday fighters and bombers, returning to the Wewak area on the north coast of New Guinea for the fourth time in five days, destroyed 36 Japanese planes in air combat and set fire to 34 more aground. This brought the week's total of enemy aircraft knocked out in that sector to 309.

CONFERENCE

Expect Long, Tough Battle

It is no secret that an Allied attack on Burma, with the object of regaining use of the highway there is scheduled for this fall, after that before the highway can may be a long, tough battle before Burma is recaptured and months after the before the highway can be rendered serviceable.

The world soon may know some of the military and political decisions of the Quebec conference, tentatively scheduled to end tomorrow, with President Roosevelt then travelling to Ottawa, where he will address at noon on Wednesday crowds assembled on Parliament Hill.

The plans of Prime Minister Churchill are unknown, but he will not accompany the President to Ottawa.

Mr. Roosevelt had a break in the long series of meeting and discussions yesterday when he spent some time motoring on the island of Orleans, 10 miles below Quebec.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Churchill and a small group of military men, the "guide" being Lewis Douglas, former principal of McGill University and now an official of the United States shipping administration.

SHORT CIRCUIT CAUSES ALARM

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)—Volunteer firemen were recently awakened from their slumbers at 4 a.m. when the town's fire alarm clanged furiously in the night. But when they got to the fire station it was a false alarm. Heavy rains had short-circuited the alarm system causing it to sound. It was the second time recently that a short-circuit has caused a false alarm.

EAGLE DECORATIONS FOR PRODUCERS

JAP RELICS SCATTERED ON MUNDA AIRFIELD

U.S. forces examine some of the wrecked Japanese bombers and fighter planes found on Munda airfield when that vital strip of the Central Solomons was captured. These planes were blasted on the ground before they could take off. Fighting for this field was bitter and its loss was a bad blow to the Japanese power in this area.

Queen Victoria's black silk parasol was among articles exhibited at Norwich in aid of Norfolk War Charities Fund. Mrs. Winston Churchill contributed a Canadian maple leaf brooch.

A soldier who has just returned to Britain from Sicily said that during the Allied landings three Italian soldiers were so anxious to surrender they swam out to meet the landing craft.

A plan to show the best British films in occupied countries as they are liberated is being prepared by the British Films Producers' Association in co-operation with the Ministry of Information.

Now at Kiska Island

The Canadian people have the inspiration these days of the heroic deeds of their sons and friends in many fields of effort in winning the war. On the sea in ships are thousands of young Canadians who are rendering one of the greatest services youth and manhood can render in guarding the trade routes of the world for the Allied nations. These are men ready to battle the enemy on the sea and under the surface and the annals of their deeds will fill many a glorious page in the nation's history. In the air Canadians have played no small part, they have had much to do on many a front in which Britons have been called to serve and they have helped to smash Italy and are with the airmen of the Motherland and the rest of the Empire pounding war industrial and military Germany into powder and rubble. On land at Dieppe, in commando raids, and in Sicily her soldiers have won distinction and the praise of the Allied leaders and now word has come of their service in the Aleutians, Canadians and Americans taking this island of Kiska. They have served well in the Alaska area. These men came into the Pacific command and are 2500 miles on their way to Tokyo which is two thousand miles from Kiska.

Here was an instance where the island was taken without opposition for the Japanese had slunk away, knowing their inability to hold the island.

'Patriots' Look Forward

The word "patriot" has a special significance today. There are the loyal people of today who are speeding every effort in every land to smite the Germans and the Axis by service wherever possible in behalf of the United Nations. In the oppressed nations the "patriots" have had to live lives of glorious adventure and danger for the sake of keeping alive the cause of the underground opposition to the enemy. There are the "patriots" of such countries as Yugoslavia and Poland and Czechoslovakia, Greece and others whose lives are days and nights, months and years of daring, devoted service to the cause of the Allied nations. These people are devoted to one of the noblest causes and their power is great, they number millions.

A great day is coming for the patriots of the overrun lands. In the last few days the underground has heard from Algiers to get ready all preparations in the shortest period of time and there is a suggestion that invasion may possibly be near. This news was primarily to the French underground.

Somewhere certainly in the future is the day of liberation for which these "patriots" all yearn.

The enemy is grown very anxious about the future plans and movements of the Allied nations, but when and where and how the hammer blows of the United Nations will fall, the future will have to unfold. The enemy is living a life of jittery anxiety, which tends to weaken his effort because of the intentional vagueness about the stories of the Allied plans and that is part of the Allied psychology.

Inspiring to the Young

Those who are young pupils in this age are living in one of the most momentous, daring and inspiring eras in all history for they see the world and their own country making history before their very eyes.

This is a great inspiration to them for they will learn that the world spirit, human nature and democracy provide a form of philosophy of history.

The young boys and girls see older brothers and their fathers and other relatives leaving to take part in the greatest crusade of history for the cause of justice of all nations and hear how they have taken part in the struggle for security and freedom.

What they learn today will give them an attitude towards history which will stand them and humanity in good stead in the years to come for they will realize that there is a powerful spirit of justice and right gaining more and more power in the world. The Allies represent this power and are dealing the blows which will smash Hitlerism flat.

These pupils can see how right and good are triumphing and will triumph over the Axis evil.

They see the world of security being made before their eyes. Heroes and heroines are to them no distant mythological figures but their fathers or brothers or uncles or older sisters or aunts in the women's services. They will realize how the average man and woman play so powerful a part in the destiny of the modern world which is to be decided by Allied victory in which so many they know will have taken part and will have helped to make a new safe world.

In Denmark

Denmark, that small country next door to the gigantic martial nation, Germany the bully, which has threatened the world by its mammoth and brutal attempt to conquer the world, has been under Hitler's heel since April of 1940 but her King is outspoken and only a few days ago was said to have conferred with the German authorities in respect to cases of persons tried for sabotage of German armaments in Denmark. His Majesty was standing by the rights of Denmark to have these persons tried according to Danish law.

Reports state that there is a determined countrywide campaign in Denmark of destroying land and sea transport facilities used by the Nazis to supply the occupation forces in Norway. Danish patriots are reported to be systematically wrecking Danish factories producing war materials for the Germans as well as railroads and harbor installations which have become of great importance since Sweden refused to allow the transit of Germans across Sweden to Norway.

People of that small country defy the great war machine of Hitler. The German demands that Danish saboteurs be tried in Germany reports will not prevent further destruction of Nazi materials and Nazi-operated plants but will rather speed the sabotage.

After four years of the second world war Germans have not yet learned the lesson that domination and crimes of oppression do not pay. Germany has yet to find a people, small as it can be, that does not hate the Huns. Even the satellites which surround the waning martial might of Hitlerism are beginning to show signs of worry under the Axis alliance and seemingly would gladly leave the Germans alone to fight their own wars.

Betting Odds on Huns Cut

(New York Herald Tribune)

The Axis powers suffered two of their worst military setbacks of the war in the month of July—the invasion of Sicily and the seizure of the offensive by Russia's armies in eastern Europe. How seriously have these two developments reduced Hitler's already dwindling chances for survival?

It might be replied that there is no way of reducing the answer to this question to mathematical terms. Certainly, it is true that no military expert would attempt to do so. Yet, there are places where the chances of the belligerents in this war are evaluated from day to day in dollars-and-cents terms. Such a place is the foreign exchange market of neutral Switzerland. Because Switzerland is neutral and because changes in the quotations on the various belligerent currencies represent, in effect, changes in the betting odds against them in the war, a dispatch from Berne at the end of last week was of more than ordinary interest. Let it be noted that it originated before any hint of Mussolini's fall had arrived.

"The German mark," said this cable, "has dropped 50 per cent. in value here in the last two weeks. It is now quoted at 8 Swiss francs for 100 marks. Since the Swiss franc is quoted at 23.30 United States cents in New York, this gives the mark a value of approximately 1.86 United States cents."

JUST FOLKS

RETURN OF WASH DAY

There was a line when I was young
On which my father's shirts were hung.
From fence to fence 'twas stretched with care,
To hold his flannel underwear.
Then flaunting with the hollyhocks
Were several pairs of father's socks,
With mother's "pretties" pegged between
To make a weekly Monday scene.

Now following a war's fearful track
That line my mother stretched is back!
That rope which held my father's duds,
Fresh from the wash tub's foaming suds,
Is stretched once more from tree to tree
And holds, for all who wish to see,
My shirts and socks, and, pair by pair,
My pink and orchid underwewar.

Where once my father's socks were hung
My blue pajamas now are strung.
And where once flew his flannels red
My modest raiment flies instead.
Now bubble, trouble, steam and foam,
The family wash has come back home!
Where father's garments used to fly,
My shorts are hanging out to dry.

KISKA'S CAPTURE

Then this outline of the composition of the Canadian landing force was made public:

The Canadian Fusiliers, of London, Ont., under Lt.-Col. Russell H. Beattie, M.C., 48, London, Ont.

The Winnipeg Grenadiers under Lt.-Col. J. A. Wilson, Winnipeg, who returned from overseas to take over this reconstruction of the original battalion which served at Hong Kong.

Thee Rocky Mountain Rangers, an interior British Columbia unit under Lt.-Col. D. B. Holman, M.C., 48, Salmon Army, B.C.

Le Regiment de Hull (Que.) under Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard, D.S.O., 30, Quebec, hero of last summer's Deippe battle.

A company of the Saint John (N.B.) Fusiliers under Maj. G. P. Murphy, 27, Saint John.

The 24th Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, under Lt.-Col. R. P. Drummond, 50, Spencerville, Ont., and Montreal.

The 46th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery under Maj. J. A. Macdonald, 51, Burlington, Ont.

The 24th Field Company of the Royal Canadian Engineers under Maj. D. H. Rochester, 27, Toronto.

The 25th Field Ambulance of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps under Lt.-Col. T. M. Brown, 40, Calgary and Ottawa.

In addition there were detachments from Ordnance, Army, Service, Provost, Pay and Postal Corps.

First Action For Canadians

The Kiska operation was the first in the Aleutians in which Canadian soldiers have taken part but Canadian naval and air personnel have served there previously, said Mr. King.

Many of the Canadian personnel were men called up for compulsory military service under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

"The expulsion of enemy forces from the Aleutions and the secure control of the northeast Pacific by forces of the United States and Canada is something much wider than the joint defence of the continent", said the Prime Minister.

"Just as the control achieved by United States, Australian and New Zealand forces in New Guinea, the Solomons and elsewhere in the Southwest Pacific is aiding in the Defence of Canada, so the control of the Aleutian Islands in the North Pacific by United States and Canadian forces will aid in the Defence of Australia and New Zealand. . . . . .

"By your co-operation in the occupation of Kiska, we have once more expressed Canada's determination to do her full part, until the military power of Japan, as well as the military power of Germany, is finally destroyed".

(By The Canadian Press)

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, only Canadian general who wears the maroon ribbon of the Victoria Cross, today is also the only Canadian commander whose forces have operated in two hemispheres—in the Arctic and Pacific oceans.

From his 1st Canadian Division two years ago, a crack brigade went to bleak Spitsbergen in the Arctic ocean to wreck Nazi-controlled coal mines and radio installations. This month a slightly larger force from his Pacific command joined with United States forces in occupying Kiska. Not a shot was fired in either operation.

Fifty-five-year-old Gen. Pearkes was rated the finest "training general" of the Canadian army in England during the early war years when the growing Canadian garrison force in Britain worked into form for the test so long in coming. He returned to Canada in 1942 to become general officer commanding in chief, Pacific Command.

Commander of the 1st Brigade in the first contingent of Canadians sent to Britain in 1939, he succeeded Maj.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton as comander of the 1st Canadian Division when the 1st Canadian Corps was formed late in 1940. His hard trained division went to Sicily and success last month under Maj.-Gen. G. R. Simonds, who had accompanied him overseas as a major.

Least-quoted of Canadian commanders, Gen. Pearkes made no statement about Kiska as he made none about Spitsbergen.

The War Today— Speculation Rife Over Transfer Of Litvinoff As Ambassador

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

It would be easy to set a lot of mischievous little hobgoblins to dancing by speculation over the mysterious replacement of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet Ambassador to the United States, but at the same time it would be a mistake to brush aside such an important development for fear of examining it.

The very fact the unexplained shift of Litvinoff has put in motion a storm of speculation not only in the United Nations but in Germany is in itself proof the event has some peculiar significance. This thought is supported by the circumstance of Litvinoff's transfer coming on the heels of similar action in respect to Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador in London, called back to Moscow without explanation.

Allied newwspapers and observers, looking at the puzzle from every angle, have found the event disquieting. The Hitlerites, trying to squeeze as much juice out of this turnip as possible, have bragged about a row in the enemy camp.

There is no row in the Allied camp, and the Russians are out to crush Hitlerism. However, the widespread speculation and uneasiness in Britain and the United States would seem to point clearly to one thing: there is a lack of complete understanding between the Soviet Union and the Western Allies.

Observers generally seem to feel that one of the most likely explanations of the Russians move is that Moscow is taking this means of expressing resentment at the fact that the Anglo-American Allies have not yet opened up that second land-front in Western Europe.

This column has pointed out the probability the Soviet Union will emerge from this war as the dominant power in Europe, and maybe in the Far East as well. Daily she is emphasizing this likelihood by the power of her drive against the tremendous weight of the Hun armies.

Today Berlin admits the abandonment of Kharkov, one of the vital pivotal bases in the southern wing of the great German battle line. Hitler's whole eastern front is threatened. The Reds are slogging on towards Berlin.

That picture certainly calls for an understanding among the Big Three. What more likely than that this is the main reason for Stalin's blunt gesture? He is asking for a tabling of the cards.

CASH REMOVED

St. Clements, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)—Whoever found a purse lost by Miss Evelyn Dietrich was honest—to a certain point. Miss Dietrich lost her purse in Kitchener and a few days later it was returned to her through the mail with all contents intact—except a considerable amount of cash which had been removed.

TON OF HONTY SOLD IN HOUR

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 23 (CP)—A constable was posted to duty in the Farmer's Market Saturday when a crowd of people gathered more than an hour and a half before a dealer arrived with a supply of honey. When the producer arrived with his wares—one ton of honey—he was sold out within an hour.

History Almost Repeats

Until recent years the anthracite coal strike of 1902 stood out as one of the most significant labor disputes in America.

At that time John Mitchell was president of the United Mine Workers. Born at Braidwood, Illinois, Mitchell began to work in the mines at 12 years of age. At 15 he joined the Knights of Labor. Upon the formation of the United Mine Workers of America in 1890, he became a member and gradually worked his way up in the organization until he became its president in 1899.

Under the leadership of Mitchell the United Mine Workers greatly increased its membership and secured an increase in wages and improved conditions for the mine workers.

Mitchell and his organization called the great strike of 1902 after the operators had abrogated many of the concessions that the miners had secured after a long and hard struggle.

The youthful Mitchell, then only 32, resembled John L. Lewis in very few respects except that he held the same job. Mitchell was conservative and self-effacing and won widespread popular support for his couse by his sane and common-sense leadership.

At the time of the strike of 1902 the leader and spokesman for the anthracite owners and operators was George Frederick Baer, Wall Street lawyer and president of the Reading Railroad and the mining properties of which the Morgan interests had obtained control.

Baer refused to arbitrate the dispute and it looked as if the country would have to go through the winter without anthracite.

"The rights and interests of the laboring men", declared Baer, "will be protected and cared for, not by the labor agitators, but by the Christian men whom God in His infinite wisdom has given control of the property interests of the country".

This statement was widely quoted and helped to win popular support to John Mitchell and his United Mine Workers.

President Theodore Roosevelt intervened in the dramatic and spectacular situation. He threatened to take over the anthracite mines and operate them with soldiers unless the operators came to terms promptly.

Teddy's threat was effective. The miners got more pay, shorter hours and better working conditions.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By ALAN RANDAL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the RCAF, Somewhere in England, Aug. 23 (CP) — The boys in Canadian Bomber Group who knew Padre Herb Ashford of Calgary, were tickled pink when they heard he had made an operational trip with a Canadian Wellington crew over Naples from a North African base. Flt. Lt. Ashford is about as popular a padre as there ever will be in this war and if it is possible, his operational trip will boost him still higher in the esteem and affection of the RCAF laddies who know him.

Ashford has been wanting a trip like that for a long time. Each night, when he was stationed with a Canadian bomber squadron in England, he'd go out to the take-off line to see the boys away. Each time he'd holler over the noise of the motor, "When ya gonna' take me along." And from their place up in the giant bombers the kids would smile and holler back, 'wish you were coming along padre . . ." or 'how about it padre?"

And there was the time Ashford was a bit late in pedalling around to the last aricraft going out. It was almost ready to move off, and one of the boys leaned out to wave and said 'Gee, padre, I thought you weren't going to get all the way round tonight—and we'd decided if you didn't get here to wave us away we just couldn't go." That's what those kids think of Padre Ashford.

At Biggin Hill air station in Surrey they held a party the likes of which hasn't been seen before in the air force. Host was Group Captain "Sailor" Malan, chief of the highest scoring group of Fighter Command and O.C. at Biggin Hill. The guests were more than fifty London taxicab drivers who drove Biggin Hill sector fighter pilots to London and back a few weeks ago in celebration of their 1,000th. victory over the German air force.

In honor of the occasion composer Barney Dowling, a cabby, composed a song dedicated to the "Sailor" and his boys, entitled, "To the Lads of Beggin Hill." The words included the line, "To those who chased the Hun, when things looked very glum . . ."

Dowling, a pint of beer in one hand and the song in the other, stood out on the tarmac and, with the other Cockney cabbies about him, roared the song out above the sound of Spitfire motors.

Check New Ration Coupon Book, Keep Old Book for Meat Purchases

Check your new ration book when you have received it this week; be sure it contains these sheets between the front and back covers, and if all are not intact, go back to the distributing centre at once. There should be one green sheet tea-coffee coupons (not in children's books under 12 years old), one pink sheet sugar coupons, two orchid sheets butter coupons, three buff sheets meat coupons, two sheets "C" coupons, one sheet "D" coupons, one sheet "E" coupons, one sheet "F" coupons, one card marked RB-99, one card marked RB-137, one sheet marked 'Application RB-140".

It is important, states the Chairman of the local Ration Board, that you do not throw away your old ration book, that is, Ration Book 2. It contains Spare "A" coupons, which are needed for meat purchases. The meat coupons in your NEW book do not become effective until November 25th.

More than 11,000,000 ration books will be issued to Canadians between August 25th and 28th. The local Ration Boards, the members of which are serving voluntarily, are organizing the distribution campaign for Ration Book No. 3. Thousands of volunteers are helping them to do this necessary wartime job. Canadians should be proud, that so many public-spirited citizens are making such a valuable contribution to the war effort. Their voluntary services save many thousands of dollars. These volunteer workers are giving their time to serve the public and every help and consideration is asked, and doing what is asked is the way to give this help and co-operation.

Mr. H. D. Bateman, chairman of the local Ration Board at Belleville, has stressed the importance of following the instructions issued in advertisements and these columns. The issuing of the new books will take place between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock at the City Hall Auditorium, on August 25th to 28th inclusive.

Other distributing centres in this district will be at Foxboro, Holloway, Plainfield, Corbyville, Cannifton, Point Anne, Shannonville, Melrose and Deseronto.

60 Jap Bombers Raid Szechwan

Chungking, Aug. 23 (AP)—More than 60 Japanese bombers swarmed over Szechwan Province in two waves today, one of which attacked targets in the immediate Yangtse River trading centre 145 miles northeast of this provincial Chinese capital.

Muffled explosions were audible in Chungking but the city itself, which was last bombed on Aug. 31, 1941, was untouched. The alarm lasted two hours.

The raid marked the late opening of Chungking's "bombing season", which in 1941 and earlier years usually started early in May.

It was believed here that the Japanese, goaded by attacks on Canton and other important Japanese-held points, executed today's raid for domestic propaganda purposes.

Twenty of the enemy bombers wheeled past the capital in the clear sight of watchers in the streets and were challenged at once by Chinese planes.

Special speakers will be heard and prizes won by the boys and girls will be announced.

WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

by Martha Logan

Martha Logan, Swift's famed home economist, whose weekly, wartime cooking column is a regular feature of this page. Look for these valuable hints each Monday

Victory Round-up

A bunch of quick-and-easies to make more nutrition out of less meat

Now that we all want to make the most out of every scrap of meat we have, here are some useful and timely tips for housewives:—

1 You can make a meal of griddle cakes if you add a cup or so of chopped, dried or smoked meat to your favourite batter. Make the pancakes extra big. Serve with apple sauce if syrup's hard to come by.

2 An old-fashioned dish that tastes good to a hungry family is pork sausage links or patties served with fried corn meal mush. Cook the sausage this way: Place in cold frying pan, add a small amount of water. Cover and steam for five minutes. Drain. Brown over slow heat, turning frequently. This cooking method keeps in all the fine flavour and spices. Never prick skins!

3 A few frankfurts sliced crosswise into creamed potato soup is a luncheon or supper dish worth trying. Dress up each bowl with finely minced parsley sprinkled over the top just before serving.

4 Hard to get your family to eat liver? Liver sausage is just as valuable. Or make your own liver loaf this way. Scald pork, lamb or beef liver, grind and mix with usual meat loaf ingredients, well seasoned. Pack into pan. Brush with catsup. Bake in moderate oven about one hour. Serve hot or cold with salad.

GET ENOUGH VITAMIN B!
Liver, heart, pork, eggs, dried beans, peas, milk, wheat germ, whole wheat cereals, Canada Approved bread are the foods you should eat to get enough of the important B complex.

Send 10¢ for your copy of Martha Logan's famous handbook of meat cookery: "Meat Complete." Write to Swift Canadian Co. Limited, Dept. OA32, Toronto.

Norwegian Ways Shown to Brides Of R.N.A.F. Men

(By ERIC SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP) — School days have become a reality again for a number of Toronto brides. They and several other young women are learning the way of life, manner, customs and geography of Norway—the country they hope will be their home after the war.

The pupils, mostly working girls, married or engaged to members of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, attend informal classes at the home of Mrs. E. Frank Hinch, daughter of Carl J. Printz, former Norwegian Consul in Toronto. The "school" held indoors in inclement weather but otherwise in the garden, began a little over a year ago "quite unscheduled," says Mrs. Hinch.

"I had been arranging dances for the boys from Little Norway, the Norwegian Air Force training camp near Toronto, getting them girls for partners as well as darning their socks," she said. "The girls could not speak Norwegian, but took an interest in their boy friends and wanted to learn their language. About ten of them approached officials at the University of Toronto on the prospects of starting a course there but were told that at least 20 were necessary before classes could be arranged.

Eager to Learn

"The girls told me of their plight and I realized there was a need so started my first lessons last winter. I told the girls I was not a teacher but that I would do my best. I prepared by lessons and 13 girls began the first class. They were all eager to learn about Norway, including the food, customs, sport and everything I knew.

"Well, as that class advanced other girls became interested and soon I had another class of ten started. Altogether 35 girls completed my course last winter." Most of them now are engaged or married to Norwegian airmen.

A new class of ten began an 18-week course, August 11, meeting for the first time in the garden and another class of ten starts August 23.

"I don't take too many at one time," Mrs. Hinch said, "as it is much easier to train them in smaller groups."

The girls are told to ask any questions they wish and Mrs. Hinch said she does her best to answer them. On top of this she has drawn up lessons and some pamphlets about the history and geography of Norway which the girls are given to read. Classes are held one evening a week, although one group of six at present meets in the afternoon.

An Apt Pupil

Mrs. Hinch said Barbara Gibson of Toronto, learned very quickly and now helps her teach others "especially with the pronunciation." Another girl, Phyllis Cox, also of Toronto, now is working at the Norwegian Air Force headquarters here, where she is required to speak the language.

Mrs. Hinch was born in Oslo and came to Canada 30 years ago but has since made several trips to Europe. She speaks six languages fluently—German, French, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish and English. Her husband is an electrical engineer with the Ontario Hydro Commission and her two sons are in the air force, one is chief navigational officer at the Hagersville, Ontario, R.C.A.F. school, and the other is training to be a pilot at Little Norway.

Sidney Crossing

Sidney Crossing — Miss Vivian Pearson is spending few days with friends in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Stickle, of Johnstown, spent Tuesday with the former's sister, Mrs. Bruce Hogle, and Mr. Hogle; Mrs. Harold Terry and Mrs. Percy Mickel, Frankford, and niece, little Thelma Stickle, of Johnstown, spent the same day at their home.

Mrs. C. Ketcheson spent a couple of days in Toronto last week; Mr. Ketcheson's sister, Mrs. Florence Bell accompanied her home. Being in poor health she will at present be convalescing with her mother, Mrs. Inez Ketcheson, before returning to Toronto.

Mr. Harry Montgomery, Frankford, had dinner on Wednesday with Bruce Hogle and family.

Mrs. Gummer is the guest of her granddaughter, Mrs. Kenneth Bush, Mr. Bush and Shirley.

There were some visiting guests from Toronto and Port Arthur present. Mrs. Stanley Spafford filled the lucky chair and received a prize. Miss Ruth McNary held the prize for the lucky serviette. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Saylor for opening her home to this worthy cause.

Miss Joyce Elmy and and Loreen May, both of Belleville, are visiting at their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hogle's, this week.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

"WELCOME" TO SON'S FIANCEE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: — Our eldest son, who is in a camp far away from here, has just written us that he has fallen in love with a girl and that they are to be married very soon. He wrote us her name and address, but did not suggest that we write to her. Last evening our family was talking over the question as to whether we should write to her, and my daughter said that she read in your column that this is just what we should do.

Is it my place to write to her? And if so, please give me some hints as to what I should write.

— R. E.

Yes, when you cannot make a welcome-in-to-the-family call on the girl, you must use the next best means and write her a warm-hearted welcoming letter. Write this letter as soon as possible, for promptness registers enthusiasm about the engagement. Tell her of your happiness at the good news of the engagement; of what charming things your son has written you about her; how proud and happy you are to welcome her into your family; and, of course, express enthusiastic interest in their future plans.

You should also write a letter to her mother, a warm-hearted "mother to mother" letter, and in this letter, of course send greetings to the father. And it would be gracious if your husband would write a letter, one to the girl and one to the mother. In other words, do all you can to establish the proper inter-family relationship.

"Thank You" Always Appropriate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: My boy friend's mother has invited me to come to their house to an informal dinner. There will be several other guests. I have never met his mother, and of course I do want to make a good impression. Should I write her a note the day after the dinner thanking her for her invitation?

— Martha.

Yes, do write this note, thanking her for her kind invitation, telling her what a happy time you had, and telling her, too, how much you enjoyed meeting her friends.

There's never a time, after any kind of party, when a note of thanks to the hostess isn't a gracious thing to do. There doesn't live the hostess who isn't made happy by this kindness.

Dressing for Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: My sister-in-law is to be married soon, and my husband is to be an usher. The wedding is to be at six in the evening, reception following, and the bridal attendants and the bride's mother are to wear long dresses, and the men are wearing tuxedos. I am not a member of the bridal party, but I do think that perhaps I too should wear a long dress. Or do you think I should wear a street length dress?

—L. E.

Since you are not only to be a guest at this semi-formal evening wedding, but are also a close relative, you will be appropriately dressed if you wear a floor length dress .. of conservative dinner-dress type.

War Story of a Former Glamour Girl and How She Does Her Share for Victory.

The dumpy figure in the field might almost have been a scarecrow. But it straightened up and greeted me with a "Hi, ya." And I walked across the newly-plowed field to where this parody of a girl, picking beans, brushed a smocked sleeve across her face that seemed wet from a thousand invisible spigots.

Literally pouring with perspiration was the figure that brushed the hair back into the ten-gallon straw hat under which she was operating. The outline suggested a frog under a mushroom.

"You didn't know me, did you?" she challenged. And then, as a mouthful of gleaming white teeth, brilliant blue eyes, with long, upcurling lashes asserted themselves in my memory, I recognized a glamour girl from among season-before-last's crop of debutantes.

"Trying to get thin?" I enquired cynically. 'I hadn't noticed traces of a spare tire 'round your midriff."

She chucked aside the ten-gallon straw hat, wiped her face: "No, I've just got down to brass tacks, that's all. When Bill went overseas and I kissed him goodbye, I had a sudden realization that I might never see him again, and it seemed to me a pretty shabby substitute for what he was doing—my going to recreation centres, canteens, dancing with soldiers, sailors and marines, handing out soft drinks and all that sort of thing. Good enough in its way and helpful, but not going far enough when the only man you ever loved and promised to marry is courting with death nightly in a bomber."

"So you signed up for farm work?" I asked.

"I signed up. I wanted to work so hard all day that when night came I couldn't help sleeping, instead of living through the horrors that might be happening to Bill. I promised him—no morbid worrying. I get $40 a month pay, with room and board, and believe it or not, it's the first time I think I've ever touched the good earth with my feet and came up against the realities of living."

"And how do you get along with the family?" I couldn't resist the temptation of inquiring, knowing that this particular farm carried on under the most primitive conditions.

She laughed heartily: "The first night I sat down to supper, the old man removed his false teeth at the table. I couldn't touch a thing but a glass of milk that night. His daughter, I believe, must have tipped him off, for the next night he either kept them in or took them out before we sat down. He's a man of few words, so I couldn't tell. At first they were very doubtful about accepting my services. In fact I've never had such a hard time crashing an entrance anywhere as at this farm, where there isn't even a bathtub."

"What do you do about that?" I asked.

"Bathe in a washtub Wednesdays and Saturdays; the rest of the time I sponge in a basin. But don't feel sorry for me; I couldn't exist any other way except working so hard that I don't go crazy over Bill and his bomber, and sleeping at night from all-out fatigue. It's good enough for me, and I'm learning a lot about people I never knew before."

Uncleanliness Promotes Parasitic Infestation

The presence of head lice is a common condition that does not spare any particular class of persons, although it is more common among those whose standard of cleanliness is low. The condition may be spread from one child to another in school. During wartime, particularly, the occurrence of head lice may be a matter of concern because, in some areas, lice may be responsible for the carrying and transmission of typhus and trench fevers. It is fortunate that these infections are not very common in the United States and Canada, and conditions rarely develop that favor their spread in these countries.

There are a number of substances that can be used to quickly get rid of the parasites themselves. Such things as kerosene and olive oil, kerosense and vinegar, or larkspur solution have been found to work quite well, as has a substance known as lethone. It is not such an easy matter, however, to get rid of the eggs, or nits.

The eggs have a hard outside covering which protects them against the action of most of the substances used to destroy the parasites. Then, too, many times a child becomes reinfested from contact with others in the family or from outsiders. The nits are rather small and it is often difficult to see them on the head. Because they are fastened so firmly to the hair, it is not possible to get rid of them by combing even for a prolonged period of time.

Doctor Joseph A. Murphy of Washington, D.C., has worked out a method of treatment which appears to work quite well. It is satisfactory because the material used stays on the head for a long period of time; thus, as the new insects are hatched out they are destroyed. The substance which he used is a rotenone powder made of derris or cube. These are substances that come from plants. The powder is put into a salt shaker. With a large comb the hair is parted over various sections of the head; a small amount of the powder is shaken onto the scalp as each new part is made. After about a teaspoonful of the powder has been used, the head is massaged with the fingers.

During this treatment the patient keeps two small pads of gauze over the eyes to protect them from the powder. The patient is instructed not to wash or brush his hair, but just to comb it with a coarse comb. On the sixth day the hair is washed, and another treatment is applied if necessary. Powder is also put on the inside of the hat and around the hat band.

No reactions to the powder have been observed. With this treatment it is not necessary for pupils to remain away from school, and the parasites are gotten rid of within a few days.

Inmates of Institutions Number Only One in a Hundred of the Population

As we think of the large number of inmates of our mental institutions, then of the large number in homes for the aged and needy, and finally of the number of inmates of jails and local workhouses, it might easily have a most depressing effect upon us. Everywhere we turn, these institutions confront us.

That the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association should search into this matter and give us the correct figures of the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Census, Washington, deserves our sincere thanks because the picture, though bad, is not nearly as bad as most of us have been thinking.

In an editorial "Characteristics of Institutional Inmates in 1940", it is stated that there were 591,365 patients 14 years old and over in mental institutions. In addition, persons in homes for the aged, infirm and needy numbered 245,026. Inmates of prisons and reformatories totalled 217,919 and inmates of local jails and workhouses 99,249. Officials and attendants in institutions were not included in the figures of the population in the institutions.

Further interesting information and figures are that males constituted 93 per cent for prisons and reformatories, 91 per cent for local jails and workhouses, 50 per cent for the aged, infirm and needy, and 54 per cent for mental institutions.

That the larger and busier the place, the larger the percentage of institutional inmates is disproved by the fact that the percentage of inmates from New York City is 0.56 per cent while one of its boroughs has a percentage of 1.78; that is more than three times as much in proportion to its population.

While the percentage of all persons 14 years and older 1.16 the District of Columbia had the high (highest) percentage with 1.72. The fact that Washington had and has the highest percentage of institutional inmates would seem to bear out a newspaper item of some weeks ago. "On his first visit to Washington in nine years, Irving S. Cobb, humorist, told senators he found Washington a wonderful place to go crazy in; nobody would notice it".

The Marry-Go-Round

STRANGERS I HAVE LEARNED TO LOVE.

All I know about politics is that when I vote for a candidate, he doesn't get elected.

Of course, I know what an "Isolationist" is; but only today, do I understand how it feels to be completely isolated. Because just a short year ago, my telephone and door-bell continually tinkled, and tradesmen and salesmen anticipated my every need. WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Every day, in that once-upon-a-time, I was hostess to tailors, gardeners, laundrymen, magazine-solicitors and vacuum-cleaner salesmen. And the hundreds of silk stockings I refused to buy haunt my memory like Banquo's ghost!

I used to think that they interrupted and bored me; but never shall I feel that way again! Today, as I sit at my desk in solitary silence, I think of them fondly and longingly. I have learned to love them!

Where, alas, is that inefficient and stalwart plumber who once romped to my home to fix a leaking faucet at the first call from my telephone? He is somewhere, miles away overseas, where he has gone to fix the Fritzies! More power to him!

And where is that dear and husky young gardener, who came faithfully once a week; and always had some suggestion for planting "just one more ornamental shrub?" Why, he's "planting them now in the South Pacific—and I don't mean ornamental shrubs!

And there are the butcher, the tailor and the laundryman, once just vague and nebulous figures, who came promptly, regularly and graciously, bringing burnt offerings of clean clothes or beefsteak or chickens! How anxious and palpitatingly I wait for each of them now! How warmly, jovially and gratefully I greet him! How glad, glad, GLAD I am to see him!

As for the grocery boy who used to flit unseen in and out of the back door, leaving his piled-high basket on the kitchen-tubs, his shining face is a welcome sight and he and I have become old pals. Every day, we play at intriguing new quiz games.

"How many of the things you ordered do you think we haven't got?" he asks blithely and insouciantly, with a grin. And whatever my answer, I LOSE! Still I love him, and am thankful for whatever he brings.

All these, whom I scarcely knew, have now become warm and welcome friends. Never again shall I regard them as trivial interruptions or necessary cogs in the domestic wheels. They are real personalities in my life. Strangers whom I have learned to appreciate, cherish and love;

Come back, you who are overseas and we shall welcome you with open arms. Meanwhile, you have left us feeling isolated and desolated!

FOUR RECORDS SET AT R.C.A.F. ATHLETIC MEET

Hagersville Wins Team Championship with Toronto Depot Second.

WORRALL DEFEATED

Toronto, Aug. 23. (CP) — AC2. Eric Coy of Winnipeg paced No. 16 Service Flying Training School from Hagersville, Ont., to the team championship at the Second Annual No. 1 Training Command, R.C.A.F., track and field meet here Saturday. Four records were set at the meet.

Holder of the Canadian discus record and a member of the Canadian team at the 1938 British Empire games, Coy won the discus and the shot put contests to gain 10 points for the Hagersville Station. Coy was not up to his championship form but in both contests edged Cpl. E. Zienciewicz from Poland, who was a member of the Polish team in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin and that year finished in the first 10 in the discus.

Zienciewicz represented No. 1 Bombing and Gunnery School at Jarvis, Ont. Sgt. Norman Blais of Ottawa, entered for No. 6 repair depot at Trenton ,and holder of the command records in both the discus and the shot put, finished third in both events.

LAW. Winnifred Rudge of St. Catharines, and LAW. Helen Holmes of Windsor, Ont., members of the R.C.A.F. Women's Division, combined to gain the remaining 14 points in the Hagersville total. Rudge, well known Canadian girl athlete, clipped 5-10th of a second off her command record of 10.2 for the 75 yard dash set at the meet last year.

Members of Relay Team

Both girls were members of the Hagersville relay team that set a new command record of 39 seconds flat in the 300 yards' Women's Relay, 6-10th of a second better than last year.

AC2. Ken Rock of Windsor, provided the biggest upset of the meet when he set a new command record of 14.7 seconds to defeat F. Jim Worrall of Toronto in the 120-yard hurdles. Rock represented No. 6 Initial Training School at Toronto and Worrall, a Canadian hurdler in the 1936 Olympic games, ran for No. 5 S.F.T.S. at Brantford.

B. H. Maynard, Los Angeles, California, pole vault star now in training at No. 12 Aircraft Inspection Depot at nearby Malton, went 11 feet two inches in the pole vault to up his own record two inches.

No. 1 Manning Depot at Toronto finished second to Hagersville with 15 points and No. 5 S.F.T.S. at Brantford, Ont., was third with nine.

Hagersville led the Women's Division standing with 14 points, six more than No. 2 Technical Training School, Toronto.

In the Inter-Service events, Sgt. A. Strand, R.N.A.F., enged army Cpl J. Oltscher of Timmins, Ont., representing No. 23 C.B.T.C., Newmarket, Ont., in the 400 yard event.

Sunday Home Run Day in Major Leagues, 23 Roundtrippers Hit, Two With the Bases Loaded

Twelve Hit is American Loop With Six Clouted in Detroit.

YANKS BEAT TWICE

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sunday was home run day in the major leagues. A total of 23 roundtrippers, including two with the bases loaded, were clouted to boost the home-run production for the year to 678—340 in the American and 338 in the National League.

Twelve of the 23 circuit blows were made in the American loop and six of the 12 were hammered at Detroit where baseball's largest crowd of the year—58,404—chortled as the Tigers walloped the first-place New York Yankees twice, 12-0 and 8-3.

The Yankees committed the hard-to-believe total of 10 errors in the two games, seven in the opener.

One of Detroit's homers was Rudy York's 26th of the year and his 13th of the month. The big first sacker has only to connect six more times in his next nine games to set a Major League record of 19 homers for one month.

Charley Keller socked his 22nd homer of the season and Bud Metheny his third against Tommy Bridges in the nightcap.

Grand Slam Homer

A grand slam homer in the ninth inning of the opener by catcher Walker Cooper sparked St. Louis Cardinals to a double decision over Boston Braves, 6-1 and 5-1.

Vince DiMaggio of Pittsburgh also socked a grand slam homer at Brooklyn, but the Dodgers still took both ends of a twin bill from the Pirates, 6-1 and 8-6.

Tony Cuccinello socked a ninth-inning homer that sent Philadelphia Athletics down to their 17th straight defeat, only three short of the American League record. The poke gave Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory in the afterpiece of a twin bill after Edgar Smith won the opener, 5-2.

Cincinnati tightened its hold on second place in the National League by beating the Phillies twice, 4-3 and 20-6.

Giants Lose Twice

New York Giants lost twice to Chicago Cubs, 6-2 and 4-3. Bill Nicholson's 20th homer of the year—with two on in the first—gave Claude Passeau his 13th victory in the opener.

Cleveland beat Boston Red Sox twice 6-0 and 7-6 in 13 innings. Jack Salveson twirled a masterful two-hit shutout in opener. St. Louis Browns beat Washington 8-5 in the first game of a doubleheader but the Senators took the nightcap, 4-2, in 10 innings.

Saturday's games were featured by the 13-1 drubbing handed Brooklyn by Chicago Cubs. Close decisions prevailed in other games, the Phillies nosing out St. Louis 3-2, Boston beating Cincinnati by the same score and Pittsburgh edging out New York 4-3.

In the American League, Chicago turned back Washington 5-4, Boston edged out Detroit 7-6, St. Louis took a pair from the Athletics, 5-3 and 4-1, and New York defeated Cleveland 8-3.

Capt. Ian Eisenhardt Named Sports Officer for the Army

(By The Canadian Press)

Prominently associated with physical training and youth recreation developments in British Columbia for some years, Capt. Ian Eisenhardt, 37, of Vancouver, yesterday was named sports officer at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, where he has been engaged in formulating a physical fitness program since August, 1942.

Several times in recent months, Capt. Eisenhardt and A. A. Burridge, Director of Physical Education at McMaster University, Hamilton, with other sponsors of a mass recreation movement have attended conferences if Ottawa with Hon Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Pensions and National Health, and Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, with a view to establishing a national fitness movement, on which two reports have already been submitted.

Capt. Eisenhardt was born in Hjoerring, Denmark, and graduated from Copenhagen University in 1927, coming to Canada on a scholarship in 1929.

Sam Byrd of Philadelphia, who once starred in the outfield for the New York Yankees, won the Victory National Golf championship at Chicago yesterday with an aggregate of 277 for the 72 holes. He held a five-stroke lead over Craig Wood.

Reveler and Ben Hur divided honors with a heat each of the Tuckahoe trot, Saturday's feature in the harness racing card at Empire City track, New York. In the second dash Ben Hur covered the mile in 2:04 1-4, Hollywood Garnett being second in a photo finish.

Orville Burke, former quarterback of the Ottawa Rough Riders, played with Camp Borden in an exhibition double-header with London Army at London, Saturday, while LAC. James of Fingal, formerly in the Michigan-Ontario loop, figured at short for London. The Bordenites dropped both tilts, the scores being 11-5 and 10-2.

With a score of 218, Bobby Gray of Toronto won the 54-hole invitation golf tournament Sunday on the course of the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, finishing five strokes ahead of Richard Borthwick of Oakdale. Lex Robson and Gordie Brydson tied for third with 225. First-flight amateur was Phil Farley with 72 for 18 holes.

In a soccer match for war charities at Windsor yesterday, a Picton R.A.F. eleven, led by FO. Ian Campbell, decisively defeated the Detroit All-Stars 4-1. Campbell, formerly a starry Scottish league player, scored two goals and played brilliantly.

Princequillo, a bargain-counter colt, out-sprinted the favored Shut Out, once-famous Derby winner, in the last quarter-mile to capture the 41st Saratoga Handicap by six lengths at Belmont track Saturday to earn a $15,200 pay-check. The winner was claimed last year for $2,500 and has already won $31,365.

The junior championship of the Inter County Baseball Association was won Saturday at Kitchener when the Galt Terrier Pups blanked Kitchener Ranger Cubs 6-0 in the deciding game of the five-tilt series. Bert McCrudden allowed the locals four hits.

Port Colborne Victorias eliminated St. Catharines 6-5 Saturday in the semi-finals of the Niagara Senior Baseball League on the loser's home diamond and will now meet the winner of the Welland-Niagara Falls series for the circuit title.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Among the famous deals to go down in bridge history, make room for the Cumberland hand. Almost a century ago, it took the Duke of Cumberland for plenty of dough. This is the deal:

NORTH
♠ J 10 9 8 7 6
♥ 10 9 8 7 6
♦ Q J
♣ None

WEST
♠ None
♥ None
♦ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♣ A Q 10 8

EAST
♠ 5 4 3 2
♥ 5 4 3 2
♦ None
♣ 6 5 4 3 2

SOUTH
♥ A K Q J
♦ A K
♣ K J 9 7

This deal and the equally noted Mississippi heart hand have at least four things in common. They look alike. They play alike. They came up in the same generation. The victims paid dearly.

A whole ocean and half a continent separated their scene of action. But both are reported to have happened way back in about the year 1860. That was in the days of bid whist, the granddaddy of bridge.

It seems east was declarer with clubs as trumps. In those days, the dealer announced trumps. And players could keep redoubling until one pair passed.

Milord was sitting south. With that hand of his, he could not be blamed for being optimistic about the future. And he must have doubled and redoubled until opponents ran out of breath.

His opening lead was the club seven. West won with the eight spot and led a diamond. East trumped and returned a club. West won that by barely covering the card played by south.

Another diamond lead from west was trumped by east, who returned another trump. Again west won by barely covering the south play. Now, west led his high trump and picked up all the clubs.

West was still in the lead and took the remaining tricks with his now good diamonds. Thus, west and east took all 13 tricks in spite of the healthy south holding.

Tradition has it that this one deal nicked the nobleman for 20,000 pounds in English money. In American language that's almost 100 grand. And that ain't hay, brother, in any language.

No doubt the Duke nonchalantly wiped his eyeglass and said: "I say, by Jove. Enny of youse guys got a blank check? Enny bank will do".

Eight Belleville Players Compete At Peterborough

Eight Belleville players competed in the Kawartha Lakes invitation golf tournament played in Peterborough over the weekend, all local players being members of the Bay of Quinte Country and Golf Club. The course was lightning fast, keeping scores well above par for the amateurs.

Two hundred amateur golfers from all parts of Ontario and 16 professionals drove them down the fairways in the most successful tournament yet sponsored by the Kawartha Lakes club's two-day golf matches. Bobby Grey, of Toronto, won the professional tournament with Dick Borthwick, also of Toronto and Lex Robson, of the home club, third. Bill Little, of the Bay of Quinte Club professional shot 89, 83 and 84 in the two-day match.

Bud Corbett paced the eight Quinte Club golfers with a 79 net with a handicap of five for 74. Next was Squadron Leader Dahl with a 94, handicap 19 for a 75. Doug Green was next with a 98 net, handicap 18 for an even 80. Then came Bill Steer with a 97 handicap 16 for an 81, Harry Walker with a 97 handicap 16 for another 81, Ben Yanover with a net of 109, handicap 28 for 81 and R. Ridley with a 107, handicap 18 for 89.

Over one thousand spectators lined the beautiful Kawartha Lakes course for the tournament.

Waterloo (CP)—Ingersoll lost its first intermediate "A" championship play-off baseball encounter here Saturday when the team blew in the ninth inning, permitting Waterloo Tigers to score twice and take the decision 5-4; Dorey's bunt scoring the winning run on a squeeze play.

Kingston Soldiers To Meet Reliance Here on Tuesday

Provincial softball play-off time again looms its lofty head into the district sports picture with the announcement that the Eastern Ontario Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns would commence in Belleville on Tuesday evening between the Kingston and Belleville league winners. Down in Kingston the Garrison "Soldier" team captured the City Softball League crown and the right to enter the Intermediate "A" playdowns in the O. A. S. A. vs. the Reliance A.C., representing Belleville.

Harry Rollins, district convener, today announced the Kingston-Belleville series would open here Tuesday, with the second game scheduled for the Limestone City on Friday night. The winner of this series will then meet the Trenton champions in the next round.

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

We've been expecting this "old-timer" to show up pretty soon, and here it is:

He had never been outside the United States, and neither had she, but both were recounting their experiences abroad:

She—And Asia! Ah, Asia, wonderful Asia! Never shall I forget. Turkey, India—all of them. And most of all China, the celestial kingdom. How I loved it!

He—And the pagodas—did you see them?

She (holding her ground)—Did I see them? My dear, I had dinner with them!

Fantasie, but—

Hans Wagner, greatest of all the shortstops and now coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates, tells such fantastic stories that it often is difficult to determine where the truth ends and the Wagner imagination begins. Not so long ago he was describing the first night baseball game he ever played in, perhaps the first ever held.

"It was in Wilmington in 1898," began the gnarled old Dutchman, "and Ed Barrow was the manager of the team. The illumination was supplied by Chinese lanterns which were left over from a lawn fete, so you can picture how difficult it was to see the ball or follow its progress. Before the game kids were shooting off fire-works, and that probably gave Barrow his idea.

"While I was at bat, Ed substituted a torpedo for the baseball and handed it to the pitcher. I saw this shape sailing up to the plate and I swung from my heels. The bat hit the torpedo, and the explosion scared both me and the catcher to death. I was so mad that I chased that pitcher right through a hole in the center-field fence."

Old Honus grinned before adding: "And Ed Barrow has never liked night baseball since."

Kingston Plays Here

The Eastern Ontario O. A. S. A. playdowns open at the Fair Grounds here on Tuesday evening between the Kingston "Soldiers", winners of the Limestone City softball league, and the Reliance A. C. The return game will be played in Kingston next Friday. Harry Rollins, district convener, stated today.

The exact strength of the Kingston champions is somewhat of a mystery, as their players are similar to that of the No. 5 I. T. S. roster, a floating line-up with new players coming whenever enlistments find a ball player in its midst. However, we do know the "Soldiers" beat the Victorias, perrenial Kingston champions these many years back so naturally "Spike" Pryke's Reliance nine will have to be on their best softball behaviour tomorrow night to endeavour taking that No. 1 game of the series. (The big one they call it.)

Other Softball

According to Convener Rollins the R. C. A. F. Service Softball League will not compete in the O. A. S. A. this year, but confine their activities to Command games. This means the Trenton Town League champions must await the winner of the Kingston-Belleville which naturally doesn't sit any to well with Rome Taylor-Jesse Baker and company. Up in Peterboro' the Basic Training and 5th Battery city league finalists played another tie the other night and need one more game to break the string, while over in Oshawa George Campbell's "Colts" are the favourites in their league finals with the Laundry nine.

Here in Belleville tonight Reliance and Alemite lassies tangle in a girls' league softball tilt at the Armouries. Alemite eked out a costly 8 to 7 win in their first meeting when Lela Nelson sustained an injured knee and will not be back at her accustomed position at third base. Skipper Harold Kurtz knows it's curtains for his Reliance crowd if they lose tonight, so is naturally using his strongest offensive team to try and even the count.

What They Wanted

Local wrestling fans asked for this one—Katan versus Bishop. For some time past Promoter Tunney has been requested by regular patrons to stage a rough house night with men like Katan, Monahan or Dunlop matched. Last week at the Hume Arena "Texas Dick" Bishop established himself as a ring villian of the first water, when he leaped into the stands and dared all and sundry to "slug it out." There were no takers, but the patrons would welcome nothing better than to have Bishop given a sound trouncing. Skipper Tunney consented to help the situation along after all Frank was always an accommodating creature, as he signed John "Killer" Katan to meet the pugnacious Texan cowboy. It should be a wow.

Of course the main bout needs no build up with "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the colored sensation from Cape Town, meeting Bunny Dunlop.

This and That.

An octette of local golfers competed in annual Kawartha Lakes golf tournament in Peterborough over the week end. . . .The local divot-diggers returned home high in their praises of the lightning-light course, especially the greens. . . "Those greens were as smooth and level as billiard tables", quoth Billie Steer. . . Cigarettes are needed by our fighting forces and it is through such organizations as the Kinsmen Fag Fund that smokes are provided the boys overseas. . . . On Thursday night the Kinsmen are presenting a dance at the Park Pavilion the gross proceeds from which will be given to the club's "Fag Fund". . . .Everything is gratis, orchestra et al, so get your ticket from any Kinsman and assure some Belleville boy over there of 300 fags. . . . Baseball's largest 1943 turnout over 58,000 at Briggs' Stadium, saw the Detroit Tigers beat the Yankees twice yesterday, as the Yanks booted the ball for ten errors in the twin bill. . . Don't look now but the Toronto Maple Leafs dropped three out of four games over the weekend making Burleigh Grimes, a rather unhappy individual.

Galt (CP) — Pitching his last game before reporting to the army today, Lefty Price of Stratford Nationals held Galt to three hits, enabling the visitors to blank the Terriers 3-0 in the second and deciding playoff game in the Inter-County Baseball Association. The Nats will now meet London Army for the senior title.

AT THE BELLE

"Five Graves to Cairo"

The thrilling screen drama of how a woman outfoxed the Desert Fox, Marshal Erwin Rommel, and helped lose for him the continent of Africa, was dramatically unfolded Saturday at Paramount's "Five Graves to Cairo" opened at the Belle Theatre.

A happy combination of high-grade intrigue intelligently portrayed by a competent cast in a locale that has just made history, "Five Graves to Cairo" is the stuff of which unforgettable screen experiences are made. In addition to its powerful entertainment value, the picture is eloquent testimony to the qualities which will make victory inevitable, for the United States.

Franchot Tone, as Corporal Bramble of the British Tank Corps, staggers, into a hotelry only to find that he is but a few minutes ahead of the German army, flushed with its victories and led by no less a personage than Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, played with startling fidelity by Erich von Stroheim, time-honored master of Germanic repulsiveness. Tone, with the help of Akim Tamiroff, the hotelkeeper, and Anne Baxter, as Mouche, the French chambermaid, learns the secret of the "five graves", a potent weapon on which Rommel counts heavily to aid in the conquest of Egypt. Tone gets through to the British lines with the aid of Anne's sacrifice, reveals the secret, and the march on Cairo is stemmed.

The picture is replete with the kind of intrigue and suspense which kept Saturday's audience holding on to its seats, but it also offers a tender and touching love story involving Tone and Miss Baxter.

It is no wonder that the film is the well-rounded writing and directing job it is. The men responsible for both departments are Billy Wilder and Charles Brackett with Wilder wielding the megaphone as director.

No report of "Five Graves to Cairo" can be complete without special mention of Erich von Stroheim. This veteran character actor who has portrayed some of the most hated men on the screen, adds to his reputation with his characterization of the cocky, victory-flushed Rommel. Tone as Bramble, Miss Baxter as Mouche, Tamiroff as the hotelkeeper, and Fortunio Bonanova as an Italian general, aid in making the picture the excellent entertainment it is.

AT THE CAPITOL

ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL Met Here!

Casablanca, the city that flashed into the news as part of the bold and brilliant American invasion of North Africa, splashed boldly and brilliantly on the screen of the Capitol Theatre last night when Warner Bros.' "Casablanca" opened.

It was sound military tactics that took a place name like Casablanca out of the geography books and put in headlines, but it is thorough, sound showmanship that makes the screenplay "Casablanca" a vivid and exciting adventure.

For one thing, the picture moves with the same speed and directions as did the Allied Armies in Africa. And you need a Humphrey Bogart to set such a pace. As "Rick" he's a tough guy again, but a right guy. He can take care of himself any place, any time and in any company.

It's a good thing he can, because the setting for the film is in the vivid city of the white houses that glare brightly in the blinding African sunlight.

But there is a flashback to Paris-in-the-Spring, which is notable for a Bogart who is not hard-boiled but who is a believably candid, trusting and gay lover. Teamed with the natural, sincere grace of Ingrid Bergman's performance, it composes into a tender interlude of nostalgic charm, shattered by the entry of the Boche into Paris. It was the Spring of 1940.

Back in Casablanca, the action of the story comes to a climax in the surprise meeting between Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman. Involved with them is Paul Henreid, who portrays Ingrid's husband and the leader of the Underground movement. Centering about him is the whirl of events that finally enable him to escape from Casablanca. The picture has a bang-up finish, with Claude Rains adding a superb touch that is as unexpected as it is exciting.

Hillbilly Blitzkrieg"

For hilarious fun, served in the best slapstick manner, it would be hard to beat "Hillbilly Blitzrieg" the army comedy which opened an engagement at the Capitol theatre last night.

The characters are taken from Billy De Beck's famous comic strip, "Barney Google and Snuffy Smith," and the picture not only features these two worthies, but also the horse Spark Plug. The pint-size Bud Duncan plays the role of the drawling hillbilly Snuffy, and deliveries a very funny and true-to-life characterization. Cliff Nazarro adds to the fun in the part of Barney Google, and "Slow-burn" Edgar Kennedy is a positive delight as the menacing sergeant. Others who stand out in the cast are Lucien Littlefield, Doris Linden and Jimmie Dodd.

Its a grand show at the Capitol one the public can ill-afford to miss.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 10

I still couldn't see why Jan's very respectable and usually busy studio was chosen and of course she didn't either. She was just trying to fit her case together.

"Did he know Jan Proust?" I asked.

"I doubt it. The detectives checked on that this afternoon, but we cannot find anyone who ever heard him speak of Proust or say him there. Proust himself will be here tomorrow, or possibly tonight on the night plane, and if he ever met my son he will remember. I have had him play for special groups, twice—once here and once at the Etude Club. Of course I do not believe that Mr. Proust himself is involved. They are checking on the women in the building."

I felt slightly ill.

"Of course you know I live there?"

"My poor mouse!" She patted my hand.

"All I know," I said, "is that since I've lived there I've never seen Gil in the building and neither has anyone else. No one but I had the least idea who he was, and it's a small place where everyone knows everyone else's business and callers. And there are only a few women, and none of them ever set eyes on him."

"Far more likely one of Proust's women. One of his married women, probably. They are the worst."

"Jan Proust doesn't have any women. He really doesn't!"

"What a babe in the woods you are," she said, and for the first time she smiled.

The butler tapped on the door and said:

"It is Mr. Hall, Madam. Will you see him now?"

"Yes, ask him to come in."

At the butler's heels was a rather carelessly dressed, youngish man who looked alarmingly like a newspaper reporter.

And I, thinking I was the only one with an in.

He went right to her and embraced her and she cried again and called him "Dear Chris."

"One of my boy's oldest friends. May I present Chris Hall, Mary, dear? Mary Driscoll. Mary has known Gil for quite a while too."

He looked at me earnestly, and I felt my color rising again. I knew she would tell him I'd had a crush on her son who didn't give a hoot for me, as soon as I left. So I made up my mind to outstay him, if it took all night.

Mr. Christopher Hall, it soon developed, had been with Gil the night before—the night of the murder. But he had not seen Mrs. Castle, because she had been too ill.

"You have remarkable courage, dear Mrs. Castle," he told her. "I never dreamed I would be able to see you tonight. Last night the house was full of doctors and trained nurses, you were in such a serious condition, and now I find you sitting up."

"I have work to do, no time to think of myself. And no desire to. What have I to live for without Gil? Nothing!"

I thought that Hall looked at her rather sceptically and indeed she did not look like a woman who had been critically ill.

"Hall said, "I spent an hour with him in the library, downstairs. He seemed fine—just as usual, but worried about you of course."

"Worried about something," his mother said.

I felt that they wanted me to go but I made up my mind I wouldn't until she told me to.

"Did he confide in you at all, Chris?"

He smiled a little and spread his hands. "You know Gil."

"Did he mention a woman's name, even a first name or a nick-name?"

"Mrs. Castle, as long as I've known Gil I don't think I ever heard him mention a girl's name—at least not one that seemed to matter to him."

"So he never confided in you, either," she mused. It seemed to please her.

"No, he didn't. I've already told the police the only thing I do know—that he was going to meet a girl, a girl he intended to break with. But who she was, or where he was going to meet her, I've no idea. He was still here when I left about half-past six and that's all I know—or all I knew until I saw the papers."

"Mary works on a paper, that's why she is here—that, and being an old friend, too," Mrs. Castle said.

"Times," I said.

"Oh! Mary Driscoll! I didn't catch the name when Mrs. Castle introduced us. Swell story you had. You scooped the town."

"Well, being right in the building," I began deprecatingly, but I did not have long to gloat over the compliment because Mrs. Castle said, "And what about you, Chris? Are you going to work on a paper again?"

My heart sank. So he WAS a newspaperman and my little scoop was over.

"I'm going to work on The Express in the morning," he said.

"And what about your book, dear?"

"Oh, that can wait for a while."

There was no point in trying to outstay him now, so I thought I'd better speak up.

"I thought there might be some pictures, some you'd like to have used, Mrs. Castle?"

She opened the drawer of the table at her side, and sighing a little handed us each two or three photographs of Gil, one in a yachting cap and sailing attire, one in polo costume and another, earlier picture taken when he was a student at the art school in Paris.

Hall rose to go then and so did I.

"Mrs. Castle," he said, "the morning papers are going to be full of pictures, pictures you won't like to see."

"What do you mean?"

"Pictures of women."

Her face twisted and she bit her lower lip and swallowed hard. I thought she was going to break down but she said firmly, almost vindictively:

"I shall welcome every one. Each will lead to a clue, and one of them will lead me to the one I want. And now, my dears, you must excuse me. I am very tired."

We went down the broad, winding stairway together. The butler opened the door for us and we walked down the street.

"Had dinner?" Hall asked me. He was a tall, rangy individual with very bright blue eyes and very dark skin, which gave him an odd, but not unpleasing appearance.

I told him that I was not hungry and had a story to do.

"Got my job on the strength of it," he said grinning. He had a marvelously friendly smile. "And a $10 advance from my new city editor!"

"I thought all writers were rich."

"Maybe they are. I wouldn't know. I'm just a newspaper man myself and I'm broke. That's why I'm on this job."

There was a Powell Street car coming so I boarded it, and he walked on down the hill. I bought all the morning papers as I walked the rest of the way to the office and read them at my desk. The pictures were pretty awful. Apparently every cabaret singer and strip-tease artist in town had known Gil and was cashing in on it.

The office was pretty deserted at that hour, but there were three or four of the boys there and the news editor going through a stack of new "art" for tomorrow. They all congratulated me on the day's work and asked a few questions about the goings on at the studio and the Castles.

It was, they all agreed, a whale of a story.

"Getting a little hot to handle though," the news editor said, "too many society names of which you have to be careful. And that's where the story is coming from, if you ask me. Now these—" he thumbed through the professional sisters, the beautiful blondes with skirts above their knees, "they're just looking for publicity. Too darn anxious to get their faces in the paper. It's going to be the other kind—somebody who wants to stay out of the paper—and somebody with class."

"I don't think it's a woman at all," I said, and went over to my desk to work.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his paper and ma was reading hers, saying, There's no question about it, William, the time to plan the peace is while the war is still going on, when the different nations still have something in common, even if it's only wholesale slawter.

I agree with you, pop said. When the danger is all over, the seeds of future troubles will surely sprout all over again unless something has already been done to prevent it. I suppose you're allewding to Sentor what's his name speech, he said, and ma said, well no, I was thinking of a little run in I had with the butcher today, she said.

Do you mean to say it had some international aspect? pop said, and ma said, No, but all straws are equal in the wind if you look at them closely, isn't that true?

I guess so, but I imagine it would take a very quick eye, pop said. What was this run in about? he said, and ma said, It was about the unpardonably tough steaks he's been selling me. I laid him out about it face to face without mincing words today, and the way he came right back at me you might of thought I was the gilty defendant instead of the innocent plaintiff. He claimed he was rapidly going out of his mind from people expecting the impossible and it wasn't his fault if the government gave all the best cuts to the arm forces. Then he calmed down and said he didn't want to lose an old customer, and I acted just as broad mindedly and told him I had no deside to abandon a butcher of several years standing. In other words we approached the peace table before hostilities ceased, and as the upshot of the outcome he promised to reserve me his choicest cuts and let others suffer, and I agreed to give him another chance. So I ask you, William, doesn't that bear out my contention? ma said.

I admit it's as convincing as a lot of editorials I've read, pop said. Being the end of the subject.

Pravda Comments On Opening Of Second Front

Moscow, Aug. 23—(AP)—Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, said today the British Isles should be "the main base for invasion of the continent."

"A crushing blow upon Germany is almost impossible to conceive without utilizing the enormous strategic advantage of the British Isles," Pravda asserted.

Invasion from England, the newspaper added, could be supported by a strong aerial fighter force as well as army and navy bombers. It estimated 20 times fewer ships would be required to land and supply forces in Western Europe than would be needed for an invasion from the Mediterranean.

Reviewing Britain's wartime economy, Pravda said:

"Absence of a second front on the European continent has created a disproportion between the armament industry and the size of the operations being waged. The very logic of military economics requires the use of the equipment produced."

Pravda estimated Britain has 7,000,000 men in her armed forces and a similar number in war industries, producing 3,000 planes and 2,000 tanks a month to surpass German production. "A further increase in 1943 is possible only through higher efficiency," the newspaper said.

Pravda asserted at one point that the Soviet Union had saved Britain from invasion.

Great Credit Due To Army Sappers In Sicilian Drive

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Messina, Sicily, Aug. 23 — (CP Cable)—A big share of the credit for the fact that the Sicilian campaign lasted only 38 days is due to army sappers, who kept Allied Forces moving steadily by repairing German road demolitions that would have appalled highway engineers and tied up peace time motor traffic for days.

The thoroughness of German delaying methods which were an important part of their defensive tactics, and the masterly countermeasures of British, Canadian and United States engineers, were the most remarkable features of a trip through the northeastern Sicilian mountains to Messina.

There are two main roads leading to the city nearest the Italian mainland from Mount Etna where Canadians, travelling a dirt road built by their sappers, cracked the main Nazi defence ring and started the Axis collapse.

Bridges between the Etna area and Messina remaining untouched are rarities and almost suspicious-looking. Exploded structures which the Sappers replaced or destroyed must number well over 100.

Minefields were a constant hazard to the Allied advance, and took their toll.

Along some roads which the Sappers cleared, paving the way for movement of vital traffic, there are such signs as: "area on either side of this road dangerous," or "this road clear for 12 feet on either side."

District Names In Fifth Sicily Casualty List

In the Fifth Official List of Canadian (Active) Army casualties in the Sicilian campaign, the Department of National Defence today lists an additional 144 men. The list brought to 470 the total of Sicily casualties made public to date and it has been announced that Canadian casualties in the period July 10 to Aug. 4 totalled 1,895.

Today's list, the 344th Army Casualty List of the war, carried the following names:

MISSING IN ACTION

Eastern Ontario Regiment: Lieut. Manley David Yearwood, son of Mrs. W. Nobes, R.R. 5, Belleville.

KILLED IN ACTION

Eastern Ontario Regiment: Cpl. Harold Wilfred Lawson (Robert Wilfred Lawson, father,) Picton; wife overseas.

C.S.M. Charles Frederick Robert Nutley, of Picton (Mrs. C. F. R. Nutley, wife, Picton).

Private Samuel Way (Samuel Way, Sr, father, 74 Station Street, Belleville, wife overseas).

WOUNDED

Central Ontario Regiment: Private Herman Alexander Chard (Mrs. Rita C. Viola Chard, wife, Campbellford).

Private Charles Robert Harrington (Miss Clara Harrington, sister, Trenton).

Private Reginald Heber Harrington (Mrs. Mary Anne Harrington, mother, Trenton, Ont).

Eastern Ontario Regiment: Ralph Donald Stapley (Mrs. Mildred Stapley, mother, Stirling).

Tpr. Albert St. Denis (Mrs. Annie Eva St. Denis, Pinnacle Street, Belleville).

All but one of these names were previously published in the local newspaper on receipt of information by the next of kin.

Listed as seriously wounded is Capt. Francis William Ingersoll Merritt, brother of Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C., the hero of Dieppe, who now is a prisoner of war in Germany. Capt. Merritt, who was with a British Columbia regiment, was born in Vancouver, B.C., in 1913. His wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Merritt, resides at Vancouver, British Columbia.

Aerial and Naval Poundings Given Kiska Made the Island Untenable

Canadian Press War Correspondent Herb. Jones landed on Kiska with Canadian invasion forces August 15. In this dispatch he tells how aerial bombing apparently shattered the Japanese will for resistance before invasion actually began.

By HERB. JONES
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Kiska Island, Aug. 21. (Delayed.) —Canadian and United States flags fly side by side over Kiska today but the sudden and complete evacuation of Japanese from the Aleutian Island where they spent more than a year digging a foothold on the fringe of the North American continent remains one of the mysteries of the Pacific war.

The 30-mile long island in the Aleutian chain which the Japanese occupied June 7, 1942, was found abandoned when the first of a large Canadian-American amphibious force landed ready for battle August 15.

Empty gunposts, damaged trucks, machinery, radio equipment and huge amounts of war materials were found, and the cement floor in the seaplane hangar and an electric lighting system were evidence of the work of the Japanese put in on Kiska, only to lose it all.

Pure water still gushed from the smashed pipes of their water system when we arrived at Kiska village.

Questions are, why did the Japanese abandon this, their only island threat to the North American continent, and how was evacuation carried out?

High-ranking officers believe the aerial and naval pounding given the Japanese recently made their position untenable.

Great bomb and shell craters found at the main camp and in other parts of the island give weight to this belief, and many installations had been hit.

Indications Last of Enemy on Kiska Fled Hurriedly Before the Attack

(By WM. L. WORDEN)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Bamboo Bay, Kiska, Aug. 19 (Delayed) (AP) The Kiska story can be told in a dozen words:

The Japanese evacuated. With American and Canadian occupation the Aleutians are safe again.

But the entire story is not quite that simple and some of it obviously cannot be told until after the war, if ever.

Why did the Japanese take Kiska in the first place? Why, having taken it and held it at bitter cost more than a year, did they give it up without a struggle?

What will be their answer to almost inescapable loss of face in the homeland? How did they make good their escape? Was the evacuation a good thing for the American and Canadian cause?

No doubt great sums of money were spent bringing thousands of combat troops and equipment here for the attack which could have been accomplished by a few scouts with no equipment except boats to land them.

But anything less than a full-scale bombardment of Kiska August 15 with the information then available would needlessly have risked the lives of thousands of troops then attacking.

Now there is a highly trained amphibious force which has no immediate fighting to do. However it is possible the Japanese would not have evacuated if they had not known that this force was en route—or at least suspected it.

There is some indication the last of the enemy fled hurriedly a few hours before the attack.

The Japanese did not succeed in the evacuation without arousing suspicions they had done just that. The attack was made as scheduled chiefly because of the possible high cost of proving these suspicions wrong.

That cost would have been in lives: the cost incurred was only in dollars.

As for how the Japanese managed the evacuation at all in face of Allied naval strength—the answer lies in the much discussed and not-much-improved Aleutian weather. Since the taking of Attu the fog has been thick and steady.

Also there is the possibility cargo-carrying submarines were used. Such submarines were known to have been used to keep the Attu garrison in essential supplies during the last days there.

Other questions are harder to answer.

The Japanese army has been proud it never gave up a fortress without a fight. That record now is broken. For whatever their reasons the fact remains that the Japs ran—and ran in such a hurry they left food on tables, and guns ready to use—before attackers were even in sight.

Spring Grain Yield 50P.C. of Normal

As was expected during the spring months when continued rainfall delayed seeding operations as much as four to six weeks, the yield of spring grain is disappointing to district farmers. According to the estimate of one farmer, the yield of oats in the Hastings district will not be over 50 per cent of normal.

This estimate is borne out by reports of threshing crews, which indicate the grain is exceptionally light and of poor quality. In some instances only from two to three hundred bushels has been the result of one half day's threshing. Ordinarily a good half day's operation would mean approximately 600 bushels being threshed.

One peculiar aspect of the current season's oat crop is the fact that almost the entire crop ripened within a few days and this regardless of the time spread between the sowing of fields, which in some cases amounted to several weeks. Hot weather during the period in which the grain was heading is held responsible for this factor, while the decreased yield was further enhanced as the result of straw being affected with rust.

Oats sown early are in some instances yielding closer to normal with farmers having an expectancy of approximately 70 percent of normal yield.

E. B. Jolliffe Denies Agreement With New Party

Toronto, Aug. 23 (CP)—E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, said today his party "will have no link with the Labor-Progressive party," formed here during the weekend with Tim Buck, former leader of the now disbanded Communist party, as National leader.

"A complete phoney," Mr. Jolliffe called the new party. "It's just the Communist party under a new name and we want and will have no part of them. It's just a bluff to win a little popularity at the expense of the C.C.F.

The new party declared its readiness to affiliate with the C.C.F. and promised "to adhere loyally to its decisions and constitution."

Thousands Line Quebec Streets To See Churchill

(By C. R. BLACKBURN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 23. (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill drove today in an open car through streets lined with thousands of cheering people and visitors who were given their first close view of the distinguished visitor since his arrival at the Citadel two weeks ago.

It was a triumphal procession for the British Prime Minister who was kept busy waving his hat, giving the "V-sign" and acknowledging cheers while perched precariously on the folded-down top of his car.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King sat on Mr. Churchill's left and the two stood together to receive the applause, when the car made its only stop—in front of the city hall where the crowd was most dense.

There the show was almost stolen when Mr. King spied Mrs. Churchill and her daughter, Mary, watching the scene from a third-floor window of the city hall.

He waved and shouted above the din but it was a matter of seconds before Mr. Churchill, whose hand was being grasped by those surging about the car, had his attention focussed on the right window.

Then the crowd spied Mrs. Churchill and the cheering broke out afresh as the car carrying the two Prime Ministers—Mr. Churchill's light grey felt crushed in and slanted at a rakish angle—moved off up the hill and back to the Citadel.

Mr. Churchill wore a white tropical suit while Mr. King was in a heavier, grey business suit.

Crowds gathered several hours before the Churchill car, guarded before and behind by motorcycle police and cars of officials and secret service men, turned out onto Grand Allee from the Citadel driveway about 12.45 p.m. E.S.T.

Shorts-clad tourists mingled with Quebec residents. Flags were waved and cheering broke out wherever crowds had gathered.

Curtin's Gov't Returned to Power In Australia

Melbourne, Aug. 23 — (CP) — Prime Minister John Curtin's government will face the 17th Australian Parliament to be convened in late September with a working majority of about 30 votes in the House of Representatives as the result of elections held Saturday which recorded an unprecedented landslide in favor of his Labor Party.

Although the final count of votes cast may not be known for several days, official figures available late today indicated that Labor will win from 48 to 51 seats in the Lower House. The combined opposition parties will have been 21 and 24 seats.

In the House dissolved at the end of June, Labor and the combined opposition each held 36 seats with the balance of power in the hands of two Independents who supported Labor on all major issues.

It also was indicated Labor had won Senate victories in all the States, but final results of the contests for the Upper House will not be known for several days. In any case the opposition will retain a majority of two seats in the Senate until June 30 next year when the terms expire for 19 Senatorships contested in Saturday's election, the remaining 17 Senate seats were not up for contest this year.

Mr. Curtin himself was re-elected in Freemantle. Western Australia, with an indicated majority of almost 20,000. Arthur Fadden, opposition leader and head of the Country Party, was in danger in Queensland but it was believed votes from country districts might pull him through.

Trenton and District

Receives Wings At Yorkton, Sask.

Trenton, (Special.) — Sergeant Pilot Donald Reid, who formerly attended Trenton High School, recently received his wings at Yorkton, Sask., and has been posted to St. John. Que., loaned to the C.P.R. Skyways as a civilian pilot.

His brother Pilot Officer Douglas Reid is at present stationed in Scotland, having returned there from Gibraltar, and his father, Lieut.-Col. F. L. Reid, who was one of Trenton's most popular doctors before the outbreak of war, has recently been transferred from Kingston, Ont., to be officer commanding of an hospital in Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Pte. Harry (Tiny) Hyatt, previously reported wounded in the battle of Sicily has now been reported seriously ill from wounds, according to an official message received by his parents here.

$45 Money Order Lost in Trent

Sitting with her husband on Dam No. 1 while he was fishing late Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Walter Hawryluk, of 227 West St., opened her purse and from it accidentally dropped a letter into the water. The letter contained an American express money order for $45 and, as she watched, it was quickly carried down the river. Her husband made vain efforts to recover it but without results, as it soon disappeared in the swirling waters.

Large Market

Trenton market was again on Saturday loaded with vegetables of every kind and all of an excellent quality. Fruit, however, was not so plentiful and was quickly bought up.

Potatoes dropped from their ceiling of 57c per peck to 50c, corn was quite plentiful at 30c and tomatoes were specially fine in size and quality and sold at 40c per basket or 10c per berry box.

Celery, both green and bleached variety sold at 15c per head, cabbage from 5c to 30c, cauliflower 15c to 35c, beets, onions, Swiss chard, broccoli, etc., 5c per bunch. Large cucumbers sold for 5c with baskets of large ones at 30c and others ranging up to 85c for the small gherkins.

Broilers brought 80c to $1.00 each, with more mature fowl at 40 and 42c per pound. Eggs were mostly 48 for Grade "A" with one or two farmers getting 50c.

Apples of several varieties were offered Melbas being in the majority and selling at 50c per basket. Red Astrachans, Duchess and St. Lawrence sold from 30c up.

Melons brought from 15c up while one or two vendors still offered huckleberries for the same price as last week, 35c per box or $1.75 per basket.

Reoccupation of Kiska Clears Shortest Route To Japanese Empire

By The Canadian Press

Occupation of Kiska Island by Canadian and American troops without a shot being fired — one of the strangest events of the war —places the Allied war machine on the shortest route to Tokyo, military chiefs agreed today.

In announcing the occupation Saturday in a joint statement with President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said..."The control of the Aleutians Islands in the North Pacific by United States and Canadian forces will aid in the defence of Australia and New Zealand."

He said the entire operation was carried out under United States command.

Lt.-Gen. John L. DeWitt, Commander of the United States Western Defence Command, said, "We are now on the offensive in the Pacific. The Jap is on the run. The reoccupation of Kiska has cleared our shortest highway to the Japanese Empire."

While American and Canadian troops, some clearly disappointed at not finding some Japanese to kill, turned their big guns seaward in the possibility the enemy might return, speculation deepened as to just what became of the Japanese garrison of perhaps 8,500 men or more.

Withdrew on August 8th.

Gen. DeWitt expressed the belief the Japanese completed their withdrawal on Aug. 8, escaping in submarines or barges, and added that he thought it doubtful many ever reached land.

Admiral Kinkaid said United States surface craft shelled "objects" in the fog at night "after the Japanese began their evacuation of Kiska," and added that "we believe we sank some of their ships, but this cannot be confirmed."

(In his announcement Saturday night Prime Minister King revealed that units of the Royal Canadian Navy were helping the United States fleet in patrolling these Northern Pacific waters, but did not enlarge on their role there.

This was the first indication the Japanese may have been attacked in their flight.

Gen. DeWitt tauntingly asked "Where is the Japanese fleet?" as he interpreted the significance of the occupation. His question paralleled that of the Japanese after Pearl Harbor: "Where is the United States fleet?"

CORDELL HULL ARRIVES IN QUEBEC

New Zealand Soldier Writes of Visit To Sacred Scenes in Jeruselem

Miss Pearl Hamilton, 190 Ann Street, Belleville recently received from Signalman Nick Braid of the New Zealand Signals School, 2 N. Z. E. F. Base, M. E. F. dated some months before. He tells of his visit to the city of Jerusalem and to the sites associated by the Bible and tradition with the life of Jesus. The letter reads:

"Just a short note to tell you a little of a trip I made to Jerusalem last week. We arrived in Jerusalem in the early morning and went straight to the hotel for breakfast. After a wash we went to Bethlehem and visited the birthplace of Jesus. There is a church built over the original stone stable but all the places of interest are plainly marked. The manger is still there and has an altar near it called the Altar of the Wise Men.

"The birthplace of Jesus is marked by a font of holy water and a star called the Star of Bethlehem. On the way back we passed the well of the three Wisemen, Rachel's tomb and the plain where David slew Goliath and overcame the Philistines.

Mount of Olives

Next we visited the Mount of Olives and saw where Christ preached the sermon on the Mount. Here also is the spot where Christ ascended to Heaven and there is a stone at the hightest point of the Mount, now covered by a temple, which has the footprint of Christ upon it. Our next trip was to the Garden of Gethsemane, where there is a beautiful Roman Catholic Church. Here also is the tomb of the Virgin Mary. The Garden has been preserved as best they could as it was in Christ's day. Leaving Gethsemane we passed through Bethany, the home of Mary and Martha, sisters of Lazarus, and then passed the inn of the Good Samaritan. This place is in the advanced stages of decay now but quite possibly it [illegible] inn referred to by our Lord in His Parable. We then came to the Apostles' well which is still used by the shepherds and the camel caravans as they come to Jerusalem.

The Wilderness

After seeing this well we were soon out of the hills or actually out of the wilderness of Judea and believe me, it was a wilderness. We then came across the brook Chidreth to Jericho where we saw the remains of old Jericho at the foot of Mount Temptation. All that remains are the walls and they are badly broken down, very unlike the walls of old Jerusalem which are quite intact. Mount Temptation is the mountain where the Lord went up and was tempted by the Devil. Halfway up is a monastery occupied by Franciscan monks. The foundations are laid on top for a church and were started in the last war but abandoned for lack of funds. Here at the foot of the mountains is Elisha's fountain which supplies all Jericho with household and irrigation water.

River Jordan

Leaving Jericho we came to the River Jordan and walked across the bridge into Transjordan and were in another country. The River Jordan is very swift but where it flows into the Dead Sea it is 1,300 feet below sea level. The Jordan keeps flowing and the Dead Sea never rises yet the latter has no outlet. Queer but true. We went to the Dead Sea and saw the salt and potash works and had a taste of the sea before returning to Jerusalem. The next day we spent in the old city of Jerusalem. This part is entirely enclosed by the great stone walls of massive stones and has eight gates on it and it was built by David.

Church of Holy Sepulchre

"Our first visit was to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre which is built over Calvary. This is a very old building and contains the tomb of Christ as well as other relics such as the hole where the cross was put. Also visible is the great crack in the rock caused by the earthquake in the Crucifixion day. We visited Christ's prison and all the various altars in this church which is used by Roman Catholics, Greek Orthodox, Armenians, Jews and Moslems. Apparently the Jews and Moslems accept Christ as only a prophet and saint but not as the Son of God and Saviour.

"We then had a walk through the city and looked at the bazaars and native quarters and then had a ride of a donkey.

"Am enclosing a few olive leaves picked on the Mount of Olives from a tree which is said to be nearly 2,000 years old and quite possibly was there in Christ's time.

Well, I'll sign off, wishing you all the best. Give my best regards to all at home. I hope this note hasn't bored you. Sincerely.

Fibre Cheese Boxes Stand Up Says Chief Grader

Vigorous denial of a story emanating from Kingston claiming that weatherproof fibre cheese boxes were not standing up as well as the wooden variety was seen here this week as the result of a letter received by Chief Dairy Grader J. L. Irwin, from Mr. Joseph Burgess, Chief, Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Service, Montreal.

The Kingston story, which was carried in several farm papers stated the new fibre boxes now being used to a great extent in place of the wooden variety, were not standing up and that bands were easily broken. Also the boxes were being broken in transit, it was claimed.

Mr. Burgess claimed that as a result of the story, Thos. J. Hicks had interviewed all foremen of large cheese warehouses in Montreal and had learned that generally speaking the fibre boxes stood up better than the wooden ones; that there were less repairs and also that any broken bands were very easily repaired.

The investigation revealed that very few of the bands on the new boxes were broken, the percentage being very small. R. P. Spencer, Chief Cargo Inspector, confirmed the findings.

"I cannot understand why such a report was published, or where it could possibly have originated," stated Mr. Irwin when commenting upon the Montreal communication. "As far as I can see there is nothing like the breakage as is the case with wooden boxes."

In view of the fact that the necessary wooden boxes cannot be procured, Mr. Irwin claimed that the cheese industry was fortunate in being able to secure the substitute make. Approximately 50 percent. of the boxes being used in the Central Ontario district are of the new fibre variety, according to Mr. Irwin. He added that they were more compact and were lighter, thus effecting a saving in shipping costs.

Speaking specifically of the Kingston situation, Mr. Irwin claimed that not over five or six boxes of the 1,200 cheese graded weekly had shown any signs of damage.

BRITISH BOMBERS RAIN DESTRUCTION ON BERLIN

2,000 Tons Bombs Poured on Capital In Saturation Raid

Indicated Allies Opening Supreme Offensive Against Berlin

58 BOMBERS LOST

(By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 24. (AP)— R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. squadrons smashed at Berlin last night in a raid twice as heavy as any capital every suffered, casting down about 2,000 long tons of explosives and incendiaries, and opening of the supreme offensive to "Hamburg" Hitler's seat of power was indicated.

Fifty-eight bombers went down before German anti-aircraft defences in this historic assault, the Air Ministry announced, the largest number ever lost in any one night. Seven of the missing planes were Canadian.

Devastation was plainly on a scale comparable to the power of the attack. One returning pilot said the smoke boiled up three miles.

The Air Ministry's story of the operation did not mention the size of the raiding force except to say the assault was twice as heavy as any made before on any capital and that it was "in very great strength". Canadian air headquarters said the full weight of the R.C.A.F. bomber group was thrown into the raid.

The previous heaviest raid on any capital was the March attack on Berlin in which 900 long tons—the standard of 2,240 pounds—were dropped.

The scope of the raid indicated the Allied Command was opening its supreme offensive against the German capital — free of heavy attacks since the end of March—on a scale comparable to that which crumpled Hamburg into a heap of rubble.

The Air Ministry communique said bombers attacked "in very great strength."

"The assault was delivered in clear weather just before midnight and preliminary reports indicated the bombing was highly concentrated," the builtin added.

Fifty-five bombers, 10 of them Canadian, were lost on the double attack on Pilsen in Czechoslovakia and Mannheim, Germany, on the night of April 16.

5,000 Fliers Take Part

A dispatch from Lowell Bennett, American correspondent at a Midlands bomber base, said "some 5,000 veteran fliers from over the Empire and some American volunteers" took part, dropping the bomb load in 42 minutes.

(On the basis of 10-man crews, this indicated more than 500 heavy bombers hit the capital.)

Reporting strong formations over Berlin, the German communique said "the reorganized air defences prevented a concentrated attack upon the city and shot down 60 multi-engined bombers, according to reports thus far."

"Explosive and incendiary bombs caused destruction in residential quarters and to public buildings and hospitals," it added. "The civilian population suffered losses."

Full Weight of The Canadian Bomber Group Thrown Into Berlin Assault

GREAT OPPOSITION

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 24 (CP Cable)—The full weight of the Canadian bomber group was thrown against Berlin last night as part of the R.A.F.'s greatest assault on the German capital.

The cost of the all-Canadian portion of the Berlin attack was seven R.C.A.F. bombers which did not return. They were included in the 58 listed by the Air Ministry as missing It was also learned that one R.C.A.F. fighter is missing from the night's operations.

There was no mention of the number of Canadian squadrons taking part in the Berlin attack in the official attack, but it was likely that some scores of Canadian bombers were involved and some hundreds of air crew.

Whole Group Working

"The whole group was working last night," said one source.

The official R.C.A.F. communique, which in the main duplicated the Air Ministry announcement, mentioned only "squadrons of heavy bombers of the R.C.A.F. bomber group" being on the operation, this followed the usual practice of not being too specific.

In support of the bomber command's attacks, R.C.A.F. Mosquitoes took part in widespread intruder operations, attacking enemy airfields in northern Germany and occupied territory.

On the Berlin raid the Canadians met greater fighter opposition than ever before, but they fought their way through to the target where preliminary reports indicated the bombing was "highly concentrated."

Weather Clear

The weather was clear for the operation. While this factor was helpful in bombing it was also beneficial to the night-fighter defence.

In addition to the Canadian group fliers, there were also hundreds of Canadians scattered through the R.A.F. crews going to Berlin.

While the Berlin total losses were the highest since 55 were lost April 16 during the Mannheim-Pilsen raids, the Canadian group has had greater losses than the seven which did not return last night. For instance, 10 R.C.A.F. aircraft were lost in the Mannheim-Pilsen raids, and 13 did not return from the Aug. 17 raid on Peenemunde.

Burned as Never Before

Berlin burned as never before, Canadian crews reported on returning to their bases.

Columns of dense smoke rose in great whirling clouds for more than 10,000 feet.

Flames were visible from 150 miles.

One raider was PO. Tom Kneale of (320 Drew St.) Woodstock, Ont., who was on his fourth operation.

German Soldiers Amazed at Cool Bearing of Canadians Under Fire

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
Canadian Press War Correspondent

British Hospital in North Africa, Aug. 12. (Delayed) —(CP)—The cool bearing of Canadian troops marching into enemy fire is beyond the understanding of the German soldier, trained to take every advantage of natural cover and expose himself as little as possible.

The Canadians, at least the men of the Carleton and York regiment from New Brunswick, walked casually into the attack area, their rifles and Tommy guns slung nonchalantly over their shoulders.

Most of them, says Lieut. Harry Barton of Saint John, who is an infantryman himself, wear their steel helmets but a number don't bother. Around their heads are wrapped what he calls "gypsy hats"—handkerchiefs and parachute silk.

Barton admitted it's enough to make the toughest professional soldier stand agape.

"Sometimes the boys curse a bit when the bullets whine around, crack over their heads like whips and kick up the dirt in front of them", he said. "If they have to climb a hill to engage the enemy up there, the boys usually walk slowly to the foot of the hill despite fire, saving their strength for the climb.

"The reason they don't get down on the ground when the enemy's banging away at them is that the shooting sounds just as bad if they are crouching doing nothing as it does if they're walking".

Burton said some incidents that occur during such advances are almost incredible.

"We are going strong out, every man well spaced from the one next to him", he said. "Sometimes while the bullets are flying around, one fellow will ask another ten or fifteen feet away to throw him a box of matches for a light.

"I know one fellow, carrying a tin of beans in his pocket, who decided to eat them on the way into attack. Walking all the time, he opened the can with his bayonet, puring the beans into him and remarked: 'If I don't eat 'em now, I may never get another chance'."

"The Canadians' conduct really throws the Germans off", added Barton.

Conference Plans 'Forward Action On Global Scale'

BOMBER FLEETS HAMMER TWO KEY RAILWAY POINTS

14 Enemy Planes Are Downed in Blazing Air Battle Near Bari

NAPLES HARD HIT

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 24 — (AP) — Allied bomber fleets have hammered two more key railway points near Naples without meeting a single Axis defender, while other bombers sweeping in from the Middle East struck Bari on the Southeastern coast, downing 14 enemy planes in a blazing air battle, it was announced today.

None of the bombers was lost.

No enemy fighters rose to challenge Mitchells slamming a load of bombs by daylight into Battipaglia, south of Naples, nor Wellingtons that pounded Bagnoli in Naples' environs before dawn today.

Fighters had a similar experience of no opposition in a sweep over Sardinia and a sharp raid upon enemy barracks and factory buildings at Cagliari.

Bombs Rip Tracks

Strings of bombs ripped up the tracks at Battipaglia and some large explosions were seen on the east side of the main yards. Warehouses were hit and fires started. Ground forces threw up a heavy curtain of anti-aircraft fire.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Wellingtons concentrated the attack upon Bagnoli into a few minutes.

Ground defences there were inactive, and the raid appeared to have taken the Italians by surprise. One crew saw a block-buster bomb explode in the middle of the railroad yards, with another following close to it.

Fighters struck their targets in Sardinia with bombs and cannonfire and "as far as I could see, not a single bomb was wasted," said one pilot.

One Allied plane was lost in all these operations.

The four-engined bombers hitting at Bari yesterday above the heel of the Italian boot met a heavy force of fighter planes, with their gunners claiming 14 of them. This raid was directed against the airdrome and freight yards, and hits were seen among hangars and rail yards despite obscuring clouds.

R.A.F. Wellingtons from the Middle East attacked barracks at Lindos on the island of Rhodes.

French Gunners Assist

While the air war thus continued, an Allied naval communique disclosed two French light cruisers, La Fantasque and Le Terrible, were operating with other Allied forces in the Mediterranean.

The vessels, in North African ports when the Allies landed last November, were originally listed as destroyers, are of 2,569 tons and carry five 5.5 inch guns. On trial runs Le Terrible attained a record speed of 45 knots.

A sister ship, La Troimphant, was last reported operating with Fighting French naval forces.

(Today's Italian communique broadcast by Rome and recorded by The Associated Press claimed German planes raiding Palermo in Sicily hit 11 merchant ships and 3 warships, and two merchantmen totalling 9,000 tons and two destroyers "may be considered sunk."

(Allied planes raided Bari, and localities on Naples' outskirts, the communique added, asserting five were shot down.)

Came as War Guests, Twins Now in RCAF

Toronto, Aug. 24. (CP)— Nearly four years ago, when Donald and Stanley Rawlins were 14, they came to Canada as war guests from bombed London.

Now the twins are in the R.C.A.F., Stanley in air crew and Donald in a ground job because his eyes did not measure up. They think their enlistment will help pay the debt they feel they owe Canada.

After they enlisted yesterday they received a cable from their family congratulating them on their decision.

"Hit Hitler First" Remains Cornerstone Of Quebec Conference

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 24 — (CP)—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill prepared to close the books today on the grim business that brought them to Quebec — planning a ruthless, unremitting attack on Axis positions in Asia and Europe to enforce unconditional surrender.

Their scheduled last act is joint disclosures, in broad and general outline of the new strategic directives for Allied field commanders around the world; but details of these sealed orders will become known only through developments in battle.

Brendan Bracken, the British Minister of Information, put the Quebec conference in historical perspective last night when he said "Military decisions of the utmost importance have been taken" and suggested the St. Lawrence River would become known, on a world scale, as a river of "liquid history."

Quebec to be Famous

It was one way of suggesting that the Quebec conference will be known to history as the "Quebec Victory Conference."

"In years to come Quebec is going to be famous for the decisions reached here," said Mr. Bracken.

"To follow up those decisions you will have to get yourselves accredited as war correspondents."

The military plans are based upon the checked and double-checked work of scores of high-ranking army, navy and air force officers who have been working night and day, between 300 and 400 staff officers, technical aides and a small army of clerks and stenographers.

Although secrecy surrounds the detailed plans, there are certain fixed points or verities of the war that indicate their outline. They are as follows:—

1. The "Hit Hitler First" cornerstone of the Roosevelt-Churchill policy, set at their first strategic conference in Washington in December 1941, remains unchanged. The attack against Germany itself will be stepped up until the Nazi keystone of the Axis arch crumbles in defeat. Then will come Japan's turn in the Pacific.

Calls For New, Bold Strokes

2.—The war events of the last few weeks, since the Roosevelt-Churchill conference in Washington in May, call urgently for new and bold strokes, in the hope of shortening appreciably the war in the European theatre. Tottering Italy, the wavering of the satellite nations in the Balkans, the rising tempo of the resistance movement in France—all invite new allied air and land smashes. The Russian summer offensive cries aloud for a western companion-piece to clamp the pincers of death upon Hitler in Europe.

3.—Japan is on the retreat in the Pacific and the flow of implements of war from the Allied arsenals in Canada, Britain and especially the United States is reaching a point where intensified assaults in the Far East can be made without prejudice to the war in Europe, particularly air assaults on Japan's, long, tenuous supply lines. Kiska was one example.

Strategy in the Pacific occupied much of the time of the two leaders yesterday, with Mr. Bracken announcing it was "a very, very important part of the conference" as a whole.

The President and Prime Minister had a long conference with Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, and Harry Hopkins, chairman o the Combined Munitions Assignment Board. The presence of Mr. Hopkins indicated the division of war material, as between the Pacific and European theatres, was under review, strengthening persistent reports the Pacific will start receiving a bigger share of planes, shipping, tanks and other weapons in the immediate future.

AUSSIES PROBE ENEMY'S DEFENCES NEAR SALAMAUA

Light Warships Moved 70 Miles Above Base to Bombard Finschhafen.

LITTLE OPPOSITION

Allied Headquarters, the Southeast Pacific, Aug. 24. (AP)—Australian troops, emerging into the Francisco River Valley after months of mountain fighting, probed the enemy's prepared defences today within two miles of the Salamaua, New Guinea, airdrome.

Today's communique from Allied headquarters reported the Australians crossed the river northeast of Old Bobdubi to a position due west of the air strip.

It was disclosed that Monday night, light warships, probably destroyers, moved more than 70 miles above Salamaua into the narrow part of Dampier Strait for a close range bombardment of the dock and supply dumps at Finschhafen on the Huon peninsula. A supply base for Salamaua.

Little Opposition

In the ground fighting, the Australians apparently encountered little oposition from the retreating Japanese in crossing the Francisco river, which flows south of the airdrome to empty into Bayern Bay a short distance from the southeastern edge of the field.

Beginning at the coast, the Allies control ridge positions looking down on the river valley and have begun to shell Japanese positions around the airdrome and before the isthmus town of Salamaua.

In the air, far-ranging bombers flew to Kendari, Dutch Celebes, which had been raided on at least two other occasions, and bombed the airdrome and town.

PIPING CHAMPION

Perth, Scotland, Aug. 24. (CP)—Pipe Maj. Neil Sutherland of the Calgary Highlanders won the Silver Cup and Piping Championship in an open competition at the Highland Rames here in which leading professional pipers from all parts of Scotland as well as pipe majors from famous Scottish regiments competed.

SABOTAGE WAVE SWEEPS DENMARK, GERMANS JITTERY

State of Emergency Declared in Six Danish Towns by Nazis.

RIFLES SEIZED

By JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Aug. 24 —(AP)— Increasing difficulty in subduing a "people's revolt" against the German occupation caused six Danish cities to be placed under a state of emergency today, it was reported here today.

Riots between the Danes and German soldiers and new sabotage against transport lines and factories serving the Nazis resulted in emergency decrees for Aarhus, Aalborg, Odense, Svendborg, and Korsoer, said dispatches reaching the Swedish press.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet said in an account from Malmo that during the weekend the Germans rushed tanks, armored vehicles and about 40,000 soldiers into Copehagen in anticipation of general disorders.

Clashes Result in 50 Deaths

Latest reports said clashes between Danish soldiers and the Germans in Odense resulted in at least 50 deaths. Twenty Germans were reported killed in Svendborg.

A series of sabotage acts occurred during the past 24 hours and the newspaper Stockholms Tidningen said the biggest blow was at Aarhus, where an electric power plant serving much of the Jutland area was blasted.

A machine tool factory was said to have been dynamited at Copenhagen.

The Svenska Dagbladet reported that thousands of weapons were stolen by Danes who looted a German arsenal of Sopenhagen, despite a heavy guard.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—A state of emergency has been declared in six Danish towns by German occupation officials in an effort to combat a wave of sabotage climaxed in the last few hours by the theft of several thousand rifles from a Nazi arsenal and the destruction of a power plant, a British broadcast recorded by the United States Broadcast Intelligence Service said today.

ALLIES ADVISED STEPS TAKEN TO MAKE ROME OPEN

Batteries Ordered Not To Fire and Planes Directed Not to Defend Capital

NOTIFY HOLY SEE

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—Stefani, Italian News Agency, said in a broadcast today Italy has formally advised the British and American governments of steps taken to demilitarize Rome with the view of having the Italian capital treated as an open city. The broadcast was recorded by Reuters News Agency.

A Rome radio broadcast Aug. 14 said the government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio had decided to declare Rome an open city without further delay.

The broadcast added that such a decision had been communicated to the Allies through the Vatican two two weeks previously.

It said the decision had been made because of the repetition of Allied air raids on the city. American bombers first attacked the Italian capital July 19 and returned there on Aug. 13.

Today's Stefan-broadcast declared steps had already been taken to neutralize defensive installations and orders had been given to anti-aircraft batteries not to fire on planes over the city, while Italian interceptor planes were directed not to defend the capital.

Shefani added the Italian government has asked "the Swiss government and the Holy See to notify the governments of London and Washington that the Italian government had adopted the following measures:-

"Defensive installations of the city of Rome have been put out of action and the order has been given to the anti-aircraft batteries not to open fire and to the fighters not to operate over Rome."

"The transfer of the Italian and German commands as well as troops is under wayy so that only a garrison charged with the maintenance of public order will be left in the city.

"The railway centre of Rome will no longer be used for military transport or for entraining and detraining of troops. It will thus be a simple transit line. Preparations are being made for the transfer of military installations and of arms and munitions factories out of the city."

Following the Italian government's previous declaration of Rome, the Allies intimated no notification of the neutralization of the Italian capital had been received.

There was no immediate information as to whether the latest communication from Italy had been officially received by British authorities.

Unanimity Marks Strategic Decisions In War Upon Axis

Absence of Russia Made Clear as Most Of Time Taken Up With Japan

U-BOAT BEATEN

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 24 — (CP) — The Quebec Conference has ended and "the necessary decisions have been taken to provide for the forward action of the fleets, armies and airforces" of Britain and the United States, it was announced today by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

On the eighth day of the portentous conference, the two Allied leaders were able to announce the drafting of unanimous strategic plans for relentless, unremitting war against the Axis in Europe.

Details of the victory blueprint necessarily remain secret until revealed on the field of battle but "the military decisions of the Chiefs of Staff turned very largely upon the war against Japan and the bringing of effective aid to China," the two master strategists announced.

Facts Revealed to Press

At a press conference on the terrace of the old Citadel 400 feet above the St. Lawrence River, these facts were revealed:—

1. Another strategic conference will be held before the end of the year in addition to any tri-partite meeting that can be arranged with Premier Stalin of Russia.

2. Decisions have been reached with respect to recognition of the French Committee for National Liberation and joint action may be expected late this week by several nations.

3. Agreement has been reached on other political issues arising out of military operations. They were not enumerated but it was taken for granted they concerned Italy and the satellite states in the Balkans.

4. The military decisions may be expected to be unfolded quickly.

5. The absence of Russia was made abundantly clear by the admission that Japan occupied much of the time of the military leaders. Russia is not a belligerent against Japan and could not be expected to sit in on deliberations of that sort.

Full Offensive Action

6. The time has now arrived when the factories, shipyards and munition plants of Canada, Britain and the United States, along with removal of the submarine menace, have made it possible to bring full, offensive action against the Axis throughout, the world.

7. The U-boat warfare in the Atlantic has been changed from the debit to a credit side of the Allies ledger.

8. The Quebec conference was the sixth between Roosevelt and Churchill and the site was the best yet.

The press conference, at which a joint statement was issued by the two leaders, was held on the terrace

JAMES H. CARTER PROMINENT PICTON CANNER KILLED

70 YEARS OLD

Picton, Aug. 24—James H. Carter, prominent canner and president of Waupoos Canning Co., died in hospital here Monday night, the result of injuries received in an automobile accident seven hours earlier. The car he was driving failed to make a sharp turn on Highway No. 33, three miles east of Picton. He had driven down Chuckery Hill, which is unusually steep and very rough. The car smashed off two guard rails before going into a deep culvert and overturning. Keith Roblin, accompanied by his nephew, Keith Matbresh, Toronto, was proceeding to his cottage on the Glenora Road and was quickly on the scene, pulling Mr. Carter from the car, which had caught fire.

70 Years of Age

Mr. Carter, who was 70 years of age, was born in Tyendinaga township and resided there until 21 years of age. He had learned the art of cheesemaking there and leaving the farm operated Cloverdale cheese factory for three years and later at Cherry Valley for a similar period. He also spent a year as cheesemaker at Kingsville. Returning to Prince Edward, he bought the Waupoos cheese factory and operated it several years.

Active on Cheese Board

He was active on the local cheese board and bought for a Montreal firm. He also owned and operated a large fruit farm at Waupoos. In 1913, in partnership with H. Bidell, he built Waupoos canning factory and since had managed this large plant, handling a variety of products. He also operated South Bay canning factory for three years along with Mr. Bidell and the late Fred Hepburn.

Ardent Golfer

He was an ardent golfer and a member of the Anglican Church.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Alice Maud Coulter, three daughters; two sons, Milton of Toronto and Edmund, of Picton.

Broadcast by Churchill Is To Be Made Shortly

Quebec, Aug. 24—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill will make a world broadcast before he leaves Canada, possibly this weekend, it was reported here today on high authority.

At the conclusion of the Quebec conference, Churchill will go fishing for a few days and his movements after that are uncertain. It is not known whether he will go to Washington before returning to London.

Japanese Fleet Has Lost 147 Cruisers And Destroyers Since Entering War

New York, Aug. 24. (AP)— The Japanese fleet, on the basis of United Nations communiques has lost 147 cruisers and destroyers since entering the war—just 45 short of the total credited to it as built or building in a report to the United States Senate Naval Affairs Committee at the outbreak of hostilities.

Two days after the Pearl Harbor attack, figures obtained by the Senate Committee showed Japan had 46 cruisers built and 10 building and 125 destroyers built and 11 building.

United Nations communiques since December 7, ~~1941,~~ have claimed destruction of 45 Japanese cruisers, 92 destroyers and ten other naval vessels listed as being in either of the two categories.

The heavy toll of such vessels while protecting supply routes may have been a factor in the quiet withdrawal of the Nipponese from their last North American foothold at Kiska, before invading Canadian-American troops arrived.

In the Aleutians, the Japanese lost 7 destroyers trying to safeguard cargoes of ammunition, fuel, provisions and men.

In the South Pacific, Japan lost 96 warships, including 15 cruisers and 42 destroyers, in the first nine months of the Solomon campaign ending May 8.

The price of keeping open the supply lanes was demonstrated in March when allied air power smashed an entire convoy of 22 big ships in the Bismarck Sea, exacting a toll of seven destroyers, three cruisers and twelve transports.

The Japanese apparently have begun to rely on barges and small coastal vessels, many under 500 tons, to supply island outposts in the Southwest Pacific, a possible indication that allied attacks have cut into the cruisers and destroyer strength available for convoy duty.

FLOODED BACK YARDS INCONVENIENCE POLICE

Monday night's deluge of rain kept police circles in Belleville of a routine nature although the night patrol experienced considerable difficulty in negotiating their patrol beats owing to the flooded areas behind main street business houses. Police were called to the New Service Lunch, however, where a metal serviette container was reported to have been stolen by customers. Investigations revealed the container had been taken by two men and two women customers and could be located in Trenton. Police are satisfied the article will be promptly returned.

CITY HALL CLOCK IS AGAIN STRIKING

Silenced for the better part of three days as the result of a breakdown in the striking machinery, the bell which tolls out the hours on the clock at the City Hall came back to life again late last evening. Last Saturday trouble was experienced with the weight which controls the striking apparatus and as a result the town clock was mute with the exception of the police calls which are controlled electrically.

City Hall janitor, Mr. George Crosker, with the assistance of another workman, was responsible for getting the striking apparatus back into operation again.

German Bomb Missed Churchill by Inches

Quebec, August 24.—(CP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill missed death by inches when a Nazi bomb demolished the Treasury building next door to 10 Downing Street, killing 12 people, and smashed part of the Churchill residence.

The story was never published in Britain but it was told here today by an official closely connected with the incident.

One evening in November 1940, during the German blitz on London, Mr. Churchill, Brendan Bracken, British Information Minister, and Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair were in the dining room at 10 Downing Street, the Prime Minister's home.

A bomb fell on the Treasury building, demolishing that structure. The explosion blasted out the kitchen wall in the Churchill home.

None of the British cabinet ministers had gone to the bomb shelters. Two domestics in the establishment were ordered to go but refused flatly because "Mr. Churchill needs his dinner", the informant here said.

And so the dinner continued. The cook sered Welsh rarebit.

Thunderstorm and High Wind Cause Much Inconvenience Throughout City

Hydro Service Disrupted in Some Areas by Fallen Branches.

TREE FALLS ON HOME

Forecast thunder showers which according to the mteorologists should have occurred over the Bay of Quinte district over the week-end, really descended in earnest on the Belleville area early Monday evening and continued intermittently until approximately 4:30 Tuesday morning.

According to records kept at the Belleville Water Filtration Plant 1.38 inches of rain fell in the brief spurts up until midnight, while residents claimed that almost as much rain fell from midnight on until the rain clouds cleared shortly before daylight. Catch basins and storm sewers proved insufficent to cope with the torrents of rain which fell around nine o'clock and streets were awash as the water ran curb depth through the downtown section and on the inclines.

Rainfall in the district to the north did not appear to be as heavy as was received in Belleville during the pre-midnight hours but heavy rain fell during the early morning.

Strong Wind

A strong wind which swept the rain in veritable sheets across the open spaces was responsible for breaking off at least a dozen large limbs in various parts of the city, while small limbs broken were particularly numerous. Hydro service was disrupted in some sections, while in one instance on Cedar Street a large partly deadened tree was uprooted to crash onto the roof of the residence occupied by F. C. Fairman.

"I had sought to have the public works department remove the tree for some time," stated Mr. Fairman to the Ontario Intelligencer. "Last night the wind and rain removed it for me but in a manner rather unexpected." Damage to the residence was not as much as might have been expected, it was stated, the eave troughing being damaged and the shingles on the residence proper being damaged to cause leaks. A couple of pails were hung in the attic to catch the drip.

Tree Blocks Street

The city engineer's department reported large limbs off or trees down on Cedar, George, Station and Ann Street and on Victoria Avenue, the worst trouble being experienced in the Cedar Street district where a second tree blocked off the street.

Public works employees were out trying to clear away the worst of the damage but could not accomplish a great deal in the darkness and rain. Employees were out in full force this morning, according to City Engineer Charles Mott.

The Bell Telephone Company reported cable trouble caused through excessive rain. This trouble had all been cleared up this morning according to the plant department. No inconvenience was caused the telephone system by broken branches, it was stated.

Transformers Struck

It was an entirely different story with the Hydro, however. Manager of the Public Utilities Mr. O. H. Scott reported that broken trees and branches, together with the lightning had caused interruptions in the service in various parts of the city, some of the trouble being exceptionally difficult to handle.

Transformers in several parts of the city were struck by the sharp lightning, putting them out of commission, one in the neighborhood of the roundhouse causing considerable trouble. Broken branches were responsible for the other interruptions. Lights were off on the east side of Front Street at Victoria Avenue for a considerable period.

"Some of the interruptions caused through broken branches seemed to be very difficult to handle," reported Mr. Scott. "And employees were further inconvenienced by the severity of the storm."

Capitol Theatre Flooded

Trouble was also experienced at local theatres, the lights going out in the McCarthy and the orchestra put being flooded at the Capitol. Lights at the McCarthy were off for 70 minutes during which time the emergency equipment also dimmed and patrons were given emergency tickets and permitted to go home.

The storm also had its lighter side. After-theatre crowds trooping down Front Street were halted at the Victoria Avenue intersection by six inches of water rolling past the curb. Several misjudging the possible depth went in above their ankles as they sought to cross the street. One couple proceeded a short distance up Victoria Avenue in search of a better crossing only to have bystanders catcall "why don't you carry her across?" The girl's escort was equal to the occasion and taunted "Who do you think I am, Sir Walter Raleigh?"

Parked autos also came in for a drenching with owners having little luck in getting their vehicles started immediately after the heaviest downpour. Driving rain had dampened their plugs and ignition system.

Maj. A. Walters Now in Sicily

(By ROSS MUNRO)
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in Sicily, Aug. 13.—(Delayed)—(CP)— For more than two weeks a Canadian General Hospital has been operating here in the glaring heat of a base area with 18 doctors and 55 nurses working long hours treating British and Canadian wounded and sick coming back from the front.

This hospital is the first one to reach Sicily, landing July 19.

Since then it's been a day and night task. At the moment, with the fighting less severe, the work has slackened off considerably although the hospital has been kept busy with soldiers who have taken sick, suffering from dysentry, fever or malaria.

The doctors live under canvas but the nurses have a mess and sleeping quarters in a building. Even under the comparatively rough conditions everyone is in the highest spirits and the nursing sisters are particularly cheerful despite the hard work.

Doctors include Majors G. B. MacPherson, Guelph, Ont., and C. H. A. Walters, Belleville, Ont.

Capt. C. D. Daniel, Ingersoll, Ont., is a padre.

Ontario Sisters include Jessie Blair, Fallbrook; Jessie Coleridge, Owen Sound, Bernice Hampton, Gananoque, Alma Rath, London, Ont., and Dorothy Richards of Napanee, Ont.

Says Evacuation of School Children Planned by Germans

Berne, Aug. 24 (AP) — Germany is contemplating the evacuation of all school children from bomb-endangered areas, a dispatch from the German frontier to the Neue Zurcher Zeitung said today.

"Already a large number of schools have been evacuated, particularly from Hamburg and Westphalia into Austria and southern Germany," the dispatch said.

Income Tax Office to Move To More Commodious Quarters

Employees of the Dickey Construction Company, Toronto, went to work last week at the former site of the Deacon Shirt Company on Front Street to begin a program of extensive alterations fitting the premises for occupation by the Dominion Income Tax branch office now situated at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets.

The premises will be completely altered for occupancy by the new tenants, the staff of the income tax office to occupy both first and second floors of the building. No date for the removal of the income tax office to the new premises has been set according to Major S. Gilmore, district inspector.

Insufficient accommodation for the staff of the income tax office was reason for the contemplated transfer of the branch to the new location. The income tax office has been at its present location for the past eleven years, coming there from Campbell Street at that time.

20,809 Persons in Belleville Now Possess Ration Cards Rationing Officer Tells Rotary

The story of consumer rationing as set up by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to assure Canadians an equal supply of available goods was told to Belleville Rotarians Monday noon when at their regular weekly luncheon meeting they were addressed by Mr. Orville J. Stanley, consumer rationing officer for Eastern Ontario with headquarters at Brockville.

Although there was an admitted shortage of some of the products rationed the "why" of rationing was to prevent selfish persons from seeking to buy more than was their rightful share. Inability to purchase automobiles and radios and the fact that there was now more money in the country had created a natural tendency for the population to eat more with the result rationing had become necessary.

Tribute to the voluntary workers of the local ration boards was paid by the speaker, who declared that these people giving unselfishly of their time had resulted in a great burden being taken off the division ration office.

27 Ration Boards

There were now 27 local ration boards in the Eastern Ontario region, he stated. The ration board serving Belleville district served approximately 27,500 people, while the number of persons in Belleville now having ration cards was 20,809. Through statistics available to ration board officials these men were able to present a very accurate picture of population trends, stated Mr. Stanley.

The duties of the local ration volunteer workers were many, he stated, and included giving out information regarding rationing questions and assisting board officials. They heard and discussed complaints received and superintended the distribution of temporary ration cards. Also they were responsible for the distribution of new ration books. Approximately 2,000 applications for new ration books were received by the Brockville office each month, Mr. Stanley said.

Problems Confronting Boards

The speaker cited the problems, which confronted ration board officials, when rationing was instituted several months ago and indicated that many changes in the system had been necessary to assure a smooth working organization. The honorary rationing system instituted prior to the present plan had worked very well but there had been "too many chisellers", he said.

Indicating the problems which confront the Brockville Board, Mr. Stanley stated that in his district there were 288,000 people from whose ration books there had formerly been approximately two and one half millions of ration coupons returned to headquarters each week. The coupon banking system had considerably relieved personnel of their problems of dealing with the loose coupons.

When applications for canning sugar were received rom across the Dominion last Spring, consumers requested a total of 300,000,000 pounds of sugar, it was stated. Against this demand there was available only 100,000,000 pounds which had to be divided equally. The decision was to allot 11 1-3 pounds of sugar to each resident with the distribution being put up to the local ration boards.

For Periods of Eight Months

Speaking of the new ration books to be distributed this week the speaker indicated these would be for a period of eight months. Provisions were made for ration book holders to use their old books (No. 2 Book) for certain commodities until they become obsolete some time in November. A helpful slogan for Canadians during the next few weeks would be "don't throw away your old ration book", he said.

Ration book holders were advised by Mr. Stanley to destroy all unused ration coupons rather than permit them to be turned over to produce dealers. In this they would be "helping the war effort", he said.

Local Wartime Prices and Trade Board representative, Mr. Dougall Marshall, introduced Mr. Stanley to the Rotarians with club appreciation being expressed by Mack Robertson. Past President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair in the absence of President Jack Deacon, who is confined to his home through illness, while Chas. Allin of Leamington acted as pianist in the absence of Leo Riggs. "Sandy" Burrows was songleader, while Harry Ackerman introduced the guests.

Net Proceeds $1,571

An up-to-date report of the proceeds of the recent Rotary Carnival was given by Mr. Hicks, who announced the net proceeds to be in the neighborhood of $1,571. Gross proceeds were approximately $1,986. A final Carnival financial statement would be presented next week, it was stated.

Belleville Kinsmen Club Reports Greatest Increase in New Members

Belleville Kinsmen Club showed the highest increase in new members of any club in the Dominion, President Orliff Lloyd reported to the club at their summer semester meeting held at the Quinte Hotel Monday evening. This fact was recently announced at the annual meeting of the Kinsmen National Council held at Windsor when it was revealed the Belleville Club had increased its membership during the past year from 30 to 53 active members, the largest increase of membership in Canada. President Lloyd and Kin. Matt Currie, Bill Dennis and Bert Farrar made reports as local delegates from the National Council.

$1,000,000 Worth Milk Sent to Britain

The reporting committee told the local members that since its inauguration the Kinsmen "Milk for Britain Fund" had sent over $1,000,000 worth of milk to alleviate the suffering of children in "bombed Britain." "I can tell you that next to the International Red Cross, the Kinsmen milk for Britain shipments receive priorities when it comes to metal containers and rights of shipment," President Lloyd reported to the meeting.

In the year 1942-'43, a total of 6,665,000 quarts of milk were sent overseas through the fund, an increase of two million quarts over the previous year and since being instituted an excess of eleven million quarts of milk have been sent to Britain, it was reported. The operating expenses have been less than 1.8 per cent., which is the lowest of any such war charity operated by a service club in Canada.

Claims Post-War Reconstruction Plans Neglected

"What impressed me," reported Kin. Matt Currie," was the lack of interest being shown by Canadian service clubs towards post-war reconstruction and rehabilitation. At Windsor we were told that Canadian service clubs as a whole were neglecting this important phase of our war planning."

It was also reported that the Kinsmen Clubs of Canada have affiliated themselves with the different branches of the I.O.D.E. in the sending of magazines to the various units fighting and otherwise. "The Kinsmen Clubs of Canada had contributed 70 per cent. of the magazines sent to armed camps or the Merchant Marine, but I'm sorry to say our Belleville club cannot share in this honor," stated Kin. Bill Dennis. He added that the National Council had asked for 25 new clubs in 1943-'44 and no doubt Belleville would be requested to sponsor new clubs in both Picton and Trenton within the year.

Kin. Harry Rollins presented $7.50 to be applied to the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" as a contribution from the members of the Kiwanis Club taken recently at a private party. Kin. Wally Berry, chairman of the dance committee, reported as to the progress of Thursday night's dance at the Park Pavilion, the entire proceeds of which will be given to the Kinsmen Fag Fund. "Practically everything, including services of the Commodores Orchestra and the Park Pavilion have been donated gratis to the cause and the provision of cigarettes for Belleville boys serving overseas. The night is Thursday," concluded Kin. Berry.

Kin. Bob Best acted as song leader, while Kin. Bill Dennis fattened the fine box coffers as sergeant-at-arms.

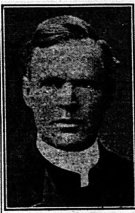
Dr. F.E. Malott Dies Suddenly In Bracebridge

Suffered Severe Heart Attack at his Summer Home in Muskoka.

Brockville, Aug. 24.—Rev. Dr. Francis Edwin Malott, former pastor of Wall Street United Church, Brockville, and a superannuated minister of the United Church of Canada since 1939, died at four o'clock Monday morning, in the Memorial Hospital, Bracebridge, Ontario, after having suffered a severe heart attack last week at his summer residence, Browning Island, Muskoka. Dr. Malott was taken to Bracebridge to receive treatment but failed to rally from the attack.

Born in Essex County, Ontario, he received his preliminary education there and in 1894 was received on trial for the ministry of the Methodist church. In 1894-95 he was stationed at West Lorne and then entered Victoria University, Toronto, from which he graduated in Arts in 1899 and as a Bachelor of Divinity in 1901. He was received in full connection and ordained in 1899 and at once appointed to Fairfield, in the London Conference, in which he labored for many years. Kippen was his next charge and among others were churches in Orillia, Chatham, and London, before he came east to serve at Bridge Street, Belleville. After seven years at Young United Church, Winnipeg, he came to Brockville in 1935, and served as pastor of Wall Street Church until his retirement in 1939. Thereafter he travelled extensively in the British West Indies and elsewhere and latterly he had served as supply minister at Mitchell, Ont. He was a member of various Masonic organizations, including the Royal Arch Masons, the Knights Templar, and the Scottish Rite.



THE LATE REV. DR. MALOTT

In addition to his second wife, formerly Miss Carolyn Haynes of St. Mary's, Ont., he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Edward Carnochan, of Buffalo, N.Y.; and Mrs. F. J. E. Rogers of Brockville.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. The funeral service will however, be held at Bracebridge, with burial at St. Mary's.

To many friends in Belleville the death of the Rev. Dr. Malott will bring sincere feelings of regret. During the seven years he was in charge of Bridge Street United Church, he was highly successful as a pastor and was popular and highly esteemed by the members of the congregation. Outside his congregation he also had a host of friends both old and young. In the work of the Y.M.C.A. and boys' work generally he took much interest and he was a popular and active member of the Belleville Kiwanis Club. As a recreation he enjoyed lawn bowling and golfing.

Dr. Malott served his church well; he was a friend to many and memory of him will long be cherished by those who enjoyed his friendship.

Public Careless With Wallets

Why citizens have become so careless with their wallets and purses and leave them with reckless abandon in eating houses and other public places to subsequently report them stolen is something that has become a mystery to city police of a late date.

Hardly a day passes that does not result in some citizen reporting his or her wallet or purse as being lost and in practically every incident the loss can be attributed to the direct carelessness of the owner, police are convinced after hearing the woeful tales of the owners.

"One would think citizens would protect wallets, which invariably carry their cash, National Registration card and other valuable identification such as driver's licences and such like", pointed out police officials today as two such cases were reported to police headquarters here during th past 24 hours.

Germans in Retreat at Kharkov

Russians have broken the Hun resistance at Kharkov and again Hitler is forced into retreat before the pressure of the victorious Russian armies.

This third summer is the worst in Hitler's history on the eastern front. In the first year he carried on, into Russia but fell short as Moscow stood defiant and held like adamant. The Russians came back in the winter offensive and recovered much lost ground. In the late spring of 1941 Hitler drove forward in a desperate attempt to reach the oilfields of the Caucasus for his war machine. Though the Crimea fell, Hitler was trapped in the Caucasus, he lost before the pressure of the Russian armies and all the while Russia drained Hitler's martial strength before Stalingrad, which stands an eternal name to Russian courage and valor. There Hitler suffered the greatest defeat that had ever befallen German arms in all history. He lost a great army. His third spring drive started a little earlier this year but in spite of a spurt to launch an offensive, he was pushed back and now the ancient Ukraine capital of Kharkov has been redeemed from German arms.

A break is reported in the Nazi lines in the Lower Donets. The third year has been a dismal year in its absence of Hitler victories and its many defeats.

Another victory for Stalin and the Russians. Another defeat for Hitlerism. Another proof to the world that Hitlerism is doomed with its creator. Another time despite a great expenditure of life and limb by the Germans Hitler has failed.

This year with the remaining months is ominous to the Germans.

Mr. Roosevelt's Pledge

Just five years ago, the year before the war broke out, President Roosevelt pledged the people of the United States would not stand idly by if the domination of Canadian soil were threatened by any other empire. He was speaking at Queen's University.

Everyone can tell how well Mr. Roosevelt and the people of the United States have fulfilled that pledge since Hitler by his attempt to dominate the world marched into Poland as the first step of desecrating the soil of many nations.

Mr. Roosevelt has been a true friend of the democratic way of life.

When Hitler threw his battalions, guns and planes against Poland in 1939 he began his attempt to dominate the free nations of the world. Mr. Roosevelt has implemented his pledge truly and a world of nations knows him a strong defender of the free and peace-loving nations of the world. For Hitler is a world enemy and his evil would encompass the earth if freemen all did not unite to crush the infamous desecrator of human life and of the noble institution of liberty.

Mr. Roosevelt was one farseeing statesman who recognized the awful peril such an unprincipled autocrat as Hitler could become. He did not have to wait until war broke out to realize that. And his tireless efforts to halt the aggressor's step will go down to Mr. Roosevelt's everlasting praise in a world of freemen.

At this time the United States President is in Canada on a great task, the furtherance of plans to smash the enemy. Canada greets him as it greets Mr. Churchill, the dominant figure of Britain who stemmed the aggression of Hitlerites in 1940 and who is soon, it is realized, to reap the victory with the aid of the freedom-loving states.

Through the fine co-operation of the United Nations the boundaries of Canada and other lands in the New World have been and are intact while maddened Hitler is within a narrowing circle, yielding before the Russians and shrinking and crumbling under R. A. F. and U. S. air attacks.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement back in 1938 when the world was becoming anxious over the boasts and threats of Mussolini and Hitler was the promise which has shown in lend-lease, in the magnificent production of war goods and civilian goods by the United States in the war to eliminate Hitler and in the power of American arms.

Keep Himmler in Mind

When Nazi criminals are being considered the Montreal Herald hopes that the beginning is at hand of a harsh and just retribution for Hitler's hangman-in-chief, the sinister head of the Gestapo, Heinrich Himmler.

This foul Nazi is unlikely to be forgotten when criminals of the Axis are being collected. This conscienceless criminal who loves persecutions of the most atrocious kind has even the chief Naxis in awe and dread it is said of his power but that won't save him for he and his minions, the persecutors in the Gestapo, will be knocked over as quickly as Hitler when the moment strikes.

Himmler is the arch spy, cold and callous. In the days of Nero the degenerate Roman emperor, there were spies kept in all the noble households. But Himmler's spies not only peep in on a whole nation, Germany, but on Italy and the overrun lands.

Himmler and such men drive on to their doom. Their crimes are so enormous they cannot escape themselves and the judgment of the world will not allow such a man to avoid the retribution which is certain to be his.

His name is execrated everywhere in Europe for he outdoes the monsters of the past in his deeds of hate.

Himmler is one of the creations or results of Nazism, the foul brood that came to life and birth in Germany.

Raising Ships

Detroit News.

In the past, jewels and bullion and even ivory have been the lure. It may be that mining the sea and river bottoms for metal in the shape of sunken hulls will become a large post-war activity. The Russians in the one year of 1936 raised 53 vessels, among them a British sub, sunk off Kronstadt in 1919. With improved salvage methods and an abundance of victims of the present war to be worked on, an enterprise essentially romantic even in its quest for prosaic steel may become a business.

Cats is Cats

Brantford Expositor.

There is no use disputing facts—or cats. If, as is averred on immortal literary authority, pigs is pigs, cats is even more so. Our private guess is that the reason some folk dislike cats is that these lithe and wily animals give them an uncomfortable feeling of being slighted. A dog will flatter one's vanity by its constant and often unwarranted adulation. A cat will descend to no such servile fawning. It maintains not only its dignity but its independence. The ancient Egyptians, an observant and wise people, recognized the catty characteristics long centuries ago and accepted them with admiration and respect. That is why Ubasti, the Cat Goddess, was one of the most reverenced of all the many dieties of the Land of the Nile.

READING THE FUTURE

I can read the future! When the war is won
Boys will still be graded as their tasks they've done.
Good will still be rated by the product made;
Character be reckoned by the grit displayed.
Card or palm or crystal, this will still be plain:
Merit will be searched for, sometimes long in vain.
I'm no fortune teller, but I can foresee
If the stuff be shoddy, cheap its price will be.
Will the peace bring changes? Yes, perhaps a few.
Borders will be altered; pacts be made anew.
But in what men call honor, what adorns a name
What is good and evil will remain the same.
War may batter buildings, level wall and spire,
But no war will alter traits that men admire.

Hungary Endeavoring To Curtail Economic German Committments

Berne, Aug. 24 — (AP) — Hungary is endeavoring to curtail her economic commitments to Germany as another step in the policy of non-belligerence which she hopes to follow until an opportunity for getting out of the war presents itself, advices from Budapest indicated today.

So far, on the basis of available information, Hungary apparently sees little opportunity for any concrete peace action pending an Allied invasion of the Balkans.

Meanwhile, dispatches from Budapest to the Neue Zuercher Zeitung disclosed, German-Hungarian commercial negotiations which recently were postponed until September have "now been put off indefinitely."

Hungarians are reported greatly concerned over the possibility Budapest may be bombed and are trying to have it declared an open city. At the same time Hungarian government officials have petitioned Berlin for permission to withdraw several thousand troops doing police duty in the Ukraine which if granted, would bring home the last contingent of Hungarians from the Russian war theatre. All Hungarian combat troops were withdrawn from Russia last winter.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

Protected, 1942, by The George Adams Service.

Mr. Throttlebottom

When the constitution of the United States was drafted in 1787 the qualifications of the President were carefully prescribed.

"No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and has been fourteen years a resident within the United States".—Article II, Section 1.

But no corresponding qualifications for the Vice President were prescribed.

There was not a word in the original constitution about the qualifications of the Vice President.

The reason for this was simple. Under the original electoral system the electors did not vote for President and Vice President separately. They merely voted for persons to be President. The one who received the greatest number of votes for President, if the number was a majority of all the votes cast, became President, and the one who received the greatest number of votes after the choice of the President became Vice President.

Under that system it was not necessary to prescribe the qualifications for the Vice President, because the electors could not vote for anybody who was not qualified for President.

Strictly speaking, it is not correct to say that George Washington was elected unanimously. In those days the electors voted for two persons, but when they voted they had no way of knowing whether they were casting a particular vote for a President or a Vice President. George Washington actually received only half of the total votes cast. Every elector who voted for him, also voted for another person. In effect, Washington was the first-choice for President of every elector, although there probably is no way of proving that such was actually the case. Some of the electors may have preferred John Adams, who got the second largest number, or one of the other candidates voted for.

This system was changed in 1804 by the 12th amendment, which provided that the electors should vote for President and Vice President separately. The change was due to the famous tie between Jefferson and Burr in 1801, when Burr got as many electoral votes as Jefferson, although the electors never intended to elect him President.

When the change in the system was made it was necessary to prescribe the qualifications of the Vice President also. The 12th amendment provides, "But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice President of the United States".

The War Today—
Historians Will Record Capture Of Kharkov Key Russian Victory

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Kharkov and Kiska—alliteratively pleasant to the ear, and a fine brace of birds for the Allied bag.

The Red Army's capture of the great industrial and rail centre of Kharkov by storm undoubtely will be recorded by historians as one of the key victories of the Russo-German war.

The fall of this strategic Ukrainian city on Hitler's right flank vastly increases the menace to his entire battle-front in Russia. It brings him dangerously near to the day when he will have to withdraw his forces to fresh positions—if indeed he isn't already falling back towards the line of the Dnieper.

Deep Axis Break on Donets River

Fierce and bloody fighting is in progress, as the Nazis strive to hold and the Reds fling themselves on the invaders with fresh fury in an effort to capitalize the capture of Kharkov. The Russians announce a deep' break through on the Donets River front to the south, and if they can develop this they might precipitate a debacle.

However, that contingency is at the moment just wishful thought, and we shouldn't rush out into No-man's land in advance of the Red Army. The Germans are master soldiers and one would expect them to be able to maintain their line if they have to retreat. Their chances are doubly good, since the fall rains will start in two or three weeks and are likely the slow the Russian advance greatly.

Season Favors Russians

Still, after the rains will come the freezing, and then the Reds will continue their assaults, as they did last winter when they drove the Hitlerites back over vast areas. Hitler's position at the best isn't enviable, and if the Allies are able to invade Western Europe this fall, anything can happen.

What a change from a year ago, when Hitler drove clear through to Stalingrad and almost forced the mountain passes into the lower Caucasus. He started from Kharkov then—and broke his back at Stalingrad. From the moment of his failure there, his fate was sealed. The energy he wasted in trying to capture that industrial city represents one of the greatest blunders of the war.

White's District — August meeting of White's W.A. was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Wm. Yateman with eleven members and three visitors present. Over $6 was realized, including two donations of one dollar from Mrs. Sandercock and Mrs. Stimers and dues paid. A story of the Scripture lesson was given followed by prayer. Lead Poisoning Serious

Mineral poisoning is a hazard that may well be guarded against today, when so many men and women are active in so many industries. Lead is one of the minerals, and lead poisoning has been well recognized for many years. It can be avoided through proper use of methods which prevent the absorption of lead by those persons who work with it.

Lead poisoning, if neglected, gets to be a rather serious disorder, causing such symptoms as loss of weight, weakness and constipation. A person with lead poisoning may become very ill very suddenly with severe pains in the abdomen, sickness to the stomach and vomiting.

Exposure to large amounts of lead may cause a sudden attack of brain inflammation. In this brain inflammation, the patient may be lethargic or sleepy, or he may be excited and have convulsions.

Sometimes, a person may absorb lead in small amounts over a long period of time before symptoms suddenly develop. The first symptom in such cases may be paralysis of the muscles which support the wrists, producing what is known as wrist drop. However, if the patient is carefully questioned, it is usulaly found that he has over a period of time, had such symptoms as constipation, weakness and loss of weight. He also may have had attacks of mild pain in the abdomen, which he attributed to indigestion.

The mere fact that a person works with lead does not mean that he must absorb it, or allow it to get into his body. In most cases, when lead poisoning occurs, it is due to the breathing in of air containing lead dust, lead fumes, or lead vapor. It does not occur as frequently from swallowing the metal, or from absorption through the skin. On the other hand, the person may get enough lead into his body to produce poisoning by handling lead objects, then putting his hands into his mouth.

In most cases of lead poisoning, the presence of lead will be found in the blood through proper chemical tests.

Care must be taken to protect lead workers from absorbing this mineral. Their working surroundings should be such as to protect them against any undue exposure to lead, and they should also be taught to keep their hands out of their mouths as much as possible. Masks or similar protective devices, should be used when there is lead dust in the air, or when lead fumes or vapors are present. These workers should be examined from time to time to determine whether or not symptoms of lead poisoning are present. If any symptoms are present, the person should be immediately removed from contact with the lead. If poisoning has occurred, treatment to eliminate it from the body should be started at once.

C.W.A.C. Pipe And Brass Bands To Visit City

Belleville is to have the opportunity of viewing the spectacle of the two bands of the C.W.A.C. on parade on Thursday, Aug. 26th, when a parade and concert will be held as a part of the birthday celebrations of the Second Anniversary of the Canadian Women's Army Corps. The two bands will assemble at the Armouries at noon and proceed via Pinnacle Street to Foundry Street, swing around and follow Front Street to Dundas and then along Pinnacle Street, thence to the Armouries for a short concert. In the event of rain the concert will be given in the parade hall of the armouries.

The two bands have forty-five members in all, fourteen belonging to the Pipe Band and thirty-one to the Brass Band, as well as Lieut. A. V. Lendrum of Duncan, B.C., who is the officer in charge of band personnel This officer has tackled the stiff job of playing chaperone and general "trouble shooter" to the winsome lassies of both bands. Whatever the difficulty and the difficulties arise with unfailing frequency on such a tour, she is expected to know the answer. She makes sure that the girls have sufficient rest; are provided with three good meals a day, no easy task in these days when hotel rations are limited; and sees that the girls turn out well-groomed and shining for every parade. The trim appearance and general air of well-being that radiates from every member of the bands pays tribute to the efficiency which she has discharged her responsibility.

Here's how LONG DISTANCE CALLS are climbing

We thought 1941 was a busy year . . . until 1942 came along! Last year, despite shortages of material and manpower, the volume of Long Distance messages rose to nearly three million a month—almost 50% higher than before the war. And it is still rising!

War has put a premium on telephone time. Help to keep communications open for essential calls. Please use Long Distance, especially to war-busy centres, only when you must, and be as brief as you can.

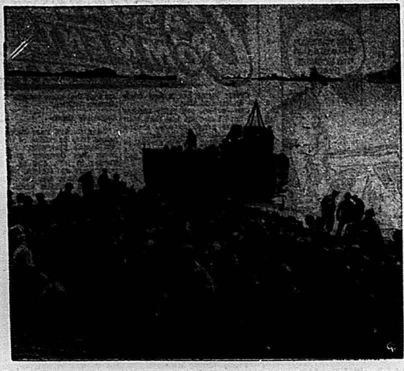
COMBINED U. S. AND CANADIAN TASK FORCE CAPTURES KISKA IN THE ALEUTIANS, DRIVING THE JAPS FROM NORTH AMERICA.



Tank invasion troops hustle into line as they board an invasion barge for the attack on Kiska. Note warships in the background. Apparently realizing the futility of further resistance the Japs left this strongpoint under the cover of fog.

KHARKOV IS CAPTURED FROM GERMANS BY RED ARMY

Pictured here is a section of the city of Kharkov, which has been captured by the Russians. Of great strategic importance to the German army, this twice captured Russian city was retaken from the Russians in the Nazi spring drive. Once more it is in the hands of the Red army.

Two big formations of heavy bombers which appeared to be Flying Fortresses winged across Dover Strait in mid-afternoon today towards Northern France. Unescorted and still climbing, the bombers took up battle formations while over the water.

Fall Over Wide Area

The Germans, is a series of nervous broadcasts, clearly indicated the size of the Berlin attack by telling of high explosives and incendiaries falling over a wide area from "large enemy formations." They asserted at least 50 planes were shot down.

The devastation was plainly on a scale comparable to the power of the attack. One returning pilot told of smoke boiling up three miles into the sky.

The raid, it was estimated, was about twice as heavy as that ever launched upon any capital.

The R.A.F. has dropped as high as 2,300 tons of bombs in a single night before this, but never before has approached that figure in an operation of such length, complexity or significance.

Returning airmen told of relatively light Nazi anti-aircraft gunfire but of stern opposition from German fighter planes.

Put Up Swarms of Fighters

"The Germans put up swarms of fighters," said one. "I have never seen so many before. There were about 20 belts of searchlights inside the capital and around it. These were co-operating with the fighters.

"We streaked across the beams as fast as we could go, and the searchlights came after us. Fights were going on all over the place."

Airmen pictured the German capital as a red chaos of smoke columns from fires and explosions, shining dully even at 15,000 feet.

They said German fighters rode the skies in "desperation squadrons," some of them even flying with navigation lights on.

The biggest explosions were seen in the middle of Berlin, the fliers reported.

German broadcasts insisted both British and American bombers participated. There was no support here for that report, although the R.A.F. possibly used some British-owned American-type planes.

The Nazis first said 50 raiding planes were shot down, but shortly raised that to 60, saying they were "mostly four-engine bombers."

Attack Expected

The attack had been expected for several weeks a logical follow-up to the mass bombings which pulverized the German seaport of Hamburg in July. The last heavy raid on Berlin was staged by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. March 29.

The German capital has been a target since that time for small forces of British Mosquito bombers, which have struck at the city eight times.

The German radio said last night's attack on Berlin caused civilian casualties and damage in residential quarters, and claimed 50 raiders were shot down. It said several other places also were attacked.

Berlin apparently had been expecting the attack. Swedish newspaper correspondents in the German capital reported several weeks ago the tremendous bombings of Hamburg had created great anxiety in Berlin.

Preceeded by Daylight Sweep

The night attack on Berlin was preceded by a daylight raid by American medium bombers on St. Omer where they blasted away at the freight yards and a German flying field. The raid was the first on the rail point in two months.

Yesterday Spitfires attacked Axis shipping off the Dutch coast and a German bomber was destroyed by Beaufighters over the North Sea. Other Spitfires, including an RCAF fighter wing, swept over the Bethune area in France.

There an unidentified leader of the Canadian wing shot down an ME-109. All the Canadian planes returned safely.

Meanwhile the Germans attempted feeble retaliation. Sporadic enemy activity was reported last night over coastal districts of East Anglia and five Nazi planes were downed. Slight damage but no casualties were reported.

FULL WEIGHT

"I saw my bomb burst," said Sgt. Nelson McInnis of Trail, B. C. "It was easier than previous raids."

Sgt. Sam Davidson, air gunner of Clover Bar, B. C., said "it looked to me as though they were trying to pretend it wasn't Berlin."

PO. Dave Debloeme of Toronto who flew as second pilot said the ack-ack beat the C. N. E. exhibition all hollow.

Flying with an R. A. F. crew was Sgt. J. C. Bailey of Vancouver, a bomb aimer who was forced to take control of the aircraft when the captain was wounded. Bailey brought the planes home despite one engine cutting out.

"There was a lot of flak over the target but it didn't get close to us," said Sgt. Len Brenton, rear gunner of Toronto. He saw only one fighter which was coned by German lights over Berlin.

Sgt. Bill Hope of Ottawa, a gunner, saw countless fires starting as a result of the first wave of bombers. "We could see them very plainly and it is certain the damage was terrific," he said.

Also flying with the R. A. F. was Sgt. Bill Anderson of Lisle, Ont.

BERLIN "HAMBURGED"

By LOWELL BENNETT

A Midlands Bomber Base, England, Aug. 24 — Berlin was "Hamburged" last night for 42 minutes by hundreds of four-engined R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombers in the most widespread devastation ever wrought in the heart and brains of the European Axis.

The entire force was composed of Lancasters, Stirlings and Halifaxes, making it probably the biggest four-engined raid of the war.

Airmen returning to this base were unanimouus it was the best raid they had made.

There was excellent weather, second-rate opposition, and brilliant bombing, they reported.

Smoke at 15,000 Feet

From 250 miles away on the homeward flight the crewmen saw vast fires and the last wave of bombers reported smoke belching upward 15,000 feet.

They said the attack was at least as effective as any of those which laid Germany's second city of Hamburg in complete waste. But while Hamburg's opposition was of the strongest, Berlin's defences last night were not so strong, the fliers from this base said.

The Germans depended mainly upon night fighters in co-operation with searchlights and anti-aircraft fire described by these crews as unusually weak and aimless.

Some 5,000 veteran fliers from over the Empire and some American volunteers participated in the kill for which they had waited so long. All praised the path-finders who directed the bombing that covered a four-square mile swath in Berlin.

Lots of Night Fighters

"There were lots of night fighters, but the anti-strike fire was scattered and didn't bother us," said Sgt. Gunner Edward Murphy of Richmond, Que., flying in "F for Fox" on his 14th mission. "About 200 searchlights fingering around managed to catch some planes, but the real light was on the ground. The fires even at the beginning were terrific.

"Last night's raid was the biggest and best. We must have given them a terrible nightmare."

PO. Frank Bedingham of Essex, England, who piloted "A for apple," in the last wave, said he was amazed by the impotence of the defence which "weren't much stronger than those in Italy. But in Berlin there were four square miles a mass of fires, with 4,000 pounder cookies landing everywhere."

Pilot Flight Sgt. John Adams of Coolagong, New South Wales, who flew in "N for Nan," one of the last men to bomb the city, reported the defences well saturated "but the smoke and fires were something to behold. I reckon they will be fighting fires until the spring rains help them."

Four such raids eliminated Hamburg, but it probably will take a few extra ones to finish the job in Berlin. But the elimination has begun and Berliners know that last night was the beginning of their city's end.

Major-General G. R. Pearkes, officer commanding-in-chief of the Pacific Command, watches his men embark for the Kiska invasion.

Kindergarten Classes Will Be Opened In Four Public Schools of City

Kindergarten classes will be inaugurated in Belleville's four public schools at the opening of the autumn semester next month, L. A. Kells, secretary-administrator of the Board of Education announced today. It is an innovation that has long been considered by the educationalists of the city and was passed at a recent special meeting of the Board.

"Last May the Board voted to open kindergarten classes in but two of Belleville's public schools, Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria, but since that time it has been found feasible to continue the project so that all four local public schools will be equipped with special kindergarten class rooms," stated Mr. Kells.

The minimum age for registration and admittance will be five years of age on the 31st day of October of the school year. Children of that age to be sent to kindergarten by their parents will only be admitted at the opening of school on September 7th.

School Band Instructor

Besides his duties as musical director at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, Mr. George Maybee has also been named as director of the Belleville Public School band for the coming year.

During the summer vacation period the customary general renovation of all Belleville schools has practically been completed, but no drastic alterations were made to any buildings or properties in keeping with the Board's effort to maintain a minimum of capital expenditure during wartime. A new roof is needed at Queen Mary School, as the old roof is leaking. The contract for the new topping has been let and construction will commence immediately, stated Mr. Kells.

Ask Results Earlier

A resolution has been prepared by the Belleville Board of Education and directed to the Department of Education in Toronto proposing earlier announcement of results of Upper School examinations. Copies were mailed to all Boards of Education in Ontario seeking support of the proposal.

The resolution reads:

"That the Minister of Education be respectfully requested to give his attention to what seems the unreasonable lateness of date at which the results for the Upper School Examinations are released. The Board believes that since attention of much of the marking of papers has been given to the local schools, it should be possible to complete the work on Upper School papers at a much earlier date. In particular it is felt that students wishing to enter the Normal Schools receive their results at a late too late to permit them to make proper preparation for entrance to these schools, and that those who fail to receive standing are unreasonably delayed from making other plans."

Registration Next Week

Registration for Grade Nine, entrance into the Belleville Collegiate, will open Wednesday while registration for other secondary school grades will be held on Thursday of this week.

Philadelphia Athletics Within Two Games of Being Baseball's Longest Losing Streak Squad

19 Consecutive Defeats Have Been Rung Up Against Connie Mack.

SENATORS RALLY

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Philadelphia Athletics seem to know enough about baseball to understand that record books can be opened either from the front or the back. In any case, they have a chance to set a modern Major League record.

This record, of course, is for losing games. Connie Mack's meandering troupe lost two more to Chicago White Sox last night 7-6 and 7-0 to make 19 consecutive defeats.

This is just one short of the longest losing streak in the big leagues since the turn of the century—and the A's are scheduled into the ninth inning tied, Bob Estalella smacked a two-run homer that put them in front. However, in the last half of the ninth after Guy Curtright has homered with one on to tie the score, relief pitcher Russ Christopher walked his rival moundsman, Guy Maltzberger, with the bases loaded to force in the winning run. In the second game Orval Grove pitched a six-hit shutout.

New York Yankees bounced back against Detroit Tigers to win 4-1 with Bill Zuber pitching six-hit ball.

Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland Indians 9-7 in spite of home runs by Jeff Heath and Roy Cullenbine.

Weather forced postponement of the second games of doubleheaders scheduled at both Detroit and Cleveland.

Washington's struggling Senators rallied for five runs in the 10th inning to beat St. Louis Browns 10-5 after Stan Spence had hit two home runs in the regulation distance, 2-1 in the second frame.

In the only National League game St. Louis Cardinals breezed to a 14-5 triumph over Boston Braves.

What's Doing in Sport

Philadelphia, (AP) — Philadelphia Bob Montgomery, N.B.A. lightweight champion, outfought Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champion, in 10 rounds last night before a crowd of 21,452 in Shibe Park. The winner tipped the scales at 138, against Zivic's 144 pounds.

Ottawa, (CP)—The Ottawa Combines, figuring in the Senior O.R.F.U. this year, turned up their first ace card last night in announcing the acquisition of Art Stevenson, former backfielder of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Stevenson is now in Ottawa as a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps.

Niagara Falls, (CP)—Winning its second straight game in the Niagara Senior baseball playoffs from Welland 5-2 last night, Niagara Falls is rated favorite for the league honors. The teams meet again Wednesday night. In the Intermediate series, Crowland took its second win 5-2 from Fort Erie last night on the latter's diamond.

Philadelphia, (AP) William Gardner Crowell, 59, widely known college football referee and a member of the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, died last night after a five-month illness. Crowell officiated in many Army-Navy games.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 24 — (CP)—Those autumn race classics of pre-war days, the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire, come up for revival on three British tracks this fall, but with a distinctly rationed flavor.

Whereas peacetime classics were open to all, these will be confined to horses trained in the vicinity of the track so as not to infringe regional restrictions on racing which bar horses from travelling more than short distances to races.

The substitute classics, all $4,400 plates, will be decided at Newmarket, Ascot and Stockton.

The Ascot Cesarewitch of two miles and the Cambridgeshire over 7 1-2 furlongs both will be staged Oct. 2. Newmarket horses gallop two miles in their Cesarewitch Oct. 6 and one mile in the Cambridgeshire Oct. 20. Stockton's Cambridgeshire of 1 1-4 mile goes to the post Sept. 25 and the other austerity classic Oct. 9.

The Hon Dorothy Paget, millionaire racehorse owner and Derby winner, this year, was fined $165, including costs, in a London police court for using gasoline illegally in a journey to Salisbury race track.

Nailed to the bridge of the British minesweeper Fairway is a shoe worn by Lord Derby's Fairway, 1928 St. Leger winner, after which the ship was named. Lord Derby presented the shoe to the ship's company who regard it as an unfailing source of good luck.

The Fairway started life in the First Great War as the Richard Jewel, one of a fleet of trawlers named after members of Lord Nelson's crew at Trafalgar. Later she became a fishing trawler and was called back to navy service as a 'sweeper shortly after this war began.

Hither and yon: Sale of race programs at British tracks from the start of this season until early August realized $31,500 for the British Red Cross. . .The Red Cross also received $4,435 from a two-day cricket match at Lord's which featured an all-star England and Dominions team. The amount was a record for a cricket match.

And as a sign of becoming prices and the importance attached to post-war greyhound racing, an anonymous English purchaser paid $2,770 for an Eireann greyhound Moving Carefully, at a Dublin sale. . . P. B. (Laddie) Lucas, British Walker Cup golfer, has been promoted to wing commander and appointed to command a Royal Air Force Spifires wing. He joined the R. A. F. in 1939 and trained on the first English course in Canada under the Empire Training Scheme. Later he specialized in escorting fighter-bombers in attacks on enemy shipping in the channel. Previously he won the D. F. C. in Malta.

MANY SCHOOLS QUIT FOOTBALL AFTER RULING

Army Trainees Not Allowed in U. S. to Play with Colleges.

SYRACUSE OUT

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Aug. 24 — (AP) — A week ago War Secretary Henry Stimson announced army trainees would not be permitted to participate in athletics at United States colleges and universities. Since then schools have fluttered from the football bandwagon.

Six weeks ago The Associated Press could find only 189 colleges which had given up the sport since Dec. 7, 1941, when the United States entered the war. But since the beginning of August, 47 more have made their decisions.

Such "name" schools as Stanford, Syracuse and Santa Clara made clean breaks when their soldier-guests were banned from campus sports. Even Alabama, where rival coaches have intimated that talent always was as plentiful as cotton, has hinted its crimson tide will be only a ripple this fall—if it has a team at all.

(Under the United Army's college program selected soldiers are enrolled in various colleges at army expense to take special courses, such as mechanical engineering. The Navy has a similar program but the department has ruled its seamen-students may participate in college sports.)

Southern conference decided Saturday to drop all eligibility rules in an effort to help the 16 members of the circuit along by making any available service man a team prospect.

The general shuffling of talent by the Navy's college program apparently has made Michigan and Notre Dame the powerhouses of the Middle West; Dartmouth, Rochester and Pennsylvania among the most respected teams in the East; Tulane and Duke exceptionally strong in the South; Texas confident it can retain the southwest conference crown and Southern California the "big" team on the Pacific Coast.

Worked 23 Years to Bring Championship to Home Town

(By The Canadian Press)

Noted among other achievements as the man who worked 23 years to bring a Dominion hockey championship to his home town, Portage la Prairie, Man., W. R. (Toby) Sexsmith, former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and a member of the Manitoba Legislature, died Monday after a brief illness in his 59th year, the funeral service to be conducted Thursday at Portage La Prairie.

Mr. Sexsmith brought about the construction of the Portage arena in 1919 and started a team-building crusade with the avowed intention of winning an ice title but it was not until almost a quarter of a century later that Portage defeated Oshawa Generals in Winnipeg for the Memorial Cup. He had been president of the Portage La Prairie Rink Company since its start and rose to the presidency of the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association.

The former hockey executive was born at Napanee, Ont., but had lived in the west for practically his whole life, going to Manitoba with his parents in 1885.

Henry Armstrong, once holder of three titles simultaneously, is fighting the 27th scrap of his comeback campaign Friday night at Madison Square Garden when he takes on Ray Robinson at 10 rounds. Armstrong has grossed a reported $500,000 and says he will retire at the end of the year, regardless of purses or prospects.

The appointment of Lord Burghley as governor of Bermuda was announced last night after engaging as an inspector of aircraft production. Lord Burghley, known as an athlete, won the 400-metre hurdles at the Amsterdam Olympiad and the British Empire hurdles title at Hamilton in 1930.

Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants, is temporarily in retirement because of an attack of influenza. In his absence, the two coaches, Clarence Jonnard and Adolfo Luque, are in charge of the team on the field.

The Jockey Club, New York, and the New York State Racing Commission filed evidence yesterday before the Supreme Court at New York which alleged that Jockey Robert Merritt pulled his mount, Peep Show, in two races at Empire City track last year. This was in reply to Merritt's complaint to the court he had been refused a riding license without reason.

The New Jersey Racing Association yesterday turned down the application of the Trenton Hockey Club for a license to operate a 43-day fall meeting at the State Fair grounds near Trenton. The Commission ruled the track was unsuitable.

Ingersoll Combines, defeated 5-4 Saturday by Waterloo Tigers in the first of the Inter County Intermediate "A" playoffs, have entered a protest on the ground Pitcher Johnny Moyer was not eligible. They claim he had previously signed with the London Army Club after a stay on the Pacific Coast.

Chicago Cubs of the National League collected no less than 25 hits, including three home runs, in the seven innings of an exhibition game with the Camp Shanks team at Orangeburg, N.Y., yesterday, the score being 17 to 1. Paul Erickson held the soldiers to four safeties and slammed one of the Cubs' homers.

Toronto, Aug. 24—(CP) — Via Walt Riddell, of the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix we learn that Alex Motter, defenceman of Detroit Stanley Cup hockey champions, is training with the U.S. Navy at Manhattan Beach. With the established stars enlisting in considerable numbers and others likely to be called up with the new age groups, minimum of 18 and maximum of 30, many sports editors across Canada predict the National Hockey League will not operate this year. Ages given in Jim Hendy's 1943 Hockey Guide indicate only 18 of the players who started the last N.H. season are outside the new call-up classes. Boston and Chicago are the most fortunate, with six each. Toronto has four, Detroit and Montreal one each and New York Rangers none. Incidentally the only Montreal player over 30, according to Hendy's age list, is Jack Portland who has already enlisted. Of course it doesn't follow that all those within the call-up limits will be enlisted. Some may miss out because of physical defects.

Last year, maintenance of civilian morale was one of the chief reasons given for continued operation of the N.H.L. In this connection Eddie (Winnipeg Free Press) Armstrong comments: "Ottawa Selective Service officials have apparently decided that the class of hockey given up by the service clubs all across Canada—under the C.A.H.A. banner—was sufficient as a morale builder for Mr. and Mrs. Fan—and the men and women of the services.

Bargain Day:

Dave Dryburg, of the Regina Leader-Post says Wes Champ reputedly sold the Regina Caps of the old Western Canada Hockey League to Portland Rosebuds on the Pacific Coast for $25,000. That sale in 1925 included such players as Dick Irvin, Eddie Shore, George Hay and others who moved up to the N.H.L. in 1926.

Incidentally:

Windsor has never been a football city although it has produced such stars as Tony Gobal and Joe Krol. Now Joe Burns, of the Windsor Star is urging sport-minded gentry start plans for putting Windsor on the grid map right after the war. . . . With baseball dead this season in Moncton, N.B., the citizens are enthusiastic about track and field events. A big event will be the Eastern Air Command championships early next month.

New York, Aug. 24. (AP)—Catching up on two weeks' mail. . .From Sgt. Cyrus Horween, overseas: "Is there any possibility of obtaining box scores of games played in the Dakota League of 1921 and 1922, the South Dakota League of 1920 and the North and South Dakota League of 1923?"

Sportpourri.

The football Giants and Dodgers will occupy the same training camp at Bear Mountain, N.Y., but will only meet in the dining room.. . . No doubt any National League records they set there will be tabled. . . Manager Leo Bradley explained the reason why Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., lost his featherweight title to Phil Terranova was that he stopped weaving when he was hit.

In The Rough.

When Ivan Dibble was playing Wayne McCoy in the finals of the Topeka, Kas., Country Club Golf championship a few weeks ago Dibble's ball lodged against a sand trap. . . .Ivan hit it with his sand wedge, and the ball curved upward and landed in the pocket of his sports shirt. . . .The question was raised whether it was an unplayable lie or whether Dibble had lost the hole because the ball had touched his person. . .The dispute was settled, explains Don Pierce, when Dibble not only conceded the hole but dropped the match to boot—which, at least, gives Topeka's sports writing pro footballer the prize for the season's worst pun.

Gunder Haegg, who came here aboard a tanker, will get a plane ride home from Scotland when he gets that far on the return trip.

SERIES BETWEEN SWACO, RELIANCE ALL TIED UP

Reliance Girls Win Second Contest 6-5 in Five Innings.

COME FROM BEHIND

Staging concerted batting rallies in the fourth and fifth innings, Reliance girls won a race with old Jupiter Pluvius at the Armouries lawn Monday evening to eke out a close 6-5 decision over SWACO as they drew up even at one game each in their current series in the semi-finals for the local girls' softball championship.

With the score tied at five-all in the last of the fifth Aileen Wright singled to score the winning run. Starting the sixth, two SWACO girls hit safely when rain promptly put a halt to proceedings. Even at that it was a race between the rain and darkness. The rain won and as a result Reliance are still in the softball playdowns with an even chance instead of being one game down.

SWACO girls went to the front in the first two innings by scoring five runs. From then on however they were goose-egged by Millie Foster on the Reliance mound who limited them to five hits over the five inning stretch. Norma Corneal was hit quite hard by the winners as she gave up 11 safeties.

Millie Foster did much to win her game by conking out a triple and a double as her share of her team's offensive effort. Vi. Bloom hit a double and a single while Aileen Wright got two singles. The SWACO offensive effort was carried principally by Dot Rowbotham, who conked out a round tripper in the second with one aboard and later added a single.

In the fourth Reliance bats boomed out with a vengeance to collect four hits and a brace of runs, while in the fifth they got three hits to push across the winning tally.

The teams:

SWACO—O. Fralick, 2b.; I. Colden, 3b.; M. Zebedee, c.; Dot Rowbotham, 1b; A. Jackson, c.f.; N. Corneal, p.; Peg. Ronsky, l.f.; M. Allin, s.s. and H. Kelleher, r.f.

Reliance—V. Bloom, s.s.; M. Foster, p.; Kay Coathup, 1b.; Blaind, c.; Laney and McKenna, c.f.; Hickerson, 3b.; A. Wright, l.f.; R. Buker, 2b and Semark, r.f.

Score by innings:

SWACO	2 3 0 0 0—5
Reliance	2 0 0 2 2—6

Umpires—Young and Bawden.

Card Completed For Wrestling Show at Arena

Today Promoter Frank Tunney, of the Queensbury A.C., announced his complete card for Wednesday night's professional wrestling show at the Hume Arena that features "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the sensational grappler from Capetown, South Africa. Claybourne, who made a host of friends with his agile ring work here last spring, meets the villainous Al Dunlop in the main bout of a three-bout card.

Claybourne, who is a colored lad from South Africa, also has covetous eyes on the British Empire grappling crown, now held by Billie Watson. If Claybourne can beat such a man as Dunlop such a win would materially help his contentions for a title bout with Watson.

For those who like unadulterated wrestling the semi-final bout will prove most productive, as he brings two villainous grapplers together in "Killer John" Katan and "Texas Dick" Bishop. Fortunately both will be frisked and not permitted to pack guns. The curtain-raiser sees Fred Steele and George Tolalos at work.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Gracie Fields has a new angle on an air-raid story:

Girl—'Erbert, you really shouldn't have kissed me like that, with all those people so close around us, even if it was in the dark.

Boy (looking angrily around in the crowd)—I didn't kiss you. I only wish I knew who it was—I'd teach him.

Girl (sighing) — 'Erbert, you couldn't teach 'im nothing.

The Four Greatest.

Ottawa Journal Bill Westwick reports the four greatest pitchers who ever toed the rubber, says John K. Tener, former president of the National League, were Christy Mathewson, Cy Young, Walter Johnson and Grover Alexander.

That was the observation of the ex-Governor of Pennsylvania and one-time pitcher for the Chicago Cubs as he consented to pick an all-star baseball team on the occasion of his 80th birthday recently. Tener boasts of having sen all the great stars during the past 60 years—and his opinion should carry weight.

The all-star team, one of the few ever picked by a major league president, is as follows:

Pitchers—Christy Mathewson, Cy Young, Walter Johnson and Grover Alexander; catcher, Buck Ewing; first base, Lou Gehrig; second base, Larry Lajoie; third base, Jimmy Collins; shortstop, Honus Wagner; outfield, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Babe Ruth.

Tener, who still sees a score of games annually in Pittsburgh and New York and can talk an exciting game of baseball by the hour, hesitated only twice as he spieled off the names of his stars. That was over the selection of a first baseman and whether to give the centrefield position to Speaker or Fred Clarke.

I always thought highly of Frank Chance at first base," he said. "He set many early records in baseball, but you can't omit a man like Gehrig, who set an amazing endurance record, his health ebbing into death."

Comm, Wagner and Mathewson were three Tener favorites.

"Cobb was one of the best competitors I've ever seen," he said. "And you can't overlook the records he piled up."

Asked what he thought of Wagner, he remarked:

"I only wish John McGraw were living. I'd refer you to him on that point. I will say that Wagner is the only player I knew who never made an error of omission. He always threw to the right place."

About Mathewson he once said: "He's the greatest pitcher of them all. There was no unnecessary exertion about Christy; there was a reason for every ball he pitched."

Tener was named president of the National League in 1913 with the understanding he be permitted to serve out 15 remaining months of his term as Governor. He resigned in 1918, and his secretary, John Heydler became president.

Mystery Man.

There's very little said about the Ordnance "Soldiers", winners of the Kingston Softball League, in the Limestone City press. However, Coach "Spike" Pryke isn't too much concerned about press notices of his opposition, but clings to the orthodox principal—"if we get more runs than the other fellow, we win." (Simple, isn't it?).

Tonight's Soldier-Reliance game here commences at 6.15 p.m. precisely when either Ding Luffman or Freddie Vasil will draw the local pitching assignment. Johnny Bawden may not get in the Kingston series at all and that should be welcome news to Ernie Simpson and his cohorts. Johnny strained his shoulder sliding into third base a week ago and has been under the care of R. A. "Doc" Wyatt ever since. He'll be out at least another week, Manager Bud Wilkins revealed this morning.

"Although —we know little of the Ordnance prowess as softballers, we'll respect them and use our strongest line-up in hopes of taking that first game tonight," added Manager Wilkins.

Remember When—

"Long Count", Dave Barry, who gained fame as referee of the second world's heavyweight bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney in 1927, died in Chicago seven years ago tonight. Native of Montreal, Barry was the target of widespread criticism when he refused to count over the prostrate Tunney until Dempsey retired to a neutral corner during that hectic fight.

Rolfe is Rejected.

Red Rolfe, former Yankee third baseman and now Yale basketball and baseball coach, has been rejected in the draft because of an old ailment—stomach ulcers—his Selective Service Board in Manchester, N.H., announced. Rolfe's condition forced him to the sidelines last year, but he returned to the Yanks' lineup to finish out the regular schedule and play in his sixth World's Series.

All Even Now.

Old Jupiter Pluvius came along just in time to nick an Alemite rally and halt last night's girls' softball play-off with Reliance leading in the fifth 6 to 5 and declared winners. Now the Alemite-Reliance series is all knotted up at one game each with the third and final saw-off slated for Friday night at the Armouries lawn. In the meantime Bristol and Bell Sargent are at it Wednesday night when a loss for the Sargent gals means curtains for Johnny Symons' lassies.

Although Tommy Colden's Alemites got all of their runs in the first two frames, Millie Foster tightened up in the next three stanzas as her teammates came to life and scored a brace of runs each in the first, fourth and fifth of Norma Corneal and welcomed the rain in the sixth, as Colden's charges were pressing again.

This and That—

With Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants, confined to his bed with intestinal influenza, Clarence Jonnard and Adolf Luque, two former Giant hurlers, are in charge of the Polo Grounders .... Luque and Jonnard are Giant coaches....The Kingston-Reliance softball play-off game tonight had not been postponed at eleven a.m. ....Now that Promoter Tunney has disposed of the Red Shadow the latest wrestling freak is the Green Hornet....It depends upon whose ox is being gored....When losing teams hear about the five-inning rain rule at the armouries constituting a game they howl loudly, but when they're winning under the same situation—well, it's a great rule.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 156

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Here is a fact in bridge not worth remembering. Suppose partner opens with one in a suit. All your second round bids results from 38 different combinations of non-jump bids.

During the two weeks just ended, 14 of them were shown in this column. All with the same hand. I will now start showing you the 24 other groups with different hands.

Don't try to memorize any of the combinations. You can figure out the answer to any one of them with a few simple Horse Sense rules. Let me remind you of the rules you need for that purpose.

Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. Only a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Responder's basis is two tricks. Each suit raise shows another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid shows another no-trump trick.

You have this responding hand:

♣ A 9 8 6 3

Partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. With different length suits, show the longer first. Your first response is a takeout to two clubs. Your raise shows three tricks.

Suppose partner then bids two hearts or two spades or three clubs or two no-trump. Your second round bid is a takeout to three diamonds.

Over two in hearts or spades or no-trump, your three diamonds is a raise. It shows your fourth trick. Over three clubs, your three diamonds is not a raise. It does not yet show your fourth trick.

Since you bid clubs first, you show five clubs and four diamonds. When he bid spades before hearts, he said his hearts were not longer. When he rebid spades, he said his spade suit was rebiddable.

When he bid three clubs, he said he had support for your clubs and another trick. When he bid no-trump, he denied having a heart suit, rebiddable spade suit, adequate support for clubs.

When your bidding seems to fail and your game is getting stale, let your guide be T-A-N and you're back in stride again.

LESSON NO. 157

How dare you assume your partner is wrong? Therefore, there are no rescue bids in good bridge unless partner asks for it.

Thus, you must not bid your own suit again merely because you do not like partner's last bid. You do it only to show him your own suit is rebiddable.

How do you know when your suit is rebiddable? Hide the lowest honor card (ten or higher) in it. If the balance is biddable (Q J 3 2, J 5 4 3 2, or 7 6 5 4 3 2), the whole suit is rebiddable.

A responder starts with a basis of two tricks. Each raise in the last partnership contract consumes another trick. A bid that does not raise fails to consume another trick.

You have this responding hand:

♥ A K J 9 6
♣ 9 6 5

Your hand contains four suit tricks; enough for two raises. You have a rebiddable heart suit; a suit you may bid twice even if it is not assisted by partner.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. Your first response is a takeout to two hearts. Your raise consumes the third of your four tricks.

Suppose partner then bids two spades or two no-trump. Your second round bid is three hearts. You thus show your rebiddable heart suit. Your new raise consumes your fourth trick.

When partner opens with one spade and you respond with two hearts, suppose partner then bids three clubs or three diamonds. Your second round bid is still three hearts.

In the last case, you also show rebiddable suit in hearts. But three hearts over three clubs or diamonds is not a raise. So you have not yet consumed your fourth trick.

If your bid is right you may save a fight.

AT THE McCARTHY

"East Side of Heaven"

One of the nicest little romance-comedies is now playing at the McCarthy—it has music, lilting and soft, coupled with romance and the cutest baby in the world. Bing Crosby as Denny Martin stars with Joan Blondell. The story has a Manhattan background—with Bing Crosby as a cruising-taxi troubador, plenty of romance—laughs and music. An exceptional supporting cast of Mischer Auer, C. Aubrey Smith, Irene Hervey and Baby Sandy. Second feature "Green Hell" is a stirring drama starring Douglas Fairbanks and Joan Bennett—a double bill well worth seeing.

AT THE BELLE

"Five Graves to Cairo"

Paramount's "Five Graves to Cairo" the much-heralded behind-the-scenes thriller with Rommel's loss of the African continent as its central idea, is now attracting large audiences to the Belle Theatre. A brilliant cast, including Franchot Tone, Anne Baxter, Akim Tamiroff and Erich von Stroheim as Marshall Rommel, acted out the thrill-packed story, set down in the locale over which Rommel was chased back and forth for many months by the British Eighth Army.

Tone, playing Corporal Bramble of the British Tank Corps, staggers, delirious, into the Empress of Britain, a dilapidated desert hotel presided over by Akim Tamiroff, and Mouche, the French chambermaid, played by Anne Baxter. Bramble discovers that the hotel is to be occupied by the Germans, led by Rommel. Tone, in is fine a bit of screen skullduggery as has been seen here in a long time, succeeds with the aid of Tamiroff and Miss Baxter, in learning the meaning of the "five graves," Rommel's secret weapon (which it would be unfair to divulge here) and aids in stemming the Nazi march on Egypt. That, briefly, is the plot. Filled out by competent acting on the part of the principals, all the thrilling situations form into a pattern of intrigue which left the audience limp.

"Five Graves to Cairo" is a must on the list of all moviegoers.

A generous dash of Nazi loathesomeness is added to the picture by von Stroheim's excellent portrayal of Rommel. The veteran character actor adds considerably to his reputation as one of the most hated men on the screen in this role. In addition, Tone, Miss Baxter, Tamiroff, and Fortunio Bonanova, who plays an Italian general, contribute performances which make "Five Graves to Cairo" a memorable screen event.

It must be said that without a story the actors would not have shown up at their best, and for supplying the gripping story, Billy Wilder and Charles Brackett deserve more than a nod. They should get an ovation!

AT THE CAPITOL

"Casablanca"

Entertainment pulsating with drama and rich in human values is the keynote of the new Warner Bros. picture, "Casablanca," now showing at the Capitol theatre.

The film, taking its title from the Moroccan city that figured so largely in the recent war news, has to do with refugees from war-torn Europe and their attempts to secure exit visas to the Americas.

Starred in the film are Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman and Paul Henreid, who scored as Bette Davis' leading man in "Now, Voyager." A highly talented featured cast is headed by Claude Rains, Conrad Veidt, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre.

Although the story deals generally with the illicit trade in exit visas, the love story of Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman figures prominently and is responsible for much of the swift pace of the picture.

Opening in Vichy-controlled Casablanca, the picture goes back, in retrospect, to Paris just prior to the Nazi occupation where Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman meet and fall in love. Later, they meet again in Casablanca. It is a tender love story with tragic overtones, played against a backgound of chaos and conflict, but ending on a new note of hope.

"Hillbilly Blitzkrieg"

Both Barney Google and Snuffy Smith of Billy De Beck's famous comic strip, familiar to millions of newspaper readers who folow their daily adventures, literally come to life in "Hillbilly Blitzkrieg." Monogram's merry comedy which is the added attraction at the Capitol.

Cliff Nazarro is seen as Google, and Bud Duncan enacts the part of Snuffy, while other featured roles are played by Edgar Kennedy and Lucien Littlefield.

The comedy of life in the army reaches an hilarious climax when Snuffy is accidentally sent aloft in a wildly careening rocket ship, controlled from the ground by radio impulses.

It's a splendid show at the Capitol. Don't miss it!

More About Ruptured Disk Causing Low Back Pain

For many years pain in lower back following an injury was considered due to a strain of the ligaments holding the lowest spine bone and the hip bone together. As the spine bone is called the sacrum and that part of the hip bone the ilium, this injury is known as a sacroiliac strain. This sacroiliac strain is still the cause of most cases of pain in lower back and in the hip extending down the leg (sciatica).

During the past few years such a number of cases of ruptured disk (pad or cushion of tissue between the bones of the spinal column) have been found that this injury is now suspected as often as sacroiliac strain.

For two or three years the method of finding the exact disk or cushion causing the symptoms was by injecting iodized oil and air into the spinal canal. As this method did not always locate the disk besides being painful to the patient, this method is now going out of use and physicians are now able to find the exact disk without much difficulty.

Dr. W. E. Dandy, Baltimore, in The Journal of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, states that during the past two years he has been able to locate a ruptured disk (make a correct diagnosis) in 65 cases, without injecting the iodized oil.

As 96 of every 100 cases of ruptured disks are at the fourth, fifth and sixth spaces of the last few bones of the spine, and since opening up the tissues on one side of these spaces will show the exact location of the ruptured disk, all that is necessary is to know that a ruptured disk is present in one of these three spaces between the bones.

What are the signs and symptoms of ruptured disk? About a year ago in an article on low back pain, I mentioned the symptoms of ruptured disk as outlined by Dr. Dandy in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Pain in the middle line of the lower back, plus pain down the back of one or both legs, pain increased by coughing and sneezing, particularly if there is a history of injury, is good evidence that one of the disks between the bones of spine in lower back has been ruptured. Surgery is the usual treatment in these cases.

Undoubtedly you were instructed at the hospital about the care of your baby after you got home. Often, however, you forget important points.

Refresh your memory on the points that require emphasis.

Learn how to take care of a bed patient with a contagious disease, or after an operation, or with any common ailment.

Grapple for Bodies Of Three Drowned

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 24 — (CP) —Relatives of three men drowned in the St. Lawrence River eight miles from here Sunday night will attempt to find their bodies today, it is learned. They will use grappling irons to drag the river bed near the spot where Louis Miron, Noe Mondoux and Harold Gallinger, all of Cornwall, disappeared in 60 feet of water after their small flat-bottomed punt capsized.

The victims were crossing from Hopkins Point, Que., to Summerstown, Ont., when the tragedy occurred. The boat filled with water and overturned within sight of Hopkins Point. Police said Dollard Morin, 18, one of the four men who survived, blamed the fatalities upon an unidentified driver of a speedboat.

'Never Went Through This Before' Says Youth as Hangman Adjusts Mask

Windsor, Aug. 24 (CP) — Two Detroit youths—24 year old Steve Ogorodowski and 21 year old Bruno Kisielewski—early today paid with their lives on a Canadian gallows for the holdup murder last October 3 of Joseph Borg, Windsor restaurant proprietor.

Witnesses told newspapermen that both died calmly, walking to the Essex County jail scaffold with smiles on their faces and with Kisielewski maintaing his innocence.

"I am innocent and happy to die," he was said to have told his counsel, N. J. Riordan as he walked from his first floor cell to the second floor where the hangings took place.

Kisielewski was first to go, mounting the scaffold at 12.27 a.m. He was pronounced dead 21 minutes after the trap was released. On his way to the scaffold, he passed Ogorodowski's cell. They shook hands and said goodbye.

Kisielewski walked to the gallows unassisted and when the hangman was adjusting the mask, remarked: "pull it over my nose."

Said Goodbye to Guards

Ogrodowski said goodbye to his guards and thanked them for the treatment he received in the jail. While being escorted to the gallows he asked: "Has Bruno gone?" On receiving an affirmative reply he said: "Okay, I'll see him later." He was reported to have been singing popular songs when his guards wen to get him.

On the scaffold the hangman had to remove a cigarette from Ogorodowski's mouth in order to adjust the mask. He was said to have remarked to his executioners: "Take it easy. I've never gone through this before."

He mounted the scaffold at 1.02 a.m. and was pronounced dead at 1.17 a.m.

Administer Last Rites

Rev. J. J. Murphy of Assumption Roman Catholic Church, administered last rites to both men. Provincial, Windsor and Detroit police and jail officials witnessed the hangings, barred to newspaper representatives.

A large crowd was outside the jail at the time.

Jail officials said members of his family had asked that Kisielewski's body be turned over to them for burial but that a decision on the request had not yet been reached. If the request is turned down, both bodies will be buried in the jail cemetery.

Kisielewski left notes for a girl friend and his family. Officials said that in both he maintained his innocence.

Jail officials said neither man was given a stimulant before being taken to the gallows.

Heinrich Himmler Given New Post

London, Aug. 24 (CP) — Heinrich Himmler was appointed interior minister of Germany today in a widespread shake-up of Hitler's subordinates, the Berlin radio said today in a dispatch by D.N.B., German news agency.

The D.N.B. announcement said that Himmler, Reichsleader of the S.S. and chief of German police, succeeded Reichsminster Dr. Wilhelm Frick, who is being relieved to take over the post of protector of Bohemia and Moravia, in Czechoslovakia.

The move thus throws out, "at his own request," D.N.B. said, the present protector, Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, long-time major party functionary who formerly was ambassador to London and once the German minister of foreign affairs. He also has been the chairman of Hitler's secret cabinet council.

Also "retired at his own request" as acting state secretary in the German ministry of interior was Hans Pfundtner, who has been appointed minister without portfolio, D.N.B. said.

Pfundtner has long been a party bigwig—the man selected by Hitler in 1936 to seek frictionless administration of the Olympic Games when the war clouds were hanging over Europe.

TOMATO PRICES DECLINE ON MARKET

First class graded tomatoes dropped to $1.25 per hamper on the local market Tuesday, a further drop from last Saturday when vendors asked $1.50 per bushel. District canning factories are now beginning to take tomatoes for canning, it was reported by vendors.

Saunders plums retailed at $1 per six-quart basket, or at 20c the berry box, while raspberries were quoted at 40c the box and huckleberries at $2 per basket, a 25c increase in price from last week. The huckleberry season is getting near its finish, according to vendors, who report that the best picking is now two or three miles from travelled highways, too far for pickers to carry the berries.

Watermelons were quite freely offered at from 40 to 75 cents each while good muskmelons brought up to 35c each. Duchess apples sold at 50c the peck and potatoes for the same figure.

CHAPTER 11

Josh came in before I was through and made a few changes in my story that I knew Mrs. Castle would not like.

"And get a story out of Proust as soon as he shows,' he said. "You can phone. Don't bother to come down until I send for you. Stick around and keep your eyes open. And get a good night's rest tonight."

"Undoubtedly—of a certainty—in that ghost-haunted, rat-infested tenement!"

"Don't go female on me," Josh advised, and then he looked again at the name he'd written down when I told him about meeting the Express' new man at the Castle's. "And it's a funny thing, I can't place that name at all."

"Maybe he's just pretending he's a newspaperman. Maybe he's one of the Castle dicks."

"And that may not be a joke," Josh said. "Keep an eye on him if you see him around."

As Chris Hall was the first person on whom I set eyes as I walked up the stairs—well lighted tonight at 9:35, I didn't think it would prove very hard. He was talking to Inspector Hare, who was a lot more pleasant to him than he had been to the rest of us.

They were leaning over a pair of stained water-soaked men's gloves, spread out on a newspaper.

"I think they are his, all right," Hall was saying. "I noticed he was taking off a pair of light tan pigskins as he came into the library where I was waiting for him. They were new and they caught my eye."

"I can soon check on it," Hare said.

Hall smiled up at me and rose.

"Nice little touch. Whoever did the job wanted to get rid of these gloves."

"But why? And how did they get all wet?"

Hare mumbled something, but Chris Hall said:

"The last of the plumbers were leaving as I got here. The plumbing back-fired or something and they fished these out."

"So it was an inside job . . . one of us!" I said.

"That's the way it points now," Hare said. He smiled, unpleasantly.

It was, as might have been expected, a nice, cozy night.

Peggy said that nearly everybody in the place had bought a new, patent bolt for his door, and I wished that we had too. Peg said, "Nonsense!" but not in her usual forthright manner.

She was upset because there was a rumor around the building that Jan did not sleep in his room at the Ambassador last night and that no one in Los Angeles had seen him after his performance until morning, and some idiot advanced the theory that he had flown up to San Francisco and murdered Gil Castle, and then flown back to Los Angeles again.

"Sounds like one of Utz's theories. I suppose Jan knew that Gil would be in his studio, begging to be shot at 11 o'clock!"

"Don't think I think so," Peggy said, worriedly, "but its plausible enough to some people. They might even have had an appointment. Oh dear, dear, I hope he has a good alibi. Everyone is acting so funny. I sort of wish we had a pistol around here," she said, and that was the only laugh I'd had all day.

"A pistol and it would be a toss up which of us would be the first woman to die in California's new gas chamber!"

Hysterically, like a couple of frightened, silly school girls, we laughed until we were helpless. And then Peg gave me all the details on the plumbing excitement and Emilie Raymond whispering "Merciful heavens, did my key do it?"

We had another faintly hysterical laugh over that, and Peg said that she had invited Emilie to come up and spend the night with us, as Miss Martin and Madame Hurd were going to sleep in Madam Hurd's studio, and it seemed kind of mean to leave Emilie alone, but she said she wasn't nervous.

I said I wished I wasn't.

"Well, it's all over now and there's nothing to be excited about," Peg said, "I'm a little worried about fire, that's all. It would be awful to be roasted like rats in a trap, way up here."

"Fire! What put that idea in your head?"

"Oh, someone might set the building on fire. Arson, you know, to destroy the evidence."

I said I thought last night would have been the logical time for that.

"Mm . . maybe. Mary, do you think Mr. McMurry has a vicious face?"

"McMurry? No! Why?"

"Well, I don't think so either, but there's a picture in a detective story magazine somebody left here, of a man who looks so much like him it's uncanny. It's an axe-murderer who killed two young girls. Of course it's just a resemblance. This man I mean was hanged last year!"

"Peg, please!"

"Oh, you scarebaby, I said he was hanged last year!"

We sat around worrying until well past midnight, because we did not want to turn off the lights. Then we went to sleep and in two minutes she was asleep and I lay rigid and wide-eyed listening to every sound.

I must have dozed off around two o'clock. Peg's fingers were digging right into my shoulder. I had black and blue marks that lasted for weeks. "Someone is trying to get in the window," she whispered.

Without sitting up I could see the window, a double one that we usually open, but closed and locked tonight because it gives on the fire escape and even Peg didn't want to take the chance.

I looked and there, no nightmare but stark reality, was a man standing on the fire escape. Our twin beds weren't four feet from him, on the other side of the glass.

Both Peg and I have since thought of all the things we should have done, but she did her bit when she woke me, and I had just one idea. With fairly firm fingers, I grasped the telephone on the bed-table and crawling under the covers with it so that my voice wouldn't be heard I managed to dial the operator and ask for "police!"

"The Roller building, did you say the ROLLAR building?" the officer at the other end of the wire asked. He meant, of course, "The place where you had the murder yesterday?"

"Yes, yes," I managed to say, "Come quick!" and was just emerging from the covers, still clutching the telephone when Peg began to scream at the top of her lungs and I got clear of blankets just in time to see a foot disappearing upwards to the roof.

What did I always think about that building? Once they went to bed and locked their doors you could be murdered and chopped into bits and not a soul would come to your rescue. Peg screamed loud enough to wake the entire building and she kept on screaming for what seemed like hours to me, until she finally got out of breath.

After an eternity there was a pounding on the hall door and a man's voice called, "Are you all right in there?"

"Who is it?" I managed to whisper.

"Police officer," came another voice.

"It's a trap, don't open the door," Peg said, her teeth rattling, and I did think it was a bit soon for the police to arrive.

"How do I know who you are?" I asked, at the keyhole.

"Open up, Miss Driscoll, it's me—Chris Hall, and Officer Turner," the voice we had heard first said, and then I recognized it as Hall's.

Peg slipped into the bathrobe she lays neatly at the foot of her bed and went to open the door and I groped for something, emerging with my jade moire housecoat, far too elegant for the occasion, as the two came in.

They were in the basement when Peg began to scream, and it was probably some kind of screaming record that enabled them to hear her, six flights down. We managed to indicate what had happened and the officer flung open the window and looked up and down, then mounted to the roof, with Hall after him.

About this time I heard a car coming and looked out of the front window in the living-room, to see the riot squad with sawed-off shotguns, piling into the entrance. They had to wait for Hall to climb in and run downstairs to let them in.

Of course the man, whoever he was, had gone. You can easily swing from one roof to another, and they all have fire escapes or stairways. And all this time not a soul opened a door to find out what was wrong, with all this running and all Peg's screaming. What pals!

"You couldn't identify the man if you saw him again, could you?" the special officer who was with Hall asked.

We had to admit we couldn't, it was too dark.

"Sure you didn't imagine it?" Hall asked, smiling a little.

"Goodness, no!" we both cried in chorus.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the sporting page of his paper waiting for ma to get finished looking at the movie page of hers so he would know which movie he had to take her to, and ma said, The curse of the Crooked Cross, at the Narcissis, William, I suppose we ought to see that.

Why the dooce ought we, it's only another horror picture about the war, isn't it? pop said, and ma said, Yes I know, and it's true we decided we've seen enough war pictures for a while, but all the best critics say that this one really tells the truth and has a universal message for everybody, so perhaps it's our social duty to see it.

It's our fizziological duty to take our minds off the hot weather, and the heat of battle is hardly a practical atmosphere for that purpose, pop said. What we need is a jolly little excapist picture, he said, and ma said, Well as a matter of fact all the pictures seem to be more or less about the war with one exception, and that's The Sister's Husbands, at the New Miracle. I've read the plot of it and it sounds quite amusing. It seems there are two sisters and they are both married, to different men, naturally but owing to some unforseen technicality it suddenly becomes doubtful whether either of the girls is really legally married at all, I mean to anybody. And it seems the two husbands have no time for technicalities and insist they're still inmarried and they want their wives, and it seems the girls are twin sisters and look so exactly alike that Arleen La Roo can play the part of both sisters, and they keep passing one another off for each other to keep the husbands guessing while the technicality is being —unravelled, ma said.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Text of Joint Statement Of Churchill, Roosevelt

Quebec, Aug. 24—(CP)—Following is the text of a joint statement by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt handed to newspapermen at a press conference today in the Citadel:

The Anglo-American war conference which opened at Quebec on August 11, under the hospitable auspices of the Canadian Government, has now concluded its work.

The whole field of world operations has been surveyed in the light of the many gratifying events which have taken place since the meeting of the President and the Prime Minister in Washington at the end of May, and the necessary decisions have been taken to provide for the forward action of the fleets, armies and air forces of the two nations. Considering that these forces are intermingled in continuous action against the enemy in several quarters of the globe, it is indispensable that entire unity of aim and method should be maintained at the summit of the war direction.

Further Conferences Needed

Further conferences will be needed, probably at shorter intervals than before, as the war effort of the United States and British Commonwealth and Empire against the enemy spreads and deepens. It would not be helpful to the fighting troops to make any announcement of the decisions which have been reached. These can only emerge in action.

It may however, be stated that the military discussions of the chiefs of staff turned very largely upon the war against Japan and the bringing of effective aid to China. Mr. T. V. Soong, representing the Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, was a party to the discussions. In this field, as in the European, the President and the Prime Minister were able to receive and approve the unanimous recommendation of the combined chiefs of staff. Agreements were also reached upon the political issues underlying or arising out of the military operations. It was resolved to hold another conference before the end of the year between the British and American authorities, in addition to any tri-partite meeting which it may be possible to arrange with Soviet Russia. Full reports of the decisions so far as they affect the war against Germany and Italy will be furnished to the Soviet government.

Consideration has been given during the conference to the question of relations with the French Committee of Liberation, and it is understood that an announcement by a number of governments will be made in the latter part of the week.

Maj.-Gen. Pearkes Visits Kiska

(By HERB JONES)
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Kiska Island, Aug. 21. (Delayed.) (CP) —Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, general officer, commanding-in-chief, Pacific Command, has visited the Canadian forces which shared with the Americans in the bloodless occupation of this Aleutian outpost.

Gen. Pearkes made a flying trip here to see for himself how the troops from his command effected their landing on the bleak shores which the Japanese left undefended.

With other high-ranking officers he expressed the opinion the Japanese had been driven out by the ceaseless aerial and naval pounding which preceded landing operations.

Triple Shift Of U.S. Army Generals

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP) — A triple-shift of United States army generals and lieutenant generals was announced by the War Department today with Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum relinquishing command of the 1st Army and eastern defence command to become chairman of the Inter-American Dfence Board.

Lt. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, who has been chairman of the Inter-American Board, goes to an undisclosed assignment described as of "key importance."

Maj. Gen. George Grunert is assigned to New York, apparently as Drum's temporary successor, with the title of deputy commander of the Eastern Defence Command and 1st Army, responsible for the security of 55,000,000 Americans along the eastern seaboard.

The Inter-American Board, representing 21 American Republics, is charged with devising measures necessary for hemispheric defence.

Series of Lectures On Bomb Recognition To Be Given Wardens

A series of lectures in Bomb Recognition are to be offered weekly at Canadian Military Headquarters, Kingston, commencing September 7 and each following Tuesday until the series of twelve lectures has been completed.

The lectures are for air raid wardens and others, who are interested in the knowledge of different types of bombs. They will be given by an officer trained and experienced in bomb recognition and will be illustrated by films and lantern slides which will provide a thorough knowledge of German, Japanese and Italian bombs. The lectures are based upon the experience gained by the British Government during the bombing of London and other English cities where upon many occasions air raid wardens and civilians reported unexploded bombs and caused the government to send out Bomb Disposal Squads, rope off whole areas, evacuate the residents of these suspected areas and set about digging to reach the reported bomb. In many of these cases it was found, that the crater did not contain an unexploded bomb and the whole effort was unnecesary.

It is highly desireable, in the opinion of the authorities, that the factories in and around the city appoint one member of their staff to attend these lectures and those interested should contact H. C. Seldon, 328 Front Street, or telephone 11.

UNANIMITY

of the King's bastion of the citadel.

170 Newsmen Present

Facing the three Allied leaders were 170 newspapermen, photographers and radio commentators, from every section of the globe.

First Mr. Churchill spoke, then Mr. Roosevelt, finally the Canadian Prime Minister.

From first to last they stressed the unanimity of the military decisions made at Quebec and the cordiality that existed on every level.

President Roosevelt went further, he said there had been a meeting of minds that he believed would continue, not only as long as the war lasts, but for years into the peace.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King asked Mr. Churchill to lead off and the British Prime Minister said he had expected he would follow and would be able to hear what the President said first.

However, he wished to impress on the newsmen that it had been impossible to supply them with all the news they had wished for during the progress of the conference.

The very nature of the discussions produced very little that they could report or write about. The task of the President and himself and the staffs brought to Quebec, he hoped, would be demonstrated in the week and months to come.

Why Little News Issued

Mr. Churchill said he was confident the results would justify the concentrated study that had been given the future plans.

It was natural that there should be irritation that more news had not come out, but it was a life and death struggle.

People asked why it was necessary for the President and himself to get together in conference so often. As a matter of fact it was remarkable they were able to get along with such infrequent meetings.

President Roosevelt began his comments with relevation of what he smilingly said was a secret—that through the early hours of the morning he, Mr. Churchill and Mr. King had sat—in an apologetic frame of mind toward the Press—endeavoring to work out some phrase that would adequately and tersely describe the Quebec conference.

But they had failed to formulate such a phrase or slogan. The fact was that essential and valuable as conferences were they did not win wars.

Fighting Forces And People at Home

That was done by the fighting forces and, in a democracy, the unanimous and willing support of the people at home.

To maintain and encourage that unanimity of support of the people in all walks of life was a service open to the press and one it was well performing.

Since the last conference the allied powers had achieved some remarkable successes, the President said. He compared the world war situation now with what it was when he and Mr. Churchill met in June, 1942.

What was planned at that conference became effective in November, 1942, when North Africa was invaded. The Casablanca conference in January of this year was carried into effect in Tunis and Sicily.

Contribution of All People of Allies

The President said that it could be assumed that other things would be developed following the present conference. But they would be successful only through the contribution of all the people of the allied countries.

Smiling broadly at the correspondents, the President said he knew the value of controversy and making the front pages, but it was a fact that there had been no controversy between himself and Mr. Churchill at any of their series of six conferences.

That degree of unanimity and harmony, Mr. Roosevelt hoped, would be sustained throughout the war and into the post-war problems of the two countries.

He emphasized the global nature of the war and said it was one fight—north and south, east and west. The recent self-removal of the Japanese from Kiska Island in the Aleutians was an instance of the wide-flung nature of the conflict.

Site of Conference

The President spoke of the satisfaction he felt in the site chosen for the conference. Not once but a dozen times he and Mr. Churchill had agreed that Quebec was the best conference site they had chosen so far.

He spoke of the wonderful hospitality received from Mr. King and the Canadian people. Mr. Churchill applauded his remarks.

Conference a Great Success

The conference itself has been a great success, the President said. The joint statement prepared for the press was essentially lacking in detail and had not a cough in a carload, he said.

He emphasized that the conference had been staff meetings of the British and American high commands and for that reason reference was made in the statement to only the British and American forces.

But that did not mean for a moment the conferees were forgetting the Canadians who were now fighting side by side with Americans and British.

He closed with warm thanks to Mr. King and all who arranged the conference details, for a very busy and very happy time.

Mr. Churchill in his verbal statement to newspapermen said not only were the armies, navies and air forces of the two great countries fighting side by side but they were actually intermingling.

They were working in complete harmony and were ahead of schedule.

It was not possible to carry on a war in so many parts of the world without bringing together not only the head staffs but every level of the great organization.

Found Work Very Hard

He had found the work here very hard, Mr. Churchill said. He and the President had worked very long hours with telegrams piling in and many major and minor decisions to be made.

For that reason he had not been able to meet the people of Canada as he would have liked.

The high pressure under which the staffs were working also prevented them from making the external contacts they would have wished.

The combined conclaves had studied and planned the movements by which the war will be carried on in the future and had reached what he believed were very good conclusions.

Certainly they were unanimous conclusions, said Mr. Churchill.

When the heads of the two nations did not meet each other even for a few months, certain questions were bound to arise—not in matter of principle but in the emphasis to be placed on some matters and the priorities to be placed on others.

Must Have Best Plans

When the United Nations forces go into action they must have the best plans that foresight and thorough study can provide so that losses shall be kept at the minimum.

Substantial progress had been made since Casablanca, Mr. Churchill said. All of Sicily noww was prostrate under the authority of the United Nations and seemed to be taking kindly to that authority.

While he could not tell what the plans for the future are, he assured his hearers they could look forward to great steps being taken in beating down the adversary.

To the comments that Russia had not been represented at the conference Mr. Churchill said a considerable part of the discussions had been concerned with the war against Japan. Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister with headquarters in Washington, had joined in these discussions in the preparation of not only short-term plans but long-term plans for decisive action.

Better Equipped than Enemy

Speaking of the progress made in the building up the armed forces, Mr. Churchill said the United Nations' forces now were better equipped than the enemy, after a poor start.

The U-boat campaign had rolled over from the debit to the credit side. The great production of shipping by the United States and Canada had helped make this possible and also the heavy sinkings of U-boats. The situation was such that they could be assured that the full weight of British Empire and American resources would be brought against the enemy.

Mr. King directed the conference, sitting between the President and the Prime Minister. He spoke of the pleasure and honor it had given Canada to be their host and announced how the press conference would proceed.

After the president had concluded Mr. King again spoke briefly. He said the people of Canada had been greatly honored by the presence of the two leaders and expressed regret that they could not have stayed longer and mingled more closely with the people.

Engaged on Serious Task

But they were engaged on a very serious task and every moment was priceless, said Mr. King. Virtually all their time had been devoted to the supreme purposes which brought them together.

He thanked the press for the cooperation it had given, for its toleration in the face of a great deal of necessary secrecy, and for the manner in which it had described the historic setting of the conference.

The press sad helped to place Quebec and Canada on the map of the world at this time of the greatest world events, Mr. King said.

Mr. Churchill, at the end of his verbal statement, said Russia was making a superb contribution. This along with the other factors he had mentioned, would make it possible to rescue the people who had been suffering under enemy oppression for so long.

The conference at Quebec was a satisfactory milestone along the road. It had been a most successful conference.

He felt that the results that would come out of it in the weeks and months to come would justify the high hopes with which it was undertaken and the labor which it had entailed.

FORESEES POLICY OF IMMIGRATION TO DOMINIONS

U. K. Trades Congress Sees Necessity of Occupation of Germany After War.

FAITH IN CHARTER

London, Aug. 24—(CP)—The British Government is going to adopt a policy of encouraging migration to the dominions after the war, especially of soldiers looking for new openings, the General Council of the Trades Union Congress said today.

Without giving details, the T. U. C. in its 75th report prepared for submission to the organization's annual convention Sept. 6, said it had learned "facilities will be given to demobilized soldiers who may wish to try new openings in countries of the commonwealth."

While the government is understood to plan to release from the armed forces older men and those with longest service first, the congress suggested that the demands of industry be taken into account for men of special skill and ability.

Controls After War

Public control over prices, production, distribution and consumption must be maintained after the war, the T.U.C. said, with controls as effective as those maintained during the war. Otherwise the report said, shortages and dislocation will inevitably cause unfairness and inequalities between different sections of the country.

During the sessions one of the most important resolutions filed for discussion makes a declaration on the treatment of Germany after the war while another demands a British home charter with "four decencies."

A general declaration on trade union policy has been placed on the preliminary agenda in a resolution which also asks the congress to reaffirm "its acceptance of the Atlantic Charter and pledge itself to strive for the implementation of a British home charter."

This would give a pledge to men and women in the forces to obtain a minimum of four decencies—a decent job, a decent home, a decent social security scheme and a decent education for all children.

Occupation of Germany After War

The resolution on treatment of post-war Germany demands that all those responsible for atrocities committed during the war, whatever their rank or position, should be brought to justice.

It declared the German people cannot escape their responsibility for starting the war and for all the crimes committed by the German armies. It also affirms the conviction the United Nations will have to occupy Germany "until by unilateral disarmament and re-education the German people have learned to fit themselves under a system of democratic government to co-operate once again with the free nations in Europe."

The resolution further pledges Congress to make it the first duty of the International Trade Union movement to see that the trade unions in enemy and occupied countries are restored to their full freedom and independence.

Red Army Aims For Reconquest Of the Ukraine

Russians Gain 18 To 22 Miles in Breakthrough on Lower Donets River

HEAD FOR POLTAVA

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 24 — (AP) — The Red Army drove west and south through the smoking ruins of Kharkov today, pursuing the Germans who were thrown into full retreat back from the recaptured former capital of the Ukraine.

The Russians were keeping up the heavy pressure from their new Kharkov base, giving the Germans no time to recover. The Red Army was spreading out in a drive for reconquest of the Ukraine.

Poltava, the historic battlefield southwest of Kharkov where Charles XII of Sweden met defeat, appeared to be the next Red Army objective.

Push Gains Momentum.

Farther south in the Donets Basin another Russian push gained momentum after taking Donetsko-Ambrosievka, a railroad station 50 miles north of German-held Taganrog. The Red Army pressed its assaults on this southern side of the German flank.

The Russian breakthrough on the lower Donets River front was disclosed in the Soviet midnight communique, which said that heavy fighting in the Izyum-Voroshilovgrad area had resulted in Russian advances of from 18 to 22 miles and the capture of 30 villages including the town and railway station of Donetsko-Amvrosievka.

Red soldiers also were attacking on the northern flank in the Izyum sector.

The Donets Basin appeared likely to become the most important scene of the fighting in the new phase of the Red Army's summer offensive.

Nazi Resistance Broken

Pravda said German resistance was broken after a three-day battle along the strong line of fortified populated points southwest of Voroshilovgrad.

Red Army infantry and tanks were reported advancing along the railroad presumably toward Makeyevka and Stalino in the heart of the coal and iron region.

Advance units of scouts and engineers were penetrating deep into the enemy lines and disrupting communications.

After the Red Army drove wedges in the German lines in the Donets Basin front the enemy counter-attacked attempting to prevent broadening of the gaps but the Russians drove them off, Pravda said.

During the evacuation the Gestapo executed 1,500 Soviet citizens by shooting, the government newspaper Izvestia said.

New Delhi, Aug. 24—(A)—Allied bombers and fighters ranged over Burma and as far afield as the Nicobar islands, off North Western Sumatra, to attack Japanese shipping communication and installations, R. A. F. and United States Air Force communiques announced today.

An attack on Nicobar was carried out by American heavy bombers. A 300-foot freight was reported left ablaze and a landing barge was believed ot have been sunk. Medium bombers severed the centre span of the Myitnge bridge near Mandalay in Central Burma.

British Beaufighters, Hurricanes and Mohawks destroyed or damaged more than 60 river craft and three motor vehicles in widely-spread attacks on the enemy communications system in Burma.

No Allied aircraft were lost.

Birthday Party Held In Air Over Berlin After Bombs Dropped

London, Aug. 24 — (CP Cable) —Sgt. Dave Canters, a mid-upper gunner of Edmonton, Alta., won't forget this Aug. 24 bomber raid and a birthday party high in flak-filled skies over Berlin.

It was a little birthday "do" for Dave's pilot, Sgt. Stan Mason of Durham, England, who trained at Battleford, Sask., and Carberry, Man.

At midnight, a few minutes before unloading their bombs on Berlin, Mason became 21. Immediately it was announced over the plane's "inter-com" that the bombs were away, the crew joined in singing "Happy Birthday to You."

"It was quite a celebration," said Canters when he reached his [illegible]. "We had been pretty busy up to the time we got out our [illegible] load, but right afterwards we toasted Mason's health with orange juice from our rations."

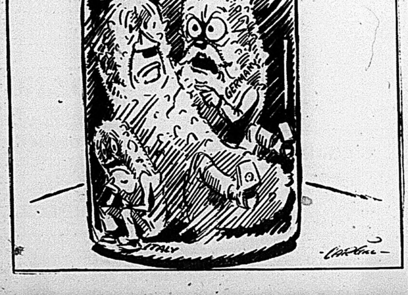
"PICKLE" SEASON



CANADIANS HAILED BY MONTGOMERY FOR ACHIEVEMENT

Says He Chose Them For Difficult Task They Did at Mount Etna.

HONOR FOR 8th ARMY

By MAURICE DESJARDINS

With the Canadians in Sicily, August 20 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) — Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery spent today visiting with Canadian troops and he told them the entire Sicilian campaign hinged on the wheeling movement to the left flank of Mount Etna which the Canadians carried out successfully.

"If you had failed," said the bronzed commander of the British 8th Army, "we should still be fighting in this island. But you handled yourselves according to the best and highest standards of my army in this very short, model little 39-day campaign.

"It has been said it was a great honor for the Canadians to be in the 8th. Army," Gen. Montgomery continued, "but I say it was a great honor for the 8th Army to have the Canadians. I wish we had more of them.

"Everything the Canadian troops have done since they have been in my army has been done magnificently."

The 8th Army leader said he regarded the Canadian division in Sicily as one of his "veteran divisions."

Gen. Montgomery's brisk visit took him to the headquarters of every branch of the Canadian 1st Division which fought in Sicily. He rode in the front seat of a camouflaged open touring car accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, commander of the Canadian Division.

He visited and chatted with officers and men of divisional headquarters the administration branch, reconnaissance and engineering units, field artillery regiments and tank and infantry units.

Everywhere men in tropical uniforms surrounded the car and cheered him enthusiastically. The general wore a black beret, open shirt and shorts, he carried a horsehair duster with which he flicked away botersome flies. At each stopping place he stood up to take the salute from the senior Canadian officers of the unit. Then he called to the men to break ranks and sit down around his automobile.

Gen. Montgomery told the men to remove their caps and smoke as he talked to them.

"I am a great believer in personal contact between an army commander and his troops," he said. "That's why I brought you around the car. I'd much sooner o dthat than walk in front of your ranks."

He said the Canadians might have felt some anxiety when they left England to become part of the distinguished 8th Army but that there was no cause for anxiety.

"Everything you had to do at the start came easy to you," Gen. Montgomery said.

"I knew this couldn't last," he said of the Sicilian campaign. "I've fought these people before and I knew there was some hard fighting ahead. I knew eventually we had to get the enemy hemmed in the northeast peninsula. On the wheeling movement of the army to the left flank of Mount Etna hinged the success of the whole campaign.

GAVE CANADIANS TOUGH JOB

"I knew this would be a very difficult job entailing bitter fighting in difficult country. I gave this job to you Canadians—you were in some of the hardest fighting on this island."

Gen. Montgomery declared he felt no anxiety about giving the Canadians the difficult assignment despite their lack of hard battle experience.

"I am never anxious when I fight my battles," he said. "If I were, I wouldn't fight them."

The 8th Army commander said he knew the Canadians would perform their job "well and truly" and they had done so.

He said 140,000 enemy troops were taken prisoner during the campaign in addition to large quantities of cannon, tanks and equipment—"very useful Italian vehicles and very useful Italians."

"Not a bad performance," he said.

He praised Canadian sappers for their "wonderful work." He said in European countries the work of engineers would never be finished.

He told the gunners that like other 8th Army victories the Sicilian campaign proved the value of concentrated artillery fire—"a thing the Germans haven't learned yet."

In one of his camp addresses he was interrupted three times by the roar of low-fighting medium bombers. He squinted skyward and said: "Beastly things, aircraft."

Gen. Montgomery said in the Great War he had known many Canadian fighting men on the Western Front and "none were finer troops."

"A great many of them gave their lives for winning that war," he said.

"What would they say to you today," the general asked. "'Well done, very well done indeed.' That's what they would say. 'We passed on our sword to you and you have wielded it well and truly'."

S.W. Pacific Zone Of Security Forecast After Present War

Melbourne, Aug. 24 (CP) — Formation of a great Southwest Pacific zone of security against aggression after the present war was foreseen today by Herbert Evatt, Australian minister of external affairs.

Mr. Evatt, in a newspaper article, suggested implementing the Atlantic Charter to assure the maintenance of security in the Pacific and Asiatic spheres as well as everywhere else in the world.

Mr. Evatt called, too, for at least preliminary planning of the Commonwealth's "opportunities and responsibilities" once the Japanese have been stripped of their Pacific conquests.

"Common preparation is the one guarantee for all. I therefore visualize the formation of a great Southwest Pacific zone of security against aggression, and in its establishment Australia must act with such colonial powers as Holland, France and Portugal as well as Britain and the United States."

He said that whatever Australia does "will be done in closest co-operation with Britain" because "we are the trustees of British civilization in this part of the world."

BRITISH EDITORS PRAISE CANADA

Effort of Dominion is Magnificent and Nowhere Surpassed.

London, Aug. 24. (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Canada served in Britain to stir editorial tribute to the part the Dominion has played in this war.

The London News Chronicle devoted a whole column to the Dominion, following in the wake of a full-column editorial in the London Standard after the Canadians invaded Sicily.

"A magnificent contribution it is", said the News Chronicle of Canada's war effort. "From the very first the Canadian people have flung themselves into the war effort with an energy and determination nowhere surpassed . . .

"But perhaps her greatest contribution has been by way of strategic co-operation with Britain and the United States. . . . The outstanding examples are construction of the Alaska highway, and the British Commonwealth Air Training plan of which Canada herself bears half the cost".

Ralph Michaelis, writing in the Daily Sketch, titled his article, "Canada Is Too Modest". "Canadians", he said, "are too little conscious that their contribution to the war effort is vastly greater than could be reasonably expected from her population of fewer than 12,000,000. If you tell them so, they will maintain, with chronic modesty, that they are not doing enough.

"Canada, in fact, is constantly 'rooting' for her parents and her big brother, but seldom for herself".

Mayor of Calcutta Appeals for Food

(By PRESTON GROVER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Delhi, Aug. 24 (AP) — An appeal to Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt to send food to Calcutta to relieve "the acute distress" there was sent to Quebec today by the mayor of that city, Syed Badruddoja.

Meanwhile, limited food supplies from other sections were rolling toward Calcutta, and food kitchens were being set-up.

Calcutta and the surrounding territory of Bengal became India's principal food shortage centre early this summer. For the past several weeks, thousands have been flocking from the countryside into the city in the hopes that relief there would be better organized.

The situation became dangerous more than a year ago when the rice supplies of Burma were cut off by the Japanese invasion.

In his appeal, the mayor said that the "entire population is being devitalized and people are dying of starvation. We appeal to you in the name of starving humanity to arrange for immediate shipment of food and grains from America, Australia and other countries."

Axis Lose Over 4,500 Planes in 9 Months Mediterranean Area

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 24 (AP)—Official records at headquarters here showed today that Axis air losses in the Mediterranean theatre in the nine months since the Allied landings in North Africa have passed the 4,500 mark.

This includes 2,844 destroyed in aerial combat and about 1,700 captured on airfields in Tunisia, Pantelleria and Sicily, but does not take in the enemy machines blown to pieces on the ground.

2 WOMEN, 2 MEN HELD AT DETROIT ON ESPIONAGE

Toronto-born Woman Named as Leader of Alleged Spy Ring.

UNDER NEW STATUTE

Washington, Aug. 24—(AP)—The United States Justice Department anounced today the arrests on espionage charges of four persons, one an attractive 34-year-old, Toronto-born woman who was named as leader of an alleged spy ring furnishing war information to Nazi Germany.

The four, first to be arrested under the United States wartime espionage act which provides a maximum penalty of death, were identified by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as Grace Buchanan-Dineen, a native of Toronto, described as an "attractive, well-educated descendant of French nobility;" Bertrand S. Hoffman, 27, Theresa Behrens, 44, and Dr Fred Williams Thomas, 44, as surgeon, all of Detroit.

The two women stood mute upon arraignment before a U. S. Commissioner in Detroit and were held in $50,000 bond each. Dr. Thomas pleaded not guilty and also was held in $50,000 bond. Trial dates were set for Theresa Behrens on Sept. 14; Dr. Thomas Sept. 16, and Grace Buchanan-Dineen on Sept. 17.

The justice department announced at the same time the arrests in Detroit of two unidentified German Aliens, both women.

Says Information Furnished

Hoffman's arrest in New York was reported shortly after J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. Director, announced that the other three were in custody in Detroit on espionage charges.

Hoover said Hoffman was recently assigned a ship in New York after joining the U. S. merchant marine and had furnished information on naval bases and convoys and "stated that he joined the merchant marine with the hope he could desert in a foreign port and escape to Germany. . ."

Nature of Complaint

The complaints filed before U. S. Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd in Detroit charge that:

Theresa Behrens secured information as to the location of the manufacturing plants of the Pullman Company of Chicago, the number of employees engaged by the company in manufacturing war material, the kind of war material then being manufactured by the company, and the transportation of war materials.

Dr. Thomas secured information as to the number and location of certain plants of the Western Electric Company in Ohio manufacturing war materials.

Grace Buchanan-Dineen secured information as to the production capacity of the Ford Motor Company in manufacturing war material, the safety of construction of such plant against sabotage, the safety of construction of the plants against air plane attack and bombing and the operation plans of the United States by which military airplanes departed from the United States for the war theatre.

First Under Statutes

The justice department said the arrests were the first under the war-time espionage statutes, which provide a death penalty or up to 30 years imprisonment. Previous espionage arrests were made under peace time statutes, which did not provide the death penalty.

Hoover said the activities of the group since the United States entered the war centred about Grace Buchanan Dineen, described as an "attractive, well educated descendant of French nobility, who, though a native of Toronto, Canada, had been carefully trained by Germans in espionage work."

Entered U. S. by Clipper

Hoover said she entered the United States Oct. 27, 1941, arriving in New York by Atlantic clipper. She first came to the attention of the F. B. I. Hoover said, as a mysterious "Miss Smith of Detroit," in November, 1941.

Subsequently, Hoover added, she "co-operated fully with the F. B. I. in receiving information desired by the German espionage service when it became apparent to her that she could not carry out the instructions of her Nazi employers."

Hoover said she had operated under the surveillance of the F. B. I., and all information reported to her and forwarded to her Nazi espionage superiors abroad had cleared through the F. B. I., and army and navy intelligence services.

Axis Losses 1,135,000 In Middle East

London, Eng., Aug. 24 — Axis losses of 160,000 men in Sicily brought the grand total of enemy troops killed, wounded and captured in the African-Mediterranean campaign from Ethiopia to Messina to 1,135,000, a recapitulation of British War Office figures showed Saturday.

The British lost 220,000 in the theatre from the beginning of the action through the Sicilian campaign, including the 35,000 lost by the British First and Eighth armies in Tunisia. United States forces lost 8,558 in Tunisia.

These figures included British losses in Sicily but not American losses there and included no French losses.

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 24 — (CP)—Lieut. John Earle Chase was killed in action at Sicily according to official notification received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Chase, of Harvey Township. Lieut. Chase was in his 29th year.

He was born in Harvey Township where he later taught school at Sandy Lake School before moving to Toronto to become a teacher and musical supervisor at the Hartman-Jones Memorial School.

Lieut. Chase is survived by his parents, three sisters and three brothers.

'WE SHALL GET RID OF OUTLAWS THIS TIME, MAKE SURE LESSON DRIVEN HOME'—F.D.R.

Greater Freedom From Fear, Want Can Be Achieved

U. S. President At Ottawa Visions Day Man Shall Love Neighbor As Self TRIBUTE TO QUEBEC

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 25—(CP) — President Roosevelt announced today "there was much talk of the post-war world" at the Quebec conference, when he stood before thousands of people on Parliament Hill.

Reiterating his faith in the four freedoms and the idea of collective security in the post-war world, the President promised "We are going to get rid of outlaws this time." "We are making sure—absolutely, irrevocably sure —that this time the lesson is driven home to them once and for all."

Of the Quebec conference, the President said:

"During the past few days in Quebec, the combined staffs have been sitting around a table talking things over, discussing ways and means, in the manner of friends, in the manner of partners, I may even say in the manner of members of the same family.

Definite Conclusions Reached

"We have talked constructively of our common purposes in this war — of our determination to achieve victory in the shortest possible time—of our essential co-operation with our great and brave fighting Allies.

"And we have arrived, harmoniously, at certain definite conclusions.

"Of course, I am not at liberty to disclose just what these conclusions are. But, in our time, we shall communicate the secret information of the Quebec Conference to Germany, Italy and Japan.

"We shall communicate this information to our enemies in the only language their twisted minds seem capable of understanding.

"Sometimes I wish that that great master of intuition, the Nazi leader, could have been present in spirit at the Quebec Conference — I am thoroughly glad he was not there in person.

"If he and his generals had known our plans they would have realized that discretion is still the better part of valor and that surrender would pay them better now than later."

Gangsters Refuse to Recognize Decent Conduct

The President devoted a considerable part of his speech to post-war aims, suggesting indignantly that "we spend our energies and our resources and the very lives of our sons and daughters because a band of gangsters in the community of nations declines to recognize the fundamentals of decent, human conduct.

"We have been forced to call out the sheriff's posse to break up the gang in order that gangsterism may be eliminated in the community of nations.

"We are making sure — absolutely, irrevocably sure — that this time the lesson is driven home to them once and for all. We are going to be rid of outlaws this time.

"Every one of the United Nations believes that only a real and lasting peace can justify the sacrifices we are making, and our unanimity gives us confidence in seeking that goal.

"It is no secret that at Quebec there was much talk of the post-war world. That discussion was doubtless duplicated simultaneously in dozens of nations and hundreds of cities and among millions of people.

"There is a longing in the air. It is not a longing to go back to what they call "the good old days." I have distinct reservations as to how good 'the good old days' were. I would rather believe that we can achieve new and better days."

It was being demonstrated in the war that "concerted action can accomplish things."

"Surely," he continued. "we can make strides toward a greater freedom from want than the world has yet enjoyed.

"Surely by unanimous action in driving out the outlaws and keeping them under heel forever, we can attain a freedom from fear of violence."

It made him angry, the President said, to hear people assert that the four freedoms and the Atlantic charter are nonsense because they are unattainable. The same sort of people must have sneered at the Declaration of Independence, the Magna Carta and even, perhaps, the Ten Commandments.

"We concede that these great teachings are not perfectly lived up to today.

Rather a Builder Than Wrecker

"But I would rather be a builder than a wrecker, hoping always that the structure of life is growing—not dying.

"May the destroyers who still persist in our midst decrease. They, like some of our enemies, have a long road to travel before they accept the ethics of humanity.

Some day, in the distant future perhaps—but some day with certainty—all of them will remember with the Master—'thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' "

The President concluded his speech with a few sentences in French, extolling the union of two races in Canada, the harmony of the equal partnership. It was, he said, "an example to all mankind—an example everywhere in the world."

HEAVY FLAK BUT NO FIGHTERS

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 25 — (CP) — Canadian pilots who took part in the R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid last night on Torre Annunziata, Italian rail control point south of Naples, reported upon their return today that they encountered heavy flak but no fighters.

FO. Eric Sherlock of Simcoe, Ont., one of twin brothers piloting in a single squadron, said he saw a large explosion with a blue-green flash light up the target.

President Roosevelt Promises To Feed People of Liberated Areas

Washington, Aug. 26. (AP) — President Roosevelt said today that except for the responsible Fascist leaders "the people of the Axis need not fear unconditional surrender to the United Nations".

In a report placing total lend-lease aid at nearly $14,000,000,000 the President again promised the feeding of the people of liberated areas and declared the allies "are striking hard and ready to strike harder" to attain complete victory.

"The people of Axis-controlled areas may be assured", he said, "that when they agree to unconditional surrender they will not be trading Axis despotism for ruin under the United Nations.

"The goal of the United Nations", he said, "is to permit liberated peoples to create a free political life of their own choosing and to attain economic security. These are two of the great objectives of the Atlantic Charter".

The report said the United States has sent more lend-lease planes to Russia than to any other country and that 57 per cent of all goods sent there have been munitions such as airplanes, tanks, and guns.

The report also disclosed that the size of the American merchant fleet has increased 250 per cent since the United States entered the war and is growing at the rate of five new ships every 24 hours.

The report said lend-lease aid through July 31 totalled $13,973,339,000, including $11,901,972,000 in goods transferred and $2,071,367,000 in services rendered.

Total exports of lend-lease goods through June 30 was placed at $9,882,000,000 of which $4,458,000,000 went to the United Kingdom, $2,444,000,000 to Russia, $1,363,000,000 to Africa, the Middle East and Mediterranean area; $1,133,000,000 to China, India, Australia and New Zealand, and $484,000,000 to other areas.

Since last reports exports to Russia amounted to $233,000,000 in April, $172,000,000 in May and $139,000,000 in June.

R.A.F. BOMBERS AGAIN STAB AT BERLIN TARGETS

Mosquito Bombers Used in Assault And All Returned Safely

ENEMY WATERS MINED

(By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 25. (AP)—R.A.F. Mosquito squadorns struck again at Berlin last night in a quick follow-up to the devastating raid by Britain's heavy bombers the previous night and found fires still burning in the city, which was half obscured by smoke columns but dimly lighted in some areas by the glare of hundreds of searchlights thrown up by the Nazis.

This stab at the German capital came a few hours after American bombers dealt another daylight blow at enemy aircraft production in France, loosing their bombs upon a Bordeaux assembly plant while en route to Britain from North African bases where they landed after the raid on Regensburg more than a week ago.

No Fighters Seen

No fighters were seen in last night's sweep over Hitler's scarred and blackened capital, but anti-aircraft guns were active. The Mosquitoes let go against undescribed objectives within the city and came back to base without a loss. Other night-flying R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes laid mines in enemy waters.

R.C.A.F. Headquarters announced that Canadian bombers were active in the minelaying. No Canadian aircraft were lost.

The Nazis acknowledged "nuisance raids" on the capital.

Today is the third anniversaryy of the first R.A.F. raid on Berlin when an attack was carried out by a relatively small force of planes.

Radio France quoted the German underground station "Atlantic" as saying at least 73,000 Berlin residents were homeless as a result of Monday night's attack.

Nearly 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped on the German capital by a combined R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. aerial armada at a cost of 58 planes, seven of them Canadian.

French Airfields Hit.

During daylight yesterday American heavy bombers returned to the attack on the continent, hitting at the Nazi-controlled French airfields of Conches and Evreaux-Fauville under an umbrella of R.C.A.F. fighters. The airfield at Villacoublay was also hit.

A total of 15 enemy planes were shot down by the bombers and their Canadian and Allied escorts. Four of the American bombers were reported lost, while all R. C. A. F. planes returned safely.

American Flying Fortresses which rained destruction upon Regensburg Aug. 17 and continued on across the Alps to air bases in N. Africa also completed the homeward leg on the trip yesterday, loosing their cargoes of bombs en route upon an aircraft assembly plant in Bordeaux, France.

Shuttle Bombing Success.

The raiders' arrival at home bases in the British Isles completed the first round-trip shuttle operation described by Brig. Fred L. Anderson, Wing Commander of the 8th Air Force, as the "greatest operational flight the United States Army Air Force has made to date."

Tenants Cannot Renew Sub-Lease

Ottawa, Aug. 25 — (CP) — The Rentals Administration of the Prices Board announced today that after Oct. 1 tenants of housing accommodation will no longer be able to perpetuate their leases in favor of sub-tenants or assignees of the leases. This provision is contained in the recently-announced rentals order, which becomes effective Oct. 1.

If a tenant assigns his lease or sub-lets the entire accommodation for the balance of the term of the lease, the landlord is entitled, under provincial law, to recover possession at the end of such term.

"In the past," the Board's announcement said, "it has been possible for the tenant to assign his lease to another or sub-let the entire accommodation and, at the termination of the lease, renew it for the benefit of his successor. This will not be possible on and after Oct. 1."

DREW ANNOUNCES CANCELLATION OF SEVEN CONTRACTS

Claims Companies Have Not Fulfilled Terms of Contracts.

NEW APPOINTMENTS

Toronto, Aug. 25 —(CP)— The Ontario cabinet, at a meeting yesterday, appointed Hon. George H. Challies, Minister without Portfolio, as vice-chairman of the Ontario Hydro-electric Commission following the resignation of W. L. Houck, former member for Niagara Falls and minister without Portfolio in the Liberal Government, who was defeated in the Aug. 4 election.

J. Albert Smith, second government representative on the commission also tendered his resignation but the new government will contnlue with only one representative on the hydro body.

Premier Drew announced that contracts with seven companies under which grants of timberland —13,729,280 acres—in northwestern Ontario had been given them would be cancelled by an order-in-council on Friday.

He said the companies had not fulfilled the terms of the contracts and had not erected mills as required.

"Without such mills, there can be no excuse whatever for permitting these companies to blanket great areas in Northern Ontario and keep other companies out," the Premier said. "This is merely a first step in placing the whole administration of our forest resources under a forest resources commission."

The seven companies are: Pulpwood Supply Company, Ltd., General Timber Company Ltd., Huron Forest Products, Ltd., Soo Pulp Products Ltd., English River Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd., Vermillion Lake Pulp Co., Ltd., and Western Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd.

DR. SOONG'S REPLY

Montreal, Aug. 25 (CP)—Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, stopped off here for a few minutes between trains last night on his return to Washington from the Quebec Conference. Refusing to comment on the meetings, Dr. Soong said smilingly: "Just imagine what it would be like if all the people who attended the conference gave interviews on it."

EARNS IMPORTANT PLACE

Montreal, Aug. 25—(CP)—United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull during a short stop-over in Montreal last night said in an interview "There is no doubt that every one of the United Nations has great admiration for Canada's great war effort, and that that effort has earned for Canada an important place in the united front."

BOMBERS LEAVE ITALIAN CRUISER AFIRE OFF ITALY

Block-Buster Assault Smashes Communications in Southern Italy.

SCHOONER BLOWN UP

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters North Africa, Aug. 25 (AP)—Allied air squadrons —significantly meeting no opposition from Axis fighters—hammered communications in southern Italy again yesterday, including a block-buster assault near Naples last night, and left an Italian cruiser afire off the south coast, headquarters announced today.

Dive-bombers, fighter-bombers and night bombers swept out to the attacks, and depleted Axis air forces refused battle for the second successive day. The only air opposition Monday was against bombers from the Middle East which raided Bari, in southeastern Italy.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Wellingtons poured two-ton block-buster bombs on steel works and railroad yards at Torre Annunziata, on the Gulf of Naples south of the big port

Torre Annunziata is another in the series of rail control points on the line south of Naples which Wellingtons have been pounding. Photographs showed both rail yards and the adjoining steel works were hard hit.

Ram Home Two Hits

Dive-bombers rammed home two hits with 500-pound bombs on the cruiser, blowing off its stern. Fires leaped from the ships as the attackers winged away.

Other invaders blasted railroad facilities at Sapri, on the Gulf of Policastro; at Castrovillari, in the centre of southern Italy; and at Sibari, on the east coast yesterday.

Four Allied planes were missing from all attacks, headquarters reported.

A Beaufighter blew up and sank a schooner off the Italian coast off Rome.

The Beaufighter, which swept in so low it knocked off one of the schooner's masts, also left one of two barges afire. The plane crashlanded at sea on its way home but the crew was rescued. Other Beaufighters left two tugs sinking from cannon-fire attacks off Corsica.

Theran, Iran, Aug. 25—(AP)—Ivan Maisky, Russian Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, arrived here today from Moscow en route to London, where he formerly was Soviet Ambassador.

50,000 GERMANS IN COPENHAGEN TO QUELL RIOTS

Mass Demonstrations Raging Against Occupation Forces In Denmark

PROTEST PARADES

Stockholm, Aug. 25 (AP)—More than three German divisions—between 40,000 and 50,000 troops—were reported quartered in Copenhagen today as the Nazis sought to stamp out riots, strikes and mass demonstrations raging against occupation authorities in Denmark.

The German forces, which began moving in from Norway before dawn last Saturday, took over public halls and other buildings as barracks, and posed an immediate food shortage in the Danish capital, already under short rations, Swedish press reports said. The contingent was the largest ever quartered in Copenhagen.

Protest parades against German occupation were reported from Odense, where 5,000 persons, carrying British American and Danish flags marched through the streets. Similar demonstrations took place in other Danish cities.

Refuse to Yield

The Danish government has refused to yield administration of justice to the Germans, who have demanded that saboteurs, reported increasingly active, be tried under Nazi law.

A general strike continued to tie up Odense, Swedish reports said, and Danish patriots have plundered shops of German sympathizers.

Half a dozen Danish cities, in addition to Copenhagen, were reported under a state of emergency as Nazi troops strove to put down what has been called the "people's revolt." Sabotage increased against transportation and industry serving the German war machine, dispatches said.

Hirohito Worried Over Production

New York, Aug. 25 — (AP)—The Tokyo radio, declaring Emperor Hirohito is deeply concerned over Japanese war production, appealed to the Japanese people today to "set the mind of the Emperor at ease" by exerting new efforts to boost production, the United States Office of War Information reported.

The appeals, the O.W.I. said, were made in broadcasts describing a series of audiences to which the Emperor summoned leaders of various industries to discuss "increased production for the elevation of fighting strength."

The O.W.I. said the Tokyo radio denied today Chinese reports that Admiral Mineichi Koga, who succeeded the late Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto as Commander of the Combined Japanese Fleet, had been killed in action.

Reduce Number Of Officers To Be Trained in Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 25. (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston announced today a reduction in the number of army officers to be trained in Canada.

Col. Ralston said there would be concentration at Brockville, Ont., of officer training centres and officer selection boards and centres which now are operating at Gordon Head, B.C., Three Rivers, Que., and Chilliwack, B.C.

"The army now is well supplied with officers", said Col. Ralston. "It has passed the expansion stage".

The Defence Minister said officer requirements for defence in Canada have "substantially decreased".

Officer requirements from now on will be principally to replace casualties and wastage, with consequent curtailment in officer training facilities, he said.

Col. Ralston's statement said that in future a greater proportion of officers will come from candidates with overseas service, some of whom will be trained in England and some in Canada.

Russians Report New Successes In All Sectors

Continue to Pound Off-Balance Nazis In Their Retreat From Kharkov

TWO TRANSPORTS SUNK

London, Aug. 25. (CP)—The Red Army continued today to hammer away at the off-balance Germans retreating from Kharkov, and a Soviet communique announced new successes all along the line as the Russian forces drove toward Poltava, 75 miles to the southwest and little more than halfway to the Nazis' Dnieper River defence line.

The war bulletin—broadcast from Moscow—said the Nazis, exhausted by the battle for Kharkov, were rushing reserves into the line but in spite of this the Red Army advanced both south and west of the city, killing 2,000 Germans and disabling 25 tanks in sharp fighting. Northwest of the city other units of the Russian army captured several villages.

Almost a Rout

The communique indicated the German retreat from Kharkov was reaching the proportions of a rout with the Nazi troops abandoning considerable stocks of war material and armored equipment.

The communique said that on Monday alone the Red Army had destroyed 77 tanks and 106 planes in fighting on all fronts.

The Kharkov area continued to be the focal point of the Russian advance. The fall of the city gave the Soviets several objectives to aim at, but the most likely choice was Poltava with Kiev, Ukrainian capital 250 miles to the west on the Dnieper, as the big goal of the summer offensive.

Repulse Counter-Attacks

In the Donets Basin, southwest of Vorshilovgrad, where the Russians previously reported they had breached the Nazi lines, the Red army broke up German counter-attacks, inflicted heavy losses and captured several towns, the Soviet communique declared.

Heavy fighting was reported south of Izyum, where 1,000 Germans were said to have been killed when Russians stormed a Nazi strong point. Much equipment was captured and thirty-three German planes were reported shot down.

Four towns were retaken in the drive toward Bryansk on the Central Front, the communique said. Soviet naval units and the fleet air arm were active in the Gulf of Finland, where two German transports totalling 8,000 tons were sunk, the bulletin said.

(The German High Command said the "big battle of defence in the east continues with unabated ferocity", but asserted that Soviet attacks collapsed. The Nazi communique, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by The Associated Press, claimed 263 Red Army tanks and 95 planes were destroyed yesterday.)

Himmler's Appointment Move To Keep Nazis on Top Till End

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Berne, Aug. 26 (AP)—Heinrich Himmler's appointment as German Minister of the Interior was intepreted by Swiss dispatches from Berlin today as a move to keep the Nazis on top to the bitter end and check any inclination toward weakness on the home front.

The Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuercher Zeitung, declaring Himmler's appointment had a "meaning which cannot be misunderstood," described the move as "a warning to all wishing to start new political trends."

Coming close on the heels of the season's first mass aerial raid on Berlin, Himmler's elevation was seen as a possible indication that morale in Germany is lower than hitherto had been believed.

The Neue Zuercher Zeitung dispatch said the situation was one "in which it is convenient for the Nazis to stress firmness."

Himmler's appointment means that the dreaded Gestapo chieftain assumes direct charge of thousands of civil servants and Bureaux throughout the country. The Gestapo hitherto has kept him informed of what nearly everyone is doing; his new post will both simplify his job and expand his power.

It was presumed that the appointment must have been made with the consent and approval of the army, thus indicating that the top military leaders still are ready to carry on the war in co-operation with the Hitler regime despite old differences with the Nazi party.

Were this not so, the army doubtless would not have permitted a man of Himmler's calibre to assume one of the most important posts in the Reich.

The Times of London described Himmler's designation as "the most outstanding piece of news which has been received from the German home front for months." Dispatches from London said the news was received there as an indication Hitler had deemed it necessary to take stern measures to keep the home front in line and prevent any recurrence of the collapse of 1918. One London commentator said Hitler's action was equivalent to naming his "Lord high executioner chief secretary of state."

R.C.A.F. RECRUITING JUMPS AT KINGSTON

Kingston—Monday was one of the "top" days for recruiting at the R.C.A.F. recruiting depot on Clarence Street in Kingston, when 26 applicants tried to enlist.

Nineteen of the men wanted to become members of air crew and seven wished to become ground crew. Of this number 24 were tested and over a dozen received medical examinations.

Recruiting has been quickened by the recent extension of the ages of men subject to call for compulsory military service but the newly installed recruiting officer, Flt. Lt. J. L. Fenn, who began enlisting recruits for the air force from the army depot at Fort Frontenac, has brought in eight soldiers who wish to change the color of their uniform.

Two recruits were sent to manning depot and three today but it is expected that, once the many applicants of the past few days are attested an increased flow of men will go to Toronto to take their first training.

Kinsmen Carnival Reports Given

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville held their first post-carnival luncheon Tuesday noon at the Quinte Hotel where reports were made by the General Chairman of the Karnival, Kiwanian Jack White, who expressed the thanks of the President, Bruce Lattimer, who was absent from the meeting on annual holidays, to all committee chairmen and Kiwanians generally for their tireless efforts to make the 1943 Karnival the success it turned out to be.

Kiwanian Lorne McDougall read a letter from the National Defence Services Association in which was expressed the gratitude and thanks for the support and contributions of magazines received for overseas distribution to the armed forces. A chairman was appointed to arrange for a definite drive to collect magazines for this purpose.

Speaking on his experiences in London during the two years in which he served overseas with the R.C.A.F., Jim Binkley, a member of the Ontario Intelligencer staff, addressed the meeting as guest speaker. Several incidents were spoken of and a number of comparisons between conditions in London and those existing here in Canada were pointed out. A humorous situation was the conclusion of the talk, when Kiwanian Ted Schwab made a presentation to the speaker of a painted wheel, a replica of the "Spello Wheel" which was the feature of the Kiwanis Karnival. It was the finest way of expressing their appreciation that could have been devised and will long remain a souvenir of his association with the Kiwanis Club.

Opportunity to Add to Feed Grain Supply by Bringing in Western Grain To Maintain Food Output

Maintenance of the food output of Canada at the peak as the war moves onward is abosolutely necessary. Food is one of the powerful weapons of the war and the farmers of Canada have been performing a magnificent job in their war effort. This great job they will carry on to victory.

Recently Col. Roscoe Vanderwater brought to the attention of the farmers of Hastings County the critical situation in regard to feed grain and its relationship to the production of bacon, milk, cheese and poultry in the year 1944. He pointed out that owing to weather conditions at the time of seeding and harvesting this year, the crop of feed grains in Hastings County would not it is estimated exceed fifty per cent of the average or forty per cent of last year's crop.

In the light of this situation he has strongly advised farmers to purchase western feed grains at the present time to bolster their supply so that the output of food on the farms may be maintained at its height. This grain can be secured now from the West, since there is the guarantee of transporation.

It therefore appears the part of wisdom by the farmers to take this advice and secure the necessary grain in the near future for eking out the local production for feeding during the winter and Spring months.

A farmer will not need a carload but a group of farmers can co-operate in bringing in carload, Col. Vanderwater points out. The net prices he quoted are barley $28 per ton, oats $30 per ton, and feed wheat according to the grade.

There is an advantage in this plan that the farmer who needs feed grain will be able if he orders western feed grain now to take advantage of the subsidies paid by the Provincial and Federal Governments.

Every farmer wants to do his utmost in production as a patriotic effort in keeping up the flow of food to the armed forces, to the British Isles and for the industrial workers.

Next year's demand on food will be heavy as the greatest importance attaches to that time.

The farmer needing feed grain will not let this opportunity pass. He has accommodation for some hundreds of bushels of grain. And if he has not the ready capital to make the purchase, he can be assured of favorable consideration regarding accommodation at any of the chartered banks.

Combined Bands to Use New Portable Stand for Concert

Through the generosity of the various civic bodies of the municipality and with the co-operation of the city engineer's department, the Belleville Municipal Band now has an up-to-date portable band stand capable of being erected in short order at any locale where it is desirous of holding band concerts.

The new portable band stand, measuring 24 by 30 feet and capable of accommodating approximately 75 musicians was built at the city yards under the direction of City Engineer Charles Mott and will be initiated this Sunday evening when a mass band concert is scheduled for the Armouries lawn. Taking part will be the combined Belleville Municipal Band and the Trenton R.C.A.F. band.

The need of such a portable band stand has been long felt by local band officials, according to Band Manager, Harry Moorman. In the past the only places having a raised platform suitable for holding band concerts have been the Victoria Park, which this year cannot be used on account of high water, and the Agricultural Park, both in out-of-the-way areas.

Grateful For Acquisition

The band management is indeed tickled by the acquisition of the new band stand," stated Mr. Moorman. "It is exactly, what we have needed and will fill a long-felt need in this city.

Getting down to the mechanics of the new structure, it can easily be seen a great deal of planning and careful consideration has gone into the construction details. Supported by 21 specially constructed trestles two feet in height, the floor of the stand is comprised of two-inch hemlock planks which interlock into the trestles by special cleats. No nails are needed in the erection of the stand. Corner posts will support electric wires for the lighting system.

So carefully planned is the band stand that it may be transported and erected at any location in the city by four men inside one hour, according to Mr. Mott.

More Common Occurrence

With the acquisition of the new band stand, band concerts on the Armouries lawn in the future will be a more common occurrence, stated Mr. Moorman. The use of the Armouries lawn, and also the Armouries floor during colder weather, has been offered through the kind generosity of Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry.

Sunday evening's concert will be unique in that it will be staged by the combined bands from Trenton Air Station and from Belleville. Group Captain R. E. McBurney, officer commanding Trenton Air Station, has granted permission for station musicians to rehearse with the Belleville band personnel for the concert and local music lovers will undoubtedly look forward with interest to the event.

First-Aid Work Will Feature Fall Activities of St. John Ambulance Brig.

Preparatory to a season of increased activity this autumn and winter, the Belleville division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, now under the leadership of Mr. Taylor Franklin, registrar at Albert College, has recently received a field first-aid kit with the compliments of the district office and Field Commissioner Dr. Bell.

Contained in the specially constructed first-aid kit are bandages and surgical dressings required for instruction purposes and for actual first-aid in case of emergency. The kit, which is slightly larger than a man's luggage case, is issued with the approval of the Provincial Compensation Board.

Autumn activities of the local division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade will shortly commence in earnest with new instruction classes to be inaugurated. To acquaint the public with the work done by the brigade, local division members will have a booth at Belleville Fair at which first-aid work will be demonstrated. Since the inauguration of the division in this city many persons have taken and completed instruction in first-aid work.

Deep appreciation of the local division personnel and officers is extended to Dr. J. J. Robertson who recently offered the use of his basement recreation room as headquarters for the division. Dr. Robertson has taken an active interest in the work of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and has officiated at different occasions, giving lectures and examinations to persons taking instruction.

The basement recreation room at Dr. Robertson's residence on Pinnacle Street will provide ideal headquarters for the local division and will fill a much-felt need. Alterations are now being effected which will provide an outdoor exit to the room, thus making it more convenient for the division personnel.

School Inspector, J. R. Pickering, Given Long Leave

Brown, B.A., Picton, Ontario; Trenton will be in the inspectorate of Mr. A. A. Martin, B.A., B. Paed., Brighton, Ontario; Sidney and Thurlow will be in the inspectorate of Mr. K. O. Birkin, M.A., B. POLICE BLOTTER

Police personnel of both city and provincial forces were occupied only with routine procedure over the night with nothing of a serious nature being reported.

Tuesday afternoon Plainclothesman Rathwell answered a call to 299 Pinnacle Street, where Barbara Day, age 12, of Wallbridge Road, had collided with a parked automobile while riding her bicycle. The girl was taken to the surgery of Dr. J. J. Robertson, where an examination revealed she had suffered only shock and was later driven to her home.

Last night a local resident who had imbibed to freely in intoxicating beverages was picked up on Front Street near the Capitol Theatre where he was lying on the sidewalk. The man was confined to the cells in the local bastile.

Police were advised by Chief William Bain of Trenton to be on the lookout for an auto bearing licence No. 5-A-359. The occupants of the car, said to be a man and woman, were alleged to have been connected with a break-in at Cobourg.

Czechoslovakians Hold Picnic To Assist War Effort

Frankford, Aug. 25 (Special) —A social event of interest was held in Sine's Grove on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 22nd. when the Czechoslovak National Alliance and Batawa Sokol Athletic Club held a picnic, the proceeds of which are to be used to buy Christmas boxes for the boys in the services. No admission fee was charged but a silver collection at the gate along with the proceeds from the booths, brought very gratifying results.

At the gate a banner "Nazdar" bordered by the Czeck and Canadian flag welcomed all visitors, who were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horcica. A band stand had been placed in the grove with benches placed at convenient spots near. A band concert was provided for the entertainment of all by the members of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment (R) Band by special permission of Lt. Col. Yates, commanding officer of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment. A number of little Czeck girls dressed in red skirts and white blouses, performed drills and sang under the direction of Mrs. M. Zurek. A beautiful cushion was raffled off during the afternoon. Mr. James Whytock holding ticket No. 13, was the lucky winner.

A large crowd was in attendance. The majority were from Batawa and Frankford but people were seen from Belleville, Stirling, Foxboro, West Huntingdon and other distant points. The members of the Czeckoslovak National Alliance and Batawa Sokol Athletic Club were very pleased with the response made by the general public in attending in such large numbers and wish to express their gratitude to the good cooks who so ably prepared and served the good things to eat that were provided at the different booths, also to the committee who worked so hard and unceasingly to get the grounds in order for the day. Thanks are also extended to Lt. Floyd Ketcheson for his services in so ably leading the band in the concert, that was so much appreciated by everyone, and to Mrs. Zurek for her efforts towards making the children's drills a success.

Sgt. Robert Gray Writes From Sicily

Marmora, (Special)—Parts of a letter received by Mrs. Percy Gray of Marmora, from her son, Sgt. Robert Gray of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regt., on Monday are herewith appended:

"Sicily, Aug. 4—I was talking to Li Sopha and Ray Nobes today and both are fine. Everybody from home that I've seen lately has been doing okay. We're all hoping to receive some mail in the near future. Soap, tooth powder, chewing gum and concentrated fruit powders are the main essentials for parcels while we are out here in the Med. The weather here is just the opposite to England, more like the dry summer days you're having back home. We've had one short thunderstorm since arriving here on the island, where everything is going according to plan. The poverty of Europe sure can be witnessed here in Sicily. Some of the towns here are sure a sight to behold and the conditions of living and clothing sure shock one. By the time you receive this, we hope the Sicilian campaign has been cleaned up as we are entering the final stages. Well supper is on after a quiet day. Give my best regards to all. God bless you, Bob."

Girls of the C.W.A.C. Pipe And Brass Bands Call Touring With Bands A Great Break

Abundant enthusiasm was displayed by members of both C.W.A.C. Pipe and Brass Bands, who had the carefree, holiday air of children enjoying a picnic, when they were interviewed a few days ago. Indeed, life on a tour, is a picnic to these girls who are accustomed to an ordered life in barracks, but it is far from being a lazy life. Their schedule calls for a large number of appearances in various parts of the country and members of the bands often travel back to barracks in buses when their sisters in khaki are sound asleep. They must do their washing in their very limited spare time and they must appear as neat as so many pins for every parade, but since they love seeing new places and find adventure in meals in strange hotels, they have a rattling good time.

Mostly Western Girls

To Western Canada, goes the lion's share of the credit for producing these two bands. All but three members of the Pipe Band are western girls and the Brass Band, which assembled at Calgary, from all parts of Canada, but naturally drew largely upon the west for its present aggregation of talent.

Victoria, B.C., claims pretty, red-headed Pipe Major Lillian Grant of the Pipe Band, who prior to her enlistment was leader of "Highland Lassies Pipe Band" in her native city. Another member of the Pipe Band to whom pipe-playing came naturally is Pte. Helen Stephen of Brandon, Man., who has two brothers in the championship pipe band of the Canadian Scottish Regiment. Pte. Cathleen Chalmers of Vancouver, B.C., is a daughter of the Macintyres, a clan of hereditary pipers and she inherits her talent and love of the pipes from those piper forebears. All these girls find life in the Pipe Band even better than their high expectations, and if you find any one of them in a confidential mood, she will tell you that the pipes have the edge on brass instruments.

Leader of Ukranian Descent

Of course, there is another side to this story and the girls of the Brass Band hold just the opposite point of view. The dark eyes of vivacious Bandmaster Nadia Svarich flash with feeling when she speaks of her beloved brasses. She is a charming girl of Ukranian descent who before enlisting taught school and specialized in music. Pte. Vera Meldrum of Raymond, Alta., tells the same story of loyalty to the Brass, emphasizing that there is no instrument to equal a good saxaphone.

The bass drummer, Pte. Ernestine Stafford of Lethbridge, Alta., when interviewed, stated that in the first place there was no instrument comparable to the bass drum and in the second place the only place for a bass drummer was in a brass band. So there you have it, you simply cannot shake the loyalty of these girls to their chosen instrument. Fortunately, the personnel of both bands are agreed upon one thing, life in a band is a great break for any girl.

The two bands will parade in Belleville at noon August 26th. and wind up at the Armouries for a short concert.

The Safest Man

The safest men are the men who care,
They never take chances anywhere,
They always watch where danger lies,
To save their limbs or else their eyes.

The safest men will do their best
To save their lives and all the rest
They will tell their partners to watch their step,
And see that Safety Rules are kept.

The safest men keep guards in place
To shield from danger their face,
They always keep a cut well bound
So it will heal both safe and sound

The safest men when using a machine
Will keep it oiled and also clean,
They will always try to do their best
So their work will always stand the test.

The safest men will always be
The only men of quality,
They are the ones who get ahead
When all the careless men are dead

Jungle Offensive Remains Firmly In Allied Hands

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 25—(AP)— The thunder of artillery, firing from the New Georgia jungle on Japanese making a last stand at Bairoko and from New Guinea mountain ridges on other Japanese in a last stand at Salamaua, accented the fact today that the offensive remains firmly in Allied hands.

As the current drive which opened June 30 neared the end of the second month, a spokesman for Allied headquarters reported progress today on both flanks of the 750-mile-long battle arc.

On New Georgia, American jungle troops have succeeded in pushing through harassing enemy patrols barring the way to Bairoko, 12 miles north, and have brought up artillery to blast away at the Japanese garrison holding that Kula Gulf harbor.

On New Guinea, where Allied troops have the Salamaua airdrome almost within their grasp, Australian troops advanced north of the Francisco River, while mountain artillery behind them shelled the defenders.

These troops crossed the river Monday at a point only two miles west of the air strip. Just how much of an advance they made yesterday as they moved on prepared Japanese defences was not stated but the spokesman said considering the type of jungle warfare, it was "substantial."

Above there, on the former Japanese-held Kolombangara island, American forces are consolidating positions occupied Aug. 15 on Vela Lavella in the face of enemy opposition.

Direct Contributions Materially Assist Kinsmen 'Fag Fund'

Direct contributions from local industrial plants materially assisted the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" this week when the Corbin Lock Company and Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company both made similar donations of $20.00 each to assist in the continuing of sending cigarettes to Belleville boys serving in the various theatres of war overseas.

Not to be outdone by their contemporaries in Squadron "C," the members of Headquarters Squadron of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) donated their share of prize money won in the recruiting campaign for the local reserve unit which enhanced the fund $10 in order that their active service comrades-in-arms overseas might enjoy a few smokes between skirmishes with the common enemy.

On Thursday night at the Park Pavilion a dance is being sponsored by the Kinsmen Club with all proceeds going directly to the club's "Fag Fund." The Commodores Orchestra donated their services and the pavilion gratis while a gala night's entertainment has been arranged by the Kinsmen to assure the venture success and are in hopes of response from the public towards the continuance of sending Belleville boys cigarettes.

The list of Belleville lads sent 300 cigarettes each this week through the Kinsmen Fag Fund included H. W. Beaumont, C. W. Bellis, Arthur J. Cleeton, D. G. Cole, D. R. Cole, F. E. DeCarlo, J. W. Jack Miner Steps Up Wood Duck Production

For the last five years Jack Miner, the Canadian Naturalist at Kingsville, Ontario, has been making a special effort to save wood ducks from extermination. For years past they have been so nearly extinct that the Governments of both U. S. and Canada have not allowed them to be shot. Jack Miner says that a wood duck and a golden pheasant are the most beautiful birds on earth.

Special nests have been built of tile on The Jack Miner Sanctuary and wood ducks have taken to nesting in them and have been successful in raising their young. As soon as the wood duck lays her eggs, Jack Miner takes them and places them under mallard ducks or buff cochin bantams, that act as step-mothers. In this way, instead of the wood duck's laying 12 or 15 eggs and spending the rest of the summer raising this brood, Jack Miner, by taking the eggs, raises from 35 to 50 young wood ducks. This method Jack Miner jokingly calls "speeding up production".

One school of thought would call this "interfering with Nature" or "upsetting Nature's balance". Jack Miner calls it "assisting Nature". His theory is that God puts birds and animals here for man's use and control and, with wood ducks so near extinction, he feels that he is helping Nature restore this most beautiful bird.

Jack Miner has these artificial nests all around his home, several only a few feet from his residence and this year he has fully 500 young ones on his ponds.

Badoglio's Gov't Confers With Italian Workers

Madrid, Aug. 25 — (AP)—Mounting tension in Northern Italy, due to Labor's unsatisfied demands for peace, was indicated today in Rome dispatches to the newspaper El Alcazar reporting on important conferences in Turin between Leopoldo Piccardi, Minister of Corporations in Premier Badoglio's cabinet, and two leaders of the Workers Confederation.

The conferences, the dispatches said, are considered of "tremendous importance" to Italy's future in view of reports national political problems, instead of labor developments, were the main subjects of discussion.

Piccardi, the correspondent declared, later reported to Badoglio on the opinion of the 3,000,000 organized members of the Workers Confederation concerning the course the government should chart, particularly "in connection with the war."

This seemed to indicate Badoglio might be forced to recognize Labor leaders' persistent demands for peace, emphasized by physical demonstrations and strikes.

The Rome reports did not make it clear whether the Badoglio government would attempt to pacify the working classes by conciliatory statements or action pointing to peace, or whether he would resort to force to end their agitation.

Quebec Parleys End

The Quebec Conference is history but its achievement will go ringing down the years for it reached with unanimity decisions to provide for "the forward action of the fleets, armies and airforces of Britain and the United States." What these decisions were in all detail the world will not know until Hitler lies in the dust and the Nazi armies and administration are broken. But the result of the decisions will be gathered as they are expressed in action on the field of battle.

The conference statement made it clear why Russia was absent as the main discussions were in respect to the assault upon Japan, with which Russia is not at war.

And it also announced that another strategic conference will be held before the end of the year in addition to any tri-partite meeting which can be arranged with the Russian Premier Joseph Stalin. It was indicated that the military decisions of the conference may be expected to realize in action very quickly.

In the press conference at the ancient citadel, emblematic of the security and confidence of the New World Nations, it was pointed out that the enemy submarine menace has been foiled and that its removal has made possible the fullest offensive action against the Axis powers across the world.

The world knows what the conferences of the past between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt have meant—they have achieved remarkable results. Latterly there have been the brilliant victories in North Africa and in Sicily.

The conference at Quebec too, will have its results. Mr. Churchill voiced his confidence that the future would justify the concentrated study which had been given these plans.

Burdens of Great Leaders

The great men of the world carry heavy loads. This was instanced by the British Prime Minister at Quebec when he referred to the busy nature of a war conference where decisions have to be made of weighty import. Mr. Churchill, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Stalin, General Chiang Kai-Shek, are four of such great men and among others are the great military leaders and the ministerial and military staffs.

Those who serve the public as these great men serve their countries and the world surely carry humanity's burden. They have the facts and they possess the ability to use these facts to decide the course of events and to define the course of history in the way of justice.

In no war in history have the great men borne heavier burdens or as heavy burdens as those borne by the United Nations leaders.

Some remarks of Mr. Churchill at the press conference reveal this fact. He said he had found the work very hard and he and Mr. Roosevelt had worked very hard and long while so many decisions had to be made.

The debt that is owing to these leaders of the peoples who fight against tyranny is recognized by all, and all must cooperate so that there may be the highest realization of the aims and objects of the great men who direct affairs.

And these men have great rewards in the satisfaction of knowing that what they are doing is for their own countries and for all the world and that in very spirit they serve truly the cause of liberty and justice.

With a Great Commander

Canadians who fought in Sicily had one of the pleasures of a lifetime last week when they sat on the ground while the Commander under whom they fought, General Montgomery head of the famous Eighth Army of which the Canadian First Division formed a part, addressed them.

General Montgomery is a type of leader that would please any Canadian and Canadian soldiers will never forget the day he spent with them for he is so much the man.

His remark that he liked personal contact with the troops is one that puts him high in estimation of men who fight on the battle front.

A soldier loves contacts with great strong men and General Montgomery is one of these strong men with individuality and a heart that takes in a great deal of mankind.

He praised the Canadians before him as having achieved the goal set before them and as having been chosen by him for the hard task because he was confident that they would fulfil the hopes and trust he imposed in them as fighting men. One of the greatest tributes he could have given them was to say that those many Canadians who gave their lives in the last war "could say to you today, 'Well done, very well done indeed.' That's what they would say, 'We passed on our sword to you and you have wielded it well and truly.' "

Emil Ludwig on Hitler

Montreal Gazette.

Hitler, says Emil Ludwig, is through. Germany is ready to fold up "tomorrow—any day". He is "positive" there will be no winter campaign.

Maybe. The Germans are taking a hard pounding, and maybe they can't stand much more. But how close they are to the breaking point we do not know, and we do not think Mr. Ludwig knows either. What's more, we do not think he or anyone else should make such pronouncements when they don't know.

Mr. Ludwig admits his judgment is not based on any military knowledge, but on "psychological reasons" based on his extensive acquaintance with the German people. Mr. Ludwig was born in Germany, but he became a permanent resident of Switzerland in 1907. In both of the great crises which Germany has gone through in this century, he has been on the outside looking in. Since 1940 he has been on this continent, a "refugee" from neutral Switzerland. There is some ground for doubt, therefore, that Mr. Ludwig's knowledge of the German character is any better than the next man's.

In any case, we think this is a good time not to make public statements about the imminent fall of Germany. Even Italy has not fallen yet. We have had enough wishful thinking for a while.

Paid to Loaf Around

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

Two movie theatres in St. Louis were closed for three years because the management was courageous enough to refuse to pay stage hands who had no regular work to do; no scenery to shift, no lights to manipulate, etc. The union demanded that these men be put on the payroll simply for standing-by. The union which supplies the operators of the reels refused to allow its members to work for theatres which would not pay members of other unions for simply looking on, and so the owners were helpless. After being in darkness for nearly three years the movies are being shown again because the owners found they could not buck the unions. And loafers are being paid.

In these days when manpower for war factories is so lacking, trade union officials and trade unionists ought to be ashamed for condoning this state of affairs. What will these men have to say for themselves when the St. Louis boys return from the war and ask them what they did to help?

These are humiliating union tyrannies, humiliating to the men who draw the pay, but must obey union rules, and a disgrace to the unions. There are many other trades in which "stand by" pay has to be paid. In the post-war scheme of things Congress should be bold enough, and sensible enough to abolish this species of union blackmail.

Gold as Anchor

(Windsor Star)

The future of gold seems assured, because it is the best anchor yet found for currencies, and the simplest means of balancing international accounts. For the duration, however, its status will remain uncertain. Just the same, whatever can be done, within reason, for the hard-hit gold towns of Ontario will make the post-war problems of this province that much easier, so Premier Drew's efforts on behalf of this industry will be watched with interest.

RESTORATION

Until he came I thought that I
Was done with playing ball;
That such a joy had passed me by,
But that's not so at all.

And I supposed that circus rings
Would interest me no more,
But now I find I like such things
Much better than before.

Now he is just past four years old
And I am sixty-one,
Restored to pleasures, be it told,
I thought forever gone.

And this is what the children do
At such a little cost:
They bring us back the joys we knew
And thought forever lost.

Whither American Policy?

I would like to go back again to the President's speech of July 28th. On that occasion he said, "The same kind of careful planning that gained victory in North Africa is necessary if we are to make victory an enduring reality... The United Nations are agreed that this is not the time to engage in international discussion of all the terms of peace and details of the future."

With all respect to the President, what is required to make victory an enduring reality is not at all the same kind of planning that gained us military victories.

War is a limited enterprise for a definite objective: to meet the armies of the enemy and defeat them. Once the decision to wage war is made by the representatives of the people, the conduct of it is necessarily authoritarian, the planning done by general staffs and the armies executing them with absolute obedience.

But the turning of victory into an enduring reality is a political question, involving the future of ourselves, our children, and our children's children. It involves committments beyond victory. In democracies it is something that all the people and their representatives can eventually decide. We do not have the right to ask General Marshall what his military plans are; he would rightly tell us to mind our own business. Nor do we have a veto over General Eisenhower's strategical moves. But we do have a veto over every single political move.

And so do the people of all the other "United Nations."

Lacking any basic declarations of policy, people today, all over the earth, are putting two and two together from guarded official statements of the Anglo-American powers, from open statements emanating from Moscow, from bits of news that appear in the press, from the operations of our Amgot staffs—and from all these they begin to see the picture of an emerging policy.

Now, we are told by our leaders not to think about these things but to get on with the war. It is suggested to us that two and two do not make four, or even five, but perhaps a piano. It is suggested that we postpone taking any thought, just trust our "experts", and eventually we will see what a nice piano we have to play on.

But one difference between dictatorship and democracy is simply this: In a dictatorship confidence in one's authorities is the leading virtue. In a democracy skepticism is a virtue which tempers personal political loyalties.

The blunt fact is that the Anglo-American policy, or what appears to be the Anglo-American policy, is greatly disturbing Russians, Czechs, Poles, Norwegians, Dutchmen, Belgians, Frenchmen, not to mention Chinese.

It is also disturbing some Americans and Britons. I should think the government would like to know this, inasmuch as the persons disturbed are by no means those least thoughtfully concerned in the waging of the war, but are, rather, some of its leading apologists, supporters of the administration, and advocates of a strong American policy.

These people are asking the following questions:

(1) Why do we not recognize the French Committee of National Liberation? Is it true, as reported by Harold Callender, on August 17th, that it is not to be recognized as an instrument for even the provisional government of France proper? Is it true, as suggested by Pertinax, in the N.Y. Times of August 20th., that we are still considering making a deal with Petain, once our armies arrive in France?

(2) Is it true, as reported in an A.P. dispatch from Moscow, August 20th. that a Russian representative sent to Algiers to establish contact with the French Committee of National Liberation had been refused a visa for over two months? Is it true, as reported from London, that this refusal was due to American intervention?

(3) Is ti true, as reported by Drew Middleton, from London, on August 15th., that President Edouard Benes had been held back from visiting Moscow to conclude a Russian-Czech alliance?

Is it true, as reported by several correspondents, that the Anglo-American Amgot is teaching Czech, Norwegian, Dutch, etc., to Anglo-American administrators, with the purpose of taking over the civil administrations of these occupied countries, against the wishes of the governments in exile, or of any other known democratic authorities?

(4) Is it true, as reported from London by Raymond Daniell of the N.Y. Times, that the Russians are worried over their allies' post-war ideas about the reconstruction of Europe, fearing that the Anglo-Americans intent to set up a cordon sanitaire of rightist governments?

And, finally, is it true that the Russians want definite assurances now, that the allies are not trying to encircle her?

I have only taken a few of the signs and portents everywhere. If one looks at the whole picture, every American patriot must be appalled by the vision of a post-war world in which nobody is going to like us—and be displeased for perfectly normal reasons. And it is not the slightest use telling American citizens that they should get on with the war without ever asking where the political actions accompanying the war are heading us.

In lieu of any clearly stated policy, I shall continue to raise a few questions and present the situation as I see it.

Plans Already Under Way For Another Parley

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 25 — (CP) — The sixth Churchill-Roosevelt was conference in Quebec is ended but plans are already underway for another, possibly to be supplemented by a tripartite conference with Soviet Russia.

One of the observations in the terse official joint statement given the press by the two leaders yesterday was that it was resolved to hold another conference before the end of the year, and it added that this would be "in addition to any tripartite meeting which it may be possible to arrange with Soviet Russia."

Thus the two leaders, wearied by a tense eight days of almost ceaseless conferences at which they took decisions which must remain secret until translated into action against the enemy, are already busy on plans for another meeting.

Definite statements that the plans particularly concerned action in the Pacific and that there should be confidence in ultimate victory if all free peoples played their part, were made public by the conferees at a press conference yesterday.

But the real force of the military decisions taken, both President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill said, will become known only as they emerge in decisive action against the enemy.

President Roosevelt was in Ottawa today but the activities of Prime Minister Churchill, and other high officials of the conference, again become a subject of security control and not open to public speculation or reporting.

Outstanding in last night's departure arrangements was a Canadian Pacific Railway's special train of 12 sleeping cars carrying close to 150 correspondents and photographers to Ottawa for Mr. Roosevelt's one day visit and open air address.

BRAUCHITSCH POISONED?

London, Aug. 25 (CP)—The London Bureau of Tass, Soviet News Agency, said Tuesday it had received a report that Field Marshal GGen. Walther Von Brauchitsch, former commander-in-chief of the German army, had died of poisoning.

The Soviet News Agency gave as its source, "Berlin military circles." There was no immediate confirmation from other quarters.

Argentine Letter

By LUCIE WALKER-LEIGH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Buenos Aires, Aug. 25 (CP)—The new regime in Argentina under Gen. Pedro Pablo Ramirez, who became President in an army revolt last June, has enacted a number of measures designed to improve internal conditions.

Former President Ramon Castillo fled when the revolt broke out.

The Ramirez regime has passed a rent restrictions law, fixed price ceilings for all foodstuffs and essential articles and cancelled free transport on the overcrowded public transit system.

A bonus has been granted on salaries of 263,000 government employees to meet higher living costs. Plans have been announced to start building small houses for the working classes.

Col. Alberto Gilbert, new Minister of the Interior, said in a speech that in future the labor department will be one of the principal organizations to frame Argentina's social policy. He added the government intends to co-ordinate its action for social justice and to see that its benefits reach workers throughout the country, as well as those in the capital.

Canada's Dominion Day was celebrated in Buenos Aires with three important functions and a special press publicity campaign.

A luncheon under the auspices of the Argentine-Canadian cultural institute took place at the Argentine Automobile Club, attended by about 500 people. An afternoon reception followed at the Canadian Legation, and there was a special radio program linking Canada and Argentina.

At the luncheon speeches were made by Hon. W. F. A. Turgeon, Canadian Minister to Argentina, and Rear-Admiral Segundo Storni, the new minister of Foreign Affairs.

The speeches dwelt on the close friendship and unity of interests and ideals existing between Canada and Argentina.

Ohio has given the United States six Presidents but not a single Vice President.

The ancient Greeks regarded Helen as the most beautiful of all mortal women. Before she was carried from her home in Greece to Troy by Paris, she had a daughter by Menelaus named Hermione. After the Trojan war Hermoine, whom Helen left behind in Greece, was married first to Neoptolemus, son of Achilles, and then to Orestes, son of Agamemnon.

Hamlet says: "The play, I remember, pleased not the million; it was caviare to the general". Trade between England and Russia was first opened up about the time Shakespeare was born, and when he wrote "Hamlet" about 1602 caviar, made from the prepared and salted roe of the Black Sea sturgeon, was a new and fashionable delicacy in London. Since the new Russian product was not relished by the common people, Shakespeare used it to symbolize anything above the understanding and appreciation of the masses.

The ancients considered the appearance of an owl near a sick chamber as an omen of death. This bird figures in the legends and folklore of nearly all peoples. Its nocturnal habits, noiseless flight, mournful call, and large, stationary eyes have all contributed toward making the owl an object of superstitious awe.

A person with exceptionally good sight is said to be "eagle-eyed". This notion is very old. In the Iliad, Homer says: "Thus saying fair-haired Menelaus departed, glancing everywhither, as an eagle which men say hath keenest sight of all birds under heaven, and though he be far aloft the fleet-footed hare eludeth him not by crouching beneath a leafy bush, but the eagle swoopeth thereon and swiftly seizeth her and taketh her life".

It is estimated that the number of hairs on the average human head is about 110,000, there being about 1,000 to each square inch of scalp.

Nearly 3,000 years ago Homer wrote that mules are far better "than kine to drag the jointed plough through the deep fallow".

During the decade between 1850 and 1860 more than 40,000 coolies were imported into California from China.

"Zero" and "cipher" are both derived from the Arabic "sifr", which in turn comes from the Sanskrit "sunya", meaning void.

SAY EX-SECRETARY OF FASCISTS DEAD

Unconfirmed Reports State Nephew of Mussolini and Mario Appelius Shot

Berne, Aug. 24 — (delayed) — (AP)— Rome dispatches to the Swedish Telegraphic Agency today reported the death of Lt.-Col. Ettore Muti, Italian ace and former secretary of the Fascist Party, but gave no details. (A similar report was heard in London yesterday.)

From the Italian frontier, meanwhile, came unconfirmed reports that Vito Mussolini, nephew of the former Duce and Publisher of the Defunct Popolo d'Italia, and Mario Appelius, leading Fascist Editorial Writer and Radio Commentator, had been shot in the Milan sports arena on July 28.

The frontier reports said Vito Mussolini and Appelius were slain following a battle between fascists and anti-fascists in which 12 soldiers were killed. Aldo Barella, another fascist journalist also was reported shot at the same time.

13 Loaded Jap Sampans Sunk

New Delhi, Aug. 25 — (SP) — R. A. F. Beaufighters and Hurricanes on offensive patrol along the Irrawaddy and lower Chindwin rivers in Burma struck at Japanese shipping and rail communications yesterday, an Allied communique announced today.

Thirteen loaded Sampans were sunk and a number of others were damaged in the sweeps. Others were damaged on the Kaladon river. Beaufighters wrecked a locomotive in a cannon attack near Thazi.

Vengeance dive bombers attacked a Japanese supply depot at Baguna south of Buthedaunt and hits were scored in the target area.

Nazi Censors Forbid Mention of Damage In Berlin Raid

Stockholm, Aug. 25.- (AP)— The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet reported today the Germans were claiming the potential effectiveness of the R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on Berlin Monday night was reduced 50 per cent by new anti-aircraft defences.

The new anti-aircraft setup, the dispatch said, involved close co-ordination of batteries of huge searchlights which helped Nazi fighter pilots find the raiders. The British acknowledge the loss of 58 bombers, 7 of them Canadian.

Strict German censorship continued to prohibit transmission of news concerning bomb damage.

NOT A HOT WATER SPRING JUST A BROKEN PIPE

Chatham, Aug. 25 (CP)—"Chatham, Canada's fashionable watering place," "bath of the Dominion," or some equally glamorous title seemed promised this city the other day when steaming, hot water began to bubble from the earth on SSt. Clair Street. The bubble burst, though, when investigation showed it merely an overflow from a broken hot water pipe at L. Myers' barber shop.

BOMBERS LEAVE

Hit Tunnel Mouth

Two formations of dive-bombers slashed roads and rail junctions at Sapri without even seeing enemy planes. They reported hitting a tunnel mouth as well as tracks.

Another wave soared inland to Castrovillari, key communications centre on the instep of the Italian boot, laying bombs on the tracks. Spitfires provided cover.

The cruiser attack was the first chance the dive-bombers had to employ their tactics on a large enemy naval vessel, although the new U. S. planes, known as "invaders" planes—already proven to be one of the most effective attack units of the Allied air fleets—sank many smaller vessels during the battle for Sicily.

South African Kittyhawks strafed 20 to 30 trucks moving eastward from Reggio Calabria, at the tip of Italy southeast of Messina.

Unwilling to Risk Forces

The almost complete disappearance of the Germans from Italian skies—except for the defence of Bari—after days of heavy losses in attempting to turn back daylight bombers led to the supposition the Nazis were unwilling to risk further depletion of their forces.

Allied planes in the Middle East downed an enemy aircraft off the coast of Cirenaica yesterday, and Beaufighters damaged an enemy merchant ship off Western Greece. One Allied plane was lost.

(The Italian communique, recorded by The Associated Press from a Rome broadcast, said the Naples and Salerno areas had been raided again, and declared an Allied destroyer and two merchantmen had been torpedoed in an Axis attack upon a Mediterranean convoy.)

Yesterday R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. Wellingtons made a pre-dawn smash at railway targets in Bagnoli, Naples suburb, while American bombers heaped new ruin on Battipaglia south of Naples by daylight. Both raids were concentrated.

Bomber Pilot Back on Job

By SUDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 25—(CP Cable)—Chuck McDonald of Toronto is back in England and he is going to get the wish he nurtured during internment in Sweden after he crash-landed his Lancaster bomber in Swedish waters four months ago—a return to bombing operations.

In fact the Canadian pilot is so impatient to get back into a Lancaster that he had his leave cut from five weeks to two so it won't be long before the operation chart of some bomber command station shows "McDonald, C.P. Flying Officer," as pilot of some bomber thundering over Germany again.

The Toronto veteran of 42 raids on Germany and Italy turned down a chance to return to Canada in favor of operations from here.

He was pilot of the Berlin-bound plane which Louis V. Hunter, Canadian Press war correspondent, flew last January and which was forced to turn back because of engine trouble over Denmark.

Portal-to-Portal Pay Turned Down

Washington, Aug. 25. (AP)—The United States War Labor Board has rejected John L. Lewis' second bid for portal to portal pay for his United Mine Workers.

The Board voted 8 to 4 against approving a provision in a contract between the U.M.W. and the Illinois Coal Operators Association whereby the miners would receive $1.25 a day additional to cover their underground travel time.

Labor members of the Board cast the dissenting vote.

W.L.B. sources said the Board made the decision yesterday. It approved other provisions of the contract, including one which permits payment of time and a half for the eighth hour in any day. The miners are now on a seven hour productive day. This excluded travel time.

U.S. Destroys 30 P.C. Day Fighter Production in Raid

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

United States Airforce Headquarters in England, Aug. 25—(AP)—Thirty per cent of the Nazi day fighter production was destroyed in the American heavy bomber raid on the Regensburg Messerschmitt plant Aug. 17, Maj.-Gen. Harold L. George, United States Air Transport Command Chief, told a press conference today. He predicted that if the tempo of the present operations by the R. A. F., R. C. A. F. and U. S. A. A. F. can be increased Germany's economic structure will fall by year's end.

Gen. George said such a collapse did not necessarily mean Germany would be forced out of the war at that time, but explained that the economic structure "won't be able to function in a degree necessary to support the war."

He said the Regensburg Messerschmitt plant was "literally washed off the map" and it meant the Germans would be deprived of at least 1,500 to 2,000 fighter planes. That number could be manufactured in the six months he considers the minimum necessary to replace the wrecked factories "even if machine tools and other equipment are available."

Teacher Shortage In United States

Washington, Aug. 25. (AP) — Thousands of class rooms in the United States will be closed and others will be consolidated when school opens this fall because of a teacher shortage.

The military services and war jobs are taking them.

A recent check by the National Education Association showed 75,000 fewer teachers than usual for this time of year had been signed up by elementary and high schools in the United States.

Benjamin W. Frazier, United States Education Office analyst, expressed belief in an interview that even late sign-ups would leave a shortage of perhaps 15,000 to 25,000. He warned there almost certainly would be a "substantial" increase over last year's 13,000 classroom closing.

School officials throughout the country driving to overcome their teacher shortages are using these methods:

Increasing salaries; reinstating married women; replacing men with women; using college but non-teaching trained persons; increasing the number of pupils and courses per teacher; recalling retired teachers; discontinuing courses; transferring teachers to subjects where shortage is most acute.

SAYS DE MARIGNY ASKED QUESTIONS

Police Lieutenant Testifies as to Comment Made by Oakes' Son-in-Law.

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 25—(CP)—Lady Eunice Oakes is expected to testify tomorrow in a hearing to determine whether her son-in-law, Alfred De Marigny, must stand for trial for the bludgeon slaying of her millionaire husband, Sir Harry Oakes.

The prosecution revealed yesterday that Lady Oakes would be called toward the end of the long hearing.

She came to Nassau Monday.

Previous witnesses have testified there was ill-feeling between Sir Harry and De Marigny, apparently stemming from Sir Harry's disapproval of their marriage.

Nancy, who has steadfastly contended that her 33-year-old husband is innocent, did not meet her mother at the airport here and there has been no word that they have met since Lady Oaks' return from the United States.

At the hearing yesterday, Nassau Police Lieutenant John R. Douglas testified that De Marigny inquired of him, while officers still were investigating the killing, whether a man could be convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence.

He said he told De Marigny: "Yes, I think so."

Later, Douglas testified, De Marigny asked "whether, in British courts, a man could be convicted if the murder weapon is not found." Douglas also said De Marigny told him "That guy, Sir Harry, the old ——, should have been killed anyhow."

The conversation took place, Douglas said, while he was carrying out orders to keep a close watch on De Marigny the day Sir Harry's body was found.

Should Peptic Ulcer Receive Medical or Surgical Treatment?M

[illegible]

There never was a time when so much was being written about stomach and intestinal ulcer as during these war years. The very fact that there is a great increase in the number of cases definitely points to the main or underlying cause of ulcer—nervous or emotional tension.

The main symptom of ulcer is pain in the stomach 2 or 3 hours after eating and the cause of the pain is the action of hydrochloric acid of the stomach digestive juice which acts on food eaten and the lining of stomach and intestine.

Ulcer of the stomach and ulcer of the duodenum (the part of the small intestine into which the stomach empties) are both called peptic ulcer. Duodenal ulcer is much more common than stomach (gastric) ulcer. Although the lining surface of the stomach and intestine is soft and hydrochloric acid can wear through this lining, nevertheless if ulcers are given a fair chance they have a great tendency to heal.

When the ulcer is not healing rapidly, the physician may be considering the possibility of the need for operation. Drs. Lucian A. Smith and Andrew B. Rivers, Mayo Clinic, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, state, "As a rule the following groups of patients who have duodenal ulcer should receive medical treatment first:

1.—Almost all those who have uncomplicated duodenal ulcer and have had it but a short time.

2.—All younger patients, 30 years or less, if at all feasible.

3.—Usually those older patients with no complications, especially if symptoms are mild, remain mild, and do not interfere seriously with patients' daily life or work.

4.—Old patients with heart disease, diabetes, overweight.

5.—Very nervous or neurotic patients.

6.—Very irritable patients with rapidly emptying stomachs.

7.—Patients who refuse operation even when operation is necessary.

8.—Women patients whose ulcers are not complicated by other disease such as gall stones.

The following groups of peptic ulcer patients usually require operation: 1.— Long standing ulcers that have healed often but left scarring which prevents proper healing. 2.—Where other surgical disease is present—appendix or gall bladder. 3.—Where dieting or hospital treatment cannot be followed for various reasons.

To prevent ulcer returning after healing, two suggestions are made by Drs. Smith and Rivers: 1.—Patient should avoid nervous tension, anger, worry, anxiety, too much responsibility. 2.—He must stay away from alcoholic beverages, tobacco, spices and relishes.

LET'S ALL DO MORE TO WIN THE WAR

BEFORE THE WAR: Harry and his wife always went to the beach for their vacation. They had a swell time. Cost quite a bit of money.

TODAY: Harry and the family are using their two-week vacation to do a real war-effort job—working on a farm, helping to relieve the farm labor shortage. They're enjoying it. Money saved, too.

THE MORE WE'RE IN IT THE QUICKER WE'LL WIN IT!

Our fighting men are giving ALL their time to the job of winning the war ::: fighting in Sicily... hunting U-boats in the Atlantic... bombing Germany! The least we can do is to make use of our spare time by doing some war-effort job. Look around! You'll find lots of opportunities to work for victory. Helping some hard-pressed farmer to harvest his crops is but one of them. We can't all fight, but all of us can work.

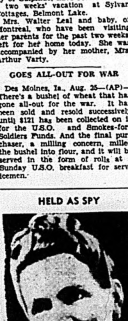
Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 25—(AP)—There's a bushel of wheat that has gone all-out for the war. It has been sold and resold successively until $121 has been collected on it for the U.S.O. and Smokes-for-Soldiers Funds. And the final purchaser, a milling concern, milled the bushel into flour, and it will be served in the form of rolls at a Sunday U.S.O. breakfast for servicemen.

HELD AS SPY



Grace Buchanan-Dineen, a native of Canada, who was arrested by F.B.I. in Detroit, with one other woman and a man, in connection with the smashing of the first spy ring since Pearl Harbor. Miss Dineen was trained in German espionage in Hungary prior to the U.S. entrance into the war and came to the U.S. by clipper, October 27, 1941, according to J. Edgar Hoover, F.B.I. chief. She is described as an attractive, well-educated descendant of French nobility.

FIVE LITTLE GIRLS HELP WAR EFFORT

The highest credit is due to five little girls who live on Foster Avenue, who have the welfare of the boys overseas in mind at all times. These five little girls, Jean Brown, Shirley McHarold, Shirley Taylor, Joan Brown and Margaret Casey, ranging in age from eight to thirteen, have for the second time made money for cigarettes to be sent to our soldiers and airmen overseas. Their first amount, $3.00, was made by putting on a show in the cellar of one of their homes, and charging nickels and dimes for admission, and the second sum of $2.00 was made last Saturday, when they sold oilcloth covers for Dutch Cleanser cans and pot holders they had manufactured. This latter enterprise was held on the open market and the earnings were turned over to Mrs. W. A. Gardner, secretary of the C.N.R. Veterans (Ladies' Auxiliary) Fag Fund.

PHILLIPSON AND ZION W. I.

The regular meeting of the Phillipson-Zion branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carleton Cronkright on the afternoon of August 19, with the president, Mrs. W. Tufts, in charge. Minutes of previous meetings were read and approved, also correspondence presented and dealt with. The finance committee reported $65 on hand. It was moved by Mrs. C. Cronkright, seconded by Mrs. B. Casey, that $25 be sent to the Red Cross and several ladies offered to knit a pair of socks for the local boys who are serving overseas. Current events were read by Mrs. A. Stevenson, consisting mostly of the Allied conference in Quebec.

Topic of the afternoon, "History of Surrounding Community," prepared by Mrs. Kenneth Denyes and in her absence was given by Mrs. S. McCurdy, of Stirling. The first organized school was vastly different from the present system. In the early days the teacher received small pay and boarded from house to house. Families who had children paid the expenses. In 1836-37 there was a saw mill in operation at Holloway. In 1855 a grist mill was erected, also a store and hotel, and twenty years later a cheese factory. In winter time several full grown men and girls would attend school. One of the pioneer settlers was Aunt Sally Wilson, a typical Irish lady. She had crossed the ocean in a sail boat, seven weeks on the stormy sea. She could rake and bind and commanded the highest wages in harvest (four shillings a day). She was also an expert on making straw hats. In 1881 there was one of the worst threshing machine accidents yet known in the province, a man by the name of Mr. Anson Thrasher was anxious to try steam power, the engine busted, killing Mr. Thrasher, two other men and a little girl.

Occasionally a circus would travel from Belleville to Madoc and every one, young and old, thronged the Madoc road to see the sights. All white horses and band music, elephants and camels driven by gorgeously dressed attendants was a real right. In 1867 was the rush for gold in Madoc; 1874-75 was the building of the Grand Junction railroad. Wm. C. Sills brought into the district the first mower, (Buckeye) and Samuel Youker had the first reaper called Bells of Ohio. Mrs. McCurdy closed her address by saying "Seventy years ago we commenced to drift into the machine age, and fifty years ago more rapidly and at present we have electrical advantages and all manner of machinery for farm and factory."

Mrs. Carman Sine tendered a vote of thanks to Mrs. Cronkright for acting as hostess and the meeting closed with the National Anthem. Mrs. Cronkright then invited all to the dining room where the table was laden with good things and a social hour was spent. Mrs. Carman Sine and Mrs. Byrant Casey assisted in serving.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A LETTER FROM A SOLDIER'S WIFE.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

While my husband was in camp, he and I were asked to be godparents for the baby that was then expected by our closest friends. Soon after that my husband was sent overseas. Now the baby is to born probably the early part of next month, and the mother-to-be and I (her husband, too, is now overseas) are wondering what to do about asking another godfather to serve. She is very much disappointed that we cannot carry out our original plan and I am, too, especially since just this week in a letter I received from my husband he referred to his promise and asked about the birth of the baby. I hate to write him that he won't be able to be the godfather .. but this is what I must do, isn't it?

— Marie.

I'm so glad you wrote me, for I know you'll all be comforted and delighted at the good news that your husband, even though so far away, can be godfather. The fact that it was all arranged and understood and agreed to beforehand makes everything all right. Now all the prospective mother has to do about it is to ask some man friend (perhaps a mutual friend of hers and your husband's) to act as "proxy" for your husband and explain this to the minister who is to perform the christening service.

When is it Proper to Write.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Last year I met a young man in another city, we became very good friends, and since I left that city we have written to each other steadily. But he has not written me now for the last two months, and I am wondering if he may not have received my last letter. Do you think this means that he doesn't want to write to me any more? And do you think it would be too forward if I sent him a postcard asking him if he did receive my past letter?

— Anne.

I can't tell, any more than you can, dear girl, why this young man hasn't written you lately. But most young men are very busy these days and his letter-writing may have had to be put off for other more pressing duties! So I see no reason why you should not be understanding, not stand on ceremony about "letter-answering", and for this once write him again, a friendly note saying you hope he got your last letter, you hope all is well with him, and that you are looking forward to hearing the latest news about him. If he doesn't answer this letter .. well, that's something different!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Doesn't Want Our Sympathy, But He has It, This Husband Whose Life is Made Miserable.

Here's a letter from a husband which would furnish unlimited thought for wives who don't take the job of matrimony seriously.

The husband apparently is making the best of what he considers a poor matrimonial bargain. The third point in the triangle—the other woman—seems to have high ideals and not much else in the way of reward.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I've been reading your column for a long time, and what gets me is why do people think a man can't really love another woman even if he is married?

"I love another woman, though I've been married for twelve years and have three little daughters. Without them I could not live with my wife, but she imagines I love her. And let me say I've never given her any reason to think I don't. Three months married, I knew I'd made a mistake. At the end of the first year she left me and our baby because I couldn't afford to rent a house to ourselves, but had to live with my own people at the time.

"Now I'm making good, and if I don't give her everything she wants she threatens to desert again. She will leave our younger child, a baby, with anyone who will take her. I don't know where my wife is, what she is doing, and I'm not interested in her enough to care.

"The other woman is a type that any man would honor as a wife. She loves me too, but I haven't seen her for months and she won't see me because she thinks our friendship would make others unhappy and she would not consider my getting a divorce.

"When my children used to see her they really loved her more than they did their own mother. Their mother seems to have no time for them and whip them when I'm not there to defend them.

"I'm not asking for sympathy; I just felt like telling my story to you. Of course there are a lot of things that can't be told, among them why a man doesn't love his wife. I wish I could love her. I've tried to make myself love her and make a go of our marriage.

"As I do not see the woman I love, I don't care to go with anyone else. Although we don't see each other, we hope that some day things may turn out better for us.

—M. I. S."

While this correspondent says he's not asking for sympathy, he surely has ours in full measure and overflowing. If readers of this column have any helpful suggestions, we'll be glad to print them.

The Marry-Go-Round

WAITING WIVES

"My wife insists on finding a job while I'm away," writes a bridegroom in the Navy. "Don't you think that she'll find enough to do, just keeping a home for me to come back to?"

No, I don't, Lieutenant! What do you expect her to do, between meals? Just loll around, waiting for a letter and wondering what's happening to you? Whether you have enough quilts and blankets at night, to keep you from freezing, or are getting tropical fever in the jungle? You have no idea how fast a woman's imagination can work, when it has nothing to work on! The transatlantic clipper is a slow freight, beside it!

Give the wife a break! Take it for granted she has character, brains and nerves. Or do you agree with Hitler, that "woman's place is in the kitchen," no matter how much more she may be needed or how much happier she may be, somewhere else? Service-men's wives, above all other women, are passionately desirous to do some war-work—ANY work that will help their husbands to speed up the ultimate victory—the triumphant finish!

Only the other day, the wife of a naval officer told me that she would "go nuts" if she didn't have a job, her work was the one thing that made it possible for her to sleep at night.

And, don't be afraid that the Little Woman won't revert to type and go domestic when you return. Most women would rather make a home for a man than do anything else. They are designed and fitted by nature to run a house, look after a husband and family, plan dinners, sew and mend and putter around a cook-stove. They are the mother-sex—and they love it! It is their atavistic instinct.

But the "working-wife" is not only an accepted fact these days; she is a highly important factor. At this psychological moment, "woman's place" is wherever she is best fitted to do the job. And in the job that most needs her. And why do they call a girl who earns her living, outside of the home, a "working-wife?" What do they think house-work is—play?

Moreover, there are lots of girls, who inherit their FATHERS' talents for running a business, making money, designing houses or even holding political jobs. It is marvelous what women are accomplishing in politics! Why should a first-rate woman lawyer remain a third-rate cook, and make some man miserable all his life, just for convention's sake? Queen Victoria is dead.

If I were a service-man, I imagine that it would be very comforting to visualize the Pretty Young Wife building airplanes or pounding a typewriter or welding in a factory, all day, instead of running around to bridge parties or beauty-shops or cocktail bars. That's the trouble with wives whose "place is in the home." They have too much time on their hands. WORK would be their salvation! Nobody is more pathetic or in more danger, than a restless woman, hanging around the house all day, waiting for a letter!

Waiting wives! To me, they are the bravest—and most pitiable — women on earth, just now. Give them a break! Give them worthwhile work, to fill their minds and their time!

"BORROWED" A HORSE

Cobourg, Aug. 25 (CP)—Signs of these gasolineless times: Police Chief W. J. Carey for the first time in his 24 years' service had a horse-stealing case on his hands last Saturday. The horse and buggy belonged to James McEllenborough, and the culprits were three juveniles who had "borrowed" the transport to deliver a letter in Port Hope.

W.A.V.E. Pulls Lever and Brings Firemen

New York, Aug. 25—(AP)—Several hundred Waves, training at Hunter College, were roused from their dormitories for a routine fire drill which turned out more realistic than scheduled. There was no fire—but up to the school rolled two engine companies, two hook and ladder trucks, the fire patrol, two battalion chiefs and several police cars. It seems one of the Waves, assigned to a nearby fire alarm box, misunderstood her orders and pulled the lever.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

NOISY BREATHING IN BABIES

Noisy, difficult breathing in a baby is an alarming condition to the parents. Though it may indicate a serious emergency requiring the doctor's immediate attention, in many instances, it does not prove a severe disorder.

Noisy breathing in babies is called stridor. There are two varieties; one occurs in attacks, and is called spasmodic stridor; the other is continuous, and is called sustained stridor.

Among the things which cause spasmodic stridor is the lodging of a foreign body in the voice larynx. For example, the baby may put a marble or other object into his mouth, and then may suddenly draw a deep breath, thus jamming the object into his larynx. Then stridor, with cyanosis—a bluish color of the skin, due to the lack of oxygen—speedily occurs. Unless the object is quickly removed, the condition may be fatal.

According to Doctor J. Vernon Braithwaite, of England, the treatment must be prompt and thorough. He thinks that many infants have been saved by picking them up by the heels and hanging them head downward, meanwhile striking the back firmly with the hand. If this does not dislodge the object, it may be necessary for the doctor to make an opening in the windpipe.

Another cause of attacks of noisy breathing in infants is called laryngismus stridulus. This condition is not dangerous. It may occur in a disorder known as spasmophilia, which is due to a lack of calcium and vitamin D. In this condition the child seems apparently well, then, suddenly, his breathing becomes noisy and difficult. The attack, however, lasts only a few minutes, after which the spasm of the larynx relaxes and normal breathing is resumed.

During an attack, the child's clothing should be loosened, and cold water may be splashed on his face. In order to prevent these attacks, the child must be given lime containing preparations in the proper dose, as well as cod liver oil, or some similar substances, to provide him with vitamin D.

Continuous noisy breathing may be due to what is known as congenital laryngeal stridor. This condition is present at the time of birth. The child's breathing is described as crowing or croaking. However, the child is in no way distressed. As the baby grows older the noise accompanying breathing may become louder. After a few weeks it begins gradually to become less intense, and at the end of six months may have disappeared completely. No treatment is needed for this condition.

Other things which may cause noisy breathing are diphtheria, abscess of the throat, and various infections of the larynx. Whenever noisy breathing occurs, a careful study should be made by the physician to determine its cause, so that the necessary treatment may be properly started.

Red Cross Briefs

In an effort to alleviate the hardships of Polish prisoners of war, the Canadian Red Cross is sending 20,000 food parcels per month to Poland. Belgian prisoners receive 34,000 monthly, whilst 210,000 more parcels per month are distributed amongst other allied prisoners in Europe.

More than half a million dollars was spent by the Outpost and Nursing Service of the Canadian Red Cross. 37,000 patients were treated, 2,100 children were born, 4,900 operations performed, and 819 children's clinics were held in Outpost Hospitals.

More than two million dollars' worth of clothing, medical supplies and food, donated by the people of Canada to the people of Russia, has been forwarded by the Canadian Red Cross.

Canadian children members of the Junior Red Cross, contributed more than $150,000 last year towards Red Cross services.

During the years 1940, 1941, and 1943, Red Cross supplies and materials were carried overseas on 616 ships. Of these only fourteen, (approximately 2 per cent.) were lost. All others reached their destination safely.

In addition to food parcels, the Canadian Red Cross Society is now supplying two million cigarettes per month to the Pool in Geneva in order to take care of the needs of Canadian prisoners in this regard.

Australians Beat Japs In Jungle Fighting

From News Letter Issued by the Australian Section of the Empire Press Union.

For months independent Australian commando companies incessantly harried the Japanese in the Lae-Salamaua-Mubo area of New Guinea ,and during that time they did not surrender a man alive, wounded or dead, nor did they leave for the enemy even a scrap of information or a fragment of identifiable material.

Odds, often suicidal, faced them in their perpetual raids. Before, during and since the battle of Papua, they waged their own campaign. They kept the Japanese out the rich Bulolo valley, and for a long time out of Lae, Salamaua and Mubo. When finally their small numbers proved inadequate to garrison even one of those towns against the tremendous weight of Japanese regiments, they took to raiding, not waiting for the enemy to attack, but carrying the fight right into his camps.

They played their lone hand up to the time the Japanese tried to take Wau. Then they were reinforced and shared in the fighting which drove the enemy back to Mubo. Then they went on leave.

Their leader, packing his kit for a trip home, said they lost only 12 men killed or wounded, but they killed at least 500 Japanese and they could not check the number they wounded.

Initially they were flown to Wau and immediately their leader, Lieut. Colonel Fleay, a Perth printing compositor, set out in search of first hand information. He sneaked into Lae and counted the Japanese there, but found there were too many to give prospect of success in an attack. So he turned his attention to Salamaua, into which he took four officers, while his second in command shot up a nearby Japanese outpost as a diversion. They reconnoitred every part of the town and, although they were discovered, all got out safely.

Counting on the element of surprise to offset disparity in numbers, the commandos reckoned that 70 men, with Bren and tommy guns, could do the job.

Lieut. Colonel Fleay took them into the town at 8 p.m., and put them actually under the houses in which the Japanese were quartered.

They killed off 100 Japanese and came out with many documents and valuable information. They left Salamaua only because they did not have enough troops to hold the town.

Next day they raided Lae. Their activities held up the Japanese attack on Wau, and made possible the ultimate defeat of the enemy.

At Mubo the Japanese attacked them. There were only 25 Australians. Two hundred Japanese took part, but they walked into two Vickers guns and only 30 of them escaped. The Japanese returned 900 strong, but were fought off. The commandos lost only one man, and they brought out his body and took a number of prisoners, including Chinese who had been forced by the Japanese to act as carriers.

The Japanese were the first to modernize the art of jungle fighting, but these commandos taught them more about it than they ever knew. Other members of the corps say they found the Japanese soldier has little initiative, and breaks down when faced with a situation he has not been trained to meet. He becomes excited when his leaders are lost, and he is surprised. However, when he has the initiative and is in a situation to his liking he is a hard fighter.

The commandos slept in wet clothes; their socks lasted a week and their boots not much longer. Theirs was possibly one of the toughest areas in which to fight in the world, and those who had been in both campaigns said it was harder than the Owen Stanleys.

Pte. A. Duff of Tenterfield, and Pte. B. Hyde, of Bega, (N.S.W.) told of the strain of the work of the troops in this area.

"Sleep is something you get when you can when the pressure is on", Pte. Duff said. "It is not unusual to do a few hours' guard duty in a night, and that means keeping your ears wide open, and then do a day's patrolling, and maybe get tangled up in a real skirmish.

"One time we had two and a half days in which our nights were broken with an hour on guard and an hour sleeping. One time we went 12 days with one meal a day, when we were virtually cut off. Another time during the Wau flare-up, we practically lived off the country, eking out our rations as sparingly as possible and filling up on kaukau potatoes and smoking the harsh native tobacco. When the Kai (food) came in it was like Father Christmas. None of us will heard a word spoken against natives".

Cpl. D. Mills of Mudgee (N.S.W.) still wearing a tuft of the beard he grew when out in the scrub for a long time, is the type usually called "typical Australian bushman".

"The majority of these bays are town boys, but the way they've adjusted themselves is marvellous" ,he said. "They are more adaptable, quicker on the draw and have a better eye than the Japanese".

Lieut. Richard Danne, of Hawthorn (Melbourne), had an extraordinary experience. He and a small party had a nerve test on Observation Hill, then they walked around a suspected ambush with Lieut. R .J. Fraser, of Seymour, firing rifle grenades into the area to keep under cover some Japanese who were suspected to be hiding in a patch of Kunai grass. The next morning they came back, and, stealing through the Kunai, came on four Japanese sitting by their foxholes eating rice.

"We shot them, but thought the rattle of our fire would put every Japanese in the area on the alert. To our amazement, a little further on we found two more. One was whittling a stick, and the other leaning against the edge of his hole with his rifle well away.

"They are now dead. The Japanese seem to live in their foxholes. Most of these holes are just deep enough for them to sit down cross-legged, and apparently they just sit and wait".

Captain Norman Winning, formerly of Java, said: "I'm Scottish, but I couldn't wish for anything tougher than this bunch of Australians".

At one stage he said, he became "quite friendly" with Admiral Nakamura, Japanese commander at Salamaua.

"After a raid on Salamaua, in which we killed 137 Japs and had only two of our men slightly wounded, he sent a carrier to me with a verbal message. It was that he was going to 'have a crack at us', but would not say when.

"He sent a party against us at Mubo. After we wiped them out I received another message.

"This said he would have another crack at us, but that if we proved too much of a nuisance he would withdraw all Japanese from Salamaua and replace them with Siamese dacoit jungle fighters.

"I received about four messages from him. I told him to go to hell each time".

Members of the party said that Captain Winning could "smell out Jap snipers", and credited him with having personally killed 50 with tommy and Australian Owen guns.

The awards received by the corps were one D.C.M., one Military Medal, and three men mentioned in despatches.

On January 1, last, after Australians had retired from Mubo, the Japanese pinned surrender demands, signed by Nakamura, to trees at an observation post.

The notes read:

"A large portion of British New Guinea has been captured by us. Let it be understood that Wau and nearby district will also be captured by us in the very near future. Therefore, the only wise and best thing for you soldiers to do is to surrender. To anyone who rejects this notice no mercy will be shown".

The Australians answered the note with a six-day raid on Mubo, commencing January 10, in which 300 Japanese were killed.

Picton, Aug. 25—A petition has been circulated locally asking that the town council take steps to improve the townmarsh. It is requested that the drainage entrance from the marsh to the harbor be cleared, new drainage channels made through the marsh and finally that the marsh be filled in to provide a town park.

This year, there is no outlet from the marsh due to high water in the harbor and because a large amount of debris has accumulated. The high water has flooded gardens of those residents whose homes adjoin the marsh. Lacking a sewerage system, an unhealthy condition prevails, and the petition has already been signed by several hundred people, and will be presented to council at its next meeting.

King Welcomes President To Dominion Capital

Ottawa, Aug. 25 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King introduced President Roosevelt to a vast crowd assembled on Parliament Hill today as "an undaunted champion of the rights of free men and a mighty leader of the forces of freedom in a world at war."

He welcomed the President as "a life-long friend of our country" who, with Prime Minister Churchill, had contributed "a further advance towards complete victory" at the Quebec Conference.

The association of Canadian, American and British troops in Sicily and in the Aleutians is a happy augury for the future, the Prime Minister said, because "we are firmly convinced that in the close association of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America lies the surest guarantee of international peace and of the furtherance of the well-being of mankind throughout the world."

Mr. King said he thanked Mr. Roosevelt "for having honored our capital city by your presence at a time which is without parallel in the history of human affairs. The Canadian people will, I know, wish me to express to you the admiration which they feel for you and for your great career . . .

"We have long known that your services to the cause of freedom far exceed limits of race and bounds of nationality . . .

"This is the first occasion on which a President of the United States has visited Canada's capital. It is particularly pleasing to us that this visit should have its association with your momentous meeting in the ancient capital of Canada with the Prime Minister of Great Britain."

The Prime Minister said that the "rapidity with which the American people have gathered their strength and the momentum and magnitude of their war effort, has filled the world with amazement. All Canada joins in admiration for the efficiency and heroism of the men of the fighting forces of the United States . . .

"Canada counts it a high privilege to have the opportunity of drawing into relations of closer friendship, understanding and good will, the United States and the nations of the British Commonwealth."

Trenton and District

Harrington Brothers Wounded in Sicily

Trenton, Aug. 25. —Mrs. C. Harrington, Wragge Street, has received letters from her sons, Charles and Jim, who were both wounded in Sicily, on the same day. Both are reported to be progressing favourably with hopes of being moved from the hospital shortly. Though they did not tell the extent of their injuries it is thought they are not serious.

Many other letters have come to loved ones at home from the boys in Sicily and though all speak very little of their work they appear to be in good health and exceedingly cheerful. Almost all make mention of the olives, oranges and other fruits which are so plentiful but almost invariably they too mention how much they miss the green grass to which they were so accustomed both in their homeland and in England.

Red Cross in New Quarters

Culminating four years of closest co-operation with the management of the Trent Theatre, local Red Cross workers on Tuesday moved from the rooms which they had occupied since their organization received its charter nearly four years ago to their new rooms over Shurie's Drug Store. Much equipment and materials had been accumulated during those years and the move was not an easy one. However, with many willing workers the task was soon accomplished and with a few days' work the new rooms will be settled and ready for a full winter's work.

A large quota of all the various needed articles has been received and there is much to be done in knitting, sewing, quilting and the making of hospital supplies. All women of the town who are free on Tuesday afternoons from two to five o'clock are urgently needed to assist in this work. Too, there is much sewing and knitting which may be taken from the rooms and done at home in leisure hours. A great deal of the knitting quota is for capture parcels (the first parcel which our boys receive when they are taken prisoner). Surely we should be willing to give some of our time to knit for the lads who must be confined to prison camps because of the brave deeds they are performing for us. There is much sewing to be done for refugees in almost all the allied countries.

The first donation of money received on Tuesday towards the upkeep of the new work-rooms came from six small children who had put on a show during last week, Joan, Doreen, Rita and Arnold Terry, and Malcolm and Leila Lowery. This is the third entertainment these children have sponsored, proceeds from the last two having come to Red Cross.

This photo of the initial landing at Kiska was taken by an officer of the U.S. navy's bureau of aeronautics from a 'Vega Ventura' "PV-1" patrol bomber, operating as part of the air cover for the task force. At this time they didn't know whether the Japs were "playing possum" or not.

Clever Maoris Rig Desert Telephone

Wellington, N.Z., Aug. 25—(CP)— Stories of the ingenuity of the men of the Maori Battalion in the Western desert were told by Lt.-Col. F. Baker, D.S.O., to the Tin Hat Club, the soldiers' entertainment club in New Zealand.

After dark, he said, they would be out in no man's land, often within a few hundred yards of the enemy's position searching for anything that might be useful.

"On one occasion my boys removed every battery and electric bulb from abandoned vehicles and on doing the rounds with the orderly officer that night I found every dugout was electrically lit," he said.

"The boys had even rigged up a rough telephone system with wire taken from the trucks. There was only one ring—a long one. Everybody answered, of course, and the caller had to get his man by elimination—'No, not you, Tom. . . Not you Hori,' and so on till he got the man he wanted. Actually it worked quite well."

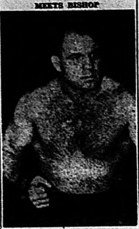
Yanks Need Two Victories At Detroit to Win Twelfth Straight Series Since July 5

New York Club Heading American Loop and Cannot be Headed.

SENATORS SECOND

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

MEETS BISHOP



Just before the main bout of tonight's wrestling card at the Hume Arena, "Killer John" Katan will tangle with "Texas Dock" Bishop in the semi-final go. Last week Bishop chased Arena patrons with abandon about the ringside, so maybe this week Katan will join the pugnacious Texan in this newest of rasslin' antics—battle the patrons. The main bout sees the agile "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, sensational colored lad from Cape Town, wrestle Bunny Dunlop and there's a good preliminary tossed in for good measure.

The heat is on the New York Yankees today.

Before you take another look at the baseball standings, give us time to explain it isn't pennant pressure but the pressure of pride, which is bearing on the American League champions.

They need to win both ends of a doubleheader at Detroit today to win the seven-game series and extend their victory record to 12 consecutive series.

The Yankees got themselves into a hole by losing a double-header to the Tigers Sunday. They won a single game Monday and yesterday they took the first half of a double bill 2-1 with Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler pitching four-hit ball for his 16th triumph against three defeats.

But the Tigers, toughest foes in the league for the Yanks, came back magnificently to win the second game 3-1 as Virgil (Fire) Trucks pitched a three-hitter. He would have had a shutout except for Nick Etten's 13th homer in the fifth inning.

A's Snap Losing Streak

Elsewhere in the league, Philadelphia Athletics snapped a losing streak after losing the first part of a doubleheader to Chicago White Sox 6-5 for their 20th straight setback. The A's finally submitteed to the law of averages and won the second game 8-1.

They led most of the time in the first game, but a two-run Chicago rally in the ninth inning preserved the A's loss streak long enough to tie the modern Major League record. In the second game the Athletics scored eight runs in the third chapter and couldn't help winning.

Boston Red Sox of 1906 and the Athletics of 1916 were the only other American League clubs to drop 20 straight.

Washington strengthened its grasp on second place by beating St. Louis Browns 10-4 as Clayton Heafner pitched four-hit ball.

Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians divided, with Cleveland capturing the first game 5-2 on Allie Reynolds' five hit hurling and the Red Sox surging back to a 7-0 shutout with Heber (Dick) Newsome producing a two-hit masterpiece.

National League

In the National League St. Louis Cardinals edged out Boston Braves 1-0 when Stan Musial tripled a run home in the 10th inning to decide what had been a spectacular, scoreless pitching duel between Mort Cooper and Al Javery. It was the 18th victory against seven defeats for Cooper.

Truett (Rip) Sewell was given his 19th success against five defeats as Pittsburgh Pirates took a slugging session from Brooklyn Dodgers 9-6 in a twilight game abbreviated to six innings by darkness. A two-run, ninth-inning homer by Buster Maynard gave New York Giants an 8-7 decision over Chicago Cubs in the first game of a doubleheader, but Ed Hanyzewski pitched a four-hitter to win the nightcap 6-1. For the Bruins and Cincinnati completed a sweep of its series at Philadelphia with a 4-2 triumph in a night game.

'Ding' Luffman Likely to Pitch For Reliance

Softball in Belleville has moved into the annual play-off session with juniors and intermediates taking the picture spots of the O. A. S. A.

In the Intermediate realm it's the Kingston Ordnance "soldiers" clashing with Reliance A. C. at the Exhibition Park this evening, while in the junior round-up "Skipper" Townsend's Army & Navy kids move up to Oshawa on Saturday.

Who will hurl for the Reliance A. C. tonight has not been announced by Coach Pryke, but the selection is between Bill Anderson and "Ding" Luffman, the latter having pitched the Reliance nine into their O. A. S. A. playdown spot.

In the meantime Skipper "Red" Townsend is keeping his Junior charges well in tow with exhibition games and is well prepared to move into the Motor Ciy for the opening game of the Eastern Ontario junior O. A. S. A. playdowns.

Many C.W.A.C. Athletes Entered In Kingston Meet

Kingston, Aug. 25—Outstanding athletes of the Canadian Women's Army Corps in Military District No. 3 will participate in the track, and field meet being staged at Richardson Stadium here on Saturday, August 28, as part of district celebrations commemorating the second anniversary of service of the C.W.A.C. to the Allied cause.

The "ladies in khaki" are expecting keen competition from teams of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.), W.R.C.N.S. and the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps of the United States, who have been invited to take part in open competitions. The members of the C.W.A.C. who have entered in the meet have been hard at training since announcement of the track and field events.

Captain Dorothy M. Adcock, of Cobourg, Ont., a member of the relay team of No. 7 Company, C.W.A.C., won the downhill ladies' skiing meet on Whiteface Mountain, Lake Placid, N.Y., in 1939, and at Mont Tremblant, Que., in 1940. She has also entered in the 75-yard dash. Capt. Adcock was Quebec junior provincial sprint champion in 1936.

The relay team of No. 39 Company, C.W.A.C., is composed of Cpl. Gertrude Choppin, of Pembroke, who won the cup at Pembroke High School for the best all-round girl athlete; Cpl. Betty Reid, who will also take part in the 75-yard dash and high jump; S/Sgt. Susan Florendine, Toronto and Edmonton and Pte. B. Sinclair, also of Toronto, who won a silver medal at the Toronto Playgrounds competition in 1941 for a high jump of 4 ft. 4 ins., and also a bronze medal at the Toronto Exhibition in the same year for jumping. Pte. Sinclair's brother, Pte. James Sinclair, was taken a prisoner at Dieppe. He was a member of the Royal Regiment of Canada.

The shuttle relay teams are made up as follows:

No. 7 Company: Pte. Erma Smith, Frankford; Pte. Janet Campeau, Brighton; Pte. Florence White and Pte. Marjorie Skelton, of Oshawa.

No. 39 Company: Cpl. Mary McCormack, Coe Hill, Ont.; Sgt. Mary Haggart, Brockville, Ont.; Cpl. Iva Lou Hartle, Cornwall and Sgt. Evelyn Kirkham, Sharbot Lake.

Officials believe that the C. W. A. C. athletes show promise of a slightly higher standard of performance than the district meet held in Military District No. 4. The broad jump at this meet was won by a jump of 13 feet 2 ins. Capt. Adcock is at present averaging better than 14 feet.

C.W.A.C. making up the teams from outside of Kingston have not yet been announced.

JERSEY GIANTS SHUT OUT 26TH TIME THIS YEAR

Equal International Loop Record Held by Royals for 36 Years.

TORONTO IDLE

By the Associated Press

The present collection of Jersey City Giants may not like it, but they are going down in baseball history.

Shut out yesterday for the 26th time this season, the Little Giants equalled the International League record which Montreal Royals established 36 years ago. And they have until Sept. 12, final date of the season, for another whitewashing and undisputed ownership of the undesired record.

Roland Van Slate of Baltimore stopped them 3-0 yesterday in the second game of a twin bill. In the first game the Jerseys pounded out 15 hits for a 5-4 verdict.

In other games yesterday, Blix Donnelly pitched Rochester Red Wings to a 7-3 triumph over Buffalo and Frank Kelleher's single in the 10th gave Syracuse a 4-3 edge over Newark. Toronto and Montreal were idle.

Kelleher, formerly a star with Newark, got one of his rare 1943 hits to pin the Bear defeat on Ed Marleau. The bases were loaded at the time and it brought to a conclusion the fourth straight extra-inning fray between the two clubs.

Donnelly's victory was his 16th of the year while Jack Tising, on the mound for the Bisons, failed to gain his 13th for the second straight time.

Armstrong Wants Shot at Title Or Nothing

Boxer Says He Will Retire the First of the Year if No Bout in Sight.

EARNS $150,000

(By SID FEDER)

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 24. (AP)—The only thing that will keep Henry Armstrong in the ring after the first of the year is a shot at the world lightweight championship. And it has to be the whole pie.

Armstrong has piled up a neat $150,000 in his year-long comeback and he figures that should keep him in those fancy sports jackets and house slippers for a while.

What's more, he'll pick more up from his fight Friday night with Ray Robinson in Madison Square Garden about which Promoter Mike Jacobs now is mumbling $70,000 and $80,000 gate figures. And his Los Angeles tussle later next month with Slugger White may have the cash register playing a $15,000 tune.

"All in all", Henry the Hammer said today, "I'd say I'll have a half-dozen more fights at the most before the end of the year. If the lightweight contenders could get their championship straightened out by then, I'd stay around for one more crack at it. By that I mean that if I fight for the title, I want it to be the whole crown, not just a piece of it".

Right now Bob Montgomery, the Philadelphia bobcat, is blessed as boss in New York and Pennsylvania and the N.B.A. won't give any of the boys a pat on the head until the "retiring" Sammy Angott has a shot at the bulls eye. Montgomery will try to prove he is boss of his territory Sept. 10 against Beau Jack.

After Henry is through fighting, he plans to build up a stable of fighters and manage them.

Toronto, Aug. 25—(CP)—Remember the strange case of Bob Harper, Edmonton Country Club golfer who feared someone would have him made up into a watch fob as a good luck charm? About every second week someone playing golf with Harper would do something crazy—like shooting a double eagle or holing a tee shot. Now the maritimes have come up with a human rabbit's foot built in the Harper mould. The new sensation is Charles Levy of Dartmouth, N. S. Last year Levy was playing in a foursome when Guy Otto of Halifax holed his tee shot. Again this summer Otto and Levy got together for a friendly game and again Otto fired a hole-in-one. Otto hadn't turned the trick in the interim so it must have been the Levy influence. And to prove it, Levy was playing in another foursome later when Arthur Bailey shot from tee to cup in one.

Athletes at War:

Lin Bend, who stepped up to the New York Rangers last season after helping Portage La Prairie Terriers win the Canadian Junior Hockey crown, has been commissioned as a second lieutenant with the Canadian Army. . .Jake Milford, Winnipegger who starred for years in Western Senior Amateur Hockey before moving to the American League with Cleveland Barons, has obtained his R. C. A. F. commission . . .Remi Van Daele, who wound up last hockey season with Montreal Royals in the Quebec Senior League, has joined the Navy as an ordinary seaman. . .Gord Williamson, Edmonton Radio Voice who became one of Western Canada's best known hockey broadcasters, has his commission in the R. C. A. F. Public Relations office.

Incidentally:

Call-up of 18-year-olds was a major factor in suspension of Junior Rugby in Edmonton this year. Now the Alberta capital is trying to drum up a four-team city senior circuit, including a team of U. S. servicemen. . .Phil Edwards, Canada's great olympic and British Empire 800-metre runner, now is a medico in the Colonial Hospital at Trinidad. . .Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette thinks the N. H. L. will operate next winter but that the manpower shortage will rule out 15-man teams. He figures teams may be cut to two forward lines and three defencemen, or, at the outside, 12 men.

Many Enemies

Two Swiss business men, interned in Japan, protested to a Japanese official, who smiled apologetically and explained: "I realize that you are neutrals. But you are neutral enemies."

"What do you consider the British and the Americans," asked the Swiss.

"They snapped the Japanese, "are belligerent enemies."

"What about the Germans and Italians?"

"Oh, they are friendly enemies," replied the Nipponese official.

Memorable Day.

It was just twenty years ago this week that Belleville and Peterboro hooked up in one of their memorable C.O.B.L. play-offs. In 1923 Peterboro won the first half of a split schedule, while our Nationals copped the second half The colorful Jake Solomon was at the helm of the Petes, while Walt Gerow, now manager of the Hume Arena, headed the Belleville Nationals that season. Solomon had imported a blonde-haired righthand pitcher from Cleveland by the name of Al Heckman, who proved his pitching prowess over the years. Belleville boasted of a strong pair of pitchers in Jack Oulette, righthander, and Jack "Chief" Williams the locals' star portsider. Heckman stood alone and beat Williams the first game here. Oulette and the Nationals evened the series with a Belleville win in Peterboro the following Saturday which was played in drizzle of rain forcing a third game in Cobourg on August 22nd., 1923.

Garrison Finish.

Over 5,000 fans jammed Cobourg's Horse Show Park with fans present from Kingston to Toronto. Manager Solomon had to send Heckman back at the Nationals and Gerow pinned his hopes on Oulette, who had evened the series. An error, a double by the late Frankie Collins and Max Swanston's single gave the Petes two in the first and they added another on hits by Leo Camolli and Helson coupled with a wild throw and Oulette's day's work was done. Chief Williams went in as a relief hurler and the Petes got but one safe blow for the remaining four and two-third innings. Belleville got to the tiring Heckman in the sixth for two runs and near bedlam broke out in the local cheering section. Harold Brownscombe tripled to centre, Billie Mills was hit and they both scored on Harry Mills' double. Then came the thrill. It was in the eighth.

Weir walked and Ross hit to Heckman who bobbled long enough to let Wicky arrive safely. "Browny" singled filling the bases and "Peeney" Mills doubled scoring all three and that would have been enough, but Jack "Crocker" Williams tripled to score Mills and also came home on the next infield play to give Belleville five runs and the game 7 to 3.

It was a great diamond struggle of the old school, Heckman keeping the Nationals off the scoring sheet for five frames, before Gerow's charges broke through. Another feature of that memorable game was the relief hurling of Jack "Chief" Williams, who the next season turned professional with the Rochester Red Wings. On that same day, Aug. 22 1923, Freddie Goyer, a former Belleville pitcher, was beaten by the Galt Terriers in the Intercounty League finals. Goyer had left Belleville the previous spring to pitch for the Guelph Maple Leafs.

They'll be Sorry.

You'd almost think they'd know better, but then every once in a while man entertains visions of his youth and actually at middle age tries to duplicate such. Thursday evening at Ann Street School grounds will be proof of this statement when a softball team composed of Front Street businessmen tackle an nine from the local banks. There is to be no limit to the respective teams' rosters, simply because if there was any such limitations it is doubtful if the original nine could ever finish.

To see that Belleville's business men's diamond rights are upheld, Alderman Harold Woodley signed a contract to play for the merchants. Pete Belnap will be the sole representative of the barbers, while New Wilbur wants to sit on the bench and keep a watchful eye on the merchants' "water bucket." Matt Currie says he'll play for the Bankers, providing there is a collection for the Kinsmen Fag Fund and Martin's ambulance has already been engaged, just in case. Just why the businessmen didn't include our genial City Editor, Claude Tice is unforgivable. However, Claude won't be needing the entire out-out of a drug store the next day.

Co-operation.

With the Kingston Ordnance "Soldiers" playing their O.A.S.A. play-off game here this evening, the ladies softball scheduled game between Bell Sargent and Bristol Aircraft has been postponed. The girls will move back into the Armouries on Thursday and Friday, but in the meantime it's the old Kingston-Belleville rivalry on the softball diamond at the Exhibition Grounds tonight.

For once Belleville doesn't have to put up with an out-and-out Kingston rival, but apparently the Ordnance "Soldiers" were too good for the Kingston choice; which makes matters rather concerned for the Pryke-Wilkins clan tonight.

New York, Aug. 25. (AP)—Figure this one out. . .while other States have been shifting hoss races to more accessible locations or cancelling them entirely, New Jersey refused a licence to the Trenton fair grounds on the grounds that "to locate a race track in thickly congested cities or near large communities is of doubtful desirability". . . and one of the requirements listed was adequate parking space.

If the Cubs beat out the Dodgers for fourth place this year, it will be the second time the western clubs have won all four first-division berths in the National League. . . . In 1926 it was St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Chicago. . . Greg Rice admits he has had to be pumped out a couple of times trying to learn to swim since he joined the maritime service. . . But think of all the guys who pumped themselves out trying to keep up with Rice.

The Wilwaukee Brewers, who are offering a free baseball ticket to every Red Cross blood donor, have handed out more than 10,000 passes this season. . . .That doesn't include four donations by President Bill Veeck—or the times Bill was nearly passed out when his club was losing.

Bob (Boston Herald) Dunbar reports that the manager of a Boston semi-pro baseball team that made eight errors last Sunday, gave them this bawling out: "I don't mind your losing, but I do object to your giving the game away. That's something you never see the New York Yankees doing". . .Wonder what he had to say next morning after reading about the Yanks' seven misplays in one game?

LESSON NO. 158

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When suit bids are consumed, the no-trump bids seem due. And that's when you are doomed unless your bids are true. Don't fret and fume and chafe. Do that which is most safe.

What is the most uncertain second round bid by a responder? It is whether he may bid no-trump or pass when not forced to bid again.

Before a responder bids at all, he is assumed to hold two tricks. Each suit raise shows another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid shows another no-trump trick.

A no-trump trick is a high card (an ace or king or queen). Thus, a responder has two no-trump tricks even when he bids a suit. And each voluntary no-trump bid by him shows another no-trump trick.

You have this responding hand:

♠ 9 5 2
♥ A Q 9 5
♦ 8 6 3
♣ K J 4

Your hand contains three high cards. They are three no-trump tricks. With no short cards, they are all the suit tricks you have, too.

Suppose partner opens with a bid of one spade. Your first response is a take-out to two hearts. Your suit raise consumes your third and last suit trick. But not your third no-trump trick.

Suppose partner then bids three hearts.. His assist is not forcing. You have no more suit tricks for a suit raise to four hearts. But you have another no-trump trick for a voluntary bid of three no-trump.

Suppose partner opens with one heart. Your first response is now two hearts, an assist. You use up your third suit trick with the raise. But not your third no-trump trick.

Suppose partner then bids two spades. With your unused no-trump trick, you have enough for a voluntary bid of two no-trump.

When partner opens with one heart and you assist to two hearts, suppose he then bids three hearts or three diamonds or three clubs. With no more suit tricks, you have a free bid of three no-trump.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Something To Shout About"

At the Capitol Theatre, "Songs by Cole Porter" enliven Columbia's gay new musical "Something to Shout About".

Starring Don Ameche, Janet Blair and Jack Oakie, "Something to Shout About" was produced and directed by Gregory Ratoff and includes in its cast such Broadway-famous personalities as William Gaxton, Cobina Wright, Jr., and Hazel Scott. Mr. Porter's contribution are the hummable, singable new tunes: "Something to Shout About", "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To", "Lotus Bloom", "Hasta Luego", and "Through Thick and Thin".

The score is said to exceed in musical merit such of his song hits as "Night and Day", "You're the Tops", "Love for Sale", and such more recent tunes as "I Hate You, Darling", "It Was Written in the Stars", "Let's Be Buddies", and "Fresh as a Daisy".

Born on a small farm near Peru, Indiana, Cole Porter to-day is considered "tops" in urban insouciance and sophistication. He saw service with the French Army in 1919, returning to Broadway with "Hitchy-Koo", which starred the late Raymond Hitchcock. After two years of travel, he again tackled Broadway and has never since quite left it, despite frequent trips abroad and to Hollywood. His motion pictures include "Anything Goes", "Born to Dance" "Rosalie", "Broadway Melody of 1940" and "You'll Never Get Rich".

"The Wildcat of Tucson"

Because he plays Wild Bill Hickok in a new series of Columbia westerns, Bill Elliott's fan mail is frequently addressed to "Wild Bill" Elliott. The popular star's newest appearance as "Wild Bill" is in "The Wildcat of Tucson", companion feature now at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Five Graves to Cairo"

The thrilling screen drama of how a woman outfoxed the Desert Fox, Marshal Erwin Rommel and helped lose for him the continent of Africa is dramatically unfolded in Paramount's thrilling adventure romance, "Five Graves to Cairo," co-starring Franchot Tone and Anne Baxter, now closing at the Belle theatre.

The Canadian Paramount News of the World, described by Lowell Thomas, a clever color Madcap Models Novelty "Jasper's Music Lesson" and "Moments of Charm" a musical treat in color precede the feature attraction.

"Stranger in Town" Outstanding

Tradition is something Frank Morgan cannot overlook. For ever so many films he has been handing down advice to actors and actresses, young and old, who appear with him in M-G-M pictures. In "A Stranger in Town," he carries on, this time as a member of the U.S. Supreme Court, shaking the heat of Washington in summer for a vacation in a small town.

When the picture opens at the Belle theatre Morgan's fans will find him soberly reviving a couple of dated laws to the extreme advantage and delight of Richard Carlson, who plays the male romantic lead. The issues which result prove quite embarrassing to some people in the picture. But to Jean Rogers, the feminine interest they are delightfully interesting, as is Carlson.

Western Thrills in "Apache Trail"

One of the most widely read magazine stories dealing with the Old West was adapted to the screen for Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's "Apache Trail," which is announced as the companion feature attraction.

"Stage Station," by Ernest Haycox, which appeared in Collier's, is the yarn which is brought to the screen as a fast-action Western. The story concerns the attempts of Tom Folliard, played by William Lundigan, to live down the reputation given him by his outlaw brother, Peso Bill, portrayed by Lloyd Nolan.

New Pete Smith Specialty

"First Aid," is the title of an interesting and instructive Pete Smith specialty to be exhibited on the same program.

War-Geared Football Season Will Be Opened in Evanston

By the Canadian Press

A war-geared football season will open tonight in the United States where at Evanston, Ill., Washington Redskins, National Professional champions, will meet the college all-stars in the 10th annual battle between pros and students. The all-stars appear to have assembled one of the best squads ever gathered for the event and are seeking to end a four-year victory streak of the National Football League champions. The kickoff will signal the beginning of one of the strangest years in football history in the United States because to date 236 colleges have cancelled their gridiron schedules and those carrying on have been forced to adjust their programs.

Football also is creeping into Canadian sports pages and last night at Hamilton it was revealed Joe Krol, galloping backfielder formerly with University of Western Ontario who last year starred with Hamilton Wildcats in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, would again be with the Cats during the 1943 campaign. Krol's appearances at Hamilton workouts brought to an end reports he would turn professional with Detroit Lions this year. It was understood he turned down the professional opportunity.

From Winnipeg comes word that Winnipeg football fans will be able to enjoy their favorite pastime this year. It was decided yesterday that two teams, R.C.A.F.-Bombers, Dominion finalists last fall, and another under the name United Services will play a six-game schedule starting Sept. 25.

With football talk in the air, Montreal reports the Quebec Senior Hockey League will hold a pre-season meeting tonight. A league spokesman disclosed last night the meeting would disclose no definite plans for the season but that an effort would be made to "get some idea on how the clubs feel about operating this year." He suggested there was a possibility the circuit would be made up exclusively of service teams.

Rookie outfielder Dick Wakefield of Detroit Tigers, the American League's leading batsman with a mark of .330, passed his physical examination yesterday as a future United States Navy flier, and authorities indicated he would not be called until November. He is to be sworn into service today and will be placed in the Navy V-5 training program.

Aerial Traffic Cop Directed Berlin Assault

London, Aug. 25 — (CP) — An aerial traffic cop directed the R. A. F.-R.C.A.F. mass assault on Berlin Monday night. He gave instructions to the raiders as they came over the target in waves from the west.

Men who participated in the bombing of the German capital said today the raid director maintained a running pep talk throughout the raid, his tone clear, calm and tough.

As one of the first waves reached Berlin, the men heard: "There is absolutely nothing here to stop you chaps. The searchlights look pretty thick, but they have not got glue."

Another wave was told: "There's a bit of flak among the searchlights, but none of it is as bad as it looks. Now, boys, a nice, steady run in."

The War Today—
Supreme Confidence Is Radiated By Conference at Quebec

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

This columnist once consulted the Delphic Oracle at the shimmering base of Mount Parnassus in Greece, and came away with more concrete information than was disclosed by Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt in their press conference at Quebec at the close of their momentous parley.

The Allied pair did a highly-polished job of playing their cards close to their chests — each after his own fashion. F.D.R. went thru the ordeal quite impassively, so we are told by correspondents, while the Prime Minister fidgeted.

The puckish-faced John Bull crossed and recrossed his legs, loosened his collar, mopped his forehead, and "once he got a firm hold on a half-smoked cigar and hurled it far out over the bluffs of the St. Lawrence River." Having observed Mr. Churchill at close range in London over many years, I wonder whether he really was in a fidget, or whether he was putting on one of his little shows for the boys. I have a suspicious mind.

Few Facts Disclosed

Both men made smooth speeches, but neither disclosed much. However, joking aside, we didn't want them to do a lot of talking for the benefit of the enemy.

What really matters is that the conference radiated supreme confidence, and we know from past experience that another big job has been well done. The two leaders did emphasize that the Allied war machine is grinding ahead and that great events are impending. That's something to get ahead with.

One of the most interesting — and likely important — points brought out was that since the Quebec conversations had much to do with planning the offensive against Japan, Russia wasn't invited to participate, because the Soviet Union isn't at war with the Nipponese.

Tri-partite Conference Projected

Well, while we should like to hear Moscow say that Siberian air bases would be available for the offensive against Japan, it's likely Marshal Stalin would be equally happy to hear that a "second front" is being opened in Western Europe. Maybe he will, but in that matter the sphinx swins held their peace. That did indicate, however, that a conference among the Big Three—Britain, Russia and America — is projected, and that's' of vast importance for complete understanding.

18,000 REPORTED DROWNED

London, Aug. 25—(AP)—Reuters News Agency said today in a dispatch from Zurich that 18,000 person drowned when the Elbe tunnel was hit during one of the recent Allied heavy raids on Hamburg.

Madrid, Aug. 25—(CP)—Travellers arriving here from Rome yesterday by plane reported former Premier Mussolini now is under guard on the Isle of Ischia, a peace-time summer resort at the northern entrance to the Bay of Naples.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 12

Peg was almost herself again and poured man-sized drinks and set out a big platter of crackers and cheese.

It was after 4 when we got back to bed. I wasn't scared any more. I knew I could sleep, but Peggy was too excited.

"Mary," just as I was dropping off, "didn't you ever meet that Chris Hall before?"

I came back to full consciousness to answer reluctantly.

"No, never until today at Mrs. Castle's. Why wake me up to ask a thing like that?"

"Because," she said, "all the time you were talking to the others he kept watching you, perfectly fascinated. He looked and looked, with that look in his face—you know—trying to think where he'd seen you before."

"Probably some dame in the rogue's gallery," I yawned into the pillow.

"Well—" Peg said, unsatisfied.

It was just as well, for what was left of my nerves, that I did not know until much later just what was in Mr. Christopher Hall's mind.

Jan Proust arrived about 10 o'clock in the morning, and I was so glad to see his dear, ugly face and thick shortish figure in the hall, that I flung both arms around him and kissed him before I realized what I was doing.

We all tried to talk to him at once, but I don't think he really listened. He kept looking at the bare spot on the floor where the rug and poor Gil Castle's body had been and was shaking his head unhappily.

"What can I do? What can I do with all this?" he asked.

"Aren't afraid of ghosts, are you?" Sam Utz asked.

Jan did not bother to answer and Utz said: "A fellow I know came here from Honolulu, dead broke, see? Had a wife and two kids, and no money. Another fellow told him about a swell flat nobody would live in because a fellow hanged himself in the closet of the master bedroom, see? So what do you think my friend did?" Utz guffawed, with relish.

"Tells 'em he'll rent it for $40. Worth $100, see. The way they jump for it shows him how anxious they are to get a tenant, so he says, 'Nuts,' he says, 'If I live in your blankety blank haunted house you pay me,' he says and the real estate agent says 'How much, sir?' so my friend names a figure. 'Fifty dollars,' he says."

Utz guffawed again.

"And did they pay him?" somebody asked.

"Naw, at the last minute they wouldn't go for it. But it was a good idea!"

"A very excellent idea," Jan said, "but I do not think I will sublet. And now, if you will excuse me, I will talk to Miss Driscoll, for her paper, please."

Strom, the furrier, was waiting for me when I came out of Jan's studio, half an hour later. He was camped right in front of the elevator, so he would not miss me.

"Anything new? Anything from the police?"

"Just the coroner's report—he says the murder took place between half past 10 and half past 11—before 12 definitely. That lets me out, I guess. It was after 12 when I left George and Alline."

"You were worried?" he asked me, earnestly.

"No, not really."

"I am," he said. "It is bad for all of us except you and Jan Proust. But worse for me, because I found him."

"You just happened to find him. There's no reason to pin it on you. You didn't even know him. I did, you know."

"Ah, but how can I prove that?" he said sadly. "And everything goes bad for me, everything. There is my poor mother in Germany and always I worry about her. And business so slack. I don't sleep so good any more. All night long worrying, thinking. But always I get up at quarter to 7. Yesterday the same. First I dress myself and then I call Lena. Yesterday, too. 'Time to get up, Lena,' I said. Then I walked down to the second floor, to the men's—"

The wash-rooms alternate in the building, men's on the second, women's on the third, men's on the fourth but Peg and I have the entire fifth floor and the modern bath she had installed.

"I go to the second, because only Utz and I use that one. Proust, with his own private bath, never. Why would a man walk up to the fourth to wait for Fissel and McMurray too? Would you think a detective would ask that?"

"Oh, they ask everything. They have to think of everything," I said.

He looked down the corridor to make sure no one was coming.

"It is on account of the gloves they suspect me." He held out thin brown hands. "Small, like the murdered man's. I could have slipped on his gloves, while I wiped off fingerprints."

The picture was suddenly so vivid that I could not meet his sad eyes, dull and sunken in his lined, sallow face.

"Oh, that's absurd!" I said, without conviction.

"No, no, that's what happened. That's what somebody did, they think. It could only have been Utz or me. McMurray's hands are too big and Fissell's too—"

Strom paused; then went on rapidly:

"Two shots only, and both hit the mark—not an inch apart. Is that a woman's work?"

"Not mine," I had to admit smiling a little. "I couldn't hit a barn door."

"You see—Utz or me. One of us wipes off the finger marks using his gloves. Then quick—to get rid of them—down the sewer. Oh it is bad for me, very bad! And just to think maybe five minutes later, and it would be Utz to find him. Then—"

I said: "I don't like Utz, but I can't think he did it. Do you?"

"No, I think it was somebody from outside, not in the building. But those gloves are bad. There are too many questions about the gloves. But just to think—a few minutes later in bed and it would be Utz who walked first down the hall and saw the door open."

I looked at him, my jaw dropping I know.

"The door was open?" I asked, "OPEN?"

"Sure. How would I know what was on the other side if it was not open? Proust is a nice fellow, but so high class I never intrude on him. I pass the time of day when I see him, sure, and he is always quick to smile and say 'How are you, Strom?' Sometimes I stop and listen when he plays, but that is all. I never knock or go in. Always the door is closed."

"That's why I maybe rubbered in, a little, as I walked by yesterday morning. Because everyone says it is fixed so fine with all the antiques and the two grand pianos and I wanted to see—"

He groaned and held his head. "If only I had gone up to the fourth floor instead. Or if only I had stayed in bed longer—"

I think he went on talking for quite a while and I hope I made the right answers.

But I was hardly listening. I was thinking.

That door was shut when I came to it, a little after 12 o'clock. I knew it was shut. I was almost close enough to touch it when I got that awful feeling that there was someone in the hall with me, and saw the door of the empty studio opposite move.

If Gil Castle was murdered before twelve o'clock, the murderer was still in there with him at twelve fifteen or twelve twenty, and someone in that vacant little studio across the hall knew it and was waiting there, watching. It wasn't over, things were still going on, someone came or went after I stood there thinking about going in, my mind on lights and company and scrambled eggs and coffee.

"What is the matter?" Strom asked. "Oh, is something wrong now?"

I tried to shake my head as I ran. I was suddenly very, very sick.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating dinner, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, I invited the Hewes for dinner next Friday, William.

Good, I hope I'll be home on time, pop said and ma said, Well I just hope you will for land sakes. What do you think would be a nice menu to have, William? she said.

I cant imagine a more Lew Cullen dish than I'm inhaling right now, though I suppose it's out of the question of a semmy formal meal, pop said, and ma said, It would be simply unheard of, independent of the fact that we've had liver and onions at least 3 times in the last 2 weeks. Chicken is always a safe standby, she said.

Custom and tradition are queer things, pop said. Nothing ranks higher than liver and onions in taste, aroma and certified vitamin content, yet a mere conventional taboo shuts it off from the ceremonial board and the banquet table as though with bars of iron, he said, and ma said, Chicken has one drawback in these days, I mean it seems more like a subterfuge than it used to when you could get meat without ration points. Roast beef has practically gone with the four winds, but a nice leg of lamb is always nice, she said.

It seems strange, pop said. The liver is a far more significant part of the body than the ribs or the legs, and esthetically its slender grace has inspired the noblest poets, at least when they were hungry, he said, and ma said, I dont like to have fish, somehow and yet many people would welcome fish.

Fishermen infallibly would, pop said, I agree with you on one point, Liver and onions is out of the question, and it seems too bad, he said, and ma said, We'll have chicken. At least it's a time honored thing to have, war or no war, she said.

Being the end of the subject.

Roslin

Roslin — The August meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday, the 12th., at the home of Mrs. Harry Chisholm.

The ladies gathered at the noon hour and enjoyed a basket picnic on the lawn, after which the meeting was called to order. In the absence of the president, the vice-president, Mrs. H. Chisholm, presided. The secretary gave her report and after this Miss Alice Wilson, the leader for the program, took charge of the remainder of the meeting.

Mrs. D. Leslie gave a paper from the motto for the day: "If we cannot get what we like let us like what we get." Mrs. Leslie also spoke of the beginning of the Roslin Women's Institute thirty-five years ago and that year a picnic was held on the same lawn. Two of the three charter members were present and were given a hearty welcome by the ladies. Miss Alice Wilson read a paper, "Country Life." A poem was given by Miss Hazel Wilson.

The guest speaker for the day was Miss Annie Stirk, of Ottawa, who gave a very interesting talk on "The Ear", its construction, function and diseases. Children's diseases, such as measles, fevers and the common cold may be the cause of deafness. A number of charts were shown.

Miss Stirk was given a vote of thanks for her splendid talk. The matter of group health insurance was discussed.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the program to a close. The leader divided the ladies into two groups and a quiz contest was held. The hostess served a dainty lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

New Rolls-Royce Aircraft Engine Now in Production

Detroit, Aug. 25.—A new type Rolls-Royce aircraft engine with a two-speed, two-stage supercharger has been in volume production for several months by the Packard Motor Car Company and is being used to power the new North American P-51 Mustang fighter plane, George T. Christopher, Packard president and general manager, announced today.

Packard has been building Rolls-Royce power plants for nearly two years for P-40 Warhawk fighters, British Hurricane fighters, big four-engined Lancaster bombers and Canadian-built Mosquito bombers. These engines have featured a two-speed, single-stage supercharger.

"In effect, this new engine raises air warfare nearly two miles higher", Christopher said. "Horsepower is stepped up to more than 1,500. Not only does the engine yield benefits at high altitudes but its improved performance makes it a greater threat at low ceilings, too."

He explained that the supercharger is to the engine what lungs are to its pilot. As he goes higher, the air he breathes gets thinner and he needs a supplemental supply of oxygen. Similarly, his engine needs aid in its "breathing".

In the new engine two small multi-bladed rotors, or stages, compress the thin air of high altitudes until it is six times the surrounding atmospheric pressure. The first stage, said Christopher, compresses the air in fashion comparable to that of a single-stage supercharger. The air is then immediately passed to the second rotor where it is compressed further.

"The net result", the Packard executive said, "is the maintenance of high power at high altitudes where the enemy has not yet shown anything similar".

Christopher said development of the entire supercharger was jointly done by British and Packard engineers with co-operation from the United States Army Air Forces. He said that in operation the supercharger revolves nearly 25,000 times a minute.

House Speaker; Senate Leader Thank Roosevelt

Ottawa, Aug. 25 — (CP)—Hon. J. A. Glen, Speaker of the House of Commons, said today he hoped he would not be misunderstood in stating that many Canadians affectionately call President Roosevelt of the United States "Our President."

In thanking Mr. Roosevelt for a speech in which the President earlier had delivered before a vast throng gathered on Ottawa's Parliament Hill, Mr. Glen said that "everyone, young and old, in this vast assembly before you, together with that great unseen listening audience throughout the whole of Canada, looks upon you with that possessive regard which is bestowed when a much loved guest honors our home."

"Canada," Mr. Glen continued, "will never forget the dark and dismal years of 1940 and 1941, nor will it ever forget that unparalleled act when you, as President of your great country, gave that generous and sorely-needed lease-lend help which enabled the British Commonwealth, and in particular Great Britain, to withstand and repel a conquering and, then, a seemingly invincible foe.

". . . it would be an indelible blot on your escutcheon if at any future time Canada or the democracies forgot the noble help your country afforded us."

Would Find Co-operation

Mr. Glen said the "tremendous responsibilities of victory" will be part of President Roosevelt's destiny. He was confident that in Canada Mr. Roosevelt would find "that co-operation in peace which we have shared in war."

All Canadians desire is the right to exercise the four freedoms upon which an enduring democracy must be based. "If I may say so," Mr. Glen added, "your own phrase — now a household word—'the good neighbor' definitely embodies these principles . . . in the name of and for Canada I thank you most cordially and sincerely for your presence with us today, and for your noble address."

Speaking in French, Hon. Thos. Vien, Speaker of the Senate, who followed Mr. Glen in an address of thanks, said that in Mr. Roosevelt Canadians saluted more than the highest official of our "sister nation and very good neighbor."

Worthy Successor

"We hail and acclaim in you," he said, "a worthy successor of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Wilson, to mention but a few of the great men, who symbolize the glory of your country."

"We Canadians are proud of the fact that we descend from the two greatest races in the world," Speaker Vien continued. "Our hearts and yours, I am sure, shared the overwhelming grief of France following the defeat of that unhappy country.

"We shall never forget that, for the second time in the life of this generation, your country has generously gone to the assistance of a France in mortal danger. When, with the proper perspective that only time can bring the history of this era shall be written, you will stand in the forefront of that brilliant group of leaders . . . who have so nobly served humanity."

30,000 Canadians Hear Roosevelt On Capital Hill

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 25 — (CP) — About 30,000 Canadians today gave President Roosevelt a wildly-enthusiastic welcome when he arrived at an open-air meeting on Parliament Hill at noon.

With the city in holiday mood, the applause seldom paused from the moment the President's car swung on to Parliament Hill at 11:45 a.m. E.D.T. until it left half an hour later.

When the President concluded his speech, the crowd, packed on the broad lawns before the Peace Tower, waved hats and shouted.

Mr. Roosevelt turned to Prime Minister King and said:

"I shall never forget that sight."

The crowd was gay. It howled with laughter when the President made quips about the Japanese and Hitler. When he spoke of feeling at home in Canada—and Canadians feeling at home in the United States — the applause made echoes ring from nearby buildings.

Earlier, when the President first stepped to the platform, applause broke out. It rose and died, then rose again.

High-pitched voices shrieked "Hooray" and hats went flying.

Mr. King came forward to introduce the President and once more the applause rose. It cut into Mr. King's speech at several points as he referred to the amity existing between Canada and her neighbor-nation.

When the President stood up before the battery of microphones on his speaking desk, he paused for a moment, and looked smilingly out toward the crowd.

The Cabinet Ministers, Members of Parliament, dignitaries of the church, judges, high officers of the services and diplomats seated before the platform dropped their usual reserve and cheered vigorously, some of them waving their arms.

Wreath Placed On War Memorial By Roosevelt

Ottawa, Aug. 25—(CP)—President Roosevelt today honored Canadians who died in the First Great War.

From Parliament Hill where he delivered his address to the Canadian people he drove to the National War Memorial in the heart of Ottawa.

There his naval aide, Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, placed a wreath on the memorial on the President's behalf.

The ceremony at the memorial lasted only a few minutes but it had all the color that had marked the President's earlier visit to Parliament Hill.

Pavolini Said To Be in Germany

Berne, Aug. 25—(AP)—A dispatch from the Italian frontier to the Zurich Newspaper Die Tat said today that Alessandro Pavolini, Minister of Culture in the Mussolini Government, had joined Roberto Farinacci, former Secretary of the Fascist Party, in Germany where the latter is reported organizing an Italian "iron guard" in anticipation of a putsch against the Badoglio regime.

Dispatches from Lugano yesterday reported that the Italian Government had ordered the arrest of all former Fascist Party leaders to offset the formation of the "iron guard" by Farinacci. His presence in Germany was reported for the first time today.

Make United States Impregnable, Says Clarence B. Kelland

New York, Aug. 25. (AP)—Clarence Budington Kelland presented to the American Republican Party today a post-war foreign policy based on United Nations' collaborations but added that the United States regardless must ring itself with such a defence that "no nation, no coalition of nations, shall be able to penetrate our fortifications or reach our shores".

Kelland, author, executive director of the Republican National Committee and Republican National Committeemen from Arizona, conceded that the collaboration program he proposed might fail, leaving this nation alone to face a hostile world, and declared:

"Come war or peace, come upheaval or revolution, come whirlwind or convulsion, come hell or high water, the United States of America must and shall be made impregnable.

"From this day forth our country must not merely be able to prepare for war, but must stand panoplied, equipped to the last button, and ready for war".

LONDON LETTER

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 25 (CP) — A couple of pressing matters concerning food have been taking some of the British time lately, what with the somewhat astonishing spectacle of the Queen defending porridge, and reports from the country that farm workers are discontented with the

The Queen's defense of porridge

The Queen's defence of porridge must be considered first, because it came at a time just after several members of parliament had had a go at the pros and cons of the virtue of porridge eating without reaching much of a decision. The polite British press, of course, did not link the Queen's statements in any way with the parliamentary controversy, because the Royal Family does not interfere in politics. The Queen, as a Scotswoman, might have thought defence of porridge more of a national duty than a political act and such it probably was.

Called Porridge a Swindle

The porridge controversy started with William Maxton's statement that as a food porridge is a swindle.

A few days later Tom Johnston, Secretary of State for Scotland, had a word in Commons in porridge's defence, describing at some length its content of vitamins, carbo-hydrates and fats.

Ambling joyously into the fray, Hannen Swaffer, a prolific and interesting writer, recalled how he started a vast uproar over porridge when he worked on The Daily Mail 40 years ago.

It appears that when things were quiet, Swaffer and a doctor of his acquaintance used to cook up a story between them. One day Swaffer, bored with the office, told his editor this doctor had a great story and then went and told the doctor he had to have a great story. Because the editor expected one.

Story Cooked Up

"All right, said the doctor, "let's attack oatmeal."

So, between Swaffer and the doctor, and backed by scientific data, The Mail had a story the next day with the headline: "Is Porridge a Poison?" Whereupon the food advertisers started withdrawing advertisements and Swaffer was told he had to get someone to refute his story, or else. He went back to the same doctor, who got down the same medical books, turned to different pages and refuted his own interview! By the time he was finished with porridge that time it was proved the best of foods; the savior of mankind. It was the savior of Swaffer's job, anyway.

These words were followed by lesser comments here and there and almost had passed from the scene when the Queen told the Scottish schoolgirl winners of a cookery contest that "today Scots are coming again to the traditional nutritious foodstuffs—oatmeal, served as porridge, and potatoes."

She spoke feelingly of the many Scots fighting abroad who are thinking "perhaps longingly, of the familiar breakfasts at home, which consisted of a good bowl of porridge."

There the matter rested. The same spirit with which the British press refused to connect the Queen's statements with the previous controversy will prevent further comment by the original porridge-baiters. It isn't a matter of compulsion, just of courtesy, over a matter so unimportant as porridge, nobody will disagree with the Queen.

Bracken Plans Visit to Troops Stationed in U.K.

Ottawa, Aug. 25 (CP) — National Progressive Conservative headquarters spokesmen said today plans were proceeding for John Bracken, national leader, to visit Canadian troops in the United Kingdom.

Some weeks ago Mr. Bracken made known he hoped to visit the men overseas at the conclusion of an extended tour of the Dominion which followed his election as party leader at Winnipeg last December.

Mr. Bracken was in Toronto today, but officials said arrangements for his journey overseas were being made. Following his arrival in London, the party leader will inquire into the possibility of being able to visit other fronts where Canadian fighting men are stationed.

Allies Agree To Principles Of Declaration

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 24. (AP) — Rome dispatch to the Basler Nachrichten today quoted Vatican circles as saying that British and United States replies agreeing in principle to the declaration of Rome as an Open City had been received by the Papal Secretary of State.

The Anglo-American replies, the dispatch said, listed conditions as a chiefly a Vatican guarantee of the move and the establishment of a Swiss commission for the execution of the demilitarization measures.

The dispatch said Italian government authorities reported they knew nothing of the replies, which were not mentioned in the censored Italian press.

All Rome newspapers reported allied fliers were again over Rome dropping leaflets and flares, but did not mention any Italian reaction.

The only alarm sounded was the caution warning. The populace of the Italian capital was told to continue to go to shelters.

PROPOSES HIGHER PAY

London (CP) — Civil Nursing Reserve members employed in Britain's hospitals are to receive salary increases totalling nearly £200,000 ($900,00) annually under proposals announced by Health Minister Ernest Brown.

De Marigny's Bank Account Overdrawn Says Bank Official

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 25 (CP) — A police officer quoted Alfred De Marigny as saying that his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, of whose murder he is accused "should have been killed anyhow."

Lieut. John Douglas, assistant supervisor of police, told of his conversation with De Marigny while he was guarding him after Sir Harry's bludgeoned and burned body was found the morning of July 8 in the Oakes sea-side villa, Westbourne.

First witness at a preliminary hearing for De Marigny was resumed was a bank official who said De Marigny had overdrawn his account of £58, more than $200.

The testimony was given by Lewis Phillips, manager of the savings department of the Royal Bank of Canada. Phillips was the first witness at a resumption of the preliminary hearing for the dashing yachtsman. He said De Marigny opened the account May 3, 1940.

Lady Oakes, who flew to Nassau from Miami yesterday for her first visit here since her eldest daughter Nancy was married to De Marigny last year, conferred at length today with Attorney General Eric Hallinan.

It was revealed she will testify for the prosecution later this week.

European Hockey Player Executed By the Germans

Toronto, Aug. 24 — (CP)—Martial Van Schelle, well-known to Canadian hockey players who have toured Europe as the owner of rinks in Brussels and Antwerp, has been shot by the Germans according to word reaching George Braden, Toronto sports goods manufacturer with whose firm Van Schelle was connected.

The Belgian was one of 10 hostages executed at Brussels in reprisal for the murder of several German soldiers.

In 1939, just before war broke out, Van Schelle was ready to introduce the Canadian game of box lacrosse to Belgium and had ordered a supply of sticks from a Cornwall, Ont., firm.

Preventing Asthma.

Many physicians will remember their early training as to treatment of asthma which was not to worry about the attacks as they would pass over, and asthmatics did not often die during attacks. There was no cure for asthma.

How different the picture is today. Physicians immediately attempt to find the cause of asthma knowing that the sooner the cause is found, and the treatment needed in each case given, the less chance there is for the case to become chronic, lasting for years or a lifetime.

The cause of many cases of asthma is allergy, that is being sensitive to various substances such as pollen, dust, furs, feathers, foods and others. The word allergy, the practice of allergy, and the specialist in allergy (the allergist) have been known or used for just the last twenty years.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Drs. Leon Unger and A. Alvin Wolf, Chicago, analyze the results of a survey of two series of cases, 207 and 252 respectively, a total of 459. Only cases from private practice were reported as private patients co-operate more readily and the information is more reliable.

By careful history and physical examination, all patients were definitely shown to be suffering from bronchial asthma. Scratch and other skin tests were made and also eye and nose tests. Various substances were used to bring on an attack such as those breathed in from the air—pollen, molds, house dust, orris root, horse dander, feathers and cottonseed. Eggs, wheat, and milk were tried by mouth or by the scratch skin test.

Treatment consisted in getting rid of the causes or giving small quantities of the suspected substances so that the patient was gradually "desensitized".

What were the results of the treatment? The cases were divided into two groups, the paroxysmal (sudden, hard attacks) and chronic. The paroxysmal occurred in early life, and the chronic at any age.

Ninety-three of the 298 patients with paroxysmal asthma obtained 100 percent relief from symptoms as compared to only 4 of the 161 patients with chronic asthma.

Drs. Unger and Wolf, from the above findings, suggest that to prevent chronic asthma, preventive measures should be started in the children of allergic parents, and allergy tests made at once if symptoms begin.

REDS DRIVING THROUGH HEART OF UKRAINE

Surge Across High Watermark Of Winter Advance

Drive Has Forced Germans to Retreat From the Region Of Zenkov

MOVE TOWARD KIER

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 26 —(AP)— The Red Army, driving straight through the heart of the Ukraine, has covered one-third of the distance from Kharkov to Kiev, dispatches from the front disclosed today.

The Russian surge across the high water mark of their winter advance has forced the Germans to retreat from the region of Zenkov, which was captured yesterday, the army newspaper Red Star said. This put the Soviet advance guard about 85 miles west of Kharkov and 170 miles east of Kiev.

Striking across the broad plains 40 miles north of Poltava, a key railway junction, the Russians appeared to be making a bee-line toward Kiev, paralleling the northwestern bend of the Dnieper.

Red Star said the Germans attempted to make a stand at Zenkov, concentrating numerous reserves and organizing special units for counter-attacks.

The battle for this point was fought along a river covering Zenkov from the east. The Red Army crossed the river at night, Red Star said, and broke the German resistance forcing them to withdraw.

The occupation of Zenkov, north of Opeshnya which was previously captured, indicated the Soviets were making their main effort directly to the west instead of descending on the secondary objective of Poltava.

Another large German force was reported defeated in a battle for Akhtyrka, 25 miles northeast of Zenkov, which was finally taken by the Red Army yesterday after a seesaw struggle.

Blast Enemy Dromes

Soviet bombers also were blasting enemy airdromes and troop concentrations below Kharkov, where ground forces were storming deep into the Donets Basin in a drive aimed at turning the German defence line and trapping thousands of enemy troops.

South of Izyum and southwest of Voroshilovgrad, the Soviet war bulletin said, hundreds of Nazi soldiers were slain as they stubbornly contested every mile. Another 600 fell south of Kharkov, while a heavy toll was also exacted as the Germans fell back from Zenkov.

Scores of German tanks and planes were destroyed on this fan-like front, the communique said, adding that "the enemy everywhere is sustaining enormous losses in manpower and equipment."

Capture of Zenkov, a rail city 25 miles southwest of Lebedin, places the advance guard of the Soviet forces 42 miles northwest of Pltava, key German base on the approaches to the Dniper Bend. Other Red Army spearheads were reported within 25 miles of the city.

Brought Face to Face

The battle of the Ukraine brought Gen. Rodion Y. Malnovsky, Red Army commander, face to face with his old foe, Field Marshal Fritz Erich Von Mannstein, whom he defeated at Kotelmikovo in the battle for Stalingrad last year.

Van Mianstein already is smarting from his failure to hold Kharkov, where he sacrificed thousands of crack German reserves and huge dumps of war material in a vain attempt to save the stronghold.

The German high command claimed 253 more Russian tanks had been destroyed as the Red Army suffered "renewed big losses." The Nazi communique, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by The Associated Press, said strong Russian tank and artillery forces attacked on a broad front west of Moscow, but were thrown back in hand-to-hand fighting.

Stressing reports upon a theatre which official Russian communications have ignored, the German bulletin again said strong Soviet attacks continued on the Mius River front west of Rostov.

Butyl-Coated Fabric, Made at Oakville Finest Gas Repellant,

Oakville, Ont., Aug. 26 (CP)—The first Canadian commercial running of butyl-coated fabric, believed the finest mustard gas repellant ever perfected, has been produced at the Barringham Rubber Company plant here.

Edward Barringham, president of the firm, said butyl is a by-product of gasoline refining. "It is designed as a fabric-coating material only and is not the enduring type of synthetic rubber to be used for tires.

"Our first supply of crude butyl has come from the United States, but soon Canada will be producing its own butyl at our new plant at Sarnia, Ont."

Butyl will stand temperatures of 40 degrees below zero before cracking and doesn't begin to show stickiness until about 180 degrees above zero.

The first order of the Barringham Company is for use of men in the Canadian navy, the president said adding that the new protective garments are to be provided for all armed forces.

9th Casualty List Contains 112 Names

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP) — The number of Canadian (Active) Army casualties in the Sicily campaign so far reported in official casualty lists rose to 881 today with release by the Defence Department of the ninth Sicily list concerning 112 names.

The list reported 28 other ranks killed in action, six other ranks dead of wounds, four officers and 73 other ranks wounded, and one seriously wounded.

All those listed as killed in action and four of those who died of wounds were members of the Territorial British Columbia Regiment. The other two who died of wounds were serving with a Royal Canadian Artillery Unit. The four officers listed as wounded were in the Eastern Ontario Regiment.

Of those wounded 47 were with the British Columbia Regiment, 12 with the Eastern Ontario Regiment, seven were infantrymen, six with the Royal Canadian Artillery and one with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Low-Level Bombing-Strafing Ideal in Fighting in Sicily

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 26 — (CP) — The Allied fighter-bomber and the incomparable Spitfire fighter were among the deadliest weapons of the Sicilian campaign.

The technique of low-level bombing-strafing attack, evolved in the Western Desert, improved in Tunisia and perfected in Sicily, did more than anything else to disrupt the enemy's supplies to his front lines, and to hamper troop movements. Masses of burned-out, bomb-shattered vehicles by the roadside, and barges cluttering the bottom of the Messina Straits, offer eloquent proof of the efficiency of the fighter-bomber.

The Allies used three types of fighter-bombers in Sicily, the A-36 Invader, the famous Kittyhawk of the desert and the Warhawk. All three performed splendidly and have impressive totals of destroyed vehicles, barges and locomotives to their credit.

Spitfires, many of them flown by veteran pilots of the Battle of Britain and the North African campaign, have done work comparable to that of the fighter-bombers. Canadian pilots were at the controls of many Spitfires, whose most spectacular exploit was the destruction of 21 Junkers-52 transport aircraft, carrying supplies and petrol to Sicily, on July 25. The 21 were shot down in less than 10 minutes.

The fighter-bomber was the ideal weapon against the enemy's truck convoys in the narrow, winding Sicilian roads, some of which are hacked out of the mountainside. The all-purpose, highly-manoeuvrable fighter-bomber could go down to zero feet, follow the twists and turns of the roads and make sure of hitting the lorries with delayed action bombs or with cannon and

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS KEEP NERVES OF BERLINERS ON EDGE

Third Raid in As Many Nights Adds Destruction to That Already Inflicted

MINE ENEMY WATERS

London, Aug. 26 — (CP) — R.A.F. Mosquitos kept the nerves of Berliners on edge last night with the third raid on the German capital in as many nights.

The Air Ministry communique said one of last night's raiders was missing. Simultaneously with the new stab at Berlin, other aircraft laid mines in enemy waters, it was announced.

Meanwhile, a Stockholm disptach said the death toll in Berlin during Monday night's bombing, when an estimated 700 heavy bombers made a smashing attack, would have been enormous if women and children had not been evacuated.

The dispatch, from the Berlin correspondent of Stockholm's Tidningen, said every ablebodied person was mobilized for fire-fighting and rescue work.

While keeping Berlin awake, the Mosquitos put Axis radios to sleep. There was a complete black-out of enemy broadcasts most of the night throughout Europe. BBC and two neutral stations had the air to themselves.

R.C.A.F. Headquarters announced that during the night bombers of the Canadian group laid mines in enemy waters. None are missing.

Airfields Raided

Three German airfields and a power station in Western France were raided yesterday by R. A. F. and American medium bombers, with R.C.A.F. fighters lending protection to the big craft.

A Berlin broadcast by the German news agency D.N.B. today claimed Allied "nuisance raiders" again were over Northern Germany and had dropped bombs, causing slight damage.

R.A.F. Mitchells during the day bombed the Bernay St. Martin air base while R.A.F. Bostons attacked the one at Beaumont Le Roger. R.C.A.F. fighters went along on both raids.

Frontoni, Fascist, Said To Be Suicide

Berne, Aug. 26—(AP)—Rome dispatches to the Swiss telegraphic agency said today that Count Alessandro Frontoni, former member of the Fascist party directorate, had committed suicide in his Rome apartment. No details were given.

The dispatches also reported that Professor Pagliani, head of the Department of Surgery in the University of Bologna, has been sentenced to three years in prison by a government military tribunal for possessing arms. Five rifles, a machine-gun, hand grenades and revolvers were said to have been found in his home.

GERMANS FIRE VOLLEY OF SHOTS IN COPENHAGEN

Swedish Report Says Strikes Spreading to Other Danish Cities

SITUATION TENSE

By JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Aug. 26—(AP)—German soldiers, sent into Denmark to stamp out the people's revolt against Nazi occupation, fired a volley of shots during a disturbance in a crowded Copenhagen market place last night the Stockholm Newspaper Aftonbladet said today.

Despite the influx of troops and gestapo, the General strikes spread to the harbor cities of Helsingfor and Vefle, cripping German shippping and boat-building, and the state of emergency was extended to a seventh city, Roskilde.

Stories of the shooting, said to have occurred in the Raadhuspladen in the centre of Copenhagen—where Nazi machine-guns were reported spotted at strategic points—came from travellers reaching Malmo. They were unable to find out whether there had been any casualties, the paper said.

Production materials for Nazi submarines and other war ships were disrupted when, according to the Stockholm Newspaper Dagens Nyheter, 6,000 workers struck Monday at the important Burmeister main works in Copenhagen.

Estimate of Casualties

No official casualty figures were available, but unofficial and scattered reports indicated about 80 persons have been killed and 150 injured in clashes between the Danes and Germans and as a result of sabotage since Aug. 16.

GEN. McNAUGHTON HAS HIGH PRAISE FOR CANADIANS

Troops Have Won Admiration of People at Home and the World.

FORCES RESTING

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 22 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) — Lt.-Gen. A.G.L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Army Overseas, told Canadian troops here today that "you have won the admiration of Canada and the whole world for the way you carried out your tasks in this campaign."

During a tour of practically every Canadian camp in Sicily, the Commander congratulated officers and men "on behalf of the people at home and the army in England."

Twelve hours after arriving in Sicily, Gen. McNaughton began to visit the camps where the troops have been resting since their exhausting campaign during which they drove from the Pachino beaches to the slopes of Mount Etna.

There was little formality about his tour. He just went around quietly, meeting the officers, seeing equipment and talking to the men. It was exactly like the periodic visit the Army Commander makes to the divisions in England.

Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, Commander of the Canadian 1st Division — a position that McNaughton himself held in the early months of the war — accompanied the Commander on his tour which started shortly after dawn and lasted until nightfall.

Staff Men with General

With Gen. McNaughton and Gen. Simonds were Brig. A. E. Walford of Montreal and Maj. Don Clark of Vancouver who flew to Sicily with the Commander. Lieut. Cliff Wood of Vancouver, Gen. Simond's new aide de camp, drove with them.

Gen. McNaughton, wearing khaki shorts and a bush shirt, went at top speed all day, talking to scores of officers about the campaign, about the performances of their vehicles, guns and equipment, and about tactics.

With his senior officers, Gen. McNaughton discussed future plans. The army commander was smiling more than usual and showing immense pride in the achievements of the division. He spent an hour or so with each Brigadier and lunched in a tent at Headquarters of an Ontario Brigade.

MOUNTBATTEN TO HEAD STEPPED-UP DRIVE ON JAPAN

Cousin of the King Chosen to Command All Allied Troops In Southeast Asia

WILL AID CHINA

By ALEX H. SINGLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 26 — (AP) — Sharply - accelerated pressure on Japan from the East, together with a sea-air-land drive to re-open the Burma Road, were regarded here today as likely outcomes of the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme Allied Commander in Southeast Asia.

The doughty Lord Louis, chief of Britain's famed commandos and cousin of the King, is due in Washington today to begin plotting details of the broad operational plan laid down in Quebec by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt for crushing Japan.

Result of Conference

Appointment of Lord Louis was regarded as the first concrete result of the momentus conferences between Allied leaders at Quebec, and underscored the emphasis undoubtedly placed on the Pacific part of the war during their talks. It did, observers believed, serve notice of an impending spurt in Allied efforts to aid China.

Lord Louis was among Allied military leaders attending the Quebec conference.

It brought to the command of the southeastern Asian Allied forces a man trained for amphibious operations—one who rose from midshipman to skipper of the Royal Navy aircraft carrier Illustrious, one who gained first-hand knowledge of land fighting and guerilla tactics in building up the commandos.

British Liberty's Safeguard Is Supremacy of Law

Winnipeg, Aug. 26—(CP)—The safeguard of British liberty is the supremacy of law which can only be changed by the act of a free and responsible legislature, said Rt. Hon. Lord Wright of Britain in an address to the annual convention of the Canadian Bar Association here last night.

The British jurist compared life under Hitler domination with that of countries with common law. Under Nazi rule, Lord Wright said people are slaughtered daily in crowds and held in forced labor or worse. Such conditions should be an object lesson of what may happen when the supremacy of law is abolished, he said.

He said the essential aim and object of the common law are to obtain justice and liberty for the indiviual.

After his address, the Association made Lord Wright an honorary member.

Autopsy Ordered In Man's Death

Hollywood, Aug. 26—(AP)—The coroner's office ordered an autopsy today in the death of Arthur Farnsworth, 36, husband of screen actress Bette Davis and western representative of a Minneapolis firm manufacturing aeronautical equipment.

Farnsworth succumbed yesterday to a fractured skull suffered in a manner police said was puzzling. He was found unconscious on a Hollywood boulevard sidewalk Monday.

Miss Davis, at the bedside when death came, was overcome by grief and placed under a physician's care.

Dave Freedman, tobacco store proprietor, told police Farnsworth uttered a muffled cry and fell backward, his head striking the walk.

Allies Wreck Airdrome, 10 Minor Fields Near Foggia

26 Planes Downed, Scores Knocked To Pieces on Ground

Surprise Assault Delivered From Bases In Northwest Africa And Middle East

LOW LEVEL ATTACK

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 26 — (AP) — Swarms of fighters hedgehopped all the way across Italy and shot up ground defences at Foggia yesterday, preparing the way for the wrecking of the airdrome and 10 minor fields by three waves of United States heavy bombers.

The fighters were specially equipped for the long-distance run to Foggia. Twenty-six enemy planes were shot down in combat and Allied sweeps over Southern Italy and scores of others were knocked to pieces on the ground.

R.A.F. and Canadian Wellingtons followed the Foggia raids by smashing at the freight yards at Taranto before dawn this morning. Rear gunners saw bursts and fires across the targets at this important naval base and railway control point despite a smoke screen which started drifting across the objectives.

Other R.A.F. Halifaxes and Liberators from the Middle East the preceding night attacked the railway yards at Crotone, on the Gulf of Taranto, starting many fires and damaging a chemical plant.

Altitude of 100 Feet

Going the whole distance at an altitude of less than 100 feet, the fighter pilots attacking Foggia said Italians along the route waved and cheered as they passed.

The tree-top level flight threw the whole Foggia area into confusion, outwitting Axis ground defences and snarling the enemy's detection apparatus.

It was the first time in this theatre that fighters in such strength had flown so far and at such low level (the distance is about 440 miles, round trip, from the nearest airdromes in Sicily.)

The Lightnings arriving over Foggia airdrome found it well stocked with parked aircraft, and some formations headed for the planes with cannon and machine-guns blazing and riddled the close-packed group before a shot could be fired at them.

Ground crews and air crews scattered in all directions and machine-guns cut them down before they could reach shelter.

Rocks Threw at Planes

Some threw rocks and fired pistols wildly at the low-flying machines which swept by unharmed in deadly precision, spaced in successive waves five to ten minutes apart.

Some German fighters attempted to get into the air after the first formation swept over, but few, if any, made it.

Then came the armadas of heavy bombers. Liberators from the Middle East made for the railway freight yards, and while the anti-aircraft crews were still dazed from the terrific strafing Flying Fortresses plastered the airdrome target with heavy bombs.

As the result of the surprise, the Lightnings met few fighters and knocked down three.

The Fortresses bored through 60 to 100 Messerschmitt and Macchi fighters and destroyed 16. The Liberators got seven more for a total of 26. The total Allied losses for the day were 15, none from the Middle East.

The reappearance of the German air force in the Italian skies after its complete absence Tuesday indicated the enemy had managed to reinforce his badly-mauled squadrons.

The enemy has lost a total of 175 planes in air battles over Italian railway centres and over Foggia since last Thursday.

The raid was described officially as "one of the most successful surprise air attacks of the war."

200 to 300 Casualties

It was estimated 200 to 300 casualties were caused to enemy personnel by the combined strafing and bombing of airfields. Many parked aircraft were reported left ablaze.

The fighters caught hundreds of enemy crewmen on the airfields like mowing machines. In some instances enemy soldiers actually threw rocks and fired pistols so low did speedy fighters sweep over their objectives.

R.A.F. Halifax and Liberator bombers from the Middle East also blasted the railway yards at Crotone on the sole of the Italian boot on Tuesday night, starting many big fires and damaging a nearby chemical works. All these raiders returned safely.

(The Italian communique, broadcast from Rome, said the damage at Foggia was "grave" but termed the raid at Crotone as minor.

(Eighteen Allied planes were shot down, 16 of them at Foggia and Crotone, the communique asserted. It reported Axis raids on the Tunisian harbor of Bizerte and the Sicilian port of Agusta.)

P.R.U. Fliers Perform Unknown But Dangerous, Important Missions

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.A.F. in Britain, Aug. 26—(CP)—You don't hear much about the boys who fly from this base. They are P.R.U. fliers, the initials standing for Photographic Reconnaissance Unit. Without them this aerial war and the land war too for that matter, wouldn't be anything like it is.

And fliers elsewhere tell you that the P.R.U. pilot's job is one of the most dangerous and difficult in all operational flying even though there isn't much glory attached to it.

These men, among them members of the Royal Canadian Air Force attached to the R.A.F., are the map-makers of the second front, the men who obtain the material for the basic guidance of any assault, be it on the land or from the air.

Canadians flying here include Flying Officer D. G. Scott, of Hamilton, Ont.

The job has plenty of thrills but the only satisfaction for pilots after a job well done is that which goes with having returned with important information of the enemy's territory.

Fellows Fly Alone

These fellows fly alone in the fastest planes available. Even more important, they fly completely unarmed because the weight of guns and ammunition plus the weight of the cameras would reduce their speed too much. Speed, plus the tricks of flying in this branch which must remain the secret of the fliers themselves, is their main protection.

Mostly their planes are stripped-down Spitfires and Mosquitos and most of their flying is of the low-altitude whip-in-and-take-your-pictures-and-be-gone variety.

It is the kind of work which has earned for Acting Wing Cmdr. Adrian Warburton, ace cameraman of the R.A.F. more decorations than many a combat pilot can ever hope to attain. At 25, he has won the D.S.O., and Bar for bravery in obtaining low-altitude photographs and has been awarded the D.F.C. with two Bars.

Only now is it permitted to write anything at length on these activities.

P.R.U. planes use as many as five different types of cameras, some stereoscopic, some varying in lens size between five and 40 inches and aerial pictures can now be taken in color, revealing things that black and white would fail to pick out.

When the pictures are flown back and developed they are handed over to the map-making section where experts translate them into terms of a map.

WOUNDED FLOWN IN AMBULANCE PLANE

The modern army and airforce principle of flying its casualty cases to hospitals hundreds of miles from the scene of battle action has extended even to Canada, it is revealed by the arrival in Belleville of Flying Officer George Forster, who has been sent home from England to recuperate from a flying accident.

Son of Mrs. G. J. Forster of Victoria Avenue, and the late Dr. Forster, FO. Forster docked at an Eastern Canadian port last week and was flown in an ambulance plane from the coast to Rockcliffe Airport at Ottawa. The Belleville boy was injured last March in a flying accident in England but is now recuperating favorably, according to the family. It is expected that upon recovery he will be posted to duties in the airforce other than flying.

V-SHAPED TOMATO SEEN IN GARDEN

The first report of a Victory Garden in the city producing visible signs of the ultimate victory of the Allies comes from Mrs. Agnes Simpkins, 16½ Turnbull St. A perfectly formed "V" shaped tomato was produced by the formation of three tomatoes in the garden at Mrs. Simpkins' home. Steps are being taken to put this curiosity on display in one of the shop windows on Front Street.

She complied, but in a moment the warden was back. This time it was a light in the kitchen. She was positive she had turned it off. They found the kitchen in flames. Fire wardens extinguished the blaze.

Over 600 Apply for Ration Books During the First Hour of Issuing 600 to 700 applied for Ration Book No. 3 in the first hour of issuing, and the local Ration Board have expressed their gratitude to the public for their kind co-operation on the first day.

Although this number is a fine display of the proper spirit on the part of citizens of the city entitled to the new ration book, it is pointed out that there are several thousands to be issued and this at the approximate rate of 4,500 per day. The confining of the hours to between 2.00 and 6.00 oclock for four days means that the volunteer workers are going to be called upon to handle in excess of the average daily quota in other days which might very easily pyramid until the final day, Saturday, August 28th, sees near to over the 450.

When the doors of the City Hall Auditorium opened to receive the applicants for new ration books, a lineup along Front Street of a hundred or more were ushered to the upper floor and dispensed with in surprisingly short time. This was a pleasant surprise to those who had stood in line; a long wait and considerable delay was expected. The ladies who volunteered their services had received last minute instructions which speeded up their work. A steady flow of people to the room where the books are being issued would remove any possibility of congestion.

Mrs. Mary Upper, supervisor of the issuing board, expressed her appreciation to the public for their consideration and thanked the volunteer workers for their interest and efficiency from the start. It is important, she said, that the volunteer workers be at the City Hall by 1.00 o'clock each day in order to be prepared for the opening of the doors at two o'clock.

Extends Date for Filing 1942 Income Tax Returns to Aug. 31, '43

All Taxable Persons Must File Returns, Delinquents May Now do so Without Incurring Penalty.

REFUNDABLE PART

The Minister of National Revenue has announced that he has extended the time for the filing of individual Income Tax Returns so that penalties for late filing will not be imposed except in respect of those who fail to file on or before the 31st August, 1943.

This is the first time in history of Income Tax in Canada that the time for filing of returns has been extended after the date on which they were required has passed.

The actual number of taxpayers who have filed returns for the first time is 50 per cent greater this year than ever before.

Last year 1,332,170 individuals filed returns. The initial count (not final) this year shows 2,004,779.

Having regard to the deductions at the source that have been made it is felt that there should be a number of returns yet to be received.

Deduction at the source indicated that there are a number of persons liable to tax who may be under the belief that having paid their tax by deduction at the source they are not required to file an Income Tax return.

This is entirely erroneous for all taxable persons were required by law to file a return, whether the full tax has been deducted at the source or not, on or before the 30th June, which date has now been extended to the 31st August, 1943.

Reasons For Extension

There are two reasons for making this extension:

First, the number of persons who were late in filing their returns and lodged them on the first, second or third of July, has been very substantially greater this year than ever before. The number of persons who were one, two or three days late has been surprisingly large. It is felt that this may have been occasioned due to the alteration in the date for filing returns namely, prior to last year individuals were required to file their returns on or before the 30th April, then the 1941 returns were required to be filed on or before the 31st March, 1942, then up until the Budget of this year the law provided that the 1942 returns were required to be filed on or before the 30th September, 1943. The March Budget of this year advanced that date to the 30th June, 1943, this advance being occasioned primarily by the introduction of the Pay-as-you-go Plan and the forgiving of one-half of the 1942 tax liability.

However these features have apparently caused some confusion and it is felt that the door should be opened for all those who are yet delinquent to file without penalty and that those who have incurred penalties by late filing in relation to June 30th should be relieved of the penalty, so that all who file their individual income tax returns on or before the 31st August this year will not be subject to the penalty of 5 per cent of the tax payable, provided the penalty shall not exceed $500.00, which the law provides for the late filing of individual returns.

The second reason for the extension from the 30th June to the 31st August is that many persons believed that their full tax having been paid by deduction at the source they were not required to file an income tax return, erroneously feeling that in substance, that this is in payment of the tax, they had satisfied the statutory tax requirements and that they were not withholding from the Crown anything that should be paid to it. They failed to realize that in the payment of taxes there is a refundable portion repayable to the taxpayer commencing two years after the close of the war and this refundable portion is wholly contingent in its repayment upon the filing of a proper income tax return.

The appropriate time for filing an income tax return is now,— first, because it can be filed without penalty and second, because the information to be contained in the return is now available and known whereas two years after the war some taxpayers who have failed to file their returns as required, observing other taxpayers who filed returns at the proper time getting their refundable portion, will then seek to file a return, have it assessed and secure a refund.

All taxable persons in Canada should therefore take note of the extension of time for the filing of Income Tax returns without incurring penalties, namely from the 30th June to the 31st August, while in respect of those who have already filed within the extended period penalties will not be imposed.

This action of extending the time is historically new in the Income Tax field and all taxpayers should take notice of that fact for next year there will not be an extension beyond the period prescribed by statute for the filing of Individual Income Tax returns.

The time for filing 1943 returns will be during the months of January, February, March and April and all individual 1943 income tax returns must be filed not later than 30th April, 1944.

Event of Both Historic, Human Significance

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 26 — (CP) — Canada's capital today looked back on the first official visit of a President of the United States to this city as an event of both historic and human significance.

The presence of President Roosevelt in Ottawa yesterday and the solemn words he spoke before an assembly of 30,000 people made the occasion more than just a memorable event. The greeting the President waved to his audience on Parliament Hill and later to crowds lined along the miles of a drive through the city and district strengthened the friendship and regard of Canadian people for their good neighbor.

In a tightly-packed eight hours the President completed one of the busiest programs ever arranged for a distinguished visitor to the capital.

He made a formal address on Parliament Hill, honored the Canadian dead of the First Great War at the National War Memorial, attended an official luncheon, received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of London, toured the districts, and had tea at Laurier House, the Ottawa residence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Early in the evening, accompanied by the Governor General and Prime Minister, he returned to his train and left for the United States.

Location of the siding where his special train had arrived yesterday morning and from which it left last night was not officially disclosed; but there was a crowd on hand to cheer his arrival and to wave a farewell when he left.

His 15-minute speech on Parliament Hill was marked b a stern determination to rid the world of outlaws who refused to recognize the "fundamentals of decent, human conduct" and by a desire to see that victory should bring to the world "greater opportunities."

Blaze Discovered In Nick of Time By Night Clerk

A chance trip of the night clerk into the kitchen averted what might easily have been a serious fire at the Hotel Belvedere shortly after eight o'clock Wednesday evening, when fire originating in a waitress dressing alcove gained considerable progress before being discovered.

The blaze, believed to have originated from a cigarette butt among clothes and smocks hung on the walls, charred the wooden wainscoting and blackened walls and ceiling before being brought under control by members of the Belleville Fire Department, who were quickly on the scene following discovery of the blaze.

"It was indeed fortunate," stated the night clerk after the blaze had been extinguished, "that the fire occurred at the time it did. Had it not started until after midnight, the blaze might easily have been out of control before it was discovered—and every room in the hotel is occupied."

Clothes hanging in the dressing alcove were quickly thrown out into the back alley by firemen, when they arrived in answer to the alarm turned in by the night clerk. The blaze in the woodwork of the walls was controlled by use of hand pumps and the booster tank. As an extra precaution 250 feet of hose was run from the nearest fire hydrant but the heavier stream of water was not needed.

"We caught the blaze just in the nick of time," commented Captain Frank Orr of the fire department. "Had it gone another few minutes it would have been through the walls and into the upstairs partitions."

Manslaughter Charge Sequel to Drowning

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 26 —(CP)—James Scott, Cornwall garageman, last night was arrested by Provincial Police on a charge of manslaughter arising out of the death by drowning of Neo Mondoux of Cornwall near Hopkins Point, Que., Sunday.

Mondoux and two other men drowned when a small boat capsized while crossing the St. Lawrence River to Summerstown, Ont., eight miles from here.

A jury under Dr. Ovila Caza, Valleyfield, Que., Coroner, Wednesday returned a verdict holding Scott criminally responsible for Mondoux' death, and Dr. Caza issued a Coroner's warrant for his arrest.

Quebec Provincial Police placed Scott in custody at Valleyfield jail.

Scott is alleged to have been the driver of a speedboat which circled a small outboard motorboat carrying seven Cornwall men, creating swells which caused it to capsize. The four survivors, Dollard Morin, Fernand Racine, and Rabriel and Roy Miron, were heard by the jury.

The second body to be recovered, that of Louis Miron, was found by three Indians. The body of Mondoux was recovered Tuesday. Search for the body of the third victim, Harold Gallinger, is continuing.

ROTARIANS TOLD OF WORK DONE AT HOSTESS HOUSE

Miss M. Hunt, Hostess at Y.M.C.A. Hostess House Addresses Club.

Trenton, Aug. 26 (Special)—Miss Madelaine Hunt, hostess at the Y.W.C.A. Hostess House, Trenton Air Station, was the guest speaker at the Trenton Rotary Club on Monday evening, giving to Rotarians an outline of the work done for the services by the Y.W.C.A.

She said that in the early days of the war it had been decided by the government that Hostess Houses would be an essential in or near the camps and that the War Services Committee of the National Council, Y.W.C.A., had been asked to undertake the sending of trained women to administer them, as hostesses. The policy being set by the Commanding Officer and the National Council headquarters in Toronto.

Miss Hunt described the Hostess House as the official meeting place for civilians wishing to contact men on the station and where ladies may be entertained by the service men, directly for use of all service men and their friends and families. At these centres all forms of recreation are provided, games, music, dancing, parties, birthday celebrations. In addition they serve in any problem of emergency from the happy occasion of a wedding to the care of relatives in cases of illness or accident. Regarding the latter, Miss Hunt explained that the Hostess House provides an emergency room always ready to accommodate those who are sent for by the hospital authorities, where they may be quiet and comfortable, the hostess standing by to offer understanding help and sympathy during the anxious hours.

Clubs For Wives of Service Men

Clubs for the wives of the service men are arranged and war service, Red Cross and other forms of work, as well as social contacts are fostered. She pointed out that as these wives of the service men are sometimes very lonely the Hostess House was used to make them feel they had a "Home away from home." They were invited to meet one afternoon a week bringing their children along with them, and many of the wives availed themselves of this hospitality. Hobbies of all kinds are indulged in at the Hostess House and many ideas exchanged for home-making.

"A particular service," said Miss Hunt "is the rooms registry, finding accommodation for the families." Here a list of rooms available is made, the rooms checked, and the right people placed in the right homes. Remembering the fact that many of the men in the service have at the most only a few months to spend with their families the hostesses do all in their power to assist them in finding homes.

Hostesses, too, visit the hospital regularly and frequently write letters to the parents of the patients, always receiving warm appreciation for this service.

Miss Hunt termed those in the service as "War Service Families" and said she could only hope for Divine Guidance in this important work for the young people who are so gallantly giving their all for their country.

The speaker was introduced by Miss K. Haslam, Victorian Order Nurse, and the heartfelt thanks of the Rotary Club for her splendid address was voiced by Rotarian A. E. Cuff.

During the evening Mrs. Duncan, of Batawa, very graciously contributed of her talents in three solos.

Bertrand Stuart Hoffman, 26, of Detroit, a native of St. Thomas, Ontario, shown after his arrest on wartime espionage charges which carry a maximum penalty of death. A merchant seaman, he was picked up in New York shortly before two men and a woman were arrested in Detroit on the same charge.

In Police Court

Philip Tice of Frankford was sentenced to six months in the county jail by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court on Tuesday on a charge of indecent assault. He was defended by Col. H. J. Smith and B. C. Donnan K.C., prosecuted.

Twelve other cases came before the court. A. R. Dunkley and C. F. Sweet paid $12.50 each for breaches of the Highway Traffic Act, while three breaches of the Traffic By-law and one of the Dog By-law paid $2.00 each.

S. Perry and C. Waddell on charges of having liquor paid the usual $10.00 and costs and three others Reo. Furnier, Avon Gauthier and Wilfrid Langlois were sentenced to jail terms, for trespassing. Langlois, who had a previous record, was given one month and the other two fifteen days each.

In sentencing the trespassers the Magistrate said that with labor so scarce and so much work to be done he could see no reason why men should be stealing rides on trains and going up and down the country trying to avoid work.

Felix Riga charged with theft of a cow, the property of Mr. J. A. Sutcliffe, from a pasture field, was remanded till August 31st for mental examination.

An Inspiring Speech

President Roosevelt who came to Ottawa from Quebec, the first United States President to be received at the Canadian Capital, bespoke the absolute determination of Allied democracies to rid the world of the gangsters and outlaws in the international sphere. "Surely by unanimous action in driving out the outlaws and keeping them under heel forever we can attain a freedom from fear of violence," he said.

In the background were the facts of the great freedoms men already know where men are free, the freedom which came with the expression of the Ten Commandments, the Magna Charta and the Declaration of Independence. He conceded that these great teachings are not perfectly lived up to today but herein he merely threw into higher light the great principles which found expression among the Hebrew people in their state in which the exalted seers and prophets exercised an undying influence and in the Magna Charta and the Declaration of Independence which have expressed the political freedom of man.

His address to the Canadian people represented in the crowd of thirty thousand before him on Parliament Hill and by those who listened to the broadcast, was on an exalted plane. He reiterated his faith in the four freedoms and the idea of collective security after the war.

Mr. Roosevelt was in a mood which might be called a "family" mood. He spoke of the conference at Quebec which was "in the manner of partners, I may even say in the manner of members of the same family." His address couched in noble language and thoughts was delivered to a neighbor of his own country, where the United States border is Canada"s border and where the border is undefended. Mr. Roosevelt was among friends and brothers of the same high principles and race.

The President's words struck a high note of confidence and hope as he said "I would rather be a builder than a wrecker, hoping always that the structure of life is growing, not dying."

Democracy is just such a principle that is growing. The powerful democratic world today is the proof of democracy. Conversely the Axis nations who believe in destroying the structure of freedom are doomed to defeat for democracy is a life principle and aims to express the true ethics of humanity.

The President closed on a high note in which he expressed the assurance that some day in the future, but some day with certainty, all peoples would subscribe to the ideal in the words of the Master—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

In a graceful brief address in French the President spoke of the harmony of partnership in Canada which he termed an example to the whole world.

Hun Has Been 'Found Out'

No one has heard of Adolf Hitler notifying nations he tried to make into his proposed "new order" for Europe that his plans are going wrong. Now he knows that nobody can believe the professions he uttered some years ago when he tried to expand the Axis, because he knows that even the satellites realize he is seeking to satisfy only his own and Germany's greed at the expense of every nation it could coerce into the circle of satellites, revolving about the Axis.

In those days of his rantings about the world that could not be led into the orbit of Germany, it was a wonder that Hitler did not laugh in his own face when he heard himself speaking of the glories of the "new order" led by Germany, all the while Germany was overrunning free nations.

Hitler is simply silent on the 'new order' or what has happened to it. The Germans are too busy trying to save their own hides to bother now with Hitler's' pledges or his old "new order." His deeds in occupied Europe have been enough to expose the sinister nature of the war Germany launched against Poland.

The Germans have proven in war what they are. They have robbed and pillaged, they have murdered and committed the grossest atrocities, they have lied and cheated. Their rule is the degradation of rule, the degeneracy of a people attracted by the sin of lust for power and loot.

By their actions the Germans have isolated themselves from humanity, except that strange humanity of the Axis.

It has often been said that Germany has not been able to make friends. It has been said by the Ottawa Journal too that Germany makes no converts. To be as Germany is, would be to go as Germany will go.

Denmark has been under the heel of Germany for three and a third years but it is not Germanized or Nazified. Though next door neighbor to the terrible Hun, the Danes are defiant of the oppressor and the squatter Huns so that Hitler has had to move an army of fifty thousand Huns into Copenhagen. Denmark"s people have seen the Hun for that period of time and have known him just for what the world considers him, a bandit, a man of evil and an outlaw.

So it is that Germany has become the very expression of evil and crime. In her unholy ambition she has doomed herself. A bandit criminal nation cannot move among other nations trying to crush them and sapping their lifeblood and their culture and hope to find a single follower. Every nation with a minimum of political wisdom has avoided any association with Germans who are adept at pulling a lash to whip themselves.

Swiss Harbor Allies

Switzerland is now sheltering about 11,000 refugees, a great number of whom had fled from France when the Germans threatened to deport them. One American relief worker in Berne reports that the Swiss standard of living is high. "It would never occur to Swiss officials," he said, "to enclose refugees by barbed wire. I visited two work camps, which seemed practically like Paradise compared with concentration camps in France. To plan and operate work camps on such an enlightened basis takes an enormous amount of time, energy, money and materials." The United States has been able to give some aid. Recently it delivered five tons of clothing from Lisbon, which had been intended for camps in France, but was held up when the Nazis occupied southern France.

Barber Runs Manor

When a military officer parked a long convoy in the cobbled square of Market Bosworth, England, he asked a policeman to direct him to the civil authority. The policeman pointed to the barber shop. There the officer found W. J. Hatton, barber, grocer, dry goods dealer and cafe proprietor, also Lord of the Manor. "It was my wife"s idea." he explained. "The rights were auctioned when the biggest estate in the district was sold. Mine was the highest bid, $960. The rights enable me to charge toll on every vehicle parking in the square. I collect about $80 a year. My biggest day is the day of the annual cattle show when 12,000 persons come to Bosworth Market. I have to shut up my barber shop while I keep an eye on my manorial rights."

Foolish Talk and Fears About Russia

(Ottawa Journal)

Why all those foolish fears, this rubbish talk, about Russia? Because Moscow has recalled Ambassadors Maisky and Litvinoff from London and Washington, we have the newspaper "columnist" and the radio "commentator" building a pyramid of suspicion, going so far as to suggest that Russia may be preparing for a separate peace with Germany. That was the sort of talk that came over the radio Sunday night—with the real answer to it the fall of Kharkov to the Red armies on Monday.

Russia has earned the right to something better than suspicion. Nor is there a shred of evidence to show that the recall of Maisky and Litvinoff has any particular significance. The action taken was known to London and Washington before the Quebec Conference; has no possible connection (as stated authoritatively on Sunday night) with the decisions of the Quebec Conference; and nominations of successors to Litvinoff and Maisky were naturally submitted to the British and American Governments.

In the circumstances, sensational statements, based on nothing more at best than over-heated imaginations, about there being something sinister in Russia's intentions, are little more than sabotage. Does it not occur to these self-appointed appraisers of Russian policy that Russia, too, must prepare for the vast problems of peace? That she has many things to consider about the future of Europe? And that among the men highly qualified to help in that preparation would be those with the closest knowledge of British and American opinion? Both have been recalled to the Russian Foreign Office.

Not many of us can pretend to know much about Russia's foreign policy. What all of us should know is that in this war, as an ally, Russia has played a brave, great part, and that it lies with none of us to heap suspicion on her. Russia wants a "second front". Can we blame her for that? Blame her, if she thinks that such a front is possible and that it would hasten the end of Hitler? After all, few of us realize what the Russian people have suffered in this war, or what they still are suffering.

We have little patience with the people who give Russia blind adulation, or who pretend to "believe that" she has gone over to democracy, or that she is fighting only for our sakes. That isn't true. But we have still less patience with the people who can't let the sun go down on the wrath of their hatred for Communism, or for what they imagine to be Communism, and keep harping on the peril of Russia. It is a poor, mean, shoddy game; one that ought to be stamped out.

MODERN TROOPER MUST MAINTAIN CAVALRY IDEAS

Rules That Governed Treatment of Horses Now Apply to Tanks and Armored Vehicles.

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)

Somewhere in England (CP) — The cavalry of modern warfare travels in tanks and armored cars, but the rules laid down when horses were the vogue are still applicable. A divisional commander made this clear in the instructions he issued for the training of drivers.

Possibly thinking of the North African campaign when three timesas many tanks were lost thru' breakdowns as through enemy action, the general stressed the importance of good driving and good maintenance.

"If this were a cavalry division, horsemanship would be of the highest importance and it is well to consider how a cavalry soldier maintained and handled his horseflesh," the instructions said.

For example, the horse was his first consideration. The animal was fed before the man, likewise he was groomed or maintained continually. Officers and N.C.O.'s were required to be expert in matters of horse management.

"If a pack horse was overloaded it was soon off the road, but motor vehicles are continually being overloaded and expected to run indefinitely. If a horse went lame then the rider walked. When a motor vehicle goes lame, the driver merely climbs on another vehicle and continues to ride.

"It was and still is a crime for an animal to be abused, yet we see vehicles and engines being brutalized and nothing much is thought about it. Any cavalry soldier who would kick his horse in the belly would immediately have been ostracised by his comrades.

"Officers and N.C.O.'s were experts on horseflesh, the higher the rank, the more they knew. With a practised eye they kept an untiring supervision over the care and upkeep of their horses.

"The lesson here is that exactly the same principle applies to mechanization."

Weather is a hush-hush subject in England and the papers don't publish the "probs" so the headquarters staff of an Ontario Rifle battalion thought up an idea of supplying its own forecasts. Provided by the army's meteorological branch, these are kept up to date on an illustrated poster in the headquarters building.

So far, predictions have been as accurate as they can be in a country whose climate is as variable as England's, but the one day when the battalion wanted to see "fair" the forecast "rain" was made instead. And there was no mistake about it.

It was the day the unit received its first inspection by the divisional commander, and climatically speaking it put quite a damper on the show. The troops however, despite a drenching, marched past in fine order.

A garden party planned for after the inspection, was held indoors with the regimental band, one of the finest in the army, playing in a headquarters ante-room to an audience which stood in the corridors.

Khaki Closeups

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 25 (CP)—The folks in Canada will see troops of one of the Dominion's best known Highland battalions on the screen next month.

Newsreel cameramen spent a day with this battalion, a western Onand the second-in-command, Maj. Individuals and groups were "shot" and the second-in-command, Maj. Don Mingay of Windsor, Ont., sent a message to the people at home.

Since its heavy losses at Dieppe, the battalion has been reinforced with men from every part of Canada and greetings from a soldier from every province was a feature of the newsreel. Many of the boys, too, were given a chance to say hello to their parents, wives, sweethearts and friends.

Most of the messages were strictly of the "hello mom, hello pop" variety but some of the boys expressed their thanks for cigarets sent by organizations at home while one lad sent love to his "girl friends."

"I've got a lot of them," he explained.

Provincial representatives in the newsreel included Sgt. Frank Dixon, Sackville, N.B., and Sgt. Wally Hussey, Riverside, Ont.

Dixon and Hussey both won the Military Medal at Dieppe. The cameraman was at Dieppe too as an official navy photographer.

This battalion was one of the most heavily hit at Dieppe and since then has had a more or less transient personnel. Some 200 officers, N.C.O.'s and men have come and gone to other units since Dieppe, including 100 sent to the 1st division before the Sicilian invasion.

With these changes it has been hard to build the battalion up to its former strength or keep its territorial affiliation but all the troops are training hard for the time when they can go back again against the Germans.

Anaglyph, New Word, Spells Gloom in Reich

Three-Dimensional Photos Show Bomb Damage to Nazi Centres

Vast extent and razor precision of the devastation that has been visited on the Ruhr and other German industrial centres was clearly shown in an exhibition of stereoscopic aerial photographs displayed early in July in the recreation room at R.C.A.F. London headquarters. The photographs, which give a startling illusion of depth when viewed through red and green filters, are known as anaglyphs and are three-dimensional photos. Enlarged to four feet square, brightly illuminated, and tinted by expert technicians, they demonstrate the high effectiveness of our area bombing at Cologne, Essen, Wilhelmshaven, Nuremburg, Kassel, Rostock, Berlin, Kiel, Stettin, Dusseldorf, Wuppertal and the Mohne and Eder dams.

Anaglyphs are made by combining two views, from slightly different angles, of the same area. Seen through the two-color eyepiece, they dispel all doubt about the success of the bomber offensive and incidentally, explode the much-repeated Nazi claim that our bombers destroyed Cologne cathedral during the June raids. These are the largest photographic plates ever made.

Realism of the pictures is heightened by familiar details such as trees in the parks, pedestrians and motor traffic in the streets, tram lines and railroads standing out sharply in lifelike three dimensions. Great bomb craters, bare skeletons of factories, houses with the roofs torn off, are everywhere.

Damage to Dams Shown

Outstanding among the pictures are those showing the breaching of the Mohne and Eder dams. Reconnaissance photos taken before the raid show the reservoir, powerhouse and anti-torpedo nets, with gun barrels protruding from the crown of the dam. Views after the raid show the water-level greatly lower, a gaping hole in the face of the dam, one cluster of guns knocked of completely, and the protective net coiled on the beach below the man-made waterfall. At Mohne the power-house is utterly erased, while at Eder the power-house is intact, but the water level has dropped so low that the power-house cannot be operated.

Before and after views of Kassel show rivers and lagoons blotting out streets and squares as the flood waters rise.

Another outstanding picture shows the docks at Kiel after a precision raid by Fortresses of the U.S.A.A.F. Two 740-feet U-boats have turned turtle from the force of the blast and lie helpless on their sides like dead whales.

Whitehall Notebook

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—The fact that Parliament adjourned without discussion of John McGovern's forbidden visit to Eire indicates that this case, which provoked considerable lobby and newspaper comment, will be allowed to drift unchallenged into oblivion.

McGovern, Independent Labor Party Member for Shettleston, entered Eire in direct defiance of instruction from the Home Secretary, Herbert Morrison, that British M.P.'s should not visit there. While in Eire, McGovern had a 40-minute talk with Premier de Valera on general war conditions, although on his return he would not define the exact nature of the discussion.

McGovern says he refused to abide by the ban because only aliens needed permits to enter Eire, and he demands the same right as any other British citizen, he said the ban placed him in an inferior position even to his wife, who was allowed permits to visit Ireland without any conditions attached and therefore could travel freely between Northern Ireland and Eire.

If the matter comes up when Commons convenes again, two alternatives will be open: either the government will withdraw its ban or it will restrict further visits by refusing M.P.'s permission to cross even to Northern Ireland unless a promise is made not to go to Eire.

Another matter touching Eire raised in Commons just before adjournment may be dealt with after the recess. Prof. D. L. Savory (Con. Belfast University) asked during question time whether any steps had been taken to put a stop to the export of gasoline to Eire from Britain saying that Axis representatives have been touring Eire in automobiles driven by American gasoline which had been brought originally to Britain at the risk of British sailors' lives.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of War Transport, P. J. Noel-Baker, said that exports of gasoline to Eire have been drastically reduced but that the government must ensure the continued export from Eire to the United Kingdom of valuable agricultural products. It wasn't practical, he said, to limit the uses to which Eire might put the gasoline.

But he didn't dispel the anger in the House, cheers greeted M. Petherick, Penry and Falmouth Conservative, when he asked: "Could the government not lay down that any imports of petrol into Eire must be carried in Eire ships or neutral ships without the protection of the British navy? Noel-Baker did not reply.

Lobby Notes: The Association of Welsh local authorities has petitioned Parliament to appoint a Secretary of State for Wales and Monmouthshire, placing it in the same parliamentary status as Scotland. . . William Gallacher, Communist Member for West Fife, suggests that nudists are supplied with clothing coupons they don't need and should put them into a common pool. . . .Capt. Cunningham-Reid (Ind. Marylebone) has explained to Commons in a short personal state that he did not leave England during the blitz in 1940, but left several weeks before it started and had returned by October, so went through much of it. . . .The fact that he was away during the early part of the blitz is often used in personal attacks against this outspoken former Conservative.

Who Was Mentor?

A trustworthy guide, a faithful tutor, an experienced adviser, or a wise counsellor is called a Mentor.

In this sense the term has an interesting history.

The Greek root from which "Mentor" is derived signifies to think, to remember or to counsel, and is akin to Latin "monere", which means to admonish and which is the source of "monitor".

In Greek legend, when Ulysses set out for the Trojan war he left the care of his house and the education of Telemachus to a friend named Mentor, the son of Alcimus.

Telemachus, who was the only son of Ulysses by Penelope, is the central figure in the first four books of Homer's Odyssey.

During the long absence of Ulysses, Telemachus protected his mother, and after the fall of Troy he set out to find news of his father.

On this journey in search of Ulysses, Telemachus was attended by the godless Athene who assumed the guise of Mentor, the boy's old tutor, guide and counselor.

Telemachus and Mentor ultimately found Ulysses and upon their return home in Ithaca the boy helped the father kill the unwelcome suitors of Penelope.

The meaning of guide and counsellor appear to have been inherent in the Greek root of the name "Mentor".

But the modern meaning of the term does not seem to have been taken directly from Homer's Odyssey.

The earliest use of "Mentor" in English recorded by the Oxford Dictionary is dated 1750.

That authority points out that the modern meaning of the term is due less to Homer than to Fenelon's "Telemaque", in which Mentor is a somewhat prominent character.

François de Salignac de la Mothe Fenelon (1651-1715) was a French theologian, writer and archbishop of Cambrai. In 1789 he was appointed tutor to the young Duke of Burgundy, son of the Dauphin, grandson of Louis XIV and eventual heir to the throne of France, for whom he wrote "Telemaque", his most famous literary work, which was published in 1799.

From Fenelon's novel the French began to use the word "mentor" in the sense of a wise and faithful counselor, and by 1750 it was already current in English in the same sense.

On Lake Erie in northeastern Ohio there is a town named Mentor. James A. Garfield was living there when elected President of the United States.

Direct Blow Aimed

Thus, in Lord Louis' background, military observers found basis for speculation that a direct blow by air and sea may be aimed in the near future at the vital Port of Rangoon, even as the offensive down the Arakan coast is continued with stepped-up intensity.

Success in reopening the Burma Road would serve the double objective of getting more supplies in to the Chinese forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, and as a route for bringing in fuel for allied planes and bombers for a close-up air attack on Japan from Chinese bases.

Increased allied use of Chinese air bases might well compel Japan to pull in a substantial part of her air forces defending her outlying inland empire, and thereby ease the tough northward drive confronting Australian and American troops in the Pacific.

Upon his arrival here, Lord Louis will find a special mission from his homeland which came to study "maximum British co-operation with the United States in future operations against Japan" with the specific of laying "the logistical foundation' for Britain's contribution in that objective.

Presumably members of that mission will sit in with the colorful commando leader as he discusses with high-ranking American officers the details of his new assignment. It seems likely that any sharp step-up in southwestern Asia warfare will be deferred until after the monsoon season ends in October.

Under his command Lord Louis will have American and Chinese as well as British and Canadian forces. Canadian airmen have long been flying against the enemy in that sector.

London, Aug. 26 — (CP) — Appointment of rough and ready Lord Louis Mountbatten as Allied Supreme Commander in Southeast Asia was interpreted generally here today as promising a combined sea, land and air assault on the Japanese in Burma.

London newspapers greeted the announcement of the appointment with big headlines, such as "Lord Louis will lead offensive on Japs" and "Eisenhower of East will lead attack on Japan."

Reflecting the popular interpretation placed upon the appointment was the view expressed by Brig. Horace Sewell, military expert of the British Information Service with headquarters in New York, who said Mountbatten's first task probably would be a combined operation in Burma.

"The first step of the campaign," he wrote, "must be the obtaining of complete control of the Bay of Bengal — a major naval undertaking which will probably involve the re-occupation of the Andaman Islands.

"Once naval supremacy in the Bay of Bengal has been achieved, the way will be open for a descent on the Burma coast from the south and west. This attack will probably be combined with extensive guerilla-type warfare in the hills separating Assam from Upper Burma."

Youngest Commander

Lord Louis, who in recent months has been Chief of Combined Operations in Britain, is the first Briton named to a post of Supreme Allied Command since the United States entered the war — and, at 43, by far the youngest.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Mediterranean Area Commander-in-Chief, is 53. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, top leader in the Southwest Pacific, is 63.

High-born Lord Mountbatten already is well on the way to becoming a legendary figure in Great Britain.

As head of the Commandos, he has the distinction of holding high rank in the army, navy and Air force, although his status as a Lieutenant-General and an Air Marshal is of an honorary nature. In naval rank he is a Vice Admiral.

A succession of breath-taking adventures in the navy, in which he commanded a destroyer flotilla at the time he became Chief of Combined Operations, has added to his fame.

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS

American Marauders concentrated on the power station at Rouen and also visited Tricqueville. Few enemy fighters were encountered. An R.C.A.F. squadron shot down one German plane, the communique added, without suffering loss itself.

Two Fighters Missing

Two British fighters were listed as missing from other patrols over France and Belgium during the day.

It was announced last night anti-aircraft fire knocked down a low-flying Junkers-88 just off a northern Scottish island.

Yesterday was the second successive day Allied airmen had concentrated on enemy installations in Western France. Reconnaissance showed considerable damage to the service base at Villacoublay, eight miles south of Paris, hit Tuesday by Allied raiders.

Meanwhile, a Berne dispatch quoted a Paris report to the Tribune De Geneve as saying the heavy bomber raid Aug. 16 on Le Bourget airfield in the Paris suburbs had razed several villages in the vicinity in a seven-minute period. The dispatch added nothing remains of the airfield.

The War Today—
Elevation of Terrorist Sign Of Hitler's Growing Weakness

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

We shouldn't pass lightly by Hitler's appointment of Heinrich Himmler, the Fuehrer's bloody-minded executioner, as German minister of interior, a position which carries with it pretty much the power of life and death over the people of the Reich and occupied territories.

The elevation of Nazidom's chief murderer and terrorist to this high position is one of the most significant signs of Hitler's growing weakness. The all-highest is showing fear, not only of the oppressed folk of conquered countries, but of his own people. Himmler is called in when Tyranny and bloodshed are the order of the day.

Himmler in Purge of 1934

It was Himmler the Hun who during Hitler's "blood purge" of his party in 1934 sat as judge of a drumhead court and sent a host of colleagues before firing squads. It was Himmler who wielded the lash and pistol when his master decreed the elimination of the Jews. It was Himmler who drove thousands of helpless civilians to stand on the edge of their graves while they were coldly murdered by bullets through the back of the head.

Of this throwback to savagery, the late Sir Nevile Henderson, famous British Ambassador to Berlin before the war, once said grimly:

"If given a gun and told to take two shots, I would first shoot Himmler, then Von Ribbentrop (German Foreign Minister) and brain Hitler with the butt of the rifle."

Sensational Appointment

Hitler's appointment of Himmler as minister of interior is really sensational, for the indications are it has these three purposes: (1) to employ a ruthless hand against the growing revolt among the conquered () peoples; (2) to maintain a tight hold on a home front which has been showing signs of unrest; (3) to force war workers to remain in danger zones and continue production, despite the terrific bombing which industrial centres are undergoing.

This doesn't justify a conclusion that the German people are on the verge of revolt. Morale is subject to quick changes, like your barometer.; So let's just take the facts as they stand and log down among our important memoranda that German morale is not what it was, and that the boss gangster is worried.

U.S., Australian Troops Within Mile of Salamaua

Allied Headquarters, The Southwest Pacific, Aug. 26 — (AP) — American and Australian jungle troops now are within a mile of the Salamaua, New Guinea, airdrome, a spokesman for Allied Headquarters disclosed today.

This point of nearest approach is at Kennedy's Crossing at the southwest end of the airstrip.

The spokesman said that along the Francisco River, which flows south of the airstrip into Bayern Bay, the only Japanese still holding out below the river are at Dot Inlet on the coast.

Only semblance of a line held by the enemy begins at the inlet and runs to Nuk Nuk, directly south of the airfield. Along that line, the enemy has made several counter-attacks.

At a point two miles inland, Australians succeeded two days ago in crossing the river to take up positions directly west of the long-sought 'drome. Today the spokesman said Allied troops north of the river were encountering rather weak resistance.

Capture of the airdrome by jungle troops would put the Allies within easy fighter plane range of big enemy bases on New Britain.

Today's communique reported no major changes either on New Guinea or New Georgia and said bad weather greatly limited air activity.

THE EXPLANATION
why
WHITE SWAN TISSUE
may be "out of stock" at your dealer's.

You go to your dealer for your regular supply of WHITE SWAN and find him temporarily out of stock. Naturally you are disappointed, but please don't blame him, as he is only too anxious to keep on supplying you with Canada's most popular toilet tissue.

It is simply a question of supply and demand. He cannot keep enough WHITE SWAN in stock because we cannot supply him fast enough. We cannot supply him fast enough because our mill, in turn, cannot meet the increased demand from Government, war industries and the public.

We would like to be able to make more WHITE SWAN than we are turning out now, but war needs come before our requirements for new equipment. So, until the present crisis is over, we ask you to bear with us. We will do our utmost to see that any dealer out of stock for the moment will soon receive his supply.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

War Causes Increase of Cerebrospinal Fever

As a general rule, epidemics of the disease known as cerebrospinal fever, or meningococcus meningitis, begin in December and usually end or let down in July. It is rather peculiar that, during wartime, epidemics of this disease occur with great frequency and last longer. It seems that epidemics of coughs and colds help in the spread of the diseases because the meningococci, which cause the infection, are thrown out into the air in droplets, when coughing or sneezing occurs, and are then breathed in by other persons.

Meningococcus meningitis produces inflammation of the lining membrane covering the brain. The condition is a serious one—causing fever, convulsions, headache and similar symptoms. During wartime many young adults seem to be attacked by the disorder while in peacetime about one-half the cases occur in children. The disease is not so common in those over forty years of age.

A seemingly important factor in the occurrence of epidemics of cerebrospinal fever or meningococcus meningitis is overcrowding. The crowded condition of workshops, homes, schools, transportation facilities, stores and theatres all possibly play their part in causing the increase in the number of cases. Proper ventilation in meeting places may be of some value in preventing the spread of the disease. In wartime, the disease occurs about twice as often in men as in women. In peacetime, it occurs with equal frequency among both sexes.

According to Doctor Pascal F. Lucchesi, of Philadelphia, the person's occupation may indirectly play a part in the occurrence of the disorder. Types of work which ar laborious and produce fatigue may open the way to infection. Epidemics are likely to occur among miners, coal miners especially. It would appear that the disease is spread most often by healthy carriers. These are persons who do not have meningitis, but who have, in their throats, the germ which produces the condition. In many instances there are from ten to thirty times as many carriers as victims in any area of the country in which an epidemic may break out.

It is unfortunate that there do not seem to be many ways of controlling the spread of meningitis. Since overcrowding is one of the things which may lead to outbreaks every possible thing should be done to kep overcrowding from occurring. In addition, it is important that the condition be diagnosed when it occurs, for with prompt treatment lives may be saved and permanent damage prevented.

The disease may be treated with serum and also with the sulfa drugs, particularly sulfadiazine. Sulfadiazine in the proper solution may be given by injection into a vein as well as by mouth. The sulfa drugs have been so helpful in overcoming this infection, that in many instances the serum has not been needed.

'Monty' Likes to Have Canadians With Him

Catania, Sicily, Aug. 26. (CP)—The 8th Army News, a newspaper published for distribution among Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces in Sicily, quoted the general as telling the Canadian 1st Division: "We shall very soon be packing again, I expect; wherever I go I would like to have you with me".

The newspaper said Gen. Montgomery made the remarks when he visited the Canadians during last weekend. He said the Canadian troops in the fighting to the left of Mount Etna have handled yourselves according to the best and high standards of my army".

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mistake to Use Music as Alibi

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old, engaged to a girl of 18, and am in the army. I was very much in love at the time we became engaged, but my feelings have changed since I've gone into the service. We went together about two years and she says she loves me so much that she'd die if we ever broke up.

My reason for changing my mind about marrying her is that I'm a musician, and after the war I hope to continue my music, and don't think that will be a very happy life for her. Please tell me what to do. I love her but not as much as I did and I know it will hurt both her and her mother if we break up now. Her mother has always liked me.

—J. W. B.

When love begins to wane, it's a mistake to marry for those reasons which, in grandpa's day, were considered adamantine. Sensible people, when they cease to love, don't marry these days unless some vital reason.

However, don't mention music as an alibi. Some of the world's greatest musicians have been married. Mozart was. Schumann's marriage to Clara Wieck, the pianist, introduced his matchless songs to every city in Europe. Verdi was married; Paderewski was married twice. Johann Sebastian Bach was not only married but had twenty children.

Why Marry a Man Who Can't Stop Drinking?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 17 and have been going with a boy of 21 for about seven months. We love each other very much, but the one thing that causes me to hesitate is that he drinks very much. He breaks dates, then says he's sorry, but does it all over again. I've asked him hundreds of times to stop drinking liquor, but he doesn't do it. I don't want to lose him because I love him too much, so I'm afraid to threaten to quit him if he doesn't stop. My mother has already given her opinion but I'd like to know what you think. Can you tell me what to do to make him stop this dreadful habit? Or should I quit him? He's been rejected twice by the draft for personal reasons.

—M. L.

At seventeen, with all the world before you, this young man who can't keep his promises, breaks dates and drinks too much, sounds a very poor matrimonial risk to me. You tell me he's been rejected twice by the draft for "personal reasons. And while you don't say what these reasons are, they probably have to do with other causes which would make him undesirable as a husband.

Engagement-Announcement Parties Proper When Soldier-Fiance's Away

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My soldier and I became engaged just before he left for overseas duty. He was very anxious to have our engagement announced as soon as I could. My parents heartily approve of our engagement and would like to give an engagement-announcement party. Is this proper since my fiance cannot of course, be present?

2. If you tell me such a party is proper under these conditions, would you also tell me if we may invite boys (mutual friends of ours) as well as girls, or should only girls be invited?

—Janie

1. Yes, this kind of engagement-announcement party is often given today and it is proper. I'd like to suggest too that you have every guest write his or her name on a piece of sheer paper, with a message of congratulation and best wishes to your fiance and send these to your fiance to make him happy and proud. And there should be a grand toast or several of them, to your serviceman, and you should remember every word of these and who proposed each one, and write them too to your soldier.

2. Invite both boys and girls, that will be more fun, and that will be, I'm sure, what your soldier would like. All of your and his relatives and friends sharing the good news, the good wishes and the high-hearted plans for a happy future.

Choosing Gift for Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Very shortly I am going to visit in the home of a middle-aged lady of whom I am very fond. I do not know her very well, but since she has been so kind as to welcome me into her home, I would like to take her some gift to show my appreciation. Also since I don't know her very well, I really don't know what she would like. I had thought of taking her an attractive slip or perhaps a pair of gloves. If you don't think either would be appropriate, would you please suggest something?

—R. E.

If you are sure of the size she wears, either of these gifts would be appropriate. Perhaps it might be better and safer to take her something less dependent for its appropriateness on a certain size, and then after your visit (during which you might subtly find out more definitely her size-number) send her either of these gifts. For example, you might take her a white lingerie set, collar and cuffs, now so popular; or a lovely lapel-flower; or a purse; or one of the new knitting bags, black or navy blue outside and a tuck-in of a gay plaid which can be turned out and used as an apron.

Correct Bridal Shower Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for the fiance's sister or his mother to give the fiancee a bridal shower? The fiance's sister is to be one of the bridesmaids.

—A. N.

It is not considered proper for a close relative of either the fiance or the fiancee to give a bridal shower. Perhaps, in this case, however, the bridal attendants might plan to combine to give a shower for the bride-to-be, with the fiance's sister acting with the group, rather than as an individual hostess.

The Marry-Go-Round

Good Househusbands, All.

It isn't only the soldiers and sailors who are learning how to make up their own beds or bunks, keep things neat and ship-shape, pick chickens and otherwise fit themselves to become skilled and desirable househusbands, when the war is over.

With the shortage of domestic help, nearly every married civilian is discovering talents in himself that he never dreamed he possessed and doing things around the house that he never imagined that he could or would do.

Only a few weeks ago I heard a tall-dark-handsome man telling a woman that he had become his wife's "houseman," and spent all his spare time putting up screens, bringing in firewood, mowing the lawn and spraying the garden. He said he had become expert at fixing the plumbing, carpentering, putting in new washers and new fuses, and all the fine arts of domesticity.

Cooking is something on which most men pride themselves. One man will tell you that he can make perfect coffee and another will boast that he can beat anybody on earth at making clam-chowder or broiling a steak. But most of them perform those culinary feats when they are camping out and wouldn't be caught working in a kitchen! That's "woman's place!"

At least it WAS before this war. But now everything's topsy-turvy; and if Dad gets home from the office before Mom gets home from her war-job, she is likely to find the table all set and to smell the chops burning as she enters! Dad is stealing Mother's stuff!

There is a rivalry between a husband and wife whom I know which bids fair to end in a private war. The wife has been a professional woman all her life and now that she can't find a maid she is suddenly obsessed with a longing to learn how to cook! But will her loving spouse give her a chance at the kitchen or the range? Not he!

He thinks that he knows how to cook already; and he won't take a chance on her "tyro" cooking. He fancies he's another "Oscar," and as a matter of fact he HAS some sort of culinary instinct or talent and even his wife has to admit that he can turn out a very palatable meal.

But he is what I call a pan-cooker and he has fallen in love with his own art! A "pan-cooker," if you don't know, is one who has always cooked over an open-fire in the woods, and "pans" everything on top of the stove. Everything, from a chicken to a rice-pudding. He wouldn't open an oven any more than he'd open a grave! Most men are "pan-cookers." They are suspicious of ovens!

Still, this new interest in the home and in the things that go to make it "home," is a healthy sign in Canadian life. Our grandfathers were all "good housemen" when it came to doing the heavy chores—and still good fighters in the cause of liberty. Our husbands are only following in their footsteps—good househusbands, all!

FASHION FLASHES

A RETURN ENGAGEMENT is being played by the black coat with ermine trimming, cited as an autumn favorite for dressy wear. Smooth black woolen is used for a smart coat with collar and side jabot of snowy ermine and a big ermine button closing at the waistline.

YEAR 'ROUND DUTY is the job of the well made lightweight woolen dress. A pretty shirtwaist model in tobacco brown has rhinestone buttons from shoulder to waist across the bodice and a skirt that drapes slightly to the left.

VERY CLEVER ideas lend spice to the new fashion season. For example, silver blue satin gloves with matching tie-on garlands of roses which serve as bracelets on the gloves, or as a dog collar, or to twine in the hair in lieu of a hat.

FINISHING OFF the short cap sleeve with a long suede glove appears to be a favorite dress-up notion. Pale orchid suede with black sequin trimming, pale pink suede with copper-colored sequins and black with gold and silver sequins are used for long gloves.

GERMANS FIRE

result of transport difficulties due to the blasting of railway lines in that area.

One Stockholm newspaper, Allehanda, speculated whether the Germans planned to institute a flat military control over all Denmark, intern King Christian and strip the Danish government of its powers.

German troops and members of the Gestapo moved into Roskilde, reputedly to "help the Danish authorities enforce the emergency regulations." Six other major Danish cities were placed under such a decree early this week.

Tension Grows in Capital

Meanwhile, Copenhagen continued to bristle with Nazi military might as tension grew in the capital city of the angered Danes. Before dawn on Aug.21, large contingents of soldiers started moving into the city in tanks and armored cars, and they still were reported arriving last night—even as Danish saboteurs blasted some buildings where they were to have been quartered. First reports said there were 40,000 German soldiers in the city, but latest information is that there are only about one-fourth that number — mose of them young recruits, with some veterans of the eastern front.

German Ambassador Werner Best met yesterday with Danish officials to confer on ways of halting the revolt, but there has been no information concerning the outcome of their discussions.

20 Parachutes Reported Found

The Social Democraten reported 20 parachutes had been found in Denmark along the Aarnus trunk railway which was blasted in five places a few days ago.

This and other reports from Denmark suggested that airborne saboteur Commandos were being flown from Britain to help the Danes in their revolt against German occupation forces.

The Aarhus line has been one of the principal transport links for German supplies and soldiers.

It is said that parachutists flown to Denmark before now have been only one or two men with the task of carrying out special sabotage. During the recent optbreaks in Denmark, however, sabotage has been on a widespread scale, averaging five to eight incidents nightly and conducted in a manner indicating an organized pattern.

Both Free Danes and Britoins are believed to have parachuted to work with the Danes rising against the Nazis.

Allied Bombers Raid Hong Kong

New York, Aug. 26—(AP)—Tokyo reported today 20 Allied bombers and fighters attempted to attack Hong Kong yesterday in two separate raids. The broadcast was recorded by The Associated Press.

The radio said a few bombs were dropped from a high altitude by a formation of 13 planes which attacked during the morning and that slight damage was caused. The announcement claimed the attackers were "immediately repulsed" by anti-aircraft batteries.

Seven planes which approached the city in the afternoon were "forced to flee," the broadcast asserted.

Another Tokyo broadcast asserted that between June 30 and Aug. 25 Japanese forces in the Solomons had sunk nine Allied cruiser and 11 destroyers 836 planes. The claims were without Allied confirmation.

The broadcast claimed an additional four cruisers, eight destroyers, and 78 planes were damaged.

MADE 140 SWEEPS IN ENEMY AREA

F/L Dean MacDonald Home for Month is Nonchalant Hero.

Toronto, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Dean MacDonald, who at 23 is a flight lieutenant in the R. C. A. F., has made 140 sweeps over enemy territory, more than any other Canadian fighter pilot, has knocked down eight enemy aircraft and wears the Distinguished Flying Cross came home last night, a grinning, nonchalent hero.

MacDonald, only survivor of his flight in one dogfight over France and credited with three locomotives in train-busting operations, wore his hat at a jaunty angle and puffed vigorously at a cigar as his family welcomed him.

He kissed his mother a couple of times and when she cried a little with happiness he looked at her again and grinned and said: "Hi, mom."

"Understand you knocked down eight enemy aircraft," an interviewer said.

"yah."

"Ever shot up yourself?"

"Nope."

"When did you get the D. F. C.?"

"Kinda forget. When was it, mom?"

"Well, had you shot down eight planes when you got it?"

"Nope, three or four I think."

"It was five," his mother supplied. "You got three more after that."

"I guess that's right, mom."

"Are you going back overseas?"

"Sure, that's my job."

After a month's leave MacDonald goes back to operations and the Welsh girl he married in England.

Mental Fitness as Necessary For Army as Physical Fitness

Thirty-eight army men had been sent to one of the mental hospitals in Great Britain for observation. Of this number, 31 were found to be unfit for any form of military service. Had the whole previous history of these thirty-one men been known to the army medical examining officers, it is not likely that they would have been allowed to enter the army.

The United States has been quick to recognize these findings in Great Britain and the Selective Service System has issued a circular to the army medical officers in which it points out that an efficient army does not want men who are feeble minded, insane, or have behavior disorders. Many of these men are able to carry on in civilian life because they are familiar with their surroundings and their regular occupations. Placed amid the unfamiliar surroundings and unusual occupations of military life, together with military discipline and separation from their families, they develop various types of mental disorder.

The circular outlines the eight categories in which these mental or behavior cases are to be placed: 1. Mental defect. 2. Behavior defect. 3. Serious or abnormal mood conditions. 4. Hysterical, anxious, and obsessional neuroses (believing one has a disease when no disease is present) and fatigue on slight effort. 5. Personality changes such as persistent day dreaming. 6. Addiction to alcohol or drugs. 7. Syphilis of the central nervous system. 8. All organic disease of the nervous system.

Formerly general practitioners referred all nervous or mental cases of which they were suspicious to mental specialists, but as mental specialists are not numerous enough to examine all recruits, this circular causes the examining medical officer to be allert to spot or pick out any recruits that might fit one or more of the eight categories of the circular.

What have been the results of this careful selection of recruits from the mental standpoint? Drs. C. R. Atwell, W. Bloomberg, and F. L. Wells in the New England Journal of Medicine, state that of 5,010 men inducted into the army in Massachusetts, 199 were referred for measurement of their mental ability or condition. Of these, 79 received a mental age-rating of less than 12 years, which at the time was taken as the age level required for the service.

Belleville Reliance Scores 1st Win in Softball Playdowns By Defeating Kingston Ordnance

Tallies Winning Run in Ninth when Hurler Wild Pitches with Bases Loaded

EXCITING CONTEST

In as weird a finishing softball game as has been seen on a Belleville diamond in many a moon, "Spike" Pryke's Reliance nine went one up on the Kingston Ordnance when they scored seven runs in the last four innings to come from behind to eke out a close 10-9 ninth-inning decision.

With the score tied in the last of the ninth, the bases loaded, two down and two strikes on the batter, the Kingston hurler uncorked a wild pitch to throw the game away giving the locals a one-game advantage to take into Kingston this evening for the second game of a best-of-three series for district Intermediate "A" supremacy.

Despite the rather unusual finish the game was a closely fought battle all the way through with the soldier boys having a slight edge until the score was tied at nine-all in the eighth. The game was rather loosely played with no less than sixteen free passes to first base being handed out by the four pitchers, two for each team. Simon started for the Kingston nine giving up six hits and eleven walks, the free passes causing his undoing, while Dawson, who relieved him in the seventh was nicked for four bingles.

Belleville Outhit

Belleville was outhit 15 to 10 on the night's play but they made their hits count during the later innings and took full advantage of the breaks when they came their way.

Bill Anderson started for the locals and was nicked for six bingles in the two and two-thirds innings he worked. Freddie Vasil did some opportune relief chucking, which coupled with some snappy fielding, held the opposition to five runs for the balance of the route.

Kingston started right out to make things interesting for the locals by chasing two runs across in the first through a walk to Szabo, a single by Richardson and a rousing double from Rawly's bat. Belleville topped their effort in the last half however, when Henn and J. Barriage walked to score on LaBonne's double, while Murney Green followed with another two-baser.

Went Ahead in Third

That was the finish of the excitement until the third, Kingston went ahead by virtue of four consecutive hits St. Pierre, Richardson and Panning all conked singles only to have the first named player thrown out at the plate by a beautiful peg from Green in centre. Rawly followed with his second double of the game to score two, but Storin hoisted to centre and Rawly was called out for leaving second before the catch.

Belleville went down scoreless from the first until the sixth, when after two were down Freddie Vasil beat out an infield hit. Henn walked and Barriage was safe when the Kingston infield muffed his roller. Cy Barriage came through with a long single to chase two across the platter.

Storin sent the Kingston boys further ahead starting the seventh when after two had singled he conked out a rousing double and they repeated in the eithth, when four singles counted two more. Belleville scored once in the seventh, when after LaBonne strolled Murney Green drove a triple over the centrefielder's head. He was out on the next play however, when he tried to score after Tuttle hit to centre. The locals got three to tie the score in the eighth as they were helped by some loose playing on the part of the opposition and won out in the ninth by virtue of two hits a walk and a wild pitch.

Pryke Makes Star Play

On the night's play it appeared that Kingston showed to slightly better advantage in the field, their playing being sparked by Szabo at second and Booth in right. Attanis in centre demonstrated a nice throwing arm much to the locals' chagrin, when they were cut off at the plate on a couple of plays.

Pryke, mentor of the Reliance nine, showed some good guessing, when he pinch-hitted for Ethier in the eighth to send in the tying run, when he hoisted to left, while in the ninth he cut a Kingston rally in the bud, when he speared Booth's line drive down the third base line to double Storin off first.

JACK CLAYBOURNE DEFEATS DUNLOP IN MAIN BOUT

Loser Kicked Out of Ring and Counted Out, While Prostrate.

KATAN BEATS BISHOP

Twelve hundred fans howled with glee at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night, when Al "Bunny" Dunlop lost to Jack Claybourne, the ebony-hued wrestler in the main bout of a fair wrestling card and was so incensed at the decision, that he had to have police protection to reach the dressing room, after he had started a battle of his own with a number of spectators near the entrance. In the other bouts "Killer" John Katan certainly gave Dick "Texas" Bishop a real going over leaving him nearly prostrate after 31 minutes of grappling and rough house tactics, while Freddie Steele put the clamps on Tofalos the golden greek in the preliminary canter.

Claybourne is truly an acrobat and a good wrestler at the same time and by winning the first fall with a high jump and a drop kick, he showed the fans why he is in the first flight of the best heavyweights in the Province. Dunlop certainly had the best of the going in the first few minutes of the bout but Claybourne bided his time and getting the referee Phil Lawson between himself and his adversary, he leaped over his head and hitting Dunlop with his two feet in the chest knocked him kicking and he was an easy victim for a spread and Lawson did not lose anytime in counting him down. Dunlop was very peeved over this turn of events and in the second fall did not wait for the bell to ring to start it but proceeded to kick Claybourne into submission. When the bell did finally start them on their way, Dunlop continued the softening up process and with a couple of back-breakers and a chin lock evened the count.

Did Not Leave Ring

Claybourne did not leave the ring and in the final round a drop kicking duel between the two left Dunlop outside the ropes and he could not get back in time. Claybourne scooted him out through the ropes a couple of times and the sand on the floor even rocked with the force of the fall. Lawson did not lose anytime in leaving the ring after giving his decision and with no one to pick on Dunlop started a private go of his own with the spectators and he certainly planted a few elbow smashes before he was taken in tow and lead to his dressing room. Quite a showman is "Bunny."

Bishop was just a little lamb compared to his exhibition of the week before because Katan was always on top in his bout with him and Bishop is still probably counting the stars after the mauling he took. A strangle leg hold that had Bishop bewildered certainly took the gimp out of him and Katan added a few more chin locks to make it interesting. Whenever Bishop went on the offensive, Katan sought refuge in the ropes and as a consequence little real wrestling was indulged in. For our money this Katan can show the great majority of the squirmers where they head in and when they want to play dirty, he can give much more than he receives and he does it in a nice way.

Tofalos did not have the length of reach nor the height to make much of an impression on Freddie Steele and Steele using a leg stretch and an arm hold that had "Golden Greek" in difficulty a number of times. Tofalos found time to hurt Steele with an arm hold but Steele wiggled clear to get a spread and a quick count and that was it. The boys will be back next week at the same time at the Arena.

JERSEY GIANTS BREAK RECORD

Tailenders Break 34-year-old Record by Being Shutout 27 Times in Year.

By the Associated Press

Jersey City Giants broke a 34-year-old record in the International League yesterday, but it isn't likely they will go around talking about it.

The tailenders suffered their 27th whitewashing of the season in going down before Baltimore, 3-0. This wiped off the record books the 26 shutouts Montreal Royals absorbed in 1909. In chalking up his 15th victory of the season Steve Gromek, Baltimore righthander, yielded only three hits and fanned four.

Rufus Gentry won his 18th game of the year in pitching Buffalo to a two-hit, 2-0 shutout over Rochester. The Buffalo flinger was in rare form, striking out 11 and issuing but one walk.

Syracuse Chiefs pulled a triple play in the third inning, but had to stage a spectacular four-run uprising in the ninth to beat Newark, 7-6. Dutch Mele won the game by driving in three runs with a two-bagger with the bases loaded. The defeat ended Joe Page's right-frame winning streak for Newark.

Toronto and Montreal were idle.

Speed Keynote of Harness Meet, Held at Stratford

By the Canadian Press

Speed was the keynote of the harness meeting at Stratford, Ont., yesterday with Easter Parade, owned by J. W. Brown, New Liskeard and driven by Chapman, turning in three fast half-mile heats, none slower than 1:02 1-4, to win the free-for-all feature.

Chapman was also the driver of May Todd which took the classified trot in three straight heats, Pine Ridge Bill, from the Pine Ridge Stable, London, pressing the winner each time. The classified trot and pace was won fairly easily by Pine Ridge Jim, with Hillock at the reins, in all three heats. Lady Peters and Black Prince alternated for second place in this event. Ringlets Henley, the Stratford pacer earned the first two starts of the 2:28 pace, the third heat being taken by Minto Harvester which was handled by Floyd Milton. The latter also drove Rip Harvester which copped second position in the free-for-all.

Because of a cut over his eye, received Monday night at Philadelphia when he was defeated by Bob Montgomery, Fritzie Zivic announced last night at his Pittsburgh home he would not be able to fight Jake Lamotta at New York Sept. 2 but would like a return go with Montgomery later.

Baseball statiticians have uncovered the fact that the Philadelphia Athletics have registered a number of all-time records, apart from the recent 20-game losing streak. In 1941 the Mackmen hit into 141 doubleplays and had the fewest stolen bases in both 1931 and 1941 at 27, as well as losing 19 straight games on the road in 1916.

President Will Harridge of the American League announced yesterday that consideration is being given to a plan to send teams of Major League stars to play games for the troops behind the war fronts, the squads to sail after the World's Series in October.

Manuel Ortiz, World's Bantamweigth champion, will defend his title for the seventh time this year when he takes on Leonardo Lopez, also from south of the Rio Grande, on Oct. 1 at Hollywood, Cal. In his last 29 fights, Ortiz has scored 16 knockouts.

Once famed as the pitcher for Fords of Windsor, Ont., Homer Lesser pitched the shipyards team of Halifax, N. S., to a 3-1 victory over the Army Nine last night to tie up the semi-finals at two games each in the Halifax Senior Baseball League. Lesser struck out nine men.

In grand circuit racing at State Fair Park, Milwaukee, yesterday, Harry Fitzpatrick drove two horses to new records, sending Noble Hal to a 2:04 mark in winning the 2:26 pace and Worthy General to a 2:03 mile in the second heat of the 2:14 trot which he won in three heats.

Manager James McCaffrey, manager of the Ottawa Commandos, was presented with a 10-year medal last night by the Quebec Senior Hockey League signifying a decade of activity with circuit teams. The league "hoped" to operate during the coming winter, it was stated at the meeting which was held at Montreal.

The inaugural of the 1943 football season took place last night before 50,000 people at Northwestern University's Stadium, Evanston, Ill., when the college all-stars swamped, by a score of 27-7, the Washington Redskins, last year's champions of the National Football League.

Frank Colman, London, Ont., contribution to the line-up of the Toronto Maple Leafs, is out of the game with an injured knee which has become greatly swollen despite medical attention. Manager Burleigh Grimes declared he would have to alternate Gruzdis and Dugas in left field during Colman's absence.

Toronto, Aug. 26. (CP)—The good citizens of Lethbridge, Alta., are biting their nails over a rumor that only one R.C.A.F. hockey team from each Air Command will be permitted to compete for the Allan Cup this year. The Lethbridge fans figure the only Alberta R.C.A.F. team would be located in Calgary and that Lethbridge would be without big-time hockey for the first time in years. The rumor, however, is entirely without confirmation.

Old Stuff:

Amateur hockey's play-for-pay plan is not new. Johnny (Vancouver Province) Park says Si Griffis, one of the famous old Vancouver millionaires, collected $1,000 plus return transportation from Vancouver for a season with Kenora, Ont., Thistles nearly 40 years ago. Park says $20 a game was not an uncommon payment for a soccer player's services in B.C. cities around the turn of the century.

One-Man Gangs:

Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning suggests the National Hockey League might solve the manpower shortage with one-man hockey. The schedule might appear: Jan. 15—Patrick (New York) vs Ross (Boston); Adams (Detroit) vs Irvin (Montreal); Tobin (Chicago) vs Selke (Toronto).

Incidentally:

The former professional hockey player, Conny Tudin, made his amateur boxing debut in Ottawa the other night and trimmed Johnny Myrenich of Barriefield, Ont., in the 175-pound class. Tudin played junior hockey with Ottawa Rideaus and wound up his professional career with New Haven Eagles before joining the R.C.A.F. a year ago. He was with Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers last winter. . . .New York Rangers were the first war-time Stanley Cup champions in 1940. Of that team's 15 players, only three remain—Ott Heller, Bryan Hextall and Phil Watson. The others have all been traded, enlisted or retired. Eight members of the Ranger team which lined up for last season's first game have enlisted. The latest was Bob Kirkpatrick, former Regina, Flin Flon, Man., and Lethbridge amateur.

YANKEES ALMOST CLINCH AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT

CARDS ARE "IN"

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

The mathematical lock hasn't been turned yet, but New York Yankees have just closed the door on another American League pennant, their seventh in eight years. St. Louis Cardinals have been conceded the National League flag for a couple of weeks or longer.

Now there no longer is any reason to doubt that the Yankees will be the host team when the World Series opens, they finished their last western trip with a bang by drubbing Detroit Tigers in both ends of a doubleheader 7-5 and 5-1.

This performance gave them a record of having won 12 consecutive series, a feat not equalled even by the great Yankee clubs of the past, and sent them home with a 10 1-2 games lead.

Rudy York took personal issue with the Yankees in their final games, hitting a home run in each half of the bill to bring his total for the season to 28 and his record for the month to 15. He now needs to hit four in his next four games to surpass the record of 18.

Indians Beat Boston

In the other American League contests Cleveland beat Boston Red Sox twice 8-3 and 4-1. St. Louis Browns whipped Washington 7-4 and Philadelphia Athletics resumed their losing habits by folding before Chicago White Sox 4-0 as Jake Wade pitched four-hit ball and Luke Appling drove in three guns with three hits.

Vernon Kennedy pitched seven-hit ball and Ray Poat a six-hitter to account for the Cleveland Indians conquests with Jeff Heath chiming in with two home runs in the second game.

Bobo Newsom was knocked out at St. Louis again, but the Browns won anyway on good relief pitching by Nelson Potter.

In the National League St. Louis Cardinals completed their last eastern trip with their second straight shutout of the Boston Braves 2-0 as Lefty Harry Brecheen allowed five singles.

It was the champions' 15th straight success against the Braves.

Brooklyn Dodgers topped Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 in the only other game in the senior circuit, scoring five times in the third inning through errors by Max Butcher and Elbie Fletcher.

What's Doing in Sport

Toronto, (CP)—Among the entries for the invitation tennis tourney of the Toronto Cricket Club, Sept. 4-6, are Ross Wilson, former Davis Cup player, Grant McLean, Group Capt. Burnett of Mount Hope and AC2 McQueen of St. Thomas.

Toronto, (CP)— Sixty candidates turned out last night for the workout of the navy team in the Senior O.R.F.U. under the direction of Coach Ted Morris who pointed out that his sole veteran player from last year's regulars is Scotty Milne. The team will be made up from promising high school lads.

Niagara Falls, Ont. (CP)— The local Seniors were eliminated from the Niagara Baseball League playoffs last night when the Welland nine scored a 5-1 decision to take the third and deciding game of the five-game series. At Welland, Crowland Union Jacks, 1942 Ontario Intermediate titlists, took the third straight game in the lower series from Fort Erie 5-3.

Kitchener. (CP)—Competing in a field of 67 golfers in the seventh annual tournament of the K-W Sales and Advertising Club yesterday, Harry L. Guy captured the Earl Putnam trophy with a gross 82. Low net trophy went to Stan Eckel with 65.

Hamilton, (CP)—In the first of a three-game series for the Congress Baseball league championship last night, Toronto Tip Tops measured Hamilton Co-Ops 8-6 in a loosely-performed contest. First baseman Eckler of the visitors drove in four runs.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Latest casting from the rumor foundry is that Leo Bondy is leaving the Giants' official family— which ain't the kind of shakeup that Giant fans have been demanding. . . . While lunching recently with the AP's John Colburn, Paavo Nurmi asked to be rememberd to all his North American friends. . . . And he remarked that Anglo-Saxon Athletes generally were tops in the long run. . . . Sgt. Joe Louis is on duty as a "one man task force" this week, looking after Cpl. Ray Robinson while he's here to fight Hank Armstrong.

Scrap Collection.

After Lou Nova was stopped by Lee Savold in Chicago recently, he asked Trainer Ray Arcel what was the matter with him. Ray told him just what anyone else could have: "You don't have the right spirit to be a fighter". . . . The Cards' Alpha Brazle credits a sore arm with making him a winning pitcher. It forced him to change his pitching style and that cured him of wildness.

Punch Line.

After Frankie Graham, son of the N.Y. Sun sport columnist had KO'd four other sailors in training tussles at the Great Lakes naval training station, he was invited to show on the weekly station fight card. . .Frankie looked up from his task of handling a kid he was tabbed "K.O. Keough" and remarked: "No thanks; Mi'm Hymie Graham, the manager, now." . . . Which just shows you the wisdom of having a sports writer for a pappy.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 159

By SAM GORDON
THE KIBITZER

Horse Sense tells you how and when. If you have an unused trick, let partner know about it, if possible. But don't make a voluntary bid unless you have something new to show.

A responder is assumed to have a basis of two tricks in either suit or no-trump. Each suit raise shows another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid shows another no trump trick.

You have this responding hand:

♠ J 5
♥ A Q 9 5
♦ 8 6 3 2
♣ 9 6 4

Your hand contains three suit tricks, of which two are no-trump tricks. Thus, while you have enough for one suit raise, you have not enough for any voluntary no-trump bids.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. Your first response is a takeout to two hearts. Your raise is in a suit bid. So it consumes your third and last trick.

Suppose partner then bids two spades or two no-trump or three hearts. None of these bids is a takeout to a new suit. So you are not forced to bid again.

Therefore, you should bid again only if you have unshown values. You have no more suit tricks for any suit raises. Nor have you any unexpected no-trump tricks for a voluntary no-trump bid.

Instead of one spade, suppose partner opens with one heart. Your first response is now an assist to two hearts. And that uses up your third suit trick.

If partner then bids two no-trump or three hearts, you have no more suit tricks for another raise in hearts. Nor have you an unexpected no-trump trick for a voluntary no-trump bid.

In each of the cases cited today, your second round response is pass. Because no combination mentioned forces you to bid again.

With nothing more to show, the time has come to pass. It saves you lots of dough and demonstrates your class.

AT THE BELLE

"A Stranger in Town"

With Frank Morgan manipulating legal strings, Richard Carlson and pretty Jean Rogers battling furiously until they discover they were meant for each other, M-G-M's "A Stranger in Town" has any number of laughs at the Belle theatre.

Morgan plays a U.S. Supreme Court Judge visiting a small town incognito while vacationing. He is "shaken down" and resolves to even the score. He becomes mentor to Carlson, a young attorney dusts off a handful of forgotten laws and commiserates the town's unscrupulous politicians so that the setup is fully exposed.

Dramatic Climax

In a dramatic climax Morgan bests the racketeers and crooked mayor. He also delivers an inspiring speech on American freedom that rids the town of its vultures.

Comedy highlights include squabbles by the romancers, Miss Rogers joining a free-for-all, and Morgan's clever manipulations which confuse his worthy opponents.

Contributing supporting roles also are Porter Hall as the "crooked" Judge, Robert Barrat as the mayor, Chill Wills, Irving Bacon, Donald McBride, Walter Baldwin, Olin Howland and Robert Emmett O'Connor.

"Apache Trail" Stirring

Fans of western pictures have a treat in store for them in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Apache Trail" the second worthy feature hit at the Belle Theatre. Indian raids, gun duels, a family feud and a triangular love affair are crammed into hours of action.

A handsome newcomer, William Lundigan, and Donna Reed, who will be remembered for her role in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," head the cast with Lloyd Nolan as a villainous bad man who becomes the hero when Apaches besiege a desert stage station. Ann Ayars givs a fine performance as the feminine "menace."

The love interest is supplied by Lundigan and Miss Reed who plays Rosalia, daughter of the Spanish crook for the station. A threat to their romance is Ann Ayars, as Constance, an attractive widow.

The strong cast includes Chill Wills, in a fine comedy performance, Grant Withers, Gloria Holden and Miles Mander.

"First Aid" is the title of an entertaining Pete Smith specialty to be exhibited on the same program.

By HYE BOSSIN

Leave it to Hollywood to find a new paint conservation idea. There are now three different levels for stocking makeup. The bottom rung is for evening wear, the next for street clothes and the third is for bathing suits and sportswear. . . . Maybe it's part of Hollywood's "colossal" attitude but a farmer in a neighboring town, with the aid of chemicals, raised over-size pumpkins four months ahead of the usual gathering time. . . . Joe E. Brown is running a USA version of our Sports Service League, collecting equipment for the boys overseas. . . . June Lockhart, daughter of Ontario's Gene, will have an important role in "The White Cliffs of Dover." Ottawa lent the studio much troop equipment for the depiction of the Dieppe raid, one of the features of the film. . . . Janice Wilson, the 12-year-old actress who played Bette Davis' adopted daughter in "Now, Voyager," plays her real offspring in "Watch on the Rhine" . . . Television equipment for homes and theatres is all blueprinted and manufacture will begin immediately after the war.

* * *

Vera Hruba, the Czech skating star who did so well in "Ice Capades," has changed her surname to Ralston. That's the name of her father, whom she hasn't heard from since the Germans over-ran her native land . . . Garbo, it is said, will return to the screen in "Indo-China," playing a woman-of-mystery role . . . When Greer Garson, 36, married Richard Ney, 23, one newspaper headed its report: "Mrs. Miniver Marries her Son" . . . The screen will deal with juvenile delinquency via two films now in production—"Where Are My Children?" and "Marked Children" . . . Prices of story material have gone up tremendously since the early days of the motion picture. In 1918 Mary Pickford paid an unprecedented $40,000 for the rights to "Daddy Long Legs." Now she will pay out over $400,000 for the purchase of "Junior Miss."

GREER GARSON

* * *

Not all soldiers are so crazy to kiss movie stars as we're led to believe. At the Hollywood canteen a soldier, on being invited to kiss Katharine Hepburn, refused with: "I got married yesterday —and I won't kiss anybody else today!" . . . Tex Ritter, hero of a thousand wild-riding scenes and hairbreadth escapes, had to quit work because he fell from his haymow. . . . Some of the Russian films to be offered will have the actors speaking in English. . . . Charles Laughton, Walter Huston and possibly Katharine Hepburn will play in the film version of Pearl Buck's "Dragon Seed" . . . "For Whom the Bell Tolls" will not be seen in Canada unless the Wartime Prices and Trade Board allows the admission prices to be raised. "Gone With the Wind" hasn't been reissued for the same reason. . . . Warners has established a coaching school in New York for promising young players. They have to get them fast and train them fast these days.

AT THE BELLE

Richard Carlson and Jean Rogers are a pair of young lovers who combine comedy with romance in M.G.M.'s surprise hit, "A Stranger in Town," starring Frank Morgan, now at the Belle with "Apache Trail," M.G.M. Western, featuring Lloyd Nolan, Donna Reed and William Lundigan.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Something to Shout About"

Janet Blair is a particular kind of a girl, the "terrific" kind.

Janet is now in pictures, having signed a term contract with Columbia. Currently starring with Don Ameche and Jack Oakie at the Capitol Theatre in Gregory Ratoff's "Something to Shout About", she sings, dances and acts with all the aplomb of a born star.

Her real name is Janet Lafferty. Born and raised in Altoona, Pennsylvania, she chose the name Blair because Altoona is in Blair county. She is the daughter of Fred B. and Florence Lafferty. She has a brother, Fred, Jr., who is a famous quarterback, Colgate, '32, and one sister, Ann Louise.

Her early ambition was to be a ballet dancer. Her father did not think much of the idea. However, she says, he finally got tired of her habit of standing on her head and kicking her legs about.

"You might just as well do something useful with those lanky legs", he told her. "You may have your ballet lessons". (It is only fair to say that Miss Blair's legs are no longer lanky. To call them anything less than lovely would be libel.)

She did very well with her ballet work, but her voice was so noticeably good, a vocal teacher was engaged. By the time she finished high school, her singing voice was outstanding. She had a choice of joining Hal Kemp's orchestra as a vocalist or going to college. She chose the band job.

"The Wildcat of Tucson"

Bill Elliott, Columbia's cowboy star, has galloped approximately 25,000 miles in making westerns. His latest is the "The Wildcat of Tucson", now at the Capitol Theatre as the companion feature.

The Capitol Theatre has something to shout about, in their lobby. When patrons come to see "Something to Shout About", no doubt they will be surprised to know that workmen have been busy from early morning till late evening, laying new carpets over the entire floor area of the theatre. Many hours were spent by the genial manager, Tommy Mascaro together with other executives in choosing colors and designs which will add new cheerfulness for its patrons.

INVITATION EXTENDED TO MASONS IN RCAF WHO ARE IN BRITAIN

A report has been received from London that the Masons in England have extended an invitation to all Masons in the R.C.A.F. to attend the installation meeting of Canada Lodge, which was formed as a home for Canadian Masons resident in the United Kingdom and those temporarily there as well.

Hope was expressed that the Grand Master, Rt Hon. the Earl of Harewood, K.G., G.C.V.O., D.S.O., will be present at this meeting. Although details of time and place have not yet been decided, Masons in the Service are requested to get in touch with the Secretary of Canada Lodge and arrange to be present at the meeting.

Such a gesture as this shows that the Mother Country is finally recognizing her child and anxious to display the affection usually accorded a long absent one. Relationships between Britishers in their homeland and Britishers from abroad can be more solidly forged through such a meeting as this and if other fraternities, lodges and service clubs were to follow this example, Canada and Canadians would soon be made happier and their sojourn away from home made more bearable.

EIGHTH SICILY LIST OF CASUALTIES ISSUED

Ottawa, Aug. 25 (CP)—The Defence Department today issued the eighth list of Canada (Active) army casualties in the Sicily campaign, containing 98 names and bringing to 769 the number of casualties officially reported in lists so far.

Today's list contained the names of 18 soldiers killed in action, seven who died of wounds, one who died of causes not stated, 25 missing in action and 47 wounded. There were no commissioned officers included in the eighth Sicily list.

ALL-STARS BEAT PRO. REDSKINS BY 27-7 SCORE

Sammy Baugh"s' Pitching Not Enough to Stop Collegians.

SMART CONTEST

By DAVE HOFF
Associated Press Sports Writer

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 26— Sammy Baugh was in form, the Washington Redskins acted the part of professional champions—but what can you do against the greatest collection of collegiate all-stars, fellows who have had the benefit of magnificent coaching.

The answer would seem to be: Lose. And that's what the Redskins did last night. Not only did they bow to the Harry Stuhldreher-coached 1943 all-star edition, but they took the worst thumping of any pro team in the 10-year history of this traditional preview of the United States Football season.

The score was 27-7, a supremacy margin of 20 points which outbid the performance of the 1938 all-stars, who also defeated Washington, 28-16. That, incidentally, was the last time the collegians had won in the series, but they busted the pros' four-year victory monopoly wide open last night.

The thing that floored the 50,000 who crammed Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium was the spectacular fashion in which each of the all-star touchdowns occurred.

Scampers 50 yards

In the first period Missouri's Bob Steuber took a Redskin punt at midfield and scampered 50 yards for a touchdown, a placement by Wisconsin's Pat Harder making it 7-0 in favor of the all-stars. Baugh, who ended up with 22 pass completions, good for 273 yards, chucked a four-yard throw to Joe Aguirre good for a Redskin touchdown, opening the second period and tying the score, 7 to 7, after Bob Masterson's placement kick.

But the all-stars had a brilliant passer, too Glen Dobbs from Tulsa University, who was an all-American last fall. Dobbs threw to Harder in a play carrying 37 yards for another all-star touchdown, Harder's kick making it 14-7.

The stars were just warming up. Along in the third period the Redskins, with Baugh pitching, were sneaking deep into all-star territory, and Sammy lofted one for a touchdown try. Instead Northwestern's Otto Graham intercepted on the three-yard line and travelled the entire 97-yard route for a touchdown to make it 20 to 7 for the all-stars.

The collegians before the game was over, cut loose Pat Harder on a sideline sprint for 33 yards and a fourth college touchdown.

I.T.S. Defeats Trenton Station

Softballers from the No. 5 Initial Training School at Belleville drew first blood in their district No. 1 training command softball series, when in a replay of a previous night's' game they defeated Trenton Air Station by a 4-1 score. Darkness had intervened the night previous with the score tied at 7-all necessitating the replay.

No. 5 I.T.S. will now meet the fast No. 1 Instrument Flying Training School team from Deseronto at Trenton this evening. The winner will go to Toronto to compete with other command teams for the championship.

A large crowd of spectators saw the tussle, which resulted in the Trenton team being ousted from the playdowns. Two replacements for the I.T.S. lads in their outfield added considerable strength to the team, they now having McIntyre in right field; Barnett in centre and Gignac in left field to form a distance-covering outer garden.

The balance of last night's I.T.S. team was comprised of Daniels at third; Muldoon at short; Mullins at second and McKay at first base.

BOXING WRITERS BLAST BOUT

Claim English Fight Only For Those Having Money.

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 26 (CP)—London boxing writers, pulling no punches in vitriolic blasts against conditions surrounding the coming fight for the British and Empire heavyweight championship, charged arrangements for the bout were unfair to the general public. One writer even said the bout should be banned.

Plans, approved by the British Boxing Board of Control, call for Freddie Mills, king of the light-heavies, to clash with Jack London, biggest man in Britain's professional ring, Sept. 22 at the Queensberry Club. Lack of space there limits attendance to 1,750.

To make the venture pay, admission prices were set at a top of $115 and a low of $9. The limited seating and the luxury prices, the newspapers claimed, irked many a faithful follower who couldn't afford to attend even if he did have a chance to buy a ticket.

Agreeing that a championship tilt should be an event for the ordinary man who makes war or its munitions, newspapers carried articles under such heads as "stop this big fight racket," "Can this fight" and "big fight for rich."

Mills, 189-pound one-time booth boxer at country fairs, and London, 217-pound former truck driver, are sergeants in the Royal Air Force and proceeds from the bout, after purses and expenses have been subtracted, will go to war charities, to hover around $44,000.

SMALLER APPLE CROP EXPECTED

During the past month the weather was ideal for growth, with apples sizing rapidly after a late blossom period. Considerable scab has developed on fruit in many orchards from severe foliage infection due to the extremely wet weather which prevailed up to the first cover spray. Insect injury is lighter than last season with the exception of Leaf Roller and Bud Moth where a dormant spray was not applied. Considerable fire blight injury is showing on susceptible varieties. Most growers have put on at least three cover sprays for control of scab, codling moth and apple maggot, with quite a number of growers applying a late cover spray for scab control.

The crop in Durham County will show an increase of 35 per cent over last season, while in Northumberland, Hastings, Prince Edward and the St. Lawrence Valley districts there will be a decrease of at least 20 per cent. The percentage of clean apples will be lower due to scab development on fruit.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper and the telephone rang and ma answered it, saying, Oh, hello Maud, how are you, I was just thinking about you, great minds run in the same channel.

I bet you a million dollers it's Mrs. Hews, pop, I said, and pop said, I bet you a million and 2 it's a confounded bridge game being cooked up for tonight.

Which just then we heard ma say, I dont know, Maud, he hasn't seemed to feel much like playing lately. You know how he is, a proverbial fits and starter, he may not be in the mood for a game, she said.

The situation sounds desperate but not hopeless, pop said, and ma said, Well, all I can do is ask him, I'll ask him and call you back

All is lost, pop said. Oh well, I guess I better make a virtue of necessity and be noble about it all, he said.

Which just then ma came back in the dining room and pop said, That sounded like Maud Hews. Why didn't you assemble a little bridge game while you had her on the phone? he said.

Why William, that's quite a nice idea, ma said. It's all up to Yewstace, he might not like to change his mind, she said, and pop said, What mind, how do you mean?

It seems he feels like bowling this evening, so he got Maud to call up to see if you'd go around to Peet's alleys with him, but naturally he might just as soon play bridge, ma said, and pop said, But naturally I wouldn't. My mussels have been crying out for a little bowling, and now I realize what they're been crying for. Yee gods what a close shave, he said.

William Potts what are you talking about, who suggested a bridge game, you or me? ma said, and pop said, Me. Call Maud back and tell her I'll meet Yewstace around at Peet's in 15 minutes at the most and 10 at the least, he said, and ma said, Such a man for land sakes.

Meaning pop.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 13

"So you think Castle got a bullet intended for somebody else?" Inspector Hare said, when I rushed to him with my theory about the door. "You think the murderer fired two shots at Castle before he discovered he'd made a slight error and then retired to the vacant studio across the hall to wait for somebody he really wanted to bump off?"

"Someone was in that studio when I listened at Jan's door at midnight," I said. "That door was closed ever so slowly—I SAW it! And Jan Proust's door was shut then, and wide open the next morning when Mr. Strom went by. Something went on between the time I was there and Strom came by—"

"If it reallly was open as Strom says."

"I believe him!" I said hotly.

Hare grinned at me. "I didn't say I doubted him—any more than I doubt everybody. Listen, Miss Driscoll, this is murder. Somebody's in a spot. All right, you've got an alibi, you're not scared but the rest are, they're not taking any chances—"

"I AM scared! I get gooseflesh all over me every time I think of Peg and me alone on that top floor, and people trying our door knob, and trying to crawl in our windows—"

He grinned again. "I think you scare too easy!"

"All right. But I didn't imagine the man on the fire-escape last night. I SAW him and so did Miss Hudson and you can laugh at my theory, but the man in that vacant studio Monday night, and the man on our fire-escape last night, might be the same person—and he might turn out to be the murderer!"

"In which case it would be nice if you could identify him," he said dryly.

Every time I talked to the man I was at a disadvantage. I made up my mind to stick to reporting and let him do the detecting. I even got a little razzing about the fire-escape story at the office. That's what happens when you get a reputation for being a bit nervous and jittery.

But I didn't imagine that hulk balancing on the ledge trying to get in our window and even if I did, Peg didn't. Peg never imagined anything in her life.

Yet when Madame Hurd came out with the belated story that she saw a man coming out of the building about 10 o'clock on the night of the murder, when she was coming in, it was accepted as gospel truth.

She even described him, thickset, about five feet eight, wearing a light overcoat or raincoat, a muffler and a soft hat pulled well over his eyes.

All the papers printed the story of course, but the Express made a lot of it, with a signed story by Chris Hall, and an artist's sketch of the man, made from Madame Hurd's description.

I might have been more impressed if I hadn't known that she is so near-sighted she does not even recognize her pupils on the street. And besides, with the coroner's statement that the murder was not committed before half past 10 or 11, what was the point in all this fuss about someone she happened to see leaving the building at 10?

As far as I could see they weren't getting anywhere. But all day long the papers were coming out with big scare-heads and more pictures of Gil's women. It was far from a pretty story.

More and more it came back to the coroner's verdict: "By person or persons unknown."

In whispers and openly, it was discussed whenever two or three of us got together in the building. You couldn't walk from one floor to the next without finding two or three with their heads together. Sam Utz buttonholed everyone who passed his door, with his theories about Jan, and I never realized before how they all hated him, the kindest, most generous soul in the world. Professional jealousy, I suppose, since he was a big name and they were nobidies. It made my blood boil.

Poor Mr. Strom followed me like a faithful dog, asking, "Anything new, anything new?"

Late Wednesday afternoon he begged me to come down to his showroom, on the pretext that he wanted to show me a bargain in a fox chubbie. Actually he wanted to talk about his latest theory.

He had the idea that the murder did not take place in Proust's studio at all, but that Gilbert Castle was killed somewhere else, and the body brought there in the early hours of the morning. It did not sound very plausible to me, but I was listening intently until I realized that Mrs. Strom was not listening at all. She had moved over to the partition that separated their room from Utz's and had her ear to the wall.

Strom paused as he saw my attention wavering and Mrs. Strom held up her hand and signalled to us and we—yes, me too—we moved up nearer and listened. After all, we were more or less justified.

Mrs. Utz, whom I'd always pitied because she was such a small, white mouse of a girl, and so browbeaten by that big, red-faced, blustering husband of hers, was crying and he was ranting and raving at her.

"But darling, I'm not telling anyone else," her voice came clearly through the thin partition. "I'm just telling you and you can tell me why you went. It's because you're not telling me the truth that I'm worried. Why do you say you DIDN'T go downstairs that night? I heard you go. I HEARD you. Oh, Sam, I'm so worried, you've got me so worried—"

Utz swore a big, round oath and yelled ."Can't a man go down to the washroom without telling his wife about it? My Gott, are you crazy? Do you think I did it? What do you want to do, hang me? Why don't you go tell the police—go call the inspector—"

We heard her crying and she must have clung to him because there was a scuffle and she fell against the very wall we were listening at and cried the louder.

He was stamping up and down, swearing and cursing at her and every minute or two he'd say, "So I am supposed to ask you, can I please walk downstairs? It's come to that, has it? A man has to ask his wife, please can he walk down to the washroom—"

"But Sam," she said, gently, "it was only because you said you didn't go down that I brought it up. I woke up and it was 3:00 o'clock and you were gone and then you came in and I went back to sleep. Why did you say you didn't go down when I knew you did? Suppose someone saw you, suppose someone thought that you—"

"Oh shut up," he yelled, "and stay shut up!"

"No, I must tell you. You've got to know—"

"So it's something to tell!" His voice sounded quite different then. There was still the bullying, angry note, but there was fear in it, too.

"It's only, Sam, that last night, in your sleep—"

"Good gracious!" he yelled. "is a man responsible for what he does in his sleep? First he's—" he dropped his voice—"he's a murderer because he goes to the washroom at 3.00 o'clock in the morning, and now he's something else because he —snores is it? What is this terrible thing I do when I am asleep?"

"You talk, darling. You talk, and it scares me—"

Her voice rose shrilly and he must have put his hand over her mouth because it stopped suddenly and then we heard her body fall to the floor and then only the sound of heavy breathing — his breathing.

He's killed her, too! I thought, and Strom and I both raced to the door and opened it, just in time to see little Mrs. Utz groping her way down the hall to the ladies' dressing room, her face averted.

She certainly was not killed.

Strom closed the door, cautiously.

"Now what do we do?" he said.

"Well, what do we know, really?"

Strom cupped his chin in his hands and thought. "I guess, Miss Driscoll, we don't know anything. A man goes down to the washroom at three o'clock in the morning and he talks in his sleep. As he says, is that a crime? No. Better we wait."

"Oh, I don't like it," Mrs. Strom worried. "I don't like it. And him right next door, like."

I wished there was someone we could tell. If Inspector Geary had been left on the job, instead of Hare. But it was Hare who was in charge and he had laughed at me and my attempts to be helpful just once too often. Let him do the job, let him find the murderer. Besides, we didn't know that Utz was guilty —he probably wasn't. A man can be a heel without being a killer. No use getting him in trouble, or getting ourselves laughed at.

So I kept silent on this. We all kept silent.

After a sleepless, if uneventful night, it was good to see the sun come up, to get up even if I hadn't slept and go to the office, away from the Roller building.

Three days . . . it seemed more like three years. Now that the first excitement was over I had too much time to think. I dreaded the funeral, Saturday. I dreaded another interview with Mrs. Castle. I dreaded opening the "Express," for this Chris Hall was doing too good a job to suit me. I was still a jump ahead of him, but he worried me. I was afraid he would think of something I had missed.

I walked slower and slower as I turned the corner of Pacific avenue and saw the great hulk of the Castle house on the hill. My feet dragged, and I had a miserable, sick feeling at the pit of my stomach. But I need not have worried, she wouldn't see me.

JUNGLE JUICE

Melbourne. (CP)—If the far north of Australia the danger second to the Japanese is "jungle juice". One recipe is to put an inch or two of rice in a pickle jar, the same quantity of raisins and sultanas, fill with canned fruit juice and allow to ferment. Methylated spirit may be added, but in any case, pink elephants follow.

"Also Felt Tired, Nervous and Rundown"—Often a Common Result of Faulty Assimilation and Elimination. Tells of Relief.

In every section there are grateful men and women who have used Syntona and found it to be just what they needed to put new energy in rundown systems and relieve common disorders of stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. Syntona aids in ridding the system of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and promotes better assimilation of food to help build strong, healthy nerves and increase strength and energy. Many hundreds of people are recommending Syntona daily. Thousands have written us telling of the good results they have obtained.

For instance, here is the experience of Miss Jean Ali, 196 Wellington Street North, Hamilton, Ontario, who said:

"Because of a badly disordered stomach, I was having an awful time with attacks of gas, indigestion and heartburn after my meals. I used to get very bad headaches and my nerves were always on edge. I often got sick, dizzy spells. My back was aching all the time and I felt tired and rundown from the beginning of each day.

"A very good friend of mine suggested that I try Syntona. I'm afraid

MISS JEAN ALI

I didn't have very much faith in it at first. However, I did take it regularly and now I have found it so helpful that I cannot praise it highly enough. It relieved the gas, heartburn and attacks of indigestion so that I began to enjoy my meals again. Then I began to improve in other ways. The headaches and dizziness stopped troubling me. My nerves have quieted down. I don't feel tired as I used to and I have more energy. I am more than pleased with the good results Syntona has given me and I am glad to tell others about it."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Good Quality Seed Wheat Reported Scarce

Good quality seed wheat is scarce, in Hastings County states the Weekly Crop Report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Cutting, of grain and stook threshing is progressing slowly because of unfavorable weather in Hastings County, but the harvest is in full swing with yields varying from normal to half crops in Northumberland. Considerable western grain is being brought into Hastings County.

Alsike fields are now being threshed in Northumberland and corn, roots and potatoes are making satisfactory growth. In Prince Edward County livestock is in splendid condition. Yields and quality of spring grain is most disappointing, in fact, the poorest in years. The weather this week has been too cool and cloudy for tomatoes.

In Lennox and Addington County the harvesting of oats is well along but the crop is very light. Considerable alsike and timothy seed has been threshed; timothy is yielding very well but alsike quite light. Buckwheat and corn are both making exceptional growth. Potatoes are very promising and no blight is in evidence in the County as yet.

Guns For Kiska Grind Thru Streets

(By WILLIAM J. WORDEN)
Associated Press War Correspondent

Adak, Alaska, July 29. (Delayed) (AP)—There is no chance for an early release of this story; no chance that it will still be news when it can be released.

Nevertheless, it seems worth recording that tonight the guns are moving through the streets of Adak—guns for Kiska.

Along the edges of these streets, long lines of men move—some toward the movie for tonight, some toward bath houses, some toward various garrison duties. Some are moving, too, after the guns.

In Adak's harbor there are dozens of ships—freighters heavily loaded and waiting; awkward landing boats and troop transports. Now and again great warships drop anchor.

In the hospital a high officer tonight has his face turned toward his pillow. For months and months he had been waiting and working for just what is happening tonight—for the day when the guns would be moving out. This was his operation, the one he planned, the one he sweated over to make sure that every detail was right.

Stricken With Heart Attack

As he drafted the thousand and one details of the operation, this officer had held fast to his code—that he would ask no man to do what he himself would not do. He had planned that he himself would take the same chances that they would take, but a few days ago, a heart attack struck him. So, tonight, he knows that he will not go to Kiska. He turns his face to the pillow as the guns pass.

The men at dinner talked as usual of going home. They always talk of going home . But tonight they talked of it less sarcastically than usual, with less of resignation more of hope. There was in their talk of undercurrent, half unstated—after Kiska, perhaps home.

But tonight the guns are grinding through the streets—guns for Kiska.

237 Fall Fairs To Hold Exhibitions

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)—J. A. Carroll, Secretary of the Ontario Farms Association, today announced that of 240 fall fairs in this province, 237 are planning to hold agricultural exhibitions this autumn.

The Dundalk Society notified the association that their show had been cancelled mainly because of the farm help shortage.

Other fairs cancelled are those at Lombardy, Neustadt, Barrie and Rainy River. Fairs not held in 1942 but which are being resumed this year are those at Chesley and Stella.

Pipe and Brass Bands of CWAC'S Inspire Crowds

Nearing the end of a two weeks' tour of Eastern Ontario cities and towns, and falling on the first anniversary of the organizing of the C.W.A.C., the Pipe Band and Brass Band of the Corps paraded through the streets of Belleville at noon today.

Following the parade the girls returned to the Armouries' lawn where they played a short but entertaining concert. Already the girls have played in eleven towns on the tour and the Brass Band goes on from here to Peterborough, while the Pipe Band remained in Belleville throughout the afternoon where they gave a concert at the Armouries commencing at three o'clock. Future plans for the bands will take them east to Halifax and St. Johns after their final Ontario appearance at Kingston on Saturday night. Starting at Halifax they will make a cross-Canada tour ending in Vancouver on November 22nd.

Under the command of Lieut. Anne Lendrum, Duncan, B.C., the two bands have been training for their cross-Canada tour and all the girls are looking forward to a most interesting time, many paying visits to their home towns enroute.

Another personality with the bands is Pipe-Major Lilian Grant, Victoria, B.C., who, before the war and her enlistment with the W.A.C.S., had her own pipe band in this western city.

Speaking for the bands and addressing the public crowded around the railings at the Armouries, Sgt. Muriel Robertson, Peterboro, delivered a short talk on the benefits to be found in the Service for girls who might be interested in joining the Corps.

Mr. Reg. Hinchey, composer and band leader, was present at the concert where his own martial composition, "Athene" was played by the Brass Band. Sgt. Robertson announced that she had today received official notice authorizing his composition as the C.W.A.C. Regimental March. The Brass Band played several other martial airs with exceptional ability. Far the favorite of the two bands was the Pipe Band which netted the loudest applause for their piping and marching which was professional in execution and gracefulness.

The numbers played were 'O Canada', 'The Flier March', 'March Athene', 'Road to the Isles,' played by the Brass Band and 'Bonnie Dundee' and 'Highland Laddie'.

Report 2 Swedish Boats Sunk By Nazi Destroyers

Stockholm, Aug. 26 (AP) — Three German destroyers sank two Swedish boats in the North Sea off the northwest tip of Denmark last night, the Swedish News Agency reported in a Gothenburg dispatch today.

A foreign office spokesman said that if the attack occurred, the Swedish government would regard it as an "extremely serious" affair and the worst in a series of incidents involving Germany since the sinking of the Swedish submarine Ulven April 16.

Accounts from Gothenburg said 12 Swedes might have lost their lives when the boats went down under the attack, wreathed in flames. Returning fishermen said the destroyers struck from a range of about 50 yards, although the boats were flying the Swedish flag and had blue and gold Swedish insignia painted on the sides.

The fishing craft were operating close together in International waters, it was said.

Johnsville, Pa., Aug. 26—(AP)—Nine more guards at the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation's Johnsville plant were placed under military arrest today—bringing to 29 the total number in custody—as thousands of workers striking in protest arranged a meeting today to consider a War Labor Board back-to-work order. The 4th Naval District said three of the nine were women.

Tells of Reaction Of Canadians At Aleutian Base

Pte. Arthur Bamber of Frankford Among Those in Canadian Force.

In the following delayed dispatch, Herb Jones, Canadian Press War Correspondent, tells of the reaction of Canadian troops before they shoved off from Alaska to take Kiska—which the Japanese evacuated without a struggle.

By HERB JONES
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Army at an Advanced Aleutian Base, Aug. 9—(Delayed))—(CP)—Pte. Edward J. Rockwell, 25-year-old member of the Canadian army in the Aleutians would like to see his seven-month old daughter back in Kitchener, Ontario.

Typical of many another soldier, he has been in the army a year now and has never seen his daughter. He's from Waterloo, Ont., himself but his wife and daughter live at Kitchener while he's fighting the war.

This Canadian invasion force now tapering off training before moving against Kiska Island has men from all parts of the Dominion. There are former farmers like Pte. Rod Peratt, 24 of Walker's Point, Ont., and shoemakers and tanners like Pte. Arthur Bamber, 20 of Frankford, Ont., and Pte. Rockwell.

There are former athletes like Pte. Ralph Hammond, 25, of Guelph, Ont., who pitched for the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International Baseball League in the season of 1940-41. Ralph says he was a left hander "without much control."

There are fellows like Cpl. G. McFarland, 37 of Cumberland, B.C., who left "a damn good job" with the finance department of the B.C. government to join the army. And there are lots of young comparatively newly-weds like Pte. Bill Dickinson, 24, of St. Catharines, Ont., who thinks a lot about his wife and 16-month old daughter back home.

Pte. Pete Davison, 24, would like to see his good old home town of Timmins Ont. But the boys realise that they won't get home for a while yet. They have a job to do and prepared as any force can be for it.

Meanwhile they all agree the folks back home could do their part by writing often and to length.

POLICE COURT

Found guilty of an offence against morals and decency, Charles LaChappelle, Tweed, was sentenced to five years in the Kingston penitentiary by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court here this morning. The case was held in camera prior to the regular sitting of police court. Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney acted as the Crown prosecutor, the charge being laid by Chief Hayes of Tweed village.

In a second case held in camera John H. Lindsay of Deseronto, was sentenced to six months after being found guilty of an indecent assault against a young girl.

Remanded for sentence since last week following a charge of stealing gasoline from a private gasoline pump at Montrose Farms, three young men, John Turner, Garth Sharpe and George Asselstine, were found guilty and given suspended sentence for one year.

"I don't think the county should have the expense of maintaining these men in jail doing nothing", stated Magistrate Lloyd before he passed sentence. "However, they have been found guilty as charged and I do not propose to allow them to go entirely unpunished. I am giving you one year's suspended sentence on the provision that you will go to work. You must report to the Provincial Police each week." The young men were required to post bond guaranteeing their good behaviour.

The other person charged in the case, John LaTone, was further adjourned for another week on the request of his counsel, Frank Cushing. Richard D. Arnott, K.C., appeared on behalf of the three above-mentioned young men.

Nineteen cases were listed to be heard in the court including a number of Highway Traffic cases, the majority of which were settled out of court.

The case of Thos. Ellis, R.C.A.F., charged with theft of government property, was further enlarged for one week on the request of counsel, Chas. B. Payne, while the case of Robt. Little, charged under the explosives act was also enlarged.

Borden Cox, of Marlbank, charged with resisting arrest, of assault against a police officer, and of theft of gasoline ration coupons, was fined $100 and cost on the first count, with three months in jail in default of payment, while on the last count he was fined $25 and costs or one month in default of payment. The jail terms are to run consecutively in default of payment.

On a charge laid by Fruit Inspector Stevenson under the Farm Products Grades Sales Act entailing the overfacing of tomatoes found in local stores, the party responsible paid out of court $13, fine and costs.

Wing Cmdr. Gibson Visits Ottawa

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)—A smiling young man with the dull-red ribbon of the Victoria Cross on his tunic is in Ottawa, far more anxious to talk of Canadian hospitality than his raid on the Mohne and Eder Dams in Germany early this summer which won him the highest award the King can give for bravery.

He is Wing Cmdr. Guy Gibson, V. C., D. S. O., and Bar, D. F. C. and Bar—an enthusiast for his job, a fluent advocate of bomber aircraft and a real veteran of air war. He is 25 years old, a Cornishman.

At a press conference he said that personally, having tried both jobs, he'd sooner be a bomber pilot than a fighter pilot.

Newspapermen asked him if he ever went over in a reconnaissance plane to see the damage done to German industry by his bombs.

"No," he laughed, "it might be a problem a arrange—and anyway, what point is there in going over with a reconnaissance plane when I can later see movies showing the results of the raid while I am sitting in a nice, safe cinema."

Wing Cmdr. Gibson said he believes bomber pilots will be good men for the civilian airlines that will span the world after the war.

He countered a mention of his own row of decorations by indicating that decorations were the common thing at the bomber station from which his Lancasters flew.

"Once there were two V. C.'s, six D. S. O.'s and 10 D. F. C.'s among the squadron and flight commanders at that station," he said.

Fr. Rockliffe Hall In Collision With Schooner

Rockcliffe Hall in Command of Capt. Walter Bowen of Trenton is Undamaged—Schooner Beached.

Chicoutimi, Aug. 26 (CP)—The Montreal freighter Rockcliffe Hall, in command of Capt. Walter Bowen of Trenton, Ont., collided last night with a schooner off Cape Trinity at the mouth of the Saguenay River. There was no loss of life.

The Rockcliffe Hall hit the schooner with such force it all but cut the wooden vessel in two, but two other ships came to her aid and managed to beach the badly damaged craft. The Rockcliffe Hall proceeded on her way without damage. The schooner was unidentified.

Royal Navy Fired Over 20,000 Rounds

Coventry, England, Aug. 26 (CP)—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said in a speech today that within 48 hours of the first landing in Sicily early on July 10, there were 80,000 men, 7,000 vehicles and 300 tanks put ashore, and supplies rolled ceaselessly into the island throughout the campaign.

He said the over-Allied sea losses from the initial landing up to midnight of Aug. 17 were less than 85,000 tons.

He also revealed that in this war's most intensive naval support of landing operations, the Royal navy alone fired more than 20,000 rounds with guns ranging from four to 15 inches. Allied losses were relatively light, he said.

Report Unconfirmed Italian Mission Reaches Lisbon

Berne, Aug. 26—(AP)—An Italian frontier report to the Zurich newspaper Die Tat said today that a diplomatic mission headed by Count Dino Grandi, former Italian ambassador to Britain, had arrived in Lisbon and that its aim was believed to be armistice negotiations with the Allies.

The report was entirely unconfirmed and London authorities said they had no knowledge of such a mission and placed no credence in the report.

Reuters news agency quoted Die Tat as saying arrival of the mission denoted that "Italian negotiations with a British delegation for an armistice and possibly a separate peace are being continued and even speeded up."

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Kingston — It should not be long before Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Paul of the Canadian Army, are on equal footing—from the point of view of rank. Mrs. Paul is a captain with the Canadian Women's Army Corps, while her husband who is a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, which has seen plenty of action in Sicily, has just been promoted to the acting rank of Captain.

Capt. (Mrs.) Paul is a native of Quebec City, while Capt. (Mr.) Paul is a native of Napanee, Ont. They were married when C.W.A.C. officer went overseas last Winter. She returned to Canada last April and is presently attached to headquarters of Military District No. 3. She is the former Marcelle Paradis.

Aged 43, Capt. Paul, the husband, qualified for his majority and held the rank of captain in the reserve army. He reverted to the rank of lieutenant in order to go active with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He has been overseas since 1940.

C.W.A.C. ANNIVERSARY

In this column we wish to pay tribute to the personnel of the Canadian Women's Army Corps who this week are celebrating their second anniversary of service to the Allied cause.

Parades with the Canadian Women's Army Corps Pipe and Brass Bands have already been held in many centres throughout Military District No. 3 celebrating the 2nd. Anniversary of this army corps of women. Today the C.W.A.C. will parade in Belleville and Peterboro, and on Friday the brass band will give concerts in Peterboro and Lindsay.

The anniversary celebrations will conclude this coming weekend in Kingston with a track and field meet on Saturday (August 28) at Richardson Stadium, and a drumhead service at MacDonald Park on Sunday.

Thousands of members of the C.W.A.C. have released fighting fit men in various jobs in the Canadian army for more active duty on the battle fronts, and they are carrying out their work in army garages, offices, hospitals, draughting rooms, kitchens, and out in the field with a will that has marked them as definitely worthy of inclusion into the ranks of the Canadian army.

COMPLIMENTS CADETS

Major General L. E. Oliver, D.S.M., commander of the 5th. Armored Division of the United States Army, paid a compliment to the cadets of the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville while presenting certificates to the successful candidates. He said, "I wish we had many of you fine fellows in the United States Armoured Corps."

Coming from such an experienced soldier as Major General Oliver this is indeed praise which also reflects on the splendid training given at the Brockville Officers' Centre. Major General Oliver commanded an American Armoured Combat Group during landing operations in North Africa.

IT'S A NEW ONE:—

A private at the Canadian Army Basic Training Centre at Cornwall went on sick parade with what he termed a terrible headache hoping to get the medical officer to give him some considerable time to relax.

"How often do you get this pain," asked the M.O.

"Every ten minutes," replied the hopeful soldier.

"And how long does it last?" the M.O. enquired.

"About half an hour," was the reply, which placed the soldier back in the ranks to continue his training.

Flames, Smoke Veil Full Results Of Berlin Raid

By A. I. GOLDBERG
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 25 — (AP) — In a review of the Monday night attack against Berlin, the Ministry of Economic Warfare today emphasized the effect of the R. A. F.-R. C. A. F. bombing on industrial output but cautioned against the hope of breaking civilian morale with bombs.

The ministry said flames and smoke still veiled full results of the saturation raid.

Contrary to continental reports there was no evidence thus far of any wholesale evacuation of the Nazi capital either of the civil population or government offices, the ministry said.

"Berlin is the country's most important single manufacturing centre," an official told a press conference.

Biggest R. R. Centre on Continent

Besides being the biggest railway centre in inland Europe and second only to Duisberg as an inland port, Berlin has the biggest output in Europe of electrical equipment and cables, the official said. Three locomotive factories account for a third of the German total engine output, Rhein Metall Boerseig was said to be second only to Krupps in armament production.

"It is safe to assume all these industries lay in the target area and must have been damaged," the official said.

Nothing Unusual About Shift Says Mrs. M. Litvinoff

New York, Aug. 26. (CP)— The New York World-Telegram in a copyrighted interview today quoted Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff, wife of the recently recalled Russian Ambassador to the United States, as saying "there's nothing extraordinary or unusual about the shift".

"Ambassador of other countries are moved around and no one thinks about it," she was quoted as saying. "Why should they read anything in it now? Another Russian ambassador is taking my husband's place. The government hasn't changed".

Category 'E' Men Are Likely To Be Retained in Army

"A close study" is being given to the retention of category "E" personnel in M.D. 3, whose services are definitely required and whose disabilities will not be aggravated by such retention, it was announced today by Lt.-Col. M. Isbester, M.C., A.A. & Q.M.G. at District Headquarters here.

Colonel Isbester said that a circular letter has been forwarded to all officers commanding Active Force units and formations in M.D. 3, advising them that such a plan is now being considered by the Department of National Defence.

The retention of such low category personnel is under study in view of the manpower situation and the desirability of salvaging manpower to the greatest possible extent. Colonel Isbester pointed out that instances have been noted where soldiers, despite their low category, have been doing excellent work and could be retained without endangering in any way their health or their usefulness. Many of these soldiers have had years of experience in the army and others have special trade and technical qualifications.

"This policy was adopted some years ago by the Permanent Force", Colonel Isbester added. He said, however, that the retention of such category "E" personnel will necessarily be restricted to individual cases which, by virtue of the duties performed and the physical condition of the soldier, warrant special consideration.

19 GERMANS TUNNEL WAY OUT OF FORT HENRY

12 Recaptured Soon After Escape From Kingston

Thousand Soldiers, City and Provincial Police Searching For Nazis

WELL-PLANNED JOB

Kingston, Aug. 27. (CP)—Capture of three German prisoners at Barriefield Camp, Ordnance Corps Training Centre five miles east of here, near noon today brought into custody 12 of the 19 men who tunneled their way to freedom under the wide stone walls of Fort Henry here last night.

The men—Franz Karper, 25, Kurt Kroehnert, 26, and Friedrich Schmall, 24—were hiding in a ditch on the outskirts of camp and were found by patrolling soldiers who encountered no opposition from them.

Earlier the recapture of two men at Seeley's Bay, 22 miles north of Kingston on the highway to Ottawa, indicated that some of those remaining at large may have made their way out of the immediate Kingston district.

Their capture in a ditch by soldiers taken to the spot by a truck driver had brought the number recaptured to nine.

A thousand soldiers and city and provincial police were combing Eastern Ontario for the men still at large.

While military authorities did not disclose the means of escape it was reported the men dug an elaborate tunnel under Fort Henry's walls and upward to the crest of a small hill facing the St. Lawrence River.

Four of the Germans were picked up near Kingston last night, two by city police and two by soldiers. Five others were captured this morning, their names were announced as: Walter Bartels, 21; Alfred Gunther, 31; Wilhelm Kruse, 27; Karl Schwatz, 22; John Degraff, 27. The names of those recaptured last night were not announced.

Trucker Notices Prisoners

An unidentified truck driver noticed the men caught at Seeley's Bay hiding in a ditch off the highway and notified a truckload of soldiers who took them into custody without trouble.

Earlier this morning two were captured by soldiers at Vimy Barracks, headquarters of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals here. At 6 a.m. another prisoner was found by soldiers in shrubbery along the highway limits of the barracks.

Search for the prisoners in the largest break since 28 men tunneled to freedom from a northwestern Ontario camp in April, 1941, became international when United States Coast Guard detachments and U.S. army and civilian police took up the search along the south bank of the St. Lawrence. All the men who escaped in the 1941 break were recaptured and two were killed.

The search was the greatest ever seen in Kingston district, more sweeping than those staged to recapture prisoners who have escaped from the penitentiary here. Many summer residents of the district, warned to keep indoors and make their boats unuseable, returned to Kingston to keep out of the district being most closely searched.

Tunnel Under Fence

The escape was first noticed when police reported they had arrested a man at nearby Dead Man's Bay after a Mrs. Hulbert (initials unavailable) had called to say a stranger was lurking near her home.

Prison authorities, in the midst of a routine check of the prisoners, hurriedly completed the count and noted the absence of 19. A second man was recaptured by police in the Dead Man's Bay area.

Pte. L. G. Coutlee, whose home is in Brockville, Ont., a member of the Canadian Provost Crops at the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps Training Centre at Barriefield, captured the other two on No. 2 highway east of Kingston.

Coutlee was patrolling the highway when he saw two men outlined in the headlights of an approaching car. The men jumped into the ditch as the car drew near and then resumed their walk. Coutlee grabbed the men and demanded their registration cards and when they failed to produce the documents, he took them to the Barriefield camp. They were later sent back to Fort Henry.

Names Not Available

The names of the four captured prisoners were not available but military headquarters early today released the names and descriptions of the 15 men still at large. It was believed the men who had escaped all wore prison clothing.

Throughout the night soldiers from the Barriefield camp scoured the countryside for the missing men, while provincial and city police patrolled the St. Lawrence River in requisitioned boats to prevent any attempted flight to the United States.

Military officials said the escape was made between 9 and 9;30 p.m. last night.

Fort Henry, built in 1812, was one of the first fortifications in Canada and is within sight of the city of Kingston across Navy Bay from the Royal Military College. Shortly before the war it was modernized as a museum but at the outbreak of war it was converted into a camp for prisoners of war.

Big Break in 1941

In the April, 1941, escape from the Northwestern Ontario camp, the 28 prisoners had tunneled from their bunk house through underneath the fence enclosing the camp.

It had been planned as a gesture of loyalty on the occasion of Hitler's birthday. Eleven men were recaptured the following day but two men had travelled as far, as Medicine Hat, Alta, before being recaptured . The two men killed were with three others when they were surprised by a party of guards. When they refused to surrender, the guards opened fire killing two and wounding two more.

Police Comb District

Veteran guards, soldiers stationed at Barriefield and Vimy Barracks and Kingston and Provincial Police combined in the search this morning for the remaining prisoners.

Never in Kingston's history, even when there have been major breaks from the penitentiary here, have such sweeping police measures been taken. Every pedestrian within miles of Fort Henry was stopped

Sicilian Casualties 'Extraordinarily' Small for Type and Intensity of Battle

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 25 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) —Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Army Commander, said in an interview today that casualties in Sicily were "extraordinarily small for a campaign of the type and intensity in which the Canadians were engaged."

(Previous announcements have placed Canadian 1st Division casualties from the beginning of the campaign of July 10 until Aug. 4 at 1,895 in all categories, killed, wounded and missing.)

Gen. McNaughton, who is in Sicily inspecting the Canadian troops and conferring with other Allied leaders, said the casualties were small because of the competent way in which the troops were handled, from section to army commanders."

A correspondent mentioned a Berlin propaganda broadcast that said the Canadian casualties were 70 per cent and the division had been withdrawn from the line because of its losses. Gen. McNaughton emphasized such wild reports should not be swallowed. He said Berlin deliberately put out such broadcasts to alarm the public and try to damage morale.

Canadian Organization Flexible

Gen. McNaughton said that in addition to seeing proof here of the flexibility of the Canadian Army organization, two other points stand out as a result of his observations and conversations — the training the Canadians received in England was "absolutely sound" and "the extraordinary efficiency" of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, of which the Canadians in Sicily form a part.

The Canadian Army Commander said participation of Canadian formations in the Sicilian Campaign proved "the Canadian Army can be used in whole or in part as the needs and prosecution of the war dictate."

"We have been assured by army corps commanders here of the soundness and usefulness of the training which the Canadian Army has had," he said. "It is not to be wondered at for we have had scouts out in a number of war theatres, following new developments and tactics. and reporting back to us.

SET OF SCORCHING ATTACKS ON KEY DROMES IN ITALY

Large Number Of Dispersed Planes on Target Fields Hit; 15 Planes Downed

CAPUA, GRAZZANISE HIT

(By NOLAND NORGAARD)
(Associated Press War Correspondent.)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 27. (AP)—United States heavy and medium bombers in strong force renewed their assault on the Italian Peninsula yesterday with a set of scorching attacks on key airdromes. Heavy bombers smashed the Capua airfields and medium aircraft raided the aerial installations at Grazzanise.

Large number of dispersed planes on the target fields were hit and 15 enemy fighters were destroyed in stiff running batties. Enemy planes shot down in the 24-hour cycle up to this morning totalled 19, allied headquarters announced.

Night Operations Over Naples

While the heavy bombers hit Capua, 17 miles north of Naples on a rail line, and the medium bombers visited Grazzanise, in the vicinity of Naples, R.A.F. Wellingtons also carried out night operations in the suburbs of Naples, roaring over Bagnoli again with blockbusters.

In other widespread operations over the Italian toe fighters strafed power lines, motor transport and buildings and destroyed three planes on the ground near Guspini, and bombed the harbor of Carloforte.

Medium raiders shot up the railroad junction at Locri, and others dive-bombed gun positions near Reggio Calabria.

A British naval force bombarded a railway and bridges in the vicinity of Locri on the east coast of the toe of Italy, Tuesday night a naval communique announced today.

'Some Reply' Made

Enemy shore batteries made "some reply", the bulletin said, but their fire was inaccurate.

Locri is about 20 miles northeast of Cape Spartivento on the tip of the peninsula.

A British cruiser also shelled enemy positions on the Calabrian coast toward the southern end of Messina Strait Wednesday afternoon. The communique gave no results of this attack.

(The Italian communique broadcast by Rome and recorded by The Associated Press reported allied air raids on the city of Taranto and localities in the Province of Naples. It was claimed nine of the attacking planes were downed.

The communique said German planes had dropped numerous bombs on allied targets in Catania and had scored direct hits on a medium sized merchant vessel.)

Enemy bombers shortly before dawn today made their first attempted raid on Algiers in two and a half months. Three were shot down.

A few bombs were dropped in and near the city when a few bombers penetrated the heavy Anti-aircraft barrage to reach the target area.

15 Or More Killed As Airliner Hits Building in Rio

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 27 (AP)—A three-motored Brazilian air liner struck a naval academy building in a takeoff from the Santos Dumont airport in a fog today and 15 or more f theo 21 persons aboard including the Archbishop of Sao Paulo, Gaspar Afonseca Esilva, were killed.

The plane was a Junkers called "The City of Rio De Janeiro." On the first leg of the first of its two daily round trips between Sao Paulo and Brazil, the plane struck the naval academy building with one wing.

The plane broke in two, one part falling into the harbor. Fifteen were known dead. Three who were in the sunken half of the wreckage were missing. Three were taken to hospital.

One of the dead was Casper Libero, publisher of the Sao Paulo newspaper A Gazeta.

At Least Ten German U-Boats Sunk, Damaged In 13 Air-Sea Battles

New York, Aug. 27. (AP)—At least 10 German U-boats were sunk or damaged recently in 13 air-sea battles between United States Army Air Forces bombers patrolling far out into the Atlantic ocean, the anti-submarine command announced today.

The anti-submarine command said five submarines were believed to have been sunk and five damaged, and three were forced under water and thereby prevented from attacking nearby allied shipping.

None of these battles has been reported previously, the command said.

The Liberator bombers, specially equipped for anti-submarine warfare, flew as far as 1,000 miles from their home bases to battle the submarines, the command said, and all returned safely, although five of them were subjected to severe anti-aircraft fire from the U-boats.

"Five crew members in one plane were wounded when an explosive shell smashed through the nose", the statement said. "The same shell shattered flight instruments, the hydraulic system and other vital parts of the aircraft, but the pilot managed a safe landing at his base".

The statement did not say how many planes were involved in the fights and gave no dates.

GERMANS FAIL TO CHECK DRIVE WEST OF KHARKOV

Concentrate Forces Along Sides of Salient Only to be Repulsed.

FLANKING MANOEUVRE

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 27 (AP) — German troops have struck at the flanks of Russian forces advancing thru' the Ukraine in an unsuccessful effort to check the Red Army's progress west of Kharkov, it was announced today.

A front-line dispatch to the army newspaper Red Star said the enemy concentrated infantry and tanks along the sides of salients which the Russians had driven into their lines and launched a number of stiff counter attacks.

The Red Army repulsed the attacks, the dispatch said and continued the advance which yesterday covered 3½ miles.

(A German communique, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by The Associated Press, said Russian troops supported by tanks and planes attacked south and west of Kharkov yesterday but were repulsed with the loss of more than 100 tanks.

Nazis Give Reason

(The Germans said their troops made a thrust against the flank of Red Army forces attacking on the Mius front, repelling the Russians and inflicting heavy losses, and halted Soviet attacks near Izyum with a series of counter blows.

(A Russian attack southwest of Morel did not succeed in achieving a break through "despite the employment of extraordinarily strong air forces," the Nazi bulletin said. It added that altogether 218 Russian tanks were destroyed in yesterday's fighting.)

In addition to yesterday's westward advance which the Russians made in the Kharkov region toward the Nazis' Dnieper River defences, Soviet forces were disclosed to have struck due south in a new flanking manoeuvre.

600 of Enemy Killed

The southward column of Gen. Ivan S. Konev's Steppe Army, pounding toward the key rail junction of Lozovaya, killed some 600 of the enemy and destroyed or disabled 22 enemy tanks, the Soviet communique said. Fighting was reported heavy.

Thus, the Steppe Army was moving into position to put ever-increasing pressure against the flanks of the German lines reaching eastward into the Donets River Basin.

In the Donets Basin itself, the Moscow War Bulletin said, the southwest army group commanded by Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky absorbed frequent Axis counter-attacks south of Izyum and southwest of Voroshilovgrad, killing 2,000 of the enemy and destroying 48 tanks. Whole trainloads of ammunition and other booty were captured in rapid lunges.

Yesterday's advances by Gen. Konev's troops west of Kharkov wiped out 800 enemy rearguards, routed two battalions and captured several villages. Numerous enemy counter-attacks were beaten down.

Big Goal is Poltava

The communique gave no information as to how far the Russians had penetrated the Ukraine west of Kharkov. One big goal is Poltava, 75 miles to the southwest on the railroad leading to the Dnieep urw, g COy saph mhwy m Dnieper, which is another 75 miles beyond.

SOVIET APPROVES RECOGNITION OF FR. COMMITTEE

Went Further than Britain and France, Welcoming Them Into Allied Fold.

RECOGNIZED BY ALLIES

Washington, Aug. 27 — (AP) — The seal of Soviet Russia's approval was stamped today on one of the first announced diplomatic results of the Quebec Conference—formal recognition of the De Gaulle-Giraud Committee of National Liberation as "trustees" of French interests.

The Russians apparently went even a step further than did Prime Minister Churchill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt in welcoming the French Committee into the Allied fold as the representative of millions of Frenchmen fighting for freedom.

For the announcement from Moscow declared the group headed by Gen. Charles deGaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud would be recognized as the "representative of the state interests of the French Republic and as the leader of interests of the French Republic and ..... of all French patriots fighting against the Hitlerite tyranny."

Made on August 25

The Soviet report, broadcast by the Moscow radio, said the Russian decision of recognition had been handed to the French Committee on August 25, a day before the action of the British Canadian and United States governments was made public.

Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, however, in their joint statement issued Aug. 24 said "full reports of the decisions (at the Quebec Conference) so far as they affect the war against Germany and Italy will be furnished to the Soviet government."

Great Britain, Canada and the United States accorded the Committee limited wartime recognition as administrative agency in French overseas territories which acknowledge its authority, but not as "a government of France or of the French Empire."

The Canadian note, made public in Ottawa by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, said the government of Canada recognizes the Committee "as the body qualified to ensure the conduct of the French effort in the war within the framework of inter-Allied co-operation."

It noted "with sympathy" the Committee's desire to be recognized "as the body qualified to ensure the administration and defence of all French interests."

RUSSIA — Red army advances 3½ miles and threatens Lozovaya and Poltava; one column drives toward Kiev, Ukraine capital.

DAYLIGHT BLOWS AIMED AT FRANCE VERY DESTRUCTIVE

Large Formations Of American Bombers Attack Airfield at Poix

MANY WATERS MINED

London, Aug. 27—(CP)—American medium bombers escorted by Allied fighter squadrons attacked the enemy air field at Poix in Northern France today in a continuation of daylight blows at Nazi concentrations across the channel, it was announced authoritatively.

The formations roared across the coast of Kent at 8 a.m. (3 a.m. E.D.T.) flying at a great height in cloudless skies. Meanwhile an Air Ministry communique reported R. A. F. fliers had been busy during the night, laying mines in enemy waters and attacking shipping, damaging four enemy minesweepers in the English Channel.

All planes returned safely, the communique said.

Last night was the third anniversary of the first big German air attack on London, but the night passed without a sign from Nazi raiders.

The Germans now presumably have enough worries of their own, particularly in bombed and burned Berlin from which the population is reported rapidly scattering to escape future raids such as the one staged by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavyweights last Monday.

Preparing to Move

The BBC said Nazi government branches were preparing to move to occupied territory. Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler's Ministry of the Interior presumably was headed for Prague. The broadcast said the Foreign Ministry might go to Vienna, the Ministry of Education to Posen and the Labor Ministry to Krakow.

Yesterday R.A.F. medium bombers, supported by R.C.A.F. Spitfires, attacked an electric transformer station at Guerledan while American bombers, also with a Canadian escort, heaped explosives on Nazi airdromes at Caen in Normandy.

No Allied planes were lost in these forays, while the Canadians were credited with shooting down two enemy aircraft. One fell to the guns of Wing Cmdr. J. E. Johnson, straight-shooting Englishman heading a star Canadian fighter squadron, to boost his total of enemy aircraft destroyed to twenty-four and a half. The second plane—a ME-109—was credited to the entire Red Indian squadron led by Sqdn. Ldr. R. W. (Buck) McNair, of North Battleford, Sask.

G. Ellis, Toronto, Wins $17,000 Pickford House

Toronto. Aug. 27—(CP)—George Ellis, a 47-year-old Gas Company helper who lives with his two sons in one of the smallest homes in Toronto's suburban Scarboro, last night won the $17,000 Mary Pickford bungalow, drawn for at a fair held to raise money for the Evening Telegram British War Victim's Fund.

Premier George Drew picked Ellis' number from the thousands representing purchasers in Canada and the United States of $1 tickets on the bungalow, built on a site in northeastern Toronto donated by Miss Pickford, Toronto-born motion picture star.

Ellis will sell the bungalow to the highest bidder in house-hungry Toronto and buy a small home for himself and his two sons.

The draw, from which all returns are not in, is expected to raise about $100,000, to be divided between the Telegram fund, the Lions' British Child War Victims' Fund and the Maltese War Relief Fund. Cheques totalling $75,000 were distributed to the three funds at last night's ceremony.

BUILD UP FOOD RESERVES FOR ATTACK

London, Aug. 27 —(CP)— Food Minister Lord Woolton told a meeting at Bolton today he is building up reserves labelled "food for attack." For this reason, he said, he was no intentions of increasing food rations at present.

180 Tons of Bombs Explode Jap Dumps At Hansa Bay

Low-Flying Bombers Destroy Enemy's Installations in Southwest Pacific

BAIROKO HAMMERED

By WILLIAM F. BONI
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 27 — (AP) — The biggest concentration of Allied heavy and medium bombers yet to be employed in the Southwest Pacific, attacked Salamaua's supply base at Hansa Bay, New Guinea, Thursday with 180 tons of bombs, sinking a freighter, wrecking 45 barges and destroying installations.

There was no mention of losses in today's communique which reported the attack.

Low-flying bombers sank the ship, one of 6,000 tons described as a freighter-transport and destroyed or seriously damaged 45 barges and luggers. Ammunition dumps were exploded.

Targets attacked included Condor Point, on the north part of Hansa Bay, a plantation just south of Condor Point, Nubia, main settlement on the Bay, Kronpriz and Eitel Freidrich harbors along the coast toward Madang.

Artillery Pounding

At the other arm of the Pacific offensive in the Solomons, the Japanese still clinging to a foothold on New Georgia Island at Bairoko Harbor above the captured Munda airfield began to wilt under contined pounding of artillery and slowly advancing infantrymen.

Forty-five miles above Munda on Vella Lavella Island, the Japanese attempted six raids Thursday against United States troop positions. They lost 11 planes to Allied fighters and one to anti-aircraft gunners.

Across the Kula Gulf from Bairoko, the Japanese air base of Vila on Kolombangara was blasted yesterday by 34 tons of bombs in an Allied bomber raid.

Other air successes included the sinking of a 7,000 ton Japanese freighter, southbound from Kavieng, New Ireland, and the destruction of 19 enemy barges or patrol boats near the Vitu Islands, 50 miles above Talasea, New Britain.

Almost to Edge Of Jap Airstrip

Somewhere in New Guinea, Aug. 25 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Australia and American ground troops have advanced almost to the edge of the Japanese held airstrip near Salamaua.

In the face of continued artillery hammering, the enemy was continuing his slow retreat. The base of Salamaua itself, objective of fierce Allied fighting for 2 months, was under shell fire.

(A spokesman at headquarters Thursday disclosed the Allies were within one mile of the Southwest end of the airstrip at Kennedy's Crossing.)

MOUNTBATTEN IN WASHINGTON FOR MILITARY TALKS

Three-way Squeeze Play Against Japan in China is Being Planned.

Washington, Aug. 27—(AP)—The eastern end of a British-American-Chinese-squeeze play against Japan —product of the Quebec war strategy conference—is being outlined here at meetings between Lord Lewis Mountbatten, New Allied supreme commander in southeast Asia, and American military chiefs.

The itinerary of Britain's famed commando chief will take him through a round of staff conferences with United States Army and War Department officials today, and, after a trip to London, eventually to Chungking to plot the western phase of the war in Asia.

A four-fold objective appeared to dominate the developing pattern for the Allied efforts in Asia: re-open the Burma Road, unshackle southern Asiatic Sea ports from enemy control, and, ultimately, dominate the China sea and greatly augment Allied air power in China itself.

With the whole program obviously involving amphibious operations, Lord Louis conferred yesterday with navy officials. Navy Secretary Frank Knox remarked the choice of Lord Louis was an indication of "growing attention and interest" to the southeastern Asia theatre and "to future operations there."

Chosen But Not Named

Speculation turned meanwhile on the identity of the American army officers who will serve under him. It became known that an as yet unidentified officer already has been chosen by the commando leader as his deputy Chief-in-Staff and that the Chief-of-Staff will be a Briton.

The name most frequently mentioned for the deputy's job is that of Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark, formrehC felo-tSawff fa mrf r hm er Chief-of-Staff of the United States Army Ground Forces now commanding the 5th Army in North Africa.

Also mentioned was the name of Lt.-Gen. Joseph L. Stilwell as a likely choice for Lord Louis' deputy Commander-in-Chief, although it was understood no decision has been reached on a man to fill that post, and probably will not be reached until the British leader has seen Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek in Chungking. Stilwell now commands all United States Army Forces in China-Burma-India, and is Chiang Kai-Shek's Chief-of-Staff.

Lord Louis probably will leave Washington tonight or tomorrow, and it is thought likely that while he is in London the British Government will promote him from vice admiral to full admiral, in keeping with his new independent combat theatre command.

Churchill Rests, Meditates, Fishes In Log Camp on Lake in Quebec

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

At a Quebec Fishing Camp, Aug. 27—(CP)—In a rambling, near-palatial log camp here on a lake in the Quebec area, Prime Minister Winston Churchill is resting and catching fish. Accompanied by Mrs. Churchill and their daughter, Subaltern Mary Churchill of the Auxiliary Territorial Service and others of the Prime Minister's entourage, travelling in 17 army passenger cars and with nine army trucks, the party arrived early Wednesday afternoon.

It was made known early this week that, at the conclusion of his sixth war conference with President Roosevelt in the Quebec citadel, Mr. Churchill would seek rest, fish and meditate on the world broadcast he will make early next week, in a Quebec resort.

On Thursday a group of report-party was at the lake, motored out to the vicinity. There was no interference until some miles away from the camp, reached by a rocky and narrow road, the way was blocked by a fence gate with a sign warning travellers that they continued at their own risk. It was signed by the limits owners.

From a cottage nearby an attractive young French-Canadian woman (Mrs. Turmaine) told reporters the Churchill party was camped on the other side of the barrier and no one could pass by without a permit from the owner.

She described their arrival Wednesday and told of Mr. Churchill's happy smile and his fingers lifted in the V sign.

The woman telephoned to the camp to see what could be done for the reporters. She was told none could enter.

Nevertheless her informant said Mr. Churchill and Mary were 30 miles up lake fishing from a motor boat and that Mrs. Churchill was just starting out. Mr. Churchill had caught one 20-inch trout and some smaller ones.

The camp was described as very comfortable with modern conveniences and telephone connections—in fact a special instrument was being placed in Mr. Churchill's room.

His composition the march "Athene" having won the instant approval and adoption of the Canadian Womens' Army Corps as their regimental march, Mr. Reginald Hinchey, Belleville's outstanding band music composer has added another honor to his long list of laurels. A more recent composition of his has been accepted by the American Quartermaster's Corps as their regimental number.

A request from the Planning and Development Branch of the United States Army was responsible for the birth of Mr. Hinchey's most recent band composition, which is appropriately named "With Sword and Key". The number will be played over a national radio network this evening at 8.30.

HOUSEHOLD CONTENTS DAMAGED BY FIRE

Approximately $150 damage was caused to household furnishings and dwelling when fire of an undetermined origin early Thursday evening started in an upstairs room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morrison, 49 Evans Street.

The fire occurred at a time, when renovations at the home were under way with the owner engaged in laying a tile floor in the bathroom during which time the household furniture was placed in the front room. The blaze apparently started among two or three upholstered chairs, damaging them considerably, causing damage to the floor and smoking the walls and ceiling before being extinguished.

Memers of the Belleville Fire Department were quickly on the scene and brought the blaze under control with the use of hand pumps and the booster tank with spray nozzles being used to cut down the amount of water needed to extinguish the flames. Water damage to downstairs ceilings was negligible, it was stated by firemen.

C.W.A.C. TO OPEN FULL-TIME RECRUITING OFFICE IN CITY

The Canadian Women's Army Corps will open a full-time recruiting office in the city of Belleville sometime in September or October, it was announced Thursday by officers of the corps when they were in the city on the occasion of the visit of service's Brass and Pipe bands.

Recruits for all branches of the service were urgently needed it was stated by the Corp's announcer as she addressed the large crowd gathered to hear the two hands on the Armouries Lawn. A splendid opportunity is offered for girls and women to learn a trade following their enlistment in the service, it was stated, while the new rate of pay is now 80 per cent of that of a man of the same rank.

Recruits for the C. W. A. C. bands are enlisted in the same manner as those for other branches of the service. If the recruit wishes to play in the band she is then given an "audition" and if the required standard is achieved she takes basic training and then is stationed to a band unit.

CANADIAN PRAISES HOSPITAL TREATMENT

"I was very lucky to come out okay, the hospital here is good and I'll be as good as ever in a few months time," so writes Pte. Kenneth Sine, son of Mrs. E. Sine, R.R. 5 Belleville, from a base hospital in North Africa. He was wounded in the battle of Sicily, suffering a fractured left knee and broken right ankle.

Private Sine was particularly enthused over the equipment at the hospital, stating that everything possible was being done for his comfort.

He wrote that the weather in North Africa was very hot, "the old sun shines all the time and makes it a bit uncomfortable at times but we have to put up with that". He has been in hospital since he was wounded on the 4th of August.

LARGE CUCUMBER BROUGHT TO OFFICE

Even the cucumber family is doing what it can to increase production, it was revealed this morning at the office of the Ontario Intelligencer when Mr. C. Cook of No. 6 Strachan Street displayed a Long Green "cuke" which was very long—17 inches. Whether or not this is a record for size in the cucumber family, it nevertheless is well worthy of honorable mention in increased production annals. The cucumber weighed two and one half pounds.

Canadian Given Iron Cross For Some Cigarettes

The Iron Cross of the Third Reich has been bestowed upon PO. Bill Gaudet, Montague, P.E.I., 22-year-old WOP-AG. With a minimum of ceremony the prize decoration of the Reich was given to PO. Gaudet for a few cigarettes by a German prisoner in Bardia.

Gaudet, now operating on his third major front, is a champion souvenir collector. He has in his collection letters written to Luftwaffe personnel, a pack of German playing cards, picture postcards of Germany and other literature picked up in an officer's tent, when he was a member of the force, which occupied a captured German airdrome in the desert.

The Iron Cross is dated 1939. It is believed to have been awarded for activity in the Polish campaign.

He does not spend all his time collecting souvenirs. Bill Gaudet has flown against the Germans from the British Isles, and the Italians in the Middle East.

He flew in Britain for only a few weeks in the summer of 1941. In September of that year he was sent to the Middle East, where he and his Blenheim crew took part in most of the major battles in that area during the winter of 1941, including Bardia and Bengasi. In March, 1942, he went to India and operated with his squadron from Akyab in Burma until they were driven out by the Japs.

Children Believed Responsible For Destroying Property

Some children just seem to have a mania for destroying property or so it seems to a couple of prospective home owners now building residences in the West Hill section of the city. Houses in the course of construction, in this area, are being visited by children after working hours when they proceed to practise vandalism destructive to the buildings, it is reported.

In one instance at the corner of West Moira and Howard Streets, children are blamed for breaking lumber and using a sledge hammer to deface window and door sills. The owner of this residence was on three occasions one night this week notified that children were destroying lumber at his new home. Police were notified but after their leaving the children came right back to the house.

Police officials this morning issued a warning that persons caught defacing such property would be severely dealt with and stated parents should endeavor to exercise greater control over children responsible.

Massed Bands Play Sunday Eve On Armouries Lawn

Sunday evening's forthcoming combined band concert on the Armouries lawn which is being staged by the massed bands of the Trenton Air Station and the Belleville Municipal Band will recall the massed band efforts heard in the city prior to the war, according to the local band management. At that time concerts by massed bands proved especially popular and drew the approval of local band music lovers.

One of the most outstanding military bands of its kind in the service, the Trenton Band under the leadership of Warrant Officer E. Hancock has been heard on many occasions by Belleville residents. Its performance at concerts given for charity in this city has always been greatly appreciated by local residents.

The Belleville Municipal Band has also done its share in assisting to raise money for charitable organizations since the beginning of the present war. During the past winter they staged a series of band concerts in local theatres which were responsible in raising more than $1,000 for various purposes of charity.

The massed band efforts of these two fine bands which will be heard on the Armouries lawn starting at 8:30 Sunday evening is one which the band management feels will be no exception to previous renditions. A large crowd will undoubtedly be on hand Sunday evening to support the bands in the effort to give local band lovers the finest music possible.

1,100 Dancers Make Merry At Kinsmen 'Fag-Fund' Dance

The Park Pavilion was the scene of "bristling activity" on Thursday evening, when a large crowd of merrymakers numbering about 1,100 jammed the dance hall for one of the biggest events of the summer season, the "Fag Fund" dance, sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville.

For the jubilant occasion, the Commodores Orchestra furnished delightful music, varying in strains from "smooth and mellow moments" to numbers in "hot swing time."

Hearty enthusiasm greeted Miss Ethel Smith and Mr. Bernie Laidlaw, who contributed several vocal numbers which received loud applause from their listeners.

The door prize, the price for a ton of coal, was won by Mr. W. Cole and presented by Mayor Harry Rollins. A number of prizes, donated by merchants of Belleville, were won by patrons of the dance.

A very successful evening was realized which brought most gratifying results. A warm vote of thanks, on behalf of the Kinsmen Club, is extended to each and everyone who attended the dance and so contributed their share toward the Cigarette Fund for the boys overseas and as one Kinsman was heard to say, "Our boys over there will certainly appreciate everything we are doing for them over here."

C.W.A.C. Pipe and Brass Bands Highly Praised by Local Musicians

Mr. E. R. Hinchey, Composer, Hears Brass Band Play His C. W. A. C. Official March. 'Athene'.

PIPE MAJOR COMMENTS

"Without the slightest doubt they're tops. Not only is their playing and drumming excellent, but they have everything down to a 'T'," so stated Belleville's veteran pipe major, "Jamie" Clarke, as he enthusiastically commented on the smart performance of the C.W.A.C. pipe band which made a joint appearance in Belleville Thursday with the services brass band on the occasion of the Canadian Women's Army Corps anniversary.

The two bands, trim and smart in their natty summer khaki uniforms paraded the length of Front Street at the noon hour following which a brief band concert was staged on the Armouries lawn. During the route of parade the two bands played alternately drawing enthusiastic approval of hundreds of interested onlookers who lined the route of march.

Praise by Pipe Major "Jamie" Clarke

Smart as the C.W.A.C. pipe band was during the parade, it remained for their performance on the armouries lawn during the afternoon concert period to really win the hearts of lovers of the pipes and traditional Scottish airs. The girls marched with the difficult slide step while playing "Highland Laddie" and then swung over to the regular marching tempo with the finesse of the pipe experts they proved themselves to be.

"Jamie" Clarke candidly admitted that the slide step often practised by the pipers is a difficult one to master, but he admitted the girls did it to perfection.

Nor was Mr. Clarke alone in his compliments of the C.W.A.C. pipe band. Mr. Reg. Hinchey, well-known Belleville composer and band personality, who himself has played the pipes in 21 different countries of the world, admitted that it would be difficult to improve on the girls' performance. "They certainly are smart," he stated

Proud Moment For Composer

Although piper girls' performance was outstanding, the brass section of the C.W.A.C. band must come in for its fair share of compliments. By their performance the girls lived fully up to expectations and delighted their Belleville audience with the rendition of the official Canadian Women's Army Corps March "Athene" composed by Belleville's own Reginald Hinchey. It was a proud moment for Mr. Hinchey when the brass section of the band played his composition before the hundreds of spectators listening to the performance on the Armouries lawn.

C.W.A.C. at Ottawa had told Mr. Hinchey yesterday, he said, that as the brass band was newly formed, he should not expect too much of this section but "I am proud to say they have lived up to my highest expectations."

"The girls have only been together for a period of four months," he continued, "and for the training they've had they have shown remarkable progress." Prior to their enlistment in the C.W.A.C. many of the band members had never played a wind instrument, Mr. Hinchey commented.

The brass section of the band arrived in the city at 11:30 by bus while the girl pipers came in on the noon train from the west. Officers of the two bands were greeted by Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry, who was an interested spectator during the concerts on the Armouries lawn.

MRS. C. S. (YOUNG) REDDICK

(Formerly of Belleville—West Huntingdon.)

Mrs. Maria Theresa Reddick, wife of the Rev. Dr. C. S. Reddick, died at Whitevale, Ontario, on Thursday, August 19th.

The late Mrs. Reddick was born sixty-four years ago at Greenbank and was a daughter of the Rev. W. J. Young and his wife, Emily McKim. She was educated at the Belleville High School, Albert College and she graduated in music from the Toronto Conservatory in 1905. Later she taught music at Albert College, Belleville, for several years.

After her marriage in 1907, Mrs. Reddick lived in Kitamaat, B.C., St. John, N.B., Kingston, West Huntingdon, Janetville, Lakefield, Bloomfield, Omemee, Campbellford and since August 1941, she resided at Whitevale, Ontario.

In the various places where she lived Mrs. Reddick was held in high regard by many friends and those of her death.

Surviving her are her husband; two daughters, Marion of Sarnia, and Helen of St. Catharines; three Sons, Horace M., of Ottawa; C. Harvard of Toronto, and Bruce L. of St. Catharines; one sister, Mrs. Claude Dotts of Tulsa, Oklahoma; two brothers, Rev. W. A. McKim of Winnipeg, and E. A. Young of Marshalltown, Iowa.

POLICE BLOTTER

A record was established in the annals of Belleville police court this week when for the second time in succession there has been no occasion to hold police court. Five cases were listed for hearing at today's court but all persons charged settled their fines out of court.

"It is a record as far as I can remember," stated Assistant Chief Arthur Harman as he commented on the fact of there being no police court. "I recall several times of police court being cancelled on one day of the week, but never before have we gone two days without it being necessary to hold court."

A local woman paid $25 and costs on a charge of misrepresenting her age as being over 21 when purchasing a liquor permit. "This woman stated she was 21 when actually she was below that age and could not legally obtain a permit," stated Police Chief Probert when commenting on the case.

The four other cases listed for the court included a drunk charge, the accused paying the conventional $10 and costs, while failing to stop at a stop street cost a local motorist $2 and costs. Parking more than the maximum one hour cost two others $1 and costs.

Co-operate in Search

Again police circles were comparatively calm and serene over the night with the one flurry of exxcitement being the report from Kingston of the 19 German prisoners escaping from Fort Henry. Local police were quickly notified of the escape and C.N.R. constables asked assistance of the local city police to search railway trains passing through the city.

Daisy Barriage of 77 Church Street reported to police that she had been riding her bicycle south on South Front Street when a large dog leaped at her tearing her slacks and cutting her right leg with its teeth. The owner agreed to replace the slacks while the dog was destroyed by Thomas Thorne, city poundkeeper.

These cars will just not stay put without brakes when they are parked on inclines, so it seems. A Pontaic sedan was parked on Moira Street West near Frank Street without its brake being set or left in gear only to eventually move off down the street of its own accord. Fortunately the instance occurred at night when there was little traffic and no damage was done as the car came to a stop aginst the curb two blocks from its starting point.

6,600 RATION BOOKS ISSUED ON SECOND DAY

Slightly Under 10,000 Issued in Belleville in First Two Days.

LONG LINE-UP

A total of six thousand six hundred ration books were distributed at the Belleville city hall on Thursday afternon as housewives from the city and the occasional male stormed the municipal building to acquire the "book of the month" which will be needed to purcase many essentials of life for the next eight months.

During the two days which the books have been distributed slightly more than ten thousand have been given out, it was stated this morning by local ration board chairman, Harold Bateman. With a rather slack first day on Wednesday it was feared that there might be difficulty in issuing the expected 20,000 or so books in the four days but with yesterday afternoon's turnout it is now felt that the balance of the books can be issued today and Saturday.

A lengthy lineup was in evidence Thursday afternoon as the ration board opened at two o'clock. For the first hour or so this lineup extended down the city hall steps and south on Front Street to Market Street. The lineup on the city hall steps continued all afternoon as hundreds of people waited to get their ration books.

Mr. Bateman today however issued a warning that the ration books must be acquired by Saturday night. "We don't like to get tough but regulations state all rations books must be issued by Saturday night", he said.

Two Mobile Trailer Kitchens Presented By Ladies Auxiliary

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Canada have presented two mobile trailer kitchens to be used by the Canadian troops in Great Britain. The project was sponsored by the Winnipeg Auxiliary—Golden West Division No. 471—of which Mrs. A. Spafford is president and Mrs. A. R. Vanstone, secretary. Throughout Canada, the auxiliary has 1,200 members. They began collecting the funds in September, 1941.

The first trailer was handed over to the London Railwaymen's Canteen Association by Right Hon. Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada. The photograph shows Mr. Massey at the microphone. The guard of honor was a contingent of the 16th Batt. City of London Kentish Town "D" Company, Home Guard. Just behind the canteen, at the L.M.S. Railway Kentish Town locomotive depot, towered the giant locomotive "Ontario".

In 1942, the main line railway canteens in the London area served ten million meals and fourteen million cups of hot beverages. A service of the same dimensions was carried on during the blitz.

Funds for the second canteen, which the ladies hope will be used for the troops in Scotland, were forwarded to the Receiver General in July of this year.

There is a very active branch of this organization in this city which has contributed largely to this very worthy war cause, through the general secretary, Mrs. Vanstone of Winnipeg.

Mrs. W. A. Morgan and Mrs. N. Williamson are president and vice president respectively, of the local auxiliary.

MAGISTRATE OF PITCAIRN FOUND DEAD IN GARDEN

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 27 — (AP) —The magistrate of Pitcairn, South Pacific isle colonized in 1790 by the mutinous crew of the British naval vessel Bounty, is dead. The body of Arthur Herbert Young, great-grandson of Ed Young, one of the leaders of the mutiny against Captain Bligh, Commanding Officer of the Bounty, was found in his garden.

and questioned. Every side road and even meadow paths were under scrutiny of armed guards.

Cottagers Move Home

Many Kingston residents occupying summer cottages near the city moved back to Kingston today through the armed guards, not wishing to remain where they might encounter the prisoners.

Summer residents near the St. Lawrence were warned last night to remove oars, paddles and outboard motors from their boats, to disconnect inboard motors and to keep indoors.

One summer cottage resident said that during a six-mile ride to Kingston he was stopped three times by soldiers for examination of his car.

Military authorities would not announce the number of soldiers and police engaged in the search.

However, indications were that more than 1,000 searchers were detailed to the Kingston area.

SICILIIAN

Gathers Number of Points

"But the campaign here has given us what I called the check and audit of our system. This is not to say there are not particular lessons on tactics and the like which must be impressed on our forces. I am taking back a number of points to which strict attention will be paid."

Returning to the performance of the 1st Division, Gen. McNaughton said it dropped at once into its niche in the 8th Army and functioned efficiently from the moment it landed.

This also applied to Canadian armor in Sicily.

"Gens. Alexander and Montgomery and their corps commanders have said there was no trouble in assimilating these Canadian formations," Gen. McNaughton said. "There has never been any anxiety about their performances."

With long training behind them, the Canadians knew how to set about their business here. Front-long formations as well as services and hospitals dropped right into gear.

"This went right across the piece," he said.

Ready to Do Business

Mentioning the Canadian forces in England which he said followed the campaign avidly, Gen. McNaughton said people now are realizing "our large army there is ready to do business on a large scale."

In his tribute to the 8th Army, Gen. McNaughton said that throughout the campaign the Canadian formations had been handled with sympathy and understanding and received effective direction.

Gen. McNaughton was asked what were the principal tactics employed in pursuit warfare like the Sicilian campaign.

"The idea is to kick the enemy hard and keep kicking him," he replied. "Give him no rest. It is necessary to take chances sometimes, to leave flanks exposed and drive forward to establish a firm base, then thrust at his vitals. It requires great physical endurance from the troops. The outstanding feature here was the energy with which the advance was driven."

Discussing the use of artillery, Gen. McNaughton said gunner units must be kept in mass to give the troops the support to which they were entitled.

Use Guns in Mass

Throughout his soldiering career, Gen. McNaughton as an artilleryman has championed the principle of using guns in mass. He was the man who planned the great Canadian-corps artillery barrages in the latter part of the First Great War. He summed up his gunner creed with "you get results in battles and campaigns by mass concentrations of guns."

Gen. McNaughton came back to Canadian division headquarters after spending a night at 8th. Army headquarters, talking for hours with General Montgomery. He came up a dusty path through a vineyard to Gen. Guy Simond's tent where the correspondents were gathered. He shook hands with each and sat down in their circle, whacking at ubiquitous flies as the interview started.

He first told of his activities since leaving England by plane. Stopping at North Africa, he saw Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief, and the principal members of Allied headquarters staff, and called at Canadian reinforcement unit camps and a Canadian general hospital. Then he flew to Sicily to confer with Gen. Alexander, and came to Canadian divisional headquarters.

Gen. McNaughton said he had visited many formations with Gen. Simonds and Brig. A. E. Walford. He went right through the ground covered by the Canadian advance from Pachino to Mount Etna. Later he called on British corps commanders, then went to 8th. Army headquarters.

Of the campaign generally he said: "We have drawn all the lessons and conclusions we could, not only for the benefit of the Canadian forces here but for the advantage of the larger forces in England of which this force is a part."

IN MEMORIAM

STEWART—In cherished memory of a dear husband and father, James O. Stewart, who passed away five years today, August 27th., 1938.

Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break, but all in vain,
To have, to love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never:
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

—Lovingly remembered by his wife, sons, and daughters and grandchildren. A27

ITALIANS MOVE FROM PROVINCES INTO CAPITAL CITY

Over Half Million More Now in Rome Than Before Sicilian Invasion.

TRAVELLERS' STORY

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Aug. 27. (AP) —A new worry has been given Italian Premier Pietro Badoglio in recent days, for despite all efforts of police and military authorities thousands upon thousands of provincial Italians are moving into Rome.

Air travellers arriving in Madrid today estimated Rome now contains at least 500,000 more Italians than it did before the allies landed in Sicily, and said the number is daily increasing.

So far this civilian "March on Rome" has been peaceful. It probably was inspired in part by the hope of many Italians the capital may escape being bombed in the future if allies recognize it as an open city.

Travellers reported, however, that many of the newcomers to Rome came for political purposes and they comprise the element Badoglio most fears.

Reasons For Influx

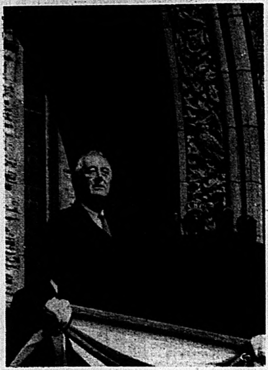
It was recalled that when demonstrations for peace and anti-German riots got under way in northern Italian cities, the police and military authorities ,at Badoglio's orders ,tossed into jail a number of anti-Fascist political prisoners who had been released after Mussolini's downfall.

When this heavy-handed system of restoring order became obvious, a number of these former prisoners of Fascism and enemies of Germany packed their bags and went to Rome. This influx began weeks before Italy's unilateral declaration Rome was an Open City.

Badoglio and his overworked police are worried particularly, the travellers said, about just how many of the 500,000 newcomers are beginning to get ideas about staging peace demonstrations and showing their displeasure with the government's policies in other ways.

Reports of another curious development which followed Badoglio's Open City .declaration were brought to Madrid. Travellers say many Romans promptly went to Ostia, nearest seacoast town, only 14 miles from Rome, on the theory the allied forces would choose that point for a landing and a march on Rome.

SPEAKS AT PEACE TOWER



Addressing the thirty thousand Ottawa citizens who gathered on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, to greet him, President Roosevelt assured them that "in due time we shall communicate the secret information of the Quebec conference to Germany, Italy and Japan."

HIS CRYING BABY USED BY NAZIS TO TRICK BELGIAN

Booklet 'Punishment for War Crimes' Shows Mounting Wave of Terrorism.

MASSACRES

By HENRY B. JAMESON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 27 — (AP) — How the Germans used his crying baby to trick a Belgian into a confession of espionage and then shot him was described in a booklet on "Punishment for War Crimes," issued yesterday by the Inter-Allied Information Committee.

The document depicted a mounting wave of terror and oppression throughout Europe as the conquered peoples prepare for the coming of the Allied liberators.

While the Belgian had not seen his family in many months, he refused to talk. Then the Nazis placed his wife and child in an adjoining room. He heard his wife talking and the baby cry "Daddy."

In an ecstasy of hope, the unfortunate man gave in. But instead of opening the door to the family, the Germans immediately jumped on the prisoner and beat him until he collapsed. Then he was dragged by the feet into the courtyard and executed on the spot.

The evidence against the Nazis, collected through underground channels, gives virtually the same story in every country — arrests, torture, hostages, wholesale massacres, mass deportations, forced labor, concentration camps and systematic starvation.

50 to 100 Shot for One Dead German

It said that in France from 50 to 100 hostages were shot for each German found dead.

The report said terrorism in Yugoslavia is continuing with the destruction of whole towns from the air by incendiary bombs, in one district of Serbia, more than 16,000 persons were reported killed in one month. The Germans were then said to have driven tanks over the graves to try and remove all traces of the crime.

"It's beyond all doubt that 500,000 Greeks died of hunger last winter," the publication added. "Infant mortality has risen to a point of national calamity and a whole generation seems condemned already."

Woman Armed With Flashlight Captures German

Kingston, Aug. 27 (CP) — A woman armed only with a flashlight captured the first of the 19 German prisoners who escaped from Fort Henry last night to be taken into custody.

Gertrude McDermott, a summer resident of the nearby Deadman's Bay area, said today she was sitting on her cottage verandah with her sister, Ida McDermott and their brother, Dr. Francis McDermott of Detroit, when she saw a man run up steps leading from the water and into a clump of bushes.

"I ran to the bushes with the flashlight and shouted at the German to come out," she said. "Meekly he crawled out from under the bushes, threw his hands over his head and said 'I come, I come.' My brother grabbed the flashlight and pointed it at the prisoner while I ran into the house to call the police."

Miss McDermott said the prisoner said he had lived in Los Angeles and that he had been free four hours when captured.

Trenton and District

Launching of 'Trentonian'

Trenton, Aug. 27. (Special.) — With the launching of the "Trentonian", a meeting was held on Tuesday evening of the new committee in charge of arrangements, under the Chairmanship of Councillor R. J. Whitley.

From this representative body a purchasing committee was appointed, made up of Mrs. H. R. Cory, Mrs. Stephenson and Councillor Gerald Weaver.

It is understood already some $1,100 has been raised for the purpose of buying comforts and equipment for the ship, and some of the articles suggested included radio, piano, gramophone, records, sheet music, cards, games, knitted wear, electrical appliances and numerous others. While many of these may be purchased with the sum already available there is still a need for more money and for many articles such as mentioned above to be donated by private individuals. Anyone having donations of any kind are asked to get in touch with either Mr. Whitley ,any member of the purchasing committee or with Mr. J. H. Matson manager of the Bank of Montreal who is treasurer of the fund.

The ship is to be launched next week at Kingston and Trenton citizens are asked to avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing this Corvette "Trentonian" launched. It is understood Mrs. H. R. Cory, the wife of Trenton's mayor, is to officiate at the christening ceremonies.

Cabinet Regrouped But Little Change

Cape Town, Aug. 27 (CP)—Following the results of the July 7 general election giving the government of Gen. Jan Christiaan Smuts an increased majority on the South African Assembly important regrouping of the cabinet has been announced without much change in personnel.

Three new portfolios were formed —Ministry of transport under F. C. Sturroch to replace ministry of railways and harbors, and also to control road transportation, shipping and civil aviation; the ministry of welfare and demolization under H. G. Lawrence to embrace social welfare and public health and to deal with rehabilitation and resettlement of soldiers. Mr. Lawrence will also be chairman of the civil re-employment board and deal with the personal and social aspect of welfare work as distinct from the material and economic. S. F. Waterson is minister of economic development which includes commerce and industries and the vice-chairmanship of the cabinet committee of reconstruction.

General J. C. Smuts will not only hold the portfolios of prime minister, external affairs and defence but will also be chairman of the national supplies council and the new cabinet committee on reconstruction. The last named committee consists of the prime minister as chairman, S. F. Waterson and J. H. Hofmeyr. The creation of two separate departments, one to co-ordinate personal welfare and security in South Africa's new administrative policy and the other to administer the switchover from war to peacetime economy under the personal guidance of the prime minister is favorably regarded in the Union.

Broaden Scope.

Broadening the scope of the railways and harbors portfolio into the ministry of transport embracing land, sea and air is also considered of special importance. It is considered that communications in the immediate postwar period will have a vital bearings on the Union's future development. The government is now ready to co-ordinate economic advances made under the stress of war.

Meanwhile the cabinet has expressed its determination to tackle effectively the urgent food problem, its distribution and cost and the necessity for increasing production.

The regrouped Union cabinet is as follows: General J. C. Smuts prime minister, minister of external affairs and minister of defence; J. H. Hofmeyr, finance and education; W. R. Collins agriculture and forestry; F. C. Sturroch transport; C. F. Clarkson interior posts and telegraphs and public works; H. G. Lawrence welfare and demolization; W. B. Madely labor; C. F. Stallard mines; A. M. Conroy, lands and irrigation; Colin Steyn justice; Major P. V. G. van der Byl, native affairs S. F. Waterson, economic development.

It has been announced from Buckingham Palace the King on the recommendation of the South African Government approved that Chief Justice N. J. de Wet shall on relinquishing the chief justiceship on Sept. 10, continue to administer the government during His Majesty's pleasure. Chief Justice de Wet was chief censor and assistant state attorney of the South African Republic during the early part of the Boer war, 1899-1902, and after the occupation of Pretoria was military secretary to General Botha until the end of the war.

Dr. H. J. van der Bijl, director-general of war supplies, states the position regarding shipping from Canada and the United States has improved lately and double the number of ships expected to reach South Africa in the future. Warning against optimism, Dr. van der Bijl said South Africa might suffer hardships before the end of the war.

Himmler Chosen Because Coercion Necessary—Goebbels

New York, Aug. 27—(AP)—German Propaganda Minister Gobbels was reported last night to have explained the delegation of broader powers for Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler by saying:

"Never before in her history has Germany been in such deadly danger as today, and coercion at home is necessary if Germany is to remain strong."

The BBC in a broadcast heard by NBC said the statement was contained in an article written by Goebbels for Das Reich which was quoted extensively in German domestic broadcasts.

Rumors About Ex-Fascists

According to stories said to emanate from Italy and reported mainly through countries outside of Italy, events have been happening among members of the former fascist order. Some say that some who had a high official standing in the organization have been executed and there have been several reports of suicides of former fascists. How true these stories are, cannot be said now and only time can reveal.

With the collapse of this autocratic body which was a law unto itself, it may be just possible that there have been such incidents as have been reported. For a fascist to fall from a position in which he exercised control and tyranny over Italy, is a sad decline indeed, hardly to be faced by fascists who had their hearts set on loot and fame at the expense of the Allied nations and of every just principle.

Fascism like nazism was the product of selfish men and aggression and those who adopted it had to break every law of their land and the moral law to follow its dictates. With fascism disbanded it is easy to realize that outstanding fascists found themselves in a new and unenviable position.

Stalin on Kharkov

Josef Stalin issued an order of the day when the Red flag was raised over Kharkov. Everyone remembers his decision at Moscow and the triumph of Russian arms in the winter of the first year of the war in Russia. Again at Stalingrad he reaped for Russia a magnificent victory which cost Germany very dear in men, equipment. Now at Kharkov he speaks out again in language of power and victory.

"Thus the second capital—our native Kharkov—is liberated from the yoke of the German Fascist scoundrels.

"Eternal glory to the heroes who fell in the struggle for the freedom and independence of our Motherland.

"Death to the German invaders!"

Stalin stands out one of the great leaders of this age as a military man and statesman. He has foiled Hitler everywhere. His brilliant genius in strategy and in the administration of Russia places him on a high plane.

Hitler the man of selfishness absolute made a grave error in misunderstanding Russia, her military power, her productive capacity, her patriotic fervor and her leader Josef Stalin.

Stalin has made no wild boasts. His prophecies or forecasts have been built on thorough knowledge of the Russia he leads. He knew Russia and her power to gather strength in spite of the enemy attacks. Hitler's boasts were rambling boasts without foundation to substantiate them. But Stalin's words have the support of facts.

So after Moscow, after Stalingrad and after Kharkov, Russia grows in her greatness to endure and to win while the Germans dwindle.

Today Russians sweep forward again through the heart of the Ukraine and are well on their way to Kiev.

Value of Secrecy

On the day the Quebec Conference closed Mr. Churchill referred to the lack of news during the progress of the parleys, but said the very nature of the conference produced very little that could be reported. It was natural that there should be irritation that more news had not come out but it was a life and death struggle, he is referred to as saying.

Everyone understands that secrecy must hide the details of discussions and decisions because in this war the use of information must be kept secret otherwise plans could easily be interfered with.

No one would want any disclosure that would handicap the Allied cause. Such disclosures could not be given and the chief duty of the people is to cooperate in every way to win the victory with those that direct affairs.

When victory is won, it is a time when people then can read something of the events of the past and the great conferences. The people will be fully satisfied to have the result of the deliberations at this conference measured in far-reaching action with the Allied stamp of victory upon it.

Everyone realizes that the withholding of secrets of an important nature now remains an important part of the strategy of modern war. It repays in success and achievement.

Still Harp on Rommel Name

(New York Herald Tribune.)

The Germans must be sagging against the ropes when even their propaganda machine is reduced to believing its own legends. A recent Berlin broadcast, daring the Allies to invade the Continent, wound up by saying: "Our armored divisions are eagerly anticipating your arrival and in Greece good old Rommel is waiting for the invaders".

No one seems to have told Berlin that the British and Americans have alike discovered that Nazi armored divisions can be beaten, or that "good old" Rommel is today chiefly remembered by the democratic publics as the man who made one of the longest and fastest retreats in history.

Actually, Marshal Rommel, though no superman, was a talented soldier; but about all the name now suggests in Britain and America is the commander who legged it with scarcely a pause for 1,500 miles from Alamein to Tunisia, and who was thereafter conveniently missing as the Allies marched on into the Europe which he had failed to defend.

Comfort in Men's Suits

(St. John Telegraph-Journal)

It has not been revealed what other changes will be made in men's suits but there appears to be an inclination to get as far away as possible from formal attire and wear something that is comfortable. Probably the old bits of clothing considered suitable for a fishing trip will become the style for business wear, although some modification may be recognized for formal affairs.

Hitler's Number Up

That Russian numbers are overcoming Hitler is no news in Moscow, but now numerologists there have the numbers to show that he will be beaten this year. They work it out from the French Revolution begun in 1789 and the founding of Bolshevism in 1918. They subtract and get 129. Napoleon became emperor in 1804; Hitler seized power in 1933. Subtract again — still 129. Napoleon attacked Russia in 1812, Hitler in 1941. Again—difference 129. Adding this key number to the year of Napoleon's defeat in Russia—1814—the numerologists get 1943.

HOLIDAY

I will go to the little greenwood that's near the shops and houses,
And sit in cool leaf-shadow and watch the children play,
And I'll smoke my pipe and ponder while the hot gold August drowses;
And that, just round the corner, shall be my holiday!

I'll say to one who loves me, sitting by her,
this is sweeter
Than sweltering on a journey. We may not have the sea
But there's happy life about us, free from dust and din and litter:
Then there's tea in our own parlor! . . .
This, just this, is holiday.

GARDEN VIGILANCE

Before the war I fancied this:
With soil and seed one couldn't miss.
With sun and wind and gentle rain,
One should a harvest rich attain.
A garden seemed a pleasant thing
Which one begins in early spring
And waters well and weeds a bit,
And then lets nature care for it.

But here it is approaching fall,
And on my crops strange creatures crawl.
I find my garden plot in range
Of furious enemies, and strange.
The borers come at early morn
In legions to attack my corn.
Each root and stalk my garden grows
Has cruel and destructive foes.

Somehow the news is passed around,
By air and land and underground,
To hordes of insects, savage, fleet,
That I am growing stuff to eat.
Now this my garden life has shown:
That nothing good exists alone,
For everything worth while man knows
Must be defended 'gainst its foes.

Dr. J. V. Newton, V.S. and wife of Toledo, Ohio, are visiting friends in the city and vicinity. He is a Hastings County boy and was born in Huntingdon Township, the son of the late Richard Newton. After an absence of thirty-two years, Dr. Newton is visiting the scenes of his boyhood and he observes many changes and improvements in that time. For several years Dr. Newton was County Commissioner of Lucan County, Ohio, and three years ago he was elected sheriff of the same county, which position he now holds. He is a nephew of Mr. Sayler Vantassel, West Huntingdon, Mr. W. H. Vantassel, Belleville, and Mrs. S. Clapp, of Belleville.

Messrs. Hunter and McGuire have filled a gap at the approach to the lower bridge in Coleman Ward—the former by the erection of a spacious carriage factory, now in the course of construction, and the latter by the erection of a fine grocery store. Both buildings are of brick and their substantial and costly character is ample evidence of the prosperity of the respective owners. The buildings will go far to improve the appearance of the locality and enhance the property value in Coleman Ward, which in late years has undergone a happy change in this respect.

Japanese Dromes Ripped up by Yanks

U.S. Headquarters, China, Aug. 25 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Bombers of the United States Air Force, escorted by fighters, ripped up Japanese airdromes at Hankow and neighboring Wuchang on Tuesday and in dogfights with Zeros shot down at least 19, and probably destroyed two more.

Two bombers were lost over the target areas.

Pilots reported that at least 80 per cent of the bombs struck the target areas, smashing hangars and the workshop sections, while fragmentation bombs raked the aircraft disposal areas, hitting grounded planes.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Himmler at the Helm

I interrupt a series on American policy to comment upon a highly significant move in Germany—the appointment of Heinrich Himmler, as Minister of Interior.

Himmler supplants Dr. Wilhelm Frick, in the ministry which controls the police forces of the Reich. Actually Himmler has controlled these forces throughout the Nazi regime. But Frick, a bureaucrat, regarded as relatively mild and moderate, was retained in his position as a facade for Himmler. Frick also had in hand the apparatus that, being bureaucratic, with remnants of the previous system retained in it, tended to operate with only veiled terror, inside Germany itself.

Himmler's career has been in the organization of the S. S., the elite guards, who have been the special armed force of Hitler, and the Nazi Party. His business has not been to run the interior administration of Germany, but to protect the Party. When the war began, Himmler became openly the head of the police for the occupied countries, where there was no attempt to conceal the fact that the Germans were operating with naked terror. In this position he came into repeated conflicts with the Army, especially in the places where the terror was most outrageous, as in Poland. The Army had the remnants of some code. Himmler represented the Nazi concept including the ruthless extermination of even suspected opposition, and the decimation of peoples.

The S. S. has thus been the living embodiment of Nazi ideology—Nordic supremacy, Master race, cruelty as a mark of superiority, etc. Actually a physically selected corps, they have been trained to consider themselves biologically the cream of the Germanic race, superior to all other peoples and also to all other Germans.

They protected their own lives on this principle—that their blood must be spared for the future of Germany—which was another thing that brought them into conflict with the army.

Of all Nazis, Himmler is most unpopular with the German people. This is the reason why his terror, except against Jews, was veiled inside Germany while naked abroad.

Now if Hitler puts Himmler openly in power, with control over the entire internal administration, concentrating his activities at home, instead of in the occupied countries—that is because Hitler has something on his hands.

This appointment occurs in the moment when the Germans have lost Kharkov and will have to evacuate the entire Donetz Valley. It occurs after the night of the worst air raid on Berlin, following terrible bombings of other German cities. It occurs following the fall of Sicily and at the close of the Quebec conference in which new, grandiose military moves have been planned. It occurs a month after the fall of Mussolini in Italy. On the same Tuesday that this report comes we learn that Copenhagen has been occupied by fifty thousand German troops, and martial law established for unruly Denmark.

The conclusions that one can draw are: The military defeats that Germany has suffered and new ones in the making, have forced Hitler to reconsider his position, not only in the occupied countries but in Germany itself. Bad as the situation is for the Nazis in the occupied countries, these can be entrusted to the army, which will fight for Germany as long as she is fighting and supress national risings.

But in Germany itself, the army is not trustworthy, and neither is the bureaucracy. The Italian army has not been able to quiet the Italian people but has openly expressed its sympathy for them. Hitler thinks the time has come when naked terror alone will hold his people in line. In this, of course, he is expressing his ancient fear of the people, repeated over and over in the famous "knife-thrust in the back" legend, that they, and not the armies, were responsible for losing the last war. The German nation, from now on, is to be treated as though it were itself an occupied country. For, in a showdown, Hitler always believe in the efficiency of terror.

But the appointment of Himmler indicates not only fear of the German people, but other dilemmas. The bombings and mass evacuation must have strained the bureaucratic machinery to the breaking point. A bureaucrat like Frick cannot control it. It needs an improviser, like Himmler. A disorganized apparatus offers the chance of disintegration at the top. Every opposition seizes opportunities as they arise. Among the top leaders international policy plays its role. When Roosevelt and Churchill appealed to Italy, Grandi, Ciano and Badoglio saw their chance. When Moscow appealed to Germany, there were certainly similar figures in Germany who saw their chance. It is significant that the Nazi radio, commenting on the Litvinoff affair, said, "The allies are all united against National Socialism." This was a departure. They have hitherto said, "against Germany."

Thus the Manifesto of Free Germans issued from Russia would appear to have had a distinct political effect. The top Nazis are fighting for their heads, not only against enemies abroad but against real or fancied enemies inside Germany. If this is pressed home with the most calculated political policies, we can win the war this year.

Consensus Of Opinion

Many purists object to the use of "consensus of opinion" on the ground that the last two words of the phrase are redundant.

They insist that "consensus" means "agreement of opinion" and that therefore it is tautological to say "consensus of opinion". One should, they argue, say simply "consensus".

But that contention will not hold water.

"Consensus" is derived from two Latin words, "con", together, and "sentire", to feel.

Literally "consensus" signifies a feeling together.

Comparatively speaking, the term is a new one in English.

The earliest use of "Consensus" recorded by the Oxford dictionary is dated 1854.

It was first employed in physiology in the sense of harmony, cooperation or sympathy in different parts of an organism; a general concord of different organs of the body in effecting a given purpose."

Then the term came to mean unanimity or general agreement in matters of opinion, evidence, testimony, etc.

The late Frank H. Vizetelly, managing editor of The New Standard Dictionary, says in his "How to Use English":

"The eccepted meaning of 'consensus' is 'general agreement'. It is commonly defined as 'collective unanimous opinion of a number of persons', and on this account the phrase 'consensus of opinion' appears to be tautological. But as there may be consensus of thought functions ,of forces, etc., it is not tautological to speak of a 'consensus of opinion'. Besides the phrase is an English idiom".

The latest edition of Webster's International Dictionary says:

"The expression 'consensus of oipnion', although objected to by some, is now generally accepted in good use".

So if you wish to use "consensus of opinion" instead of just "consensus", you will be in very good company, including President Roosevelt.

The fact is that "consensus" 'as now used in common speech is virtually synonymous with agreement or concord, and "of opinion" in "consensus of opinion" is not entirely tautological.

Many other perfectly good English phrases contain traces of tautology. For instance, "Sahara", the name of the great desert in North Africa, is believed to be derived from the Arabic "sahira", which is plural in form and which means deserts, wastes or wilds. Strictly speaking, "The Sahara Desert" is probably tautological. Likewise, the "war" in "guerrilla warfare", a perfectly acceptable phrase, is redundant, technically speaking, because "guerrilla" is the diminutive of Spanish "guerra", war, and literally means little war.

Shapley, of Exmouth, Devon, England, son of Mr. John Shapley and the late Mrs. Shapley. The Rev. G. G. Wright officiated at the ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends. Mr. George Maybee presided at the console of the organ and Mr. Gordon Watkins, acting as soloist, delightfully rendered Schubert's Serenade.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a radiant picture in her wedding gown of white silk bengaline fashioned with short train, full skirt, fitted bodice, basque top and square neckline. Her floor-length veil of bridal tulle illusion was caught to her hair with a short chapel veil adorned with gardenias. Her only ornament was a gold locket and she carried a bouquet of roses, gladioli and bouvardia.

Baker united in marriage Veronica Theresa Gauthier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Gauthier to John Whibbs, son of Mrs. Mary Whibbs and the late John Whibbs, of Peterboro. Mrs. James Grant presided at the console of the organ and Mr. Ed. Brown beautifully rendered "Ave Maria" and "O Mother Beloved."

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, the bride was exquisite in her wedding gown of ice blue satin fashioned on princess lines with sweetheart neckline and long tight fitting sleeves ending in points over her wrists. The matching floor-length veil of bridal tulle illusion fell in sweeping folds from a coronet of lace. Her flowers were red roses and bouvardia.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Fred Bauer, of Rochester, N.Y., sister of the bride, attired in an attractive rose starched chiffon taffeta dress, fashioned in long torso effect with sweetheart neckline and long tight fitting sleeves. Don't Be Slipshod About Party Invitations

Many a carefully planned party has been shadowed by the fact that the hostess was slack in the way she extended the invitations. I find it extremely difficult to understand why some people plan to give a party, go to no end of trouble and expense to make it successful, and then are too casual or careless about inviting the guests. Instead of taking the trouble to organize a guest-list, and telephoning, or writing a card or note to every guest, they apparently take for granted that in some mysterious way their friends, or many of them, will "hear about" the party and will, in turn, take it for granted that they are invited.

And apparently, and unhappily, this slipshod way of "extending" invitations is increasing, for lately in my mail I've had many indications of it both from the too-casual inviters and from the puzzled and disappointed invitees. For example, hostesses write to ask if it will be all right to take for granted that their relatives and friends will know they are expected to come to such-and-such a party.....certainly, they assure me, the news that they are to give a party will "spread." And would-be-invited guests write to ask if it will be proper for them to go to a housewarming or Open House to which no invitations have been given.....or should they have gone to a wedding to which they were not specifically invited?

Here's a typical letter:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I'm very confused...and disappointed. Does the term "Open House," held to celebrate a wedding anniversary mean that no invitations are issued? The mother and father of my brother-in-law celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary by giving an "Open House." I am very fond of them, and would have been so happy to go to the party But I did not go because I received no invitation, verbal or written. Since the party, they have told me that they were deeply hurt that I didn't come and, that I should have come since "no invitations were necessary, and none given."

Was I wrong in not going to the anniversary party without having been invited?

R. F.

No! I would not have gone to the party, since the hostess gave you no word that you would have been welcome. How were you to know that you were "supposed" to come if you weren't invited? And no hostess has the right to excuse her invitation-remissness by saying that "no invitations were necessary."

An invitation to a party is a charming gesture of friendliness and hospitality. Too charming a gesture to be omitted or taken for granted, or given in careless, roundabout ways. No matter how informal the invitation...and today the majority of invitations are informal...it should be given specifically, directly. Use the direct route...no uncertain detours!

"Open House" doesn't mean "open" invitations. "Open" means that the doors of the home are to be hospitably opened to welcome a more than usual number of guests, and customarily this kind of party is given for some special occasion (an anniversary, a housewarming, a tea, or a reception given for a guest of honor). As in the case of any other kind of party, direct invitations should be given. By telephone perhaps, if the party is very informal. Or by one or two cordial sentences written on note-paper or on plain white cards or visiting-cards or on the inside pages of "Informals", with the name and address either engraved or written on the front page. The spirit of a party begins with the invitations!

Smoking Etiquette

In these days it may be dangerous...both for you and other people...if you rebelliously disregard a "No Smoking" sign. There is always a reason for this request that is your duty to respect.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Indifference Might Be Helpful

Dear Miss Fairfax:

girl 20 years of age. I've known her for about a year and love her very much. When we have a serious talk, shee will say "I don't know whether I'm in love with you or not" although I have given her an engagement ring. When I make love to her, she doesn't believe me, although I tell her time and time again that I don't want any other girl in the world if I can't have her. One minute she is cold toward me and it hurts me very much when she isn't sure of her love for me. When I've gone home she'll write a letter saying she's sorry. What shall I do?

—V. M. K.

When a girl is capricious and plays what is known as "cat-and-mouse" game, the best medicine is a good dose of indifference from the boy friend. This usually brings her to her senses, if she really cares and if she doesn't care enough, why bother with her? It might not be a bad idea to take out another girl once or twice just to show her.

Objects to Sister on Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 16 years, but feel as old as 30. I've been so unhappy all my life, because my parents are so strict. If I get a chance to go out with boys, my sister has to go along and I feel so embarrassed when I am asked for a date and have to say my sister must go with me.

I know, as the youngest in my family, they are all doing what they think best for me. My parents don't like modern ways of young people, so I have been doing things behind their backs, but what else is there for me to do? I'm so unhappy that several times I have almost ended my life.

Please give me some of your splendid advice, for I've read your column and see how you've helped others.

—V. U. G.

Don't think me unsympathetic, my dear, but when you tell me you have almost ended your life on several occasions, I can well understand why your parents insist on sending your older sister out with you. At 16 you haven't even begun to live, and to think of throwing away all the splendid things the future may hold for you, just because you're not allowed to have dates alone with boys, proves conclusively that you'll have to do a little more growing up and become more responsible before your parents agree to let you go out alone on dates.

And there's no reason in the world why you should feel embarrassed at having your sister along. It shows merely that your home background is a good one. Nothing spoils a girl's good looks like fretting.

Unwise to Marry to Escape Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Three years I went with a young man, but as my parents didn't approve of him (he is divorced and has two children) we separated. It has taken me all this time to forget him and now he has written me again, asking me to write to him, as he's in the army. I'm 21 years of age and as I don't get along at home, I would do anything to leave home.

Do you think it would be wrong for me to marry this man, if he asks me? I'm really very much in love with him, and I don't think I'd be making a mistake.

—Undecided

Before helping you to decide so important a question as to whether you should marry this man of whom your parents disapprove, I'd like to know a little more about him. Did he or his wife get the divorce? And on what grounds was it granted? Does he pay alimony, and what allowance does he make for the support of the children? Would he be able to take care of you.

You say in your letter, which is too long to print, that you wish he hadn't written you after the break of three years ago. Watch your step and consider these questions carefully. Don't marry to escape an uncongenial home.

Queen, Princess Pose for Airman

"Would you mind if I took your picture?" Sgt. Pilot Charlie Willows, London, Ont., asked the pretty little girl who was visiting the Royal Art Gallery with her mother.

"No", she replied, looking at her mother.

"Certainly not", her mother turned and smiled.

The mother was Queen Elizabeth.

Her Majesty asked Sir Walter Lamb, who was conducting the Royal party, to take the party aside and she and Princess Margaret Rose posed for the Canadian airman.

When the Queen asked where he was from, Charlie said "London". (I always forget to say Ontario", he said later.)

Her Majesty, noticing his Canada badges, completed the sentence, "Ontario".

Sgt. Willows told the Queen that he was a member of the Guard of Honor when she and King George visited the Ontario London in 1939. "The others seemed rather embarrassed, when I remarked that she looked even lovlier than when she was in Canada", Charlie says.

Mrs. Roosevelt In Auckland, N.Z. To Visit Troops

Auckland, N.Z., Aug. 27. (CP Cable)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt arrived here today.

The wife of President Roosevelt, in extending her travels to the Antipodes, thus made the longest journey of the many she has made since entering the White House in 1933.

Like her famous husband, the most widely travelled President the United States has had, Mrs. Roosevelt has made many journeys in the 10 years she has inhabited the White House and has visited practically every corner of the United States. Last year she visited Great Britain.

Later, in a broadcast to the people of the Dominion she said she felt she must express appreciation at the great hospitality shown American boys so far from home by New Zealanders.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she hoped to see the work of New Zealand's women in war and would tell her own country about it.

Discomforts of High Blood Pressure Relieved by Histamine Injections

A person may have high blood pressure without its causing any symptoms. Yet sometimes symptoms occur which are most unpleasant. While it may not be possible to cure the high blood pressure, with proper treatment much can be done to get rid of the discomfort.

Dizziness is one of the chief complaints. Dr. Wallace Marshall, of Wisconsin has treated a number of patients with high blood pressure who suffered from dizziness by giving them an injection of a substance known as histamine phosphate. He gives the injections once or twice a week.

In carrying out the treatment, the patient lies down and his forehead is covered with a towel moistened with cold water. This is done because the use of this drug often causes flushing of the face, and headache. To start, a very tiny dose is used, and a syringe containing epinephrine is kept at hand should there be any unusual reaction to the histamine.

Frequently, it was found that shortly after the histamine was given the blood pressure dropped from 20 to 40 points. However, this reduction in the pressure lasted only for a few hours. Relief from the dizziness occurred quickly and after the headache produced by the drug cleared up, the patient was often free from dizziness for a number of days and often for as long as a week. When the dizziness returned the treatment was repeated.

The histamine phosphate was given in gradually increasing amounts. The size of the dose depended on whether or not the dizziness was eliminated and upon the patient's response to the preparation. When this preparation is used it is always important to make sure that the dose is proper, that a small dose is given at first, and that the increasing dosage is gradual.

The patient's blood pressure had to be checked from time to time and the reactions, such as headache and a metallic taste in the mouth, noted. All the patients were kept lying down for at least fifteen minutes after the administration of the drug. The increase in the dosage also was gradual.

Not all of the patients with high blood pressure and dizziness responded to this form of treatment. Those patients treated by Dr. Marshall varied in age from 35 to 67 years. Those who had only mild dizziness were treated at weekly intervals. Others who had intense symptoms were treated twice a week. When the blood pressure was not so high, the response was better.

It is, of course, important in all cases of high blood pressure to attempt to find the cause for the condition and relieve it, but this is not possible in all cases.

FASHION FLASHES

WARM BEAUTY is the keynote of the fur-trimmed overcoat cut on the popular officer's greatcoat order. Dark red woolen is used for such a coat with double-breasted fastening at the waist, a collar, triangular lapels and big gauntlet cuffs of black Alaska seal.

HIDDEN AWAY beneath the demurely simple little black woolen suit is likely to be a very elaborate blouse such as a model of pink wool jersey covered all over with rings of copper sequins.

A SET CUSTOM come winter is the fur hat or the hat trimmed with fur. Something different is a calot of black Persian with detachable loops of the fur for more elaborate wear.

HARD WEAR and plenty of it can be taken by the good snakeskin bag. Red python with a beautifully marked dark serpentine pattern is used for a large underarm tailored envelope with a triangular flap finished with a large shell ornament.

VERY SMART is the verdict of all who have seen the new gloves. Violet suede is used for an afternoon glove made with a diagonally shirred flared cuff that ends in a tassel of suede.

MAYBE the new lapel pins and ornaments aren't as elaborate as they used to be, but they are infinitely more amusing and picturesque. There's a chubby little elephant of gray ceramic with faceted stones in glittering jewel colors forming the blanket with the sparkling eyes.

Reliance Wins Second Game Of Series With Kingston Team And Meets Trenton Next Round

Squad Scores Three Runs in First Frame and Never Look Back.

SCORE IS 8-3

Reliance gets revenge.
On to the next round.
Congratulations team.

By virtue of an 8-3 win in the second game of the series for the Eastern O. A. S. A. playdowns against Kingston Ordnance at the Cricket Field in Kingston Thursday night, the Reliance squad will now tackle Trenton in the next round with the first game being played away from home. The win of last night even all the scores of last night evens all the scores took the Reliance over the jumps in two straight. The game of Thursday night was not without its moments and the game was finished in semi darkness. There were squabbles and disputes and in all the years of playing in the playdowns, the Reliance has never met a team, that squawked so much about so little. The team was beaten on the field by the superior playing in the clutches by "Spike" Pryke's squad and being able to get their bingles, when the hits meant runs. They secured a three-run lead in the first frame and never looked back.

Trouble in Eighth

Ordnance were down two runs and pressing, when the big eighth frame came up for Belleville, when the team salted the game away. Simon walked the first three men to face him and that was enough for him. Dawson came in and the fun started. One runner scored on a passed ball and shortly after another hit the home platter by the same method. Then the fun started. Richardson, the catcher, claimed that Bawden, who incidentally handled a hard game well, interfered with his progress to the plate but as the rules calls for the umpire to be part of the game, probably Richardson thought Bawden should take flight to get out of his road. Fans swarmed on the field but Bawden would not reverse his findings that the runner was safe and Richardson eventually talked himself out of the game.

The field was no sooner cleared than Dawson took too long to throw a pitch and also touched the ball twice before delivery and Bawden rightly called a ball on the batter. This was the occasion for another outburst but Bawden remained firm and soon the third run was home and the game was in the bag. Luffman was pitted against Simon, who started in Belleville and although "Ding" allowed four more hits than his opponents, yet he was "poison" in the pinches and he made them either sky out or roll feeble grounders to the fielders for easy outs. His outfield played errorless ball and Jimmy Barriage took a hard one in the ninth, when he could hardly see and the resistance was broken. "Ding" struck out seven and walked four, while Simon, during his sojourn on the mound walked eight and did not whiff a Reliance batter. Dawson, who succeeded him, struck out one. The teams played almost errorless ball but Szabo's miscue in the first frame cost his team at least one run.

Went to Work Early

Reliance went to work early and after Henn' had skied out, J. Barriage got a life on Szabo's miscue. Cy Barriage came through with a one-base blow and both runners moved up on a passed ball. Gene LaBonne got hold of one and rode it for three bases into deep right and two runs scampered over and he scored later on a passed ball. Kingston got one back in the same frame on three hits and then were blanked for the next four. Reliance drew goose eggs for three but in the fifth Henn walked and was sacrificed down and rode home on Cy Barriage's double to centre. The Reliance got another in the sixth, when Green walked, went to second on a fielder's choice and came home on Tuttle's single.

In the same frame Kingston knocked off two runs when a triple, a walk and two singles were sandwiched with two outs. The blowoff came in the eighth when Simon walked the first three Reliance batters to face him and he called it a day. Dawson, wildpitched one home and Ethier came home, when Richardson failed to get to the plate by running into the umpire. Henn finally singled to get the third one in and from there till the end the Reliance were always on top. A large crowd watched the game and it was announced after the contest that Reliance would play with Trenton with the first game probably on Monday night in that town.

BELL SARGENTS EVEN COUNT WITH BRISTOL LASSIES

Score 13-12 win and Another Game Needed to Decide Finalists.

LUSTY HITTING

Pounding out a total of seventeen hits, including three home runs and as many doubles, Bell Sargent moved up even with the Bristol Aircraft nine at the armouries lawn last evening when they eked out a close 13-12 decision to remain in the running for the girls' softball title.

The series now stands at one game each with each team having to win when the clubs meet in the third game or hang up their ball togs for the season.

To "Pudge" Donovan, sore knee and all, must go the lion's share of last evening's Bell-Sargent win as she conked two of her team's homers and added a double for good measure. Bess Doolitte did the hurling chores and shared in the victory offensively, when she homered in the fourth with two aboard.

Sargents went ahead in the second inning, when they scored three runs by virtue of as many consecutive hits by Betty Clarke, Farrar and Tapp. They were held scoreless in the third but went to town again in the fourth, when Doolittle conked her homer with two aboard. Donovan's double was wasted in this frame. After scoring three runs in the sixth the winners finished off with two in the last canto by virtue of a walk and Donovan's home run.

Bristols had their big innings in the third when "Pee Wee" Colden conked a triple to score two after Doris Hubble had singled and Clancy Elliott had doubled. "Pee Wee" subsequently scored on Doris Way's double. Again in the fifth Colden homered, while Allison got aboard on an error to score on Vickers' one base blow. The losers made a valiant effort to pull the game out of the fire in the last inning when Vickers, Hubble and Kay Carter singled in succession. Elliott got a life, when the shortstop bungled her grounder and scored on Calcutt's single. In the sixth Colden homered but was out, when she failed to touch the second sack.

I.T.S. Represents Bay of Quinte District in Finals

No. 5 Initial Training School will represent the Bay of Quinte district in the provincial R. C. A. F. softball championship series at Toronto on Saturday as the result of their close win over the Mohawk flying school lads of Deseronto when last evening at Trenton they downed the eastern lads by a 6-4 score.

The I. T. S. boys will represent the eastern section of the province in the softball finals in the Queen City when teams from this district, Western, Southern and Northern Ontario will participate. Names of all four teams will be drawn from the hat to determine each team's initial opposition while the series will be a sudden death affair with the winner being compelled to win two straight.

Mohawk boys threw a scare into the I. T. S. lads during the fore part of the game at Trenton last evening when they went ahead two runs before the Belleville boys got to work in the third to score three. They then never relinquished their lead as they added another in the fourth and made sure of the game in the eighth when they scored two more. Mohawks got their tallies by single counters in the second, third, fifth and eighth to have the winners shut them out in the final canto.

Burovitch started for the I. T. S. boys and breezed along in fine style until the sixth when with three on and none out he was relieved by Bancroft who stopped the threatened rally without a run being scored through two forceouts at the plate and a strikeout. Kerr handled the I. T. S. pitchers' slants while Phillips and Chiskosky were the battery for the Deseronto nine.

Bomber Station in England Gets Two Softball Players

(By The Canadian Press)

The transfer of a Canadian squadron in England to an R.C.A.F. Bomber station commanded by Group Captain D. M. Edwards, A.F.C., aroused more than the usual enthusiasm for the reason that the new group had two softball players in its personnel.

Two acquisitions were a pitcher and a second baseman—just what the station team needed—and the prospect is almost a foregone conclusion of a championship which entails a special trip to London for the nine and a chance at the All-England Diamond title of the armed forces. The manager of the team is Sqdn. Ldr. W. H. Swetman ,D.F.C., Kapuskasing, Ont., whose father, Capt. W. H. Swetman, has had much to do with the entertainment of Canadian troops in both the First and Second Great Wars as a Y.M.C.A. Auxiliary services officer in and around London.

Ontario members of the squad include AC. E. Genga, Windsor; Sgt. W. W. Kerchesky, Preston, and AC. E H. Dalgity, London.

Two regulars of the Cincinnati Reds, Pitcher Johnny Vander Meer and Outfielder Bert Haas, yesterday received instructions to report for induction into the armed forces Saturday at Fort Thomas, Ky. It they are enlisting in the army, they can play three more weeks of baseball. If the Navy draws them, they will have one week's furlough.

Defeating a field of 692, James A. Sabata, 29-year-old farmer of David City, Neb., broke 98 of 100 clay pigeons yesterday to win the preliminary handicap of the 44th Annual Grand American Trapshot Annual Grand American Trapshoot of five other competitors.

The soccer team of No. 4 R.C.A.F. Wireless School yesterday assumed the lead in the Guelph and District Association by winning out 5-4 from Fergus on the Royal City Field. Drury, with four goals for the Fliers, was the standout of the match.

Jockey Bobby Merritt, whose application for a riding license in New York was turned down last Spring, yesterday presented an affidavit before the Supreme Court, New York City, denying he had pulled the horse, Peep Show, in two races at Empire City last season. The Jockey Club had accused him previously.

Outfielder Vince Dimaggio and Catcher Lopez were fined $25 and $50 respectively yesterday for their row on the previous day while playing against Brooklyn when they disputed a called third strike. The penalties were imposed by President Ford Frick of the National League.

Prescott, Ont., was no match for the Cornwall Army Basic training Centre team in the second clash of the semi-finals of the Eastern Ontario Softball Association, the soldiers winning at Cornwall yesterday 23-2. Army will now meet the winner of the Ottawa-Smiths Falls group.

The Ontario Baseball Association, in committee session at Hamilton last night ruled Max Samuely, formerly of the Pony League, would have to pitch for Stratford Nationals for the balance of the season. Waterloo and Hamilton also wanted him. Walter Guditis, Niagara Falls, N.Y., was awarded to Hamilton providing he obtains employment there.

Redmond Quain, star of the Ottawa Rideau Tennis Club, qualified for the final of the Quebec Junior Championship singles yesterday at Montreal by defeating Andre Lamalice 6-4, 3-6, 6-1. Quain meets Yvon Gauthier of Quebec for the title today.

War Against Subs Is Not Over, Says Sir Dudley Pound

Quebec, Aug. 27. —(CP)—The war against submarines is not over, Admiral Sir Dudley Pound told a group of sailors in training here. "We have only won the first round", he said.

The British naval chief of staff inspected the men in training at H.M.C.S. Montcalm School here, talked to many of them individually and then delivered a short address.

He praised Canada for the great growth of the Canadian Navy and commented on the fact that it was now a powerful instrument against enemy submarines.

BECOMES SPORTS OFFICER

Captain Ian Eisenhardt, of Vancouver, has been appointed Sports Officer of the Canadian Army. He was formerly Director of Physical Education for British Columbia where he launched Canada's first program of physical recreation centres. He is now on a national tour of military centres to discuss policy and future plans for sport activities.

EIGHTH-INNING BALK ASSISTS TORONTO TO WIN

Defeat Montreal Royals 6-5 by Coming From Behind.

NEWARK BLANKED

(By The Associated Press)

The first-place Toronto Maple Leafs demonstrated last night they can win without hits in the International League. They won an uphill 6-5 victory over Montreal thanks to an eighth-inning balk by Barney DeForge, Montreal relief pitcher who took the mound in the seventh.

Montreal piled up a 5-1 lead in the first three innings, but the Leafs came back with three in the fourth and pushed over the tying and winning tallies in the eighth.

Jersey City, blanked for the 27th time this season on Tuesday, did an about-face and shut out Newark 3-0 behind the five-hit pitching of Bill Voiselle.

Rochester again thwarted Floyd Giebell's attempt to win his 12th victory, the Red Wings beating Buffalo, 3-2. The veteran Ira Hutchinson turned in a five-hitter.

Baltimore and Syracuse divided a doubleheader, while Syracuse blasted out 17 hits to win the nightcap, 8-2. Van Harrington, Syracuse second baseman, was spiked and sent to hospital for treatment.

What's Doing in Sport

Tuscaloosa, Ala. — (AP) — The University of Alabama, famous for seven post-season bowl engagements, yesterday bowed out of the football picture and cancelled its tentative schedule for the coming Autumn, all because of the manpower situation. The college had only "two or three" athletes remaining from last season.

Hamilton —(CP)— The Ontario Baseball Association last night drew up a playdown schedule which called for the Niagara District Seniors to play Hamilton commencing Sept. 4 and the Intercounty champions to open at Windsor Sept. 5. Niagara Senior "B" team will play at Toronto Sept. 6, with return game Sept. 11.

New York—(AP)—Ray Robinson of Harlem, favored to win from the veteran Henry Armstrong in Madison Square Garden tonight, has been ordered by the U. S. army to accompany heavyweight champion Joe Louis on a tour of the war-zone camps and it is expected to be Ray's final appearance here for the duration.

BABE AND BOYS STEAL THE SHOW IN NEW YORK

Old-time Ball Players Take Part in 800 Million Dollar Bond Sale.

RUTH RIFLES ONE

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 27—(AP)—There were 35,000 lumps in 35,000 throats around the village today—all because a dozen old men walked out on a ball field.

These weren't just any 12 old gaffers, mind you. Nor was it just any old baseball clambake at the Polo Grounds yesterday, it was an $800,000,000 baseball show, put on by a New York newspaper to sell war bonds.

But Babe and the "boys" stole the show—stole it from top "name" comedians, dance bands, movie actors and singers in show business who did their stuff during the four-hour fuss. And they stole it, too, from the Giant-Yankee-Dodger all-stars who tuned in a 5-2 victory over the army's New Cumberland (Pa.) team, which was aided and abetted by Hank Greenberg, Johnny Beazley and Enos Slaughter.

The Babe, naturally, was George Herman Ruth, the man with a bat. You knew it long before he poked one of Walter Johnson's still-lively slants into the upper right field deck, as the 35,000 rattled the rafters.

The Babe and Walter were two of the ancient dozen who gave today's fans a look at what probably was the greatest collection of baseball "ivory" ever put on display at one park. Seven of the dozen are in the Hall of Fame.

Around the infield were George Sisler, Eddie Collins and bow-legged Honus Wagner from the Hall of Fame, and Frankiee the Fordham Flash Frisch, who'll probably get there one of these days. Tris Speaker was flanked in the outer pastures by Duffy Lewis, of the Boston Red Sox's mighty Lewis-Speaker-Hooper outfield and Red Murray, who once saved a game for New York Giants by catching a fly during a lightning storm. C. McGillicuddy, known to the trade as Connie Mack, "managed" the cast. Bill Klem, the old arbitrator in person, "umpired." And Roger Bresnahan did the catching.

New York, Aug. 27. (AP)— Mike Jacobs has been absorbing a few blasts for setting a $16.50 top for tickets to tonight's Hank Armstrong-Ray Robinson fight, but Mike can take it as long as he can take it. . . But some of the more solvent Beachcombers point out that the customers all over the country are demanding ringside seats at any price and won't go for the cheap tickets. . . .Record stuff: George Case ,with 42 thefts so far, is a good bet to win his fifth straight American League base-stealing crown. Ty Cobb never won more than three in a row. . . Rudy York has hit 15 homers in August and needs only four more to bust his one-month record.

Shortly after Cedric Durst resigned as manager of the San Diego Pacific Coast League Club, reports Monroe McConnell, he received a notice a package of fruit had arrived for him. . . . Durst hurried to the express office, where he was handed a small box. . . Inside he found nine lemons each numbered for a position in the lineup—and three were rotten.

FANTASTIC 1943 SCHEDULE PUTS LOOP ON SPOT

Menus for New Few Days in Majors will be Scanty According to Schedule.

LET-UP STARTED

The fantastic schedule drawn up by the major leagues this year has dropped into another one of its dead spots. Except for full programs tomorrow and Sunday the menu for the next few days is scanty.

Over a three-day stretch in the American League next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, for instance, the total activity will be limited to one game between New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox. National League games also are rationed, though not quite so stringently.

The let-up began yesterday when only two teams in the senior circuit and four in the American league saw action.

Chicago Cubs edged out Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 in the lone National League contest with Paul Derringer pitching six-hit ball. It took a two-run homer by Phil Cavarretta in the sixth inning and a triple by Harry Lowrey in the seventh, however, to beat the Buccaneers.

In the American League Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland 4-1 and Washington halved a doubleheader with St. Louis Browns.

Mike Ryba, the Red Sox' jack of all trades officiated in the victory over the Indians with seven-hit hurling.

The Senators stopped the Browns in the first game 9-7 for Early Wynn's 15th pitching triumph, although he had to have help from Dutch Leonard to get the final out. In the nightcap George McQuinn hit a roundtripper, as he did in the first game, and the Browns won 4-3 when Milo Candini forced in three runs with walks while the bases were loaded.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 100

The Kibitzer

The misguided microbe or flea who gives me a pain in the knee is the insect who drools only misquoted rules and claims that he got them from me.

Horse Sense rules tell you that each suit raise consumes another suit trick. Thus, you may raise once in a suit for each unused suit trick in your hand.

But each bid is not necessarily a raise. And you may have an honest non-raise suit bid even when you have no more unused tricks. Nothing in Horse Sense advises you against doing that.

You have this responding hand:

♠ J 5
♥ A K 9 5
♦ 8 6 2 2
♣ 9 6 4

Your hand contains three suit tricks; two no-trump tricks. You are assumed to have a basis of two tricks. You have enough for one suit raise; no voluntary no-trump bid.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. Your first response is a takeout to two hearts. Suppose partner then bids two spades or two no-trump or three hearts.

You have not enough suit tricks for a raise in suit. Nor have you a voluntary no-trump bid. You are not forced to bid. So your second round response is pass.

Suppose the opening by partner is one heart. Your first reply is an assist to two hearts. If partner then bids two no-trump or three hearts, you pass with no unused tricks.

But when partner opens with one heart and you answer with two hearts, suppose he then bids three clubs. You now show preference for hearts with a bid of three hearts.

Why? Because three hearts is not a raise in the last partnership contract. It does not consume another trick. And you are able to make an honest suit bid without another trick when you do not raise.

If you have what you claim you may keep your good name.

"Stranger in Town"

Laughs, thrills and heart throbs are blended in M-G-M's "A Stranger in Town" now on the Belle theatre screen featuring Frank Morgan, Rishard Carlson and Jean Rogers.

Western thrills and fun abound in M-G-M's "Apache Trail" announced as the added feature attraction and starring Lloyd Nolan, Donna Reed, William Lundigan and Ann Ayers. "First Aid" is the title of an entertaining Pete Smith specialty to be exhibited on the same program.

"Pilot No. 5" Top Entertainment

Differing decidedly from the current run of "war" pictures and told through the use of a novel presentation technique, M-G-M's "Pilot No. 5," coming to the Belle theatre, this weekend is stimulating screen fare.

The drama consists of the narratives of four men, each outlining his knowledge of incidents in the life of the departed pilot. The man under discussion is the star, Franchot Tone. The four flyers who reveal his life story are Gene Kelly, Van Johnson, Dick Simmons and Alan Baxter. Marsha Hunt, whose romance with Tone forms the principal episode of the story, is the sole important feminine player.

Suicide Lies Ahead

Written by David Hertz and directed by George Sidney, "Pilot No. 5" begins when Tone, one of five remaining flyers on a blasted airfield somewhere in Java, volunteers for a suicidal mission against an approaching enemy. After he has taken off, the major (Steve Geray) in command, interested by Tone's determination and personality, seeks to learn more about the man whom he has chosen for the important mission from the remaining pilots. He hears a story which bares Tone's character and explains the pilot's intensity of purpose in fighting against the enemy.

Tone, as seen through the eyes of the narrators, is revealed as a brilliant college student, who, as a struggling lawyer, becomes the tool of crooked political interests. He turns on them and helps break the machine which results in his disgrace. He is rejected when he first seeks to enlist in the air force, but is accepted later when he proves his fighting spirit. His romance with Miss Hunt is one of the most touching and tender he has ever played.

Appearing in the cast and in important parts are Steve Geray, Dorothy Morris, Howard Freeman, Frank Puglia, John Hamilton, Helen Lowe and Frank Ferguson.

3 Splendid Featurettes

Three splendid featurettes are announced for exhibition on the same program including the Canadian News of the World, The Radio Rogues in a multiple-reel fun and melody treat "Love in Glum," and a M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Who Killed Who." On Saturday matinee the 3rd chapter of the adventures of "Smilin' Jack" will be presented. Continuous shows prevail Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Something to Shout About"

Vaudeville, so long wrongly accused of being dead, is not only very much alive but it has a new champion as well.

Champion and chief defender of good, old-fashioned vaudeville as an entertaining American institution is Gregory Ratoff, Russian-born, word-twisting, highly volatile picture director.

"All vaudeville needs right now," Ratoff contends, "is a little attention, appreciation and an artistic touch."

Ratoff is attempting to display all three things in his new Columbia musical film, at the Capitol Theatre, "Something to Shout About." Not only has he headlined its production with such stars as Don Ameche, Janet Blair and Jack Oakie, but the whole story is based on the adventures of a group of performers in a theatrical boarding house who make a whale of a success of a vaudeville show.

The glamour is supplied by Janet Blair with Ameche contributing the romance and Oakie, a dog act, "The Bricklayers," and a score of former variety comics to dish up the laughs.

The artistic touch of which Ratoff speaks is being provided by a Cole Porter musical score, and spectacular ballet routines staged by David Lichine, the noted Russian ballet star. With Hazel Scott, the Negro piano wizard, pounding out everything from Brahms to boogie-woogie on the keyboard. Ratoff feels he will prove that vaudeville is the livest corpse in theatre history.

Featured, in addition to Miss Scott, are William Gaxton, popular Broadway musical comedy star, and Cobina Wright, Jr., social registerite and night club songstress.

"The Wildcat of Tucson"

Bill Elliott, who once played leading man roles but is now a cowboy star for Columbia, has become so expert with a six-shooter that while on location with "The Wildcat of Tucson," his new outdoor action drama at the Capitol Theatre, he put 15 shots into the bulls-eye from 100 paces—an almost incredible feat of marksmanship.

BATA BOMBERS COPS COBLEY CUP

Only Intermediate 'C' Entry in Eastern Ontario for O.A.S.A. Playdowns.

Playing bang-up ball through the entire series to first knock off the Trenton town entry, Bata Bombers copped the Trenton district softball championship and incidentally the George Cobley trophy when at Trenton Thursday night they defeated No. 6 R.D. in the fifth game of the finals by a close 8-6 score.

More than one thousand ardent softball fans witnessed the game and saw Stacey, the Bata Bomber speed ball artist from Wooler, outlast two airforce moundsmen who tried in vain to stem the power of the shoemaker's bats. The Bombers are fast making a name for themselves in Trent Valley sporting circles, having last winter won the district hockey championship.

The only Intermediate "C" softball entry from the district in the O.A.S.A. playdowns, the Bata Bombers will go on from their district championship series in search of provincial laurels. They are now awaiting a winner to be declared in Western Ontario between Grimsby and St. Mary's. This will be a best-in-three series with the Bata boys scheduled to play the first game in the west.

The teams: Bata Bombers—Wagar, Muskiluke, Austin, Stacey, Stojan, Ellis, Aquino, Peacock and Kutesinski. No. 6 R.D. —Joyce Baker, Hastings, Franks, Thompson, Cummings, Wilson, Hughes and Smith.

Why Pigs Wallow

(Notes and Queries)

Pigs are not naturally dirty. In nature they normally live in the neighborhood of swamps and river banks, or in damp woods. They have very little hair, and the usual mechanism of sweat glands for maintaining a constant body temperature is poor by comparison with other animals.

In hot weather they naturally wallow in mud, which soon dries in a hard cake in their skin. This prevents the rays of the sun from scorching the skin and it also introduces an effect similar to the evaporation of perspiration, which is effective in regulating temperature.

If pigs are kept in a small confined sty which is not maintained in a clean condition, they will in hot weather wallow in anything they can find. Given suitable surroundings, they are, however, from a sanitary standpoint of view, more cleanly by instinct than the other farm animals, as may be seen by observation.

No Qualifications

Statements issued by the British, Canadian and American governments, on agreement reached at Quebec, specified that "later on the people of France, in a free and untrammeled manner, will proceed in due course to select their own government and their own officials to administer it."

The Russian recognition, broadcast several hours later, appeared to be full and without qualification.

In President Roosevelt's statement, the following limitations were imposed:

1. The committee is expected to "function on the principle of collective responsibility of all its members for the active prosecution of the war."

2. "In view of the paramount importance of the common war effort," the realtionship with the Committee "must continue to be subject to the military requirements of the Allied commanders."

3. The extent to which the Committee may be recognized "as the body qualified to ensure the administration and defence of French interests" must be "reserved for consideration in each case as it arises."

4. The statement "does not constitute recognition of a government of France or of the French Empire by the government of the United States."

An informed diplomat interpreted these limitations as meaning that the British-Canadian-American governments merely had confirmed the situation existing in N. Africa for the past three months. In that sense, he said, it brought De Jure recognition of a De Facto administration, without materially changing the relationship among London, Ottawa, Washington and Algiers.

Accused Given Bail of $600

Valleyfield, Que., Aug. 27 (CP)—James Scott of Cornwall, Ont., brought here by Provincial Police on charges that he was responsible for the drowning of three persons at nearby Hopkins Point last Sunday afternoon, Thursday was released on bail of $600. He will appear Sept. 17 for preliminary hearing.

Police said Scott, accompanied by B. McDonald and two girls from Cornwall, was piloting a speedboat when the swell from his craft upset a passing rowboat, containing seven persons.

As a result of this upset, police said, Noe Mondoux, Louis Miron and Harold Gallinger were drowned. The bodies of Mondoux and Miron have been recovered but that of Gallinger is still sought.

A coroner's inquest will be held when the third body is found.

The War Today— Sweden Investigates Sinking Of 2 Swedish Fishing Boats

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Something red hot — something to watch closely for developments —is the announcement by the government of Sweden that two German minesweepers sank two Swedish fishing boats wwithout warning off Denmark on August 25.

An angry Stockholm started an investigation. Should that inquiry establish the Huns have again perpetrated one of their cold-blooded acts of ruthlessness, it might be the explosive event which would bring Sweden into the war on the side of the Allies.

That's not a prediction. I'm merely pointing to a tendency which has been pulling a reluctant Sweden nearer and nearer to the brink of the European maelstrom recently. One wonders in particular what the effect would be on Stockholm if the Western Allies should stage an invasion of Western Europe in the immediate future. It certainly would put the Swedes in a much stronger position.

Swedish-German Relations Strained

Relations between the Scandinavian country and her gangster neighbor have been increasingly strained for four months. For the past three months the Swedes have been standing at arms, ready for action if forced from their chosen position of neutrality.

Now comes this fresh sensation in which the German warships are said to have fired from a range of 50 yards on the little boats. The fishing craft were flying their country's flag, and had the Swedish blue and gold insignia painted on their sides. Stockholm regards this as the worst in a series of incidents involving Germany since the sinking of the Swedish submarine Ulven on April 16, with her crew of 34.

The fact that the Nazis have been jittery in the expectation of an Allied invasion of Denmark scarcely could salve Swedish honor or indignation. That's an excuse something like the one the Boche gave after sending the Ulven to the bottom. The Hitlerites said they mistook the Ulven for an enemy craft — but they didn't make the tale stick in Stockholm.

Position of Sweden

It was last March 24 that Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative member of the British Parliament, told the House of Commons that Sweden's attitude since the beginning of the war had been "definitely pro-Axis." Whether that represented the position exactly is something for history to decide. Perhaps it might be more accurate to say that some of Sweden's actions had been pro-Axis. We should remember that Sweden was right under Hitler's big guns, and in constant danger of invasion by the Boche.

Anyway, the Allied governments quietly but clearly made it known that those who are not for us are against us. This produced signs Stockholm was giving it thoughtful consideration.

A little later there began a long series of incidents for which the Nazis were responsible, and there has been a distinct cooling of Swedish-German relations. Stockholm's attitude now has stiffened as the Axis has sunk into the slough of defeat.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, attending the strategic conferences with Prime Minister Churchill, the most frequent question put by Canadians to American newspapermen who accompanied him was this one: will he run for president again?

The replies usually varied for the simple reason that no man, including Mr. Roosevelt, can answer the question dogmatically. It all depends on such factors as the progress of the war and the political situation prevailing next year.

Many Washington correspondents are convinced of two things: the last thing Mr. Roosevelt wants to do, if he follows his personal wishes and desires, is to run for a fourth term but he will if the war is still in progress and if he thinks he can win.

One of the forces driving the President toward a fourth term is a desire to attend the peace conference, to set in motion his ideas of freedom, liberty and collective security. Another is a fear, perhaps not so much on his part as with his followers, that the middle of a war is no time to switch to an inexperienced president and commander-in-chief.

Mr. Roosevelt will be 62 next January, not an old age for the head of a state. Three terms in the White House, one of the most exacting jobs in all the world, have aged him perceptibly but his health still is excellent, respite his physical limitations.

Just as it is impossible to say that Mr. Roosevelt will run again in 1944, it is equally impossible to say who his opponent might be. Various polls of public opinion have indicated that Governor Thomas Dewey of New York State, the racket buster, is the people's choice for Republican candidate, with Wendell L. Willkie fairly close behind him.

When Dewey was elected Governor last fall he announced he would not leave his Albany job for any other office and men close to him insist he favors 1948 over 1944. But queer things happen in politics and it may develop — particularly if he becomes convinced he can win — that Dewey will seek the nomination.

Before considering Willkie, there are three other possibilities for the Republican ticket. Governor John Bricker of Ohio enjoyed an early boom but it exploded to his lack of color and, above all, his refusal to take sides on foreign policy. There have been several movements to draft General Douglas MacArthur, Allied Commander-in-Chief in the Southwest Pacific, despite his expressed opposition, but he isn't regarded as anything like a leading candidate. The same thing is true of Brig.-Gen. Harford McNider, former Minister to Canada, one of MacArthur's staff officers.

Wendell Willkie, the 1940 Republican candidate is definitely in the race again, despite the opposition of the old guard Republicans. He is the most colorful of the candidates, and most positive on policy and perhaps the man who could give Roosevelt the tightest race.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 14

There was a spray of orchids and purple ribbon on the door and the butler stared at me coldly, for the intruder that I was. I sat in a small reception room and waited for nearly an hour. I hope I never see that room, or another like it as long as I live. The curtains were drawn, and the butler had not bothered to light the lamps for me. I sat on a stiff French gilt chair in the gloom, my palms moist, my throat dry and hot. I counted the pink roses on the Victorian carpet, and the satin stripes on the ivory damask curtains. I felt sure that I had been put there and forgotten, and I didn't know whether to come out and barge upstairs to Mrs. Castle's sitting room, or give up and go back to the office.

Finally the butler came back and said that Mrs. Castle regretted she could not see me.

"Madam regrets," he said.

I made up my mind, childishly, that if I ever got rich and had a butler he WOULDN't call me "Madam"—no matter what.

Josh Beane was feeling good.

"Oh, forget it," he said, "go home and get some sleep. Cover the funeral, and then we'll drop the whole thing until something else breaks."

That was all right with me.

I walked home for exercise, exulting in the sunshine, the good, safe streets, and the normal looking people who got their murder mysteries, if any, out of books. I even stopped to stare in the shop windows as I went, and found myself debating the relative merits of a printed silk or a navy wool, exactly as if the only man I ever loved wasn't being buried Saturday and I'd not just been politely thrown out of his mother's house.

The Rollar building looked much the same as usual as I walked into the foyer and rang for the elevator. Even Mr. Grant had recovered most of his equanimity now that Inspector Hare was no longer around to call him "Dad" and refer to him as "the Janitor."

Peg was out, but the studio was bright and sunny and I thought I could sleep. Perhaps I did for a moment or two, but I lay there, more and more restless and unhappy, until I decided to give up the idea, and go down to Jan's studio for consolation.

There, to my great disgust, was Chris Hall, highball in hand, obviously very much at home.

"May I present my good friend, Chris Hall," Jan began and I said rather curtly, "We've met before. But I didn't know that you two had!"

"Chris? One of my oldest and dearest pals. Since New York, in '26, eh, Chris?"

Hall said to me:

"I didn't know you were one of Jan's friends, Miss Driscoll."

You can't be stiff and on the defensive with Jan, but I wished he hadn't been quite so chummy with Hall. Except for the first few minutes when he came back from Hollywood I had hardly seen him alone and there were still some questions I wanted to ask him about the keys. He did say when I first told him about Emilie's getting rid of the one he had left with her that she needn't have bothered, because half a dozen of his pupils had them and he rarely locked the door.

Now there wasn't a chance to go into it further, for Jan was bent on taking us all to dinner, as soon as Peggy could join us.

Nobody ate much, but we talked a lot. The funny part was that all the while we were talking and getting better acquainted with Hall, a new and uncomfortable idea was forming in my mind.

This very personable young man, whom I liked in spite of myself, not only knew the late Gilbert Castle and admitted to being with him on the night that he was murdered, but he knew Jan Proust, too.

He might have taken Gil to Jan's studio. They might have quarreled over a girl, perhaps. He might have . . .

"It was queer that you were the last person to see Gil Castle alive!" I said suddenly.

"Mary!" Peggy cried, appalled. "What a thing to say!"

"I'm sorry. I just happened to think of it. I didn't realize how it would sound."

"It's all right," Hall said. "I think about it all the time, myself. It was unfortunate. I wish I'd never gone to the Castles' and I don't know why I did except that—I—well, I did have the idea of borrowing some money and there was the idea of free lodgings, too."

"But Chris, my friend," Jan interrupted in his eager, generous way. "Surely you should have come to me first. I feel hurt. Surely after all our friendship—"

"But you weren't here, Jan."

"How did you know he wasn't here? None of the rest of us knew it," I said.

I thought he looked startled, and embarrassed. I'd almost swear that he did, but I'd never make a detective for I'm never sure. I'm always afraid I have imagined something.

There was an awkward moment, and before Hall could answer, Jan broke in:

"But you didn't know, Chris, did you?"

"No, I didn't, Jan. But after I telephoned you twice without getting an answer I gave up and went to the Castles' instead."

"I thank heaven for that!" Jan said warmly. "You might have been in my studio. It might have been you instead of poor young Castle."

I thought that Hall looked rather white—another of the strong exhibiting weakness. He laughed, nervously.

"How do you figure that, Jan? Do you think somebody was after you, and just got Castle because he happened to be there in your place?"

It was Jan's turn to look faintly queer. He managed a smile at least. "No, I don't think anyone wants to shoot me. I really don't see how I come into it at all. Why did this young Castle come to my studio? Why should anyone follow him there? I don't know him, he didn't know me. Of course, he might have come for some reason, perhaps to arrange a performance for his mother. He was devoted to her, was he not? And I have played for her, both in a private recital for some o' her friends, and at a club she was interested in. So that might have been it. Perhaps a surprise for her, since she was not well and he was so devoted to her—"

"He HATED her," Chris Hall said explosively.

So Gil Castle hated his mother. Hate is a nasty word, especially the way Hall said it. I don't think he meant to say it at all. I think it just slipped out.

None of us had the wit to say anything, we just sat and looked at him with our mouths open and he said, "Oh, he loved her, too, of course. There is no question about that. But he hated her a whole lot more than he loved her. It's not a pleasant thing to say, especially now that he is gone and can't defend himself, but I tell you that man hated his mother with a hate that was horrible. She stood between him and money, power, independence, everything he wanted. He wished she were dead, a hundred times a day—and she knew it."

"She knew it?" I cried.

"Of course she knew it. She's no fool. That's why she hung on to him, trying to win him back, to turn back the pages to the time that he did love her wholly and blindly and obediently. And he hated her more every day he lived."

"Now if he'd just killed her it would have been so simple," Peg said flippantly, "instead of her killing him!"

"Peggy!"

"Oh I didn't mean it. I don't know why I said it. Surely a mother couldn't—couldn't—"

"Chris," Jan said slowly, "do you think it could be?"

Chris Hall shook his head.

"No, definitely not. I'd stake a lot on that. I don't like the old girl, though she was always glad to see me, possibly because I date back a long way and she associated me with the days when Gil was really hers. But like her or not, I won't have that said of her, and it couldn't be true."

We were having dinner at one of the little French restaurants and the waiter, a funny little fellow with waxed moustache, shirt sleeves bunched up with pink sleeve-garters or whatever they call them, and a great, big white apron was frankly listening in. We had to wait until he left, reluctantly, before we could go on.

"Just what was the low-down on your story that you heard him say he was going to break with a girl that night?" I asked.

Hall filled his wine glass before he answered.

"Just what I gave out to the police and what's been printed. When I got the paper, your paper, Mary, Tuesday morning and read what had happened, I went right down to police headquarters and told what I knew. Then I went over to the 'Express' and got myself a job on the strength of it. I don't admire myself for doing so, but a man must eat. You weren't home, Jan," he said, "and the only other person I would sponge on was dead."

There was a little silence and then he looked at me quizzically and smiled. "I didn't murder my friend," he said.

"Really, Mary, I'm not that kind of a guy. I have been known to drink too much and I've done a lot of other things I shouldn't, but little children love me and dogs let me pat them and I've never, never murdered anybody, not even somebody I didn't like. And I liked Gil. What's more I had the idea I might take up winter quarters with him, while I finished writing a book. I wouldn't have killed him. It spoiled all my plans. Made me go back to work again."

Everyone was smiling, a little puzzled, looking at me.

Am I that transparent, or was the man a mind reader?

The upshot of it was that we all let down our hair and talked too much and finally I broke down and told what I knew about Utz, and his wife weeping because he talked in his sleep.

Then they all jumped on me for not telling before and Jan took Peg and me back to the studio, while Hall went in search of Inspector Hare. I could imagine how popular I would be with Hare, but Hall would handle him better than I could.

So the three of us went on upstairs to Peg's studio, each of us conscious that a week ago it would have been Jan's studio that we would have gone to. Everything was spoiled for us there, it could never be the same again.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was writing a letter at her desk, saying to pop, Lay and lie, lie and lay, I'm never quite sure which one of those words to use under certain circumstances, and it's all because I never got them straight in my mind when I was young. It just goes to show how important it is to learn things correctly in your formative years, she said.

By gollies you're right, pop said. Maybe I ought to explain those 2 words to Benny while his years are still formative, he said, and I said, G, pop, do you mean right now?

What are you doing right now? pop said, and I said, I'm laying on the floor reading my lyberry book.

That's just where you deceive yourself in your most formative years, pop said. A hen might be laying on the floor, but if so she would be laying eggs. You are lying on the floor. You cant grammatically lay on the floor today, but if you exercize a little patience and wait till tomorrow you can correctly say that you lay on the floor yesterday. In other words lay is the passed tents and lie in the present tents, is that clear? he said, and I said, Sure, but how about the hen?

That's an intelligent question and shall receive an intelligent answer, pop said. A hen is depositing an egg and not herself, therefore she lays instead of lies in the present tents, and in the passed tents she laid instead of lay. You're the one that lay. Now suppose someone told you that a hen lay 4 eggs in 4 minutes. Would that be correct? he said.

No sir, I said, and pop said, And what would be correct.

About 4 in four days, and maybe not even, I said, and ma said, My goodness yes, your hen must be a lightning calculator for land sakes, William.

She's not my hen and I wash my hands of her, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

Sending of More Call-Up Troops Is Authorized

Ottawa, Aug. 27—(CP)—Sending of additional call-up troops to Newfoundland and Labrador, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, British Guiana, Alaska and the United States is authorized in an order-in-council dated Aug. 11 and made public here today.

Previously the sending of some troops called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act to these areas was approved.

The latest order says additional personnel are required and gives Defence Minister Ralston authority to send home-defence troops to units serving in these territories "as from time to time he deems necessary having regard to the military exigencies of the moment."

The order is thus a general authorization and differs from some of the previous orders which covered only particular movements of members of particular units.

German Radio Sees No Imminent Invasion of Italian Mainland

London, Aug. 27 — (CP) — The German overseas radio said today that "information available from the Central Mediterranean does not indicate imminent invasion of the Italian mainland by the Allies."

The broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press, added that "according to present observations Allied shipping in the Central Mediterranean cannot be described as particularly intensive."

District O.P.P. Aid in Search For Escapees

Practically the entire personnel of the Belleville district provincial police headquarters was called to duty late last evening and early today following the escape of the 19 German prisoners from the internment camp at Fort Henry, just outside Kingston. Twelve had been recaptured up to noon today. Highways and railroads and other means of exit from the Kingston area are being closely watched by the cordon of police officers and army personnel detailed to help in rounding up the escaped men.

Directing the search insofar as the local district headquarters men is concerned is Inspector H. Storey who has fifteen men assisting in the search. Besides Inspector Storey, four of the Belleville detachment and two highway patrolmen are on duty in the Kingston area keeping a watchful eye for the escaped Germans.

At noon today police had not learned of any of the escaped men having attempted to pass through the Belleville district.

To Produce Pencillin In $600,000 Plant

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 27—(AP)—Pencillin, miraculous new bacteria-killing drug, is scheduled to be produced in quantity by Nov. 1 at a $600,000 Oakland plant, construction of which began yesterday. The Defence Plant Corporation announced the plant would be operated by the Cutter Laboratory and some 60 scientists would be engaged in producing the drug, a byproduct of a mold.

REPORT RESULTS OF REGISTRATION AT TRENTON

Almost 300 Shared Accommodations Lowered Average of $4.80 Month.

Compulsory registration of shared living accommodations in the town of Trenton under an order of the Rentals Administrator, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and subsequent inspection of these premises and fixation of their rentals by the Administration has resulted in a reduction of almost 300 of the rentals which were in force at the time of registration, the average reduction being $4.80 per month.

Trenton is a community which, chiefly due to military reasons, has had its normal population of about 8,000 increased to approximately 10,500 without any perceptible increase in the number of houses available for occupancy. There has thus been a great deal of shared accommodation in the form of rooms for light housekeeping, apartments and the like and the inequality of the rentals charged, together with the unreasonableness of some of them, led the Rentals Administration last February 15 to order compulsory registration of such accommodations with subsequent fixation by a Rentals Examiner.

The result of this program is held to have given general satisfaction. Almost 900 shared accommodations have been registered and examined under the direction of C. D. Crosby, Rentals Examiner, and the levelling-out of rentals which has become effective is regarded as a great improvement upon the situation which formerly prevailed. In a few cases increased rentals have been authorized.

Sweden Drafts Protest to Berlin Over 2 Sinkings

Stockholm, Aug. 27 — (AP) — The Swedish Foreign Office announced today a protest to the German government is being drafted, shortly after a communique stated two German minesweepers had sunk two Swedish boats without warning.

The latest protest, the second in 10 days demanding that Germany halt her attacks on Swedish commercial and military interests, will be presented shortly, it was said.

The 12 crew members aboard the two boats were presumed to have been lost in the attack on five Swedish craft in international waters off the northwest coast of Denmark two days ago.

The incident followed a formal protest Aug. 18 against the firing upon a Swedish naval torpedo boat and air force plane by German gunners aboard a Norwegian freighter off the Swedish coast Aug. 6.

The government took a critical view of the sinking and the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter editorially termed it "a brutal attack."

The paper said, "It is the general opinion that the government, after a short discussion with the German government, cannot just cross over this incident and pass on."

Billfold Finder Partially Honest

Well, we suppose the finder was at least partially honest but he took his revenge in a rather unusual manner and upon an entirely innocent person.

A week or so ago Miss Thessie Condie, R. R. 6, Belleville, but who works in the city, reported to police of having lost her billfold containing $16, her registration card and other identification papers. Days passed so the wallet was given up for lost. But no, this week it turned up in the Condie family mail box — kindly placed there by the finder.

But here is the pay-off! The papers were left in the wallet but $11 of the sixteen originally in the purse was missing. In place of the money was a note apparently written in a man's hand writing. Here is it's wording—

"Sorry to have to do this, but unfortunately I lost a billfold myself once with five dollars etc. I of course didn't ever get it back, not even the billfold. So I thought I'd repay myself this way. Hope you're lucky enough to find one sometime."

Court of Inquiry To Be Convened On Prison Break

Kingston, Aug. 27 (CP)—The 19 German prisoners who escaped from Fort Henry last night made their way out through a "well-planned tunneling job," an official at the prison camp said today. 12 of the men were recaptured by noon today.

"A court of inquiry will be convened immediately to investigate the escape," the official said. A number of previous tunneling attempts were discovered by guards, he remarked, adding: "You can't pitch a no-run game in this guarding of prisoners. They are ingenious and we are bound by certain restructions which prevent us unearthing some of their attempts at escape."

Prison camp authorities report that it was "a clean break from the inside" and that the prisoners had no help from outsiders. Those recaptured were still in prison garb with a large red circle on the back of the blue denim uniforms.

"Everything is peaceful at the prison camp—no disturbances of any sort," Capt. F. H. Wooding, Public Relations Officer at Fort Henry, told reporters. "The search is thoroughly organized and we believe the rest of those who escaped will be picked up before long."

Norman Armour May Get Post

Washington, Aug. 27. (AP)—Norman Armour, United States ambassador to Buenos Aires, one time minister to Canada, and a career diplomat, appears to have the inside track in the field of possible successors to Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, when and if Welles' resignation is announced. Armour is in Washington now "for consultation".

Breckinridge Long, assistant secretary of State, has strong congressional backing, associates said today, but a man with more diplomatic experience is expected to be the ultimate choice.

A possibility arose, meanwhile, that Welles, despite his rift with Secretary Hull, might accept an assignment as President Roosevelt's personal representative in South America, with headquarters at Rio de Janeiro. It has been suggested also that he might go to Moscow on a special mission.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 27—(CP)—Industrials and Western Oils were moderately weak this afternoon on Toronto Exchange. Mines posted mino gains. Volume was average at 338,000 shares.

Strong spots in golds included Dome, Hollinger, Lake Shore, Pioneer, Chesterville, Omega, Moneta and Siscoe and in base metals prices were up for smelters, Mining Corporation and Normetal against losses for Steep Rock and Ontario Nickel.

Industrials were down .34 in the index, mainly on weakness of foods and senior oils. National Steel Car advanced 3 or more on news of a stock split. Losses of 2 came out for Western Canada Flour Pfd. and Western Grocers Pfd.

Home and Vermila were weaker Western Oils. Ajax lost 4 to 1.45.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Gold mines and scattered industrials attracted modest bidding in today's stock market but speculative and investment difference still was a handicap for many leaders. Near the fourth hour, the direction was somewhat obscure.

Among Canadian issues Lake Shore gained 1-8, while Distiller-Seagram and Canada 4s dropped 1-8. Canadian Pacific was unchanged.

On the advancing side were Dome Mines, which went into new high ground for the year; Homestake Mining, Consolidated Edison, Douglas Aircraft, McIntyre Porcupine and American Can.

Revival of the gold mining group was credited partly to a meeting of monetary experts at Chicago in which International post-war currency plans were discussed and the matter of the yellow metal considered as the prime base for whatever exchange unit might eventually be adopted. That the mine operators have confidence in the future of gold was indicated, brokers said, by the action of Dome directors in voting a 40-cent dividend in Canadian funds, the same as paid in preceding quarters.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

LAC Roy Kennedy Revisits Old Scenes In Native Marmora

Marmora, Aug. 27.— LAC. Roy Kennedy of the R.C.A.F., now on a special course at Trenton, revisited his native village, Marmora, on Tuesday evening, after an absence of thirty-three years. Looking keenly for old landmarks, he confessed that the only building which looked natural to him was the old stone building formerly known as the St. James' Hotel. In the short time at his disposal he was able to locate only three old schoolmates, Carl and Flossie Boyd and Harry McWilliams. He did however, renew acquaintances after twenty-four years with an old comrade, Ex-Sergt. W. J. Cottrell, who was engaged with him in clerical duties with the Regimental Depots Group in Witley Camp, England. LAC. Kennedy has come east after two years of service on the Pacific coast. His father Thomas Kennedy, who will be 80 in October, resides in Guelph.

Low-Priced Hansard

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

For the sum of three dollars anyone may obtain a subscription to the daily edition of the debates of the Canadian House of Commons. This verbatim report of the proceedings of Parliament, is usually referred to as Hansard, after Luke Hansard, an English printer who flourished at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century.

After serving an apprenticeship as a printer, Luke Hansard arrived in London in 1772 with a guinea in his pocket. He obtained a position as compositor in the office of a Mr. Hughes, who was printer to the House of Commons. By 1800 the business was in Hansard's hands. The amount of parliamentary printing eventually became so great that he gave up all private printing except when Parliament was not in session. He acquired a high reputation for the promptitude and accuracy with which he printed government papers.

The name and the tradition of Hansard are perpetuated in the printing of the debates of the Canadian Parliament. In the Canadian Hansard the subscriber has access to a great mass of miscellaneous information, ranging from the location of beds for the culture of oysters, to the number of pounds of mail carried by Trans-Canada Air Lines.

In this mausoleum of parliamentary oratory are flashes of humor and wit and bad temper, as well as statements of policy that will determine the future of the Dominion. The subscriber to Hansard may be assured of getting his money's worth.

Too Many Deer

(Minneapolis Star-Journal)

For more than a year deer have been damaging apple trees in Houston County in Southeastern Minnesota. Throughout the southern part of the state the animals have been appearing in increasing numbers. Recently a deer impaled itself on the fence at Lakewood Cemetery in Minneapolis.

A century ago Southern Minnesota was the habitat of deer. It was only when men settled there and Northern Minnesota forests were opened by extensive logging operations that the deer moved. Now, as their number increases and their natural browse is killed off by too close feeding, deer are turning south.

In 1932 a deer census indicated 600,000 animals in the state. Game authorities warned that this was more than Northern Minnesota could feed. The number increased until the severe Winter of 1936-37, when more than 200,000 deer were killed by starvation. A census in 1937 estimated 400,000 deer in Minnesota, about the right number for the food and refuge available. But there has been a rapid increase since. Last fall the number was estimated at close to 700,000.

War Pictures

(New York Times)

Dealers in words can't help being a little envious of the war pictures. The writer strains for the right adjective. The picture tells so much so directly, precisely, effortlessly. Here are our boys landing in Sicily, some of them looking as if they were on an excursion up the Hudson. Here are the landing barges, the half tracks, the supplies, the tanks, the shattered ancient cities of Sicily. Here are the bombs falling on Rome, forever suspended (in the photographs) like modern swords of Damocles over Mussolini's head. Here they fall precisely on the target, and it doesn't take much imagination to hear the rending boom of their explosion.

We list the pictures, but we don't describe them. We bow to the impatient dictum, "Photography makes description obsolete". When that probably apocryphal Chinese said, "One picture is worth a thousand words", he was probably referring to pictures like those—pictures of action, story-telling pictures, pictures that need no descriptive footnotes. When the surface action is what counts the camera is superb. In other cases the written word still has its uses.

Remarkable as the war pictures are, it is possible that we won't see the greatest of them until the fighting is ended. Some of them are military secrets, some of them must be too heart-rending to show now. This is the best photographed war in history. We're glad the camera men are doing so well ,because it may be, as we hope, the last big war they will ever aim their lenses at.

Why Gas Restrictions Have Become Necessary

(Port Arthur News Chronicle)

An infantry division today has 11,000 times the automotive power the same unit would have required in World War I, George A. Renard points out in the Bulletin of the U.S. National Association of Purchasing Agents, and as a result two-thirds of the tonnage of supplies has to be devoted to petroleum products, leaving only one-third for food, munitions, armaments, and everything else.

"So", he remarks, "any invasion plan must be based on petroleum products, and any loosening of restrictions on their non-essential use will have to wait for that unconditional surrender of Fortress Europe".

A box of matches brought to England from Sicily by a seaman brought $500 in an auction at a London theatre. The money went into the Merchant Navy Comforts Service.

Hydro meets Nature's Challenge
ELECTRICITY IS A WAR WEAPON Save it!

SUMMER or winter, when nature cuts loose with a blitzkrieg of wind, torrential rains, lightning, ice, sleet or snow most people hurry for cover . . . and stay there. But not Hydro maintenance crews. For them a storm is the zero hour . . . and task forces go forth to battle.

- Last winter's sleet storm in Eastern Ontario is but one example of their work. Hours of freezing rain followed by a blizzard sheathed the district in ice and snow. Streets and roads were blocked by a fantastic tangle of poles, trees and wire. Hundreds of Hydro poles were down. Country roads blocked with snow.
- Within a few hours over 200 Hydro men were on the job. Supplies were rushed to strategic points. Men and trucks went to work . . . line breaks were repaired, broken poles replaced, wire restrung. Point by point the battling "storm troopers" restored the flow of Hydro to war production plants, factories, farms and homes . . . pushed relentlessly ahead, day and night, until the job was done.
- The work of Hydro maintenance crews is one of unrelenting vigilance. Power must go through regardless of conditions. Across Ontario, Hydro men are on the alert twenty-four hours a day . . . ready, at all times, to combat any storm . . . ready to meet any emergency . . . ready to stay on the job until power is again flowing . . . doing their part in helping Ontario's war-geared industries speed the supply of Victory munitions to the battle fronts of the world.

REDS OVERWHELM NAZI DEFENCES AT SEVSK

Hundreds of Tons Of Bombs Dumped On Nazidom Centre

Greatest Force Ever Sent Over Germany Practically Obliterates Targets Set for Bombers—Thirty-Six Bombers Lost in Night Assault

CANADIAN CREWS TAKE PART

(By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Aug. 28 (AP)—Immense formations of British and Canadian bombers said by coastal observers to be the greatest force ever sent over Germany bashed Nuremberg last night, throwing down hundreds of tons of explosives on that southern German industrial city and centre of Nazidom. Squadrons from the Canadian bomber group were among the raiders.

The Air Ministry called it a "very heavy attack"—which mean the British and Canadians threw in an assault intended virtually to obliterate the targets.

It was a night of wide operations from this great air base—with R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Mosquito attacks on the Ruhr, fighter and intruder sweeps against railways and Axis airfields in France and the Low Countries. Thirty-six bombers, two of them Canadian, were reported lost from the night's activities.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio reported the R.A.F. was over Northern France again this morning, but there was no confirmation of this.

The Nuremberg attack was the second major assault of the week by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., Berlin having been blasted on a colossal scale Monday night, and with fire and bursting steel last night's raid answered the declaration of Nazi labor chief Robert Ley:

Well-Protected

"Owing to its formidable position, Nuremberg is well-protected against air attacks."

It was a round-trip flight of about 1,100 miles—an operation of such tremendous forces as to stir the whole of Britain and particularly coastal watchers, who heard the unbroken, muted growl of bomber engines for more than two hours. There was wide unofficial agreement the R.A.F. ant R.C.A.F. never before had thrown so much at the enemy across the Channel at one time.

Nuremberg, which has great Diesel plants and motor and electrical works, plainly had joined Berlin on the list of German cities to get the Hamburg treatment. It was last hit Aug. 10, and after that attack it was estimated 45,000 had been made homeless and 2,500 had been killed.

In the Aug. 10 raid about 1,500 tons of high explosives and incendiaries were dropped on the city. There was every indication last night's tonnage was much greater.

The German radio in a second broadcast claimed 43 British planes were shot down over Nuremberg saying that "this number is expected to be increased." It added "Damage was done to buildings and the population suffered losses."

A third series of Nazi bulletins—they were issued as thickly as on the day after the last Berlin attack—upped the figure of British plane losses to "at least 62."

Berlin spoke of "American terror planes" participating with the British and Canadians on the raid, but there was nothing in London to suggest the American air force actually took part.

16 Enemy Planes Downed

Shortly before the British and Canadian formations swept out, United States heavy bombers, and R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. fighters returned from large scale attacks against Axis airfields in France. Sixteen enemy fighters were reported destroyed in this daylight foray.

Nuremberg, in Southeast Germany 525 miles from Britain, has been raided seven times previously, the last on Aug. 10 when R.A.F. and Canadian bombers struck, sixteen planes were lost in that attack, but all R.C.A.F. aircraft returned safely.

Vast Pincer Movement May Cut Japan From Conquered South Islands

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Delhi, Aug. 28 (AP).—A vast pincer movement to cut off Japan from all her newly-acquired southern islands was regarded as a possibility here today as a result of the Quebec conference decision to lay new emphasis on this theatre.

At one end would be Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Supreme Allied Commander for Southeast Asia, and at the other Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

A glance at the map shows the possibility. Part of the pincer operation already is underway from MacArthur's side. As it looks from this end, it would be the war's most widespread battle for air bases.

Lay one end of a ruler on Burma and the other end on the Truk Islands, big Japanese naval and air bastion north of New Guinea. It will give a picture of the obvious line of attack open to the Allies without undertaking the long jobs of recapturing 10,000 islands, one by one.

Directly on the line is Canton, on the Chinese coast, with a hinterland highly suitable for airports. From such airports land-based airplanes could attack Japanese supply lines leading to her forces in all her southern islands, and make the holding of them extremely costly.

Bases Obvious Targets.

Japanese air bases along the coast of Burma and China and in the Truk islands all are obvious targets.

Into this picture comes Lord Louis as the new southeast Asia commander. It gives the Allies their greatest opportunity of compelling Japan to spread her air force over an extremely wide range to fend off attacks which can be timed to come from either end of the pincers.

Any attack launched on Burma would draw Japanese forces away from MacArthur's end, or at least reduce the number of reserves available.

The reconquest of Burma can be only incidental to its importance in the vast pincer movement. With Burma air bases in Allied possession, land-based aircraft would be in a position to protect any fleet operations against the Malay peninsula.

Such a move would virtually eliminate Singapore as a Japanese naval base for conquest of Burma, or even the north part of it, also would afford wider protection for a supply airline from India to support the operations necessary to gain and hold air bases along the China coast.

ITALIAN RAILWAY YARDS HAMMERED BY U.S. AIRMEN

Locomotives Works At Benevento Under Heavy Blows, Vital Links Are Hit

AXIS PLANES DOWNED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 28—(AP)—Southern Italy's entire railway system has been disorganized by relentless Allied bombings, with train traffic brought almost to a standstill, it was disclosed at headquarters today.

The railroads are a kingpin in Italy's defences.

The announcement followed a heavy blast by United States heavy bombers yesterday at railroad yards at Sulmona nearly 100 miles east of Rome for the first time, and medium bomber attacks on congested freight yards and locomotive works at Benevento near Naples.

At the same time, other medium bombers bombed the rail yards at Castera also in Naples vicinity, and light and medium bombers including fighter bombers, attacked targets at Ca Anzaro, Sibari, Cetraro and Paola.

20 Enemy Planes Shot Down.

Enemy fighter resistance increased over the vital rail centres, and 20 enemy planes were shot down, Allied headquarters declared.

The worst beating was administered to the Germans by the medium bombers, which sent 16 Nazi planes crashing to the ground out of a total of 40 to 50 fighters which sought to turn back the bombers and their escort.

Almost two dozen fighters also pounced on the heavy bombers which likewise were escorted by fighters.

In the Caserta attack, 35 to 45 fighters came up to intercept the bombers, but they were driven off by fighters.

Gun Positions Pounded.

The day's operations also included attacks by fighter-bombers on gun positions near Reggio Calabria from which the enemy has been shelling the Messina area of Sicily, and the R.A.F. Wellingtons followed up last night by pounding the freight yards at Salerno.

All the day and night operations cost the Allies nine planes.

(The Italian communique broadcast by Rome and recorded by The Associated Press admitted "considerable damage to Salerno", and claimed Italian fighters shot down six Allied planes, the Germans bagged seven more, while three others were downed by anti-aircraft guns.)

The heavy bombers concentrated their attack on Sulmona, vital link in Italy's east coast rail line extending down to the heel and toe, in 12 minutes, dropping many tons of high explosives on the freight yards, munition stores, locomotive sheds, repair shops, warehouses, railway cars and the station.

Many explosions rose from what bomber crewmen believed at a loaded train, and fires crackled in the target area.

Blockbusting at Salerno

The Wellingtons unloaded two-ton blockbusters the Salerno yards crewmen reported "excellent concentration" of explosives on the target.

The entire length of the Benevento railroad yards was straddled by bombs from the medium bombers, with other explosives striking the locomotive works.

One formation of medium bombers destroyed 11 Messerschmitt 109s and two Italian fighters. Another formation got three Messerschmitts.

R.A.F. and American medium bombers teamed up for their longest journey over Italian soil to hammer the road and rail junction of Catanzaro, the bottleneck linking the east and west coastal transportation systems in the centre of the toe of Italy. With Kittyhawk escorts, they raked the road north of the town, and set off big explosions, going over in four separate formations. Ground fire was intense, but they met no fighters.

Three other Boston formations bombed gun positions and strongpoints at Reggio Calabria.

The War Today— Allies Elated on Appointment Of Mountbatten for S. E. Asia

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The extraordinary enthusiasm being exhibited by the Allied nations over the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme commander for Southeast Asia is at once a tribute of confidence in his leadership and an expression of relief that, as the Chinese put it, "measures planned for the destruction of Japan are being implemented."

Specifically, the designation of this 43-year-old expert in combined operations — invasions involving land, sea and air forces—is taken generally to mean that at long last the Allies are getting set to invade Burma from India, across the Bay of Bengal.

Chinese Elated

Small wonder the Chinese are elated at the prospect of re-opening the Burma Road, to restore their lifeline to the outside world. They were terribly disappointed that the operation wasn't carried out last winter, as I learned on my visit to Chungking the first of this year.

The Chinese are in dire need of supplies of every description, both military and civilian. It's one of the world's wonders that they've been able to hang on so long. It would be dangerous to bank on their ability to continue indefinitely without the major assistance which can be supplied only by the re-opening of the Burmese back-door.

Mountains and Jungle

Readers often ask why the Allies have to invade Burma by sea—why the invasion can't be carried out from India by land. The mountainous nature of the terrain, and the heart-breaking jungles, along the Indo-Burmese border preclude big scale military operations. There are places where small contingents of troops can operate—on the coast, for instance, and up north where a military road cuts through the mountains at Imphal—but the main attack must be amphibious, supported by air.

The youthful new commander for Southeast Asia has, in his always vigorous way, flung his six feet four of hard muscle into his new job with a rush. That's good to see, but we shouldn't conclude from the announcements and the preparations that an invasion of Burma is going to take place next week or next month.

Monsoon

The monsoon deluge, which since April has been flooding Burma, won't be over until October. It then will be several weeks before things dry up to the point where one would expect the Allies to be ready for the attack, if indeed it's their intention to carry out the operation this year.

FIFTEEN GERMANS OF 19 ESCAPEES NOW RECAPTURED

Search Continues in Summer Resort District Near Kingston.

ALL TAKEN QUIETLY

(By Robert R. Robinson, C.P. Staff Writer)

Kingston, Aug. 28 (CP) — Two more German prisoners were captured today, bringing to 15 the total of those caught since 19 men escaped from Fort Henry prison on Thursday night. The latest to be caught were Domnick Heinz, 21, and Hans August Rhomberg, 21.

Their capture, shortly before 11 a.m., followed the apprehension before dawn today at Brewers Mills, 16 miles northeast of here, of Gerhardt Knoepfel, 22, and left only four still at large.

Heinz and Rhomberg were captured in a barn at Barriefield village, within half a mile of Fort Henry when a farm woman heard a noise in a barn and reported it to the authorities.

Meanwhile more than a thousand soldiers and police who have been on duty since Thursday almost without rest continued their search for the remaining prisoners, centering in the summer resort district north and east of Kingston.

Japanese Change Attitude in Battle

Guadalcanal, Aug. 26 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Japanese unwillingness to stand and die when trapped in a hopeless position was cited by Rear Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson, Commander of United States amphibious forces in the South Pacific today as a possible change in the enemy's battle attitude.

"They quit Kiska in the Aleutians and Bairoko, New Georgia," he said. "That may indicate their changed attitude because the enemy did not quit at Munda, New Georgia or at Attu in the North Pacific.

"The Japanese no longer stay and die wwhen they are placed in a hopeless position," he emphasized.

PIKE IS FINALLY SHOT

Strathroy, Ont., Aug. 28 (CP)—Mrs. Robina Denstead had a tough battle with a 12 1-2-pound pike in the Sydenham River but she won—after a friend had brought her husband's shotgun from her home and dispatched the fish with a blast through the head.

JAP RESISTANCE IN NEW GEORGIA HAS CEASED

American Troops Occupy Bairoko Harbor on Thursday Last.

JAPANESE FLEE

By OLEN CLEMENTS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 28—(AP)—Gen. Douglas McArthur announced today that all Japanese resistance has ceased on New Georgia in the Central Solomons.

The bitterly-contested campaign there ended Thursday when American troops pushing up from the captured Munda airfield 12 miles to the south occupied Bairoko harbor. Apparently the remnants of the Japanese garrison which had held out there since Munda fell Aug. 5 succeeded in fleeing by night in barges across the Kula gulf to the enemy's base of villa on Kolombangara.

Vila's garrison also in imperiled, by the recent surprise occupation by American troops of Vella Lavella Island above Kolombangara.

In the final occupation of Bairoka, large stores, including much food and some vehicles, were seized. There were no reports of Japanese prisoners.

Occupy Small Islands

Today's communique also disclosed elements of the Allied forces have occupied small islands off Munda in the vicinity of Baanga. Until a few days ago, the Japanese were shelling the airfield from Baanga Island.

In northeastern New Guinea, where the fall of the Salamaua airdrome appears imminent, Australian and American troops are infiltrating Japanese position from the west and some have made contact with the enemy at the southwestern end of the field.

Air action was centered in the Solomons. In the vicinity of Vila, medium bombers, torpedo bombers and dive bombers attacked gun positions and supply barge hideouts.

Other barges were set afire north of Kolombangara near Choseul Island.

One hundred and 50 miles above New Georgia on Southern Bougainville, four-engined bombers, escorted by fighters, attacked Japan's big air base of Kahili in a daylight raid last Wednesday. Four enemy fighters were shot down.

BULGARIAN KING SAID RECOVERING FROM ILLNESS

'It Appears Certain' Says Berne Story, Consequence Will Be Abdication

POLITICAL CRISIS

London, Aug. 28 (CP) — The condition of King Boris of Bulgaria "continues to be serious", the Berlin radio reported today in a D.N.B. dispatch from Sofia.

A communique quoted by the broadcast which was recorded by The Associated Press said the 49-year-old sovereign "had a quiet night" but that "lung disturbances had not yet been eliminated."

Another D.N.B. dispatch reported that all members of the Bulgarian cabinet, high military officers and members of the King's civilian and military entourage attended services today at the Alexander Nevski Cathedral in Sofia at which prayers were offered for the king's recovery.

An earlier Berlin report said the King was suffering from angina pectoris and was being treated by specialists sent from Germany by Hitler.

A dispatch from Ankara said a brief announcement of the king's illness made in a Bulgarian broadcast led to the belief in some Turkish quarters the king may have been the victim of an assassination attempt.

Istanbul heard wholly-unverified reports that the king suffered a heart attack after an unpleasant two-day conference at the headquarters of Hitler during which the Nazi leader became enraged and attempted to strike the monarch. Hitler was said to have demanded Bulgarian support in the war against Russia.

BBC said last night in a broadcast recorded by CBS that "the king's illness is causing a political crisis, as his departure from the scene would considerably embarrass Germany at the present moment."

Berne, Aug. 28 — (AP) — A Sofia dispatch to the Gazette De Lausanne said today "it appeared certain" the illness of King Boris of Bulgaria "would have as a consequence his abdication."

It said Premier Bogdan Filov was already working on the problem of succession. The telephoned dispatch passed the censorship at Vienna. It guardedly declared the nature of the illness was unknown.

6 NEW COMMANDS IN ROYAL NAVY

Among Flag Officers in New Commands are Two Aircraft Carrier Experts.

London, Aug. 28 —(CP Cable)—New commands for six Royal Navy Flag officers were announced last night, involving two of Britain's foremost aircraft carrier experts, Rear-Admiral A. W. La Touche Bisset and Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur St. George Lyster.

None of the six new commands was specified but they were said to be important and probably to foreshadow new naval moves in the near future.

Admiral Bisset, formerly commander of the Aircraft Carriers Ark Royal Glorious and Formidable, and Rear-Admiral Clement Moody, a gunnery specialist, were given sea-going jobs while Admiral Lyster was given a shore appointment at home. Admiral Lyster, former Chief of Naval Services, commanded the carriers which covered the North African landings late last year.

The other appointments included shore commands abroad to Rear-Admirals A. M. Peters, G. J. A. Miles and D. B. Fisher. Admiral Fisher formerly commanded the battleship Nelson and headed the military mission to Moscow from une, 1942, until early this year.

Admiral Moody also has seen carrier service. He was in command of the carrier Eagle from 1937 until 1939.

Part of Russian Program to Drive Nazis to Dnieper R.

Attack Apparently Aimed at Cutting Kiev-Bryansk Railway Near Zernovo

ASSAULT GAINS FORCE

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Russian army's westward drive across the Ukraine has pushed the Germans back another 15 miles and reached the Psel River, a tributary of the Dnieper, 100 miles west of Kharkov, the army newspaper Red Star disclosed today.

This new advance placed Soviet troops 15 miles west of Zenkov, the farthest point previously announced as gained by the Russians in their westward push.

Only a few hours earlier a Soviet communique announced that Russian forces had struck toward the west in a new sector, overwhelming the German defences at Sevsk, midway between and west of Orel and Belgorod.

Nazis Withdraw Across River

Red Star said the Germans withdrew across the Psel to the west bank of the river after the Russians forced them to evacuate Lebedin, 25 miles north of Zenkov.

After blowing up bridges over the Psel and leaving the Russians in control of the east bank, the Germans appeared to be attempting to erect a powerful defence line on the west bank in an effort to halt the Red Army offensive there.

Russian occupation of the east bank of the upper stretch of the Psel exposed Poltava, German base 45 miles south of Zenkov, to a flank attack. The Russians were reported descending betweenthe Psel and Vorska Rivers which have parallel courses less than 40 miles apart and flow southward into the Dnieper.

Important Event

Red Star said the Russian approach to the east bank of the Psel and the development of a battle between the Psel and Vorskla constituted "the most important event of recent days in the sector northwest of Kharkov."

(A German communique, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said German troops in the Kharkov area and southwest of Orel were engaged yesterday "in heavy defence fighting against superior Soviet infantry and tank formations." The Russians suffered heavy losses, including 161 tanks destroyed, the communique said.

(The Nazi war bulletin failed to make the usual claim all attacks were repulsed but it insisted "enemy formations which had broken through were cut off by energetic counter-attacks and were encircled.")

The new drive resulting in the capture of Sevsk is the fourth major push undertaken by the Red Army since the summer offensive began July 5.

The new advances place the Russians almost 500 miles from Stalingrad, where last winter's far-reaching drive began, and has carried them to a point more than half-way from Stalingrad to the Polish border.

In capturing Sevsk, the war bulletin said, the Russians wiped out more than 5,000 Germans and took 700 more prisoners. Soviet artillery, tanks and airplanes all were massed in a gigantic attack.

Aim To Cut Railway.

The Sevsk attack, part of the general Russian program to push the Nazis back to the Dnieper river, their main line of defence, is apparently aimed toward cutting the Kiev-Bryansk railroad in the vicinity of Zernovo or Makovo just inside the northern boundary of the Ukraine. Zernovo is 20 miles to the northwest and Makovo 30 miles to the southwest of Sevsk.

From this point the column could continue westward, swing to the north to the support of other Soviet divisions nearing Bryansk from the east or swing south toward Kiev.

On the Kharkov front, 130 miles south of Sevsk, Russian units captured the town of Kotelvo, 33 miles from the German base of Poltava, the communique said.

It was here the Red forces passed the half-way point to the Polish border.

Bitterly Contest Advance

The Nazis bitterly contested the advance, the bulletin reported, and 3,000 Germans were killed in the battle. At Aktyrka, 60 miles northwest of Kharkov, 2,000 more Germans were killed in a two-day battle. Russians advancing south of Kharkov were reported to be in the vicinity of Zmiev

The Russians said the advance upon Brynsk, a major German bastion at the northern end of the central front, had been considerably slowed as the troops entered an area of forest and swamp land. In addition, Nazi troops were resisting strongly. The Russians were about 25 miles east of the city, the communique said.

Southwest of Voroshilovgrad in the Donets Basin the Russians were advancing with the support of the Red Air Force which attacked the German base and rail junction at Kramatorskaya, the communique said.

Canada's Favorable Trade Balance To End of July $604,000,000

Ottawa, Aug. 28 (CP)—Value of Canadian exports reached an all-time high of $303,600,000 in July, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced today. The previous high figure for one month was $269,000,000, in December 1942.

The July figure was approximately four times the value of any peacetime monthly trade and about 50 per cent higher than July, 1942.

Mr. MacKinnon said about 75 per cent of July exports was war materials and the new record was "the direct result of the organized production of war needs from coast to coast."

"The effectiveness of Canada's participation in the war is seen in the spectacular growth of Canadian trade," he said.

The minister's statement disclosed that in the first seven months of 1943 Canadina exports—mainly war products—reached $1,581,400,000, compared with $1,295,300,000 in the corresponding period of 1942, an increase of $286,100,000 or 22 per cent.

Of the seven-month total exports $574,300,000 went to the United Kingdon and $209,300,000 to other countries of the British Commonwealth. The amount to the United States was $612,700,000 and to other countries $185,100,000.

"Imports during July were almost $151,000,000, but have not varied much in the last two years, the total for the first seven months of 1943 being $990,500,000 compared with $982,000,000 in the same period of 1942," said Mr. MacKinnon.

Canada's favorable balance of trade for the seven months of 1943 reached the "very large figure" of $604,000,000, only $137,000,000 less than the favorable balance of trade for the whole of 1942.

Net exports of non-monetary gold during the first seven months of 1943 amounted to nearly $87,700,000.

"This is additional to the balance of trade, so that our real favorable balance is about $700,000,000," said the minister.

WOMAN SECURING RATION BOOKS LOST KEY TO HOUSE

It was possibly cold beans for some tired worker on Friday evening when he came home from a long day's work in the factory to find his wife had been a bit tardy in getting the evening meal prepared. The Mrs. had a legitimate excuse for the delay however. She had stood a greater part of the afternoon in line at the city hall waiting her turn to get the family ration books and when she arrived home found she had no housekey—it had been lost.

The reason the key was missing was owing to fact she had opened her purse while on the city hall steps only to have the key drop unnoticed at her feet. It was picked up and taken into the city treasurer's office.

16,000 Ration Books Issued In Three Days

Slightly more than 16,000 ration books have been issued at the Belleville City Hall up to Friday night, it was announced this morning by the local ration board chairman, Mr. Harold Bateman. On Friday afternoon the same number as on Thursday were issued—6,600.

With another rush on the part of residents to acquire their ration books expected this afternoon, ration board officials are of the opinion that the number to be issued in Belleville will exceed the total during the last instance when No. 2 books were distributed. At that time slightly more than 19,000 books were issued. Saturday is the last day for books to be distributed.

Warm appreciation of the assistance being given local ration boards in the distribution of the new ration books by hundreds of women serving as volunteer workers in different Eastern Ontario communities was voiced today by Edwin C. Cossitt, Prices and Supply Representative, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, who said that without such assistance the distribution of the books which is being carried out so smoothly, would have been enormously complicated.

"The Board and especially its Ration Administration," said Mr. Cossitt, "is everlastingly grateful to all those who have again come forward to act as volunteers in this distribution campaign and who have often done so at considerable personal inconvenience. Without their co-operation and help, the distribution of the books could not possibly have been carried out in such an efficient and capable manner nor could it have been compressed into such a short period of time. Every one of these volunteers, wherever she is surving or in whatever capacity, has earned the thanks of both this Board and their fellow-citizens for a fine piece of national service that is being particularly well done".

A large offering of gladioli on the Belleville market Saturday reminded local residents that Sunday, Aug. 28, had been designated as Decoration Day. A large number of vendors offered the flowers at prices up to 40 cents the bunch.

Fresh eggs firmed slightly on the market with Grade "A" being quoted at 48 cents the dozen and mediums at 45 cents. The fowl offering was not large but was of good quality with prices ranging up to $2.40 each for large birds. Price per pound for mature fowl was approximately 37 cents while friers sold at 40 cents.

Plums and gages were quite freely offered with Bradshaws and Burbanks bringing 20 cents the berry box or $1.10 per six-quart basket. Blue gages, and also the green variety sold at 20 cents the box, while peaches sold at $1.30 per basket; Clapp pears at $1 per basket and summer pears at 60 cents.

Onions, beets and carrots brought ten cents a bunch; string beans 10 cents a box; tomatoes $1.25 bushel, muskmelons 10 to 50 cents and watermelons the same figure. Celery was ten and fifteen cents with cabbages same. Gerhkin cucumbers sold for 75c basket and down to 35c for larger variety.

Decrease Shown In Many Crops

Toronto, Aug. 28 (CP) — Production of apples in Western Ontario is estimated at about 373,000 barrels, a seven per cent increase over 1942, in the fourth Ontario Department of Agriculture crop report issued today. The estimate is 10 per cent higher than that made in July.

The cherry crop is now placed at 102,500 bushels, 61 per cent less than last year. The report says that earlier estimates of tree mortality will be increased as many trees are dying.

There is no change from the previous estimate of the grape crop—22 per cent decrease from last year, which, however, still indicates a crop of about 28,150 tons. Vineyards are generally in good condition with heavy vine and foliage growth and berries fixing satisfactorily.

Despite excellent sizing of fruit, the peach crop now shows an estimated decrease of 73 per cent from 1942 or five per cent less than the July estimate.

Stranger Causes Flurry on Arrival

A flurry of excitement was caused in local police circles this morning when residents near the Canadian National Railways station suspected as one of the escaped German prisoners a transient who got off an early morning train from Toronto.

The suspect was dressed in rather rough clothes and was carrying a battered suitcase when his Teutonic appearance led residents to believe he might be one of Germans who escaped Thursday evening from Fort Henry. The man was detained at the corner of Bleecker avenue and Station street while a hurry-up call was sent in to the local city police station.

Police Constable Taylor answered the call and speeding to the scene brought the man to the police station. On questioning it was learned by police officers the man's name was Albert Schultz who claimed as his birth place Matheson in Northern Ontario. He was in possession of a registration card proving his identity. He readily admitted being German descent but stated his mother was a Canadian and that he had lived all his life in this country.

Upon learning that the man had served time at Burwash on a charge of car theft, Police Chief Probert detained the man on a nominal charge of vagrancy and he was locked up in the police cells.

Canada's Foreign Policy Embraces Seven Objectives

Geneva Park, Ont., Aug. 28 (CP)—Although recent elections show "great division" in Canada, it is to be hoped that the "great majority" of Canadians see that their interest lies in supporting a seven-point Canadian foreign policy, Brooke Claxton, Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, said here last night in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Institute on public affairs.

He said Canadian foreign policy—as declared by Prime Minister King and other leaders—involved winning the war; the promotion of friendship between Great Britain and the United States, and their association with the Soviet Union and China in leading the United Nations.

The Dominion's foreign policy objectives also included the establishment when possible of the organization of the United Nations; support for the organization of force against aggression; the defence of Great Britain and this continent; the creation of measures to promote trade, and the provision to nations of representation on administrative boards.

Were a clearly defined foreign policy lacking, there could be no unity in a nation, Mr. Claxton added. Canada has a "vital interest" in the friendship and co-operation of Britain and the United States.

There would be "disaster" after the war should Canada be unable to obtain American dollars to maintain her trade position. That could happen were Britain to adopt a bilateral trading policy, or if the United States adopted a policy of self-sufficiency.

The functional basis of representation was a compromise between representation of all nations, great and small, and domination by a few great powers. Under functional representation, those nations would be represented which could contribute most to the particular object being sought.

Col. P. H. Wills, congratulates W.O.1 John Silver, R.C.A.F., upon the occasion of the 2,000th blood donation received by the Belleville Kiwanis Blood Clinic. On June 3rd, 1942, Col. Wills donated the first unit of blood to the Clinic and on August 19th, 1943, W.O.1 Silver made the 2,000th contribution made by R.C.A.F. personnel. Col. Wills donated the building, which houses the Clinic as the expression of a patriotic gesture he feels very deeply. At total of 8,719 individual donations have been received since the inception of the Clinic and the greatest praise goes to its benefactor for the time and effort he has expended during its short lifetime.

Prisoners of War Will Be Used For Non-War Jobs

Washington, Aug. 28 — (AP) — Terms for increased use of the one growing supplyy yof labor—prisoners of war—for non-war jobs have been worked out by the United States war department and the War Manpower Commission.

With a mounting number of requests for prisoner war labor in lumber cutting, pulp and paper industry work and farming, it was suggested authoritatively many prisoners could perform these jobs. The United States Army has reported there are around 100,000 prisoners in America.

Hitherto, the War Department has contracted directly with employers in a relatively few cases for the service of prisoners, but the new agreement is expected to expedite hiring arrangements and fit them more closely into the picture of general labor needs.

The agreement provides that prisoners — who cannot be used in anything contributing directly to America's war effort — may be hired only at prevailing wages and working conditions, and only where stipulated efforts to hire other labor have failed to meet the need of workers.

While employers must pay prevailing wages to prevent efforts to obtain prisoners as "cheap labor" competing with other workers, the money will go to the United States government and the army will pay prisoners electing to work at the standard rate directed by international law.

The army is to provide guards and security measures, and it will allow prisoners to work only in localities where it figures it is practicable to set up prisoner camps.

Cheese Grades Hold Up Well

Cheese grades at both Belleville and Campbellford grading stations are holding up well according to Chief Dairy Grader J. L. Irwin who on Saturday announced that during the past week there had been a total of 10,470 cheese graded in the Central Ontario district.

At the Belleville grading stating there were 347 cheese grading 95, slightly more than during the previous week, while at Campbellford the number of cheese scoring top grade were 292. There were no cheese scoring 95 at Kingston, Peterboro or Lindsay, he stated.

Belleville station still showed a predominance in the number of cheese graded as compared to the other five grading stations, a total of 7,369 being graded here during the past week. Of this number there were 4,709 scoring 94 and 1,886 scoring 93. The number of second grade cheese totalled 118.

At the Kingston grading station there were a total of 1,163 graded while at Campbellford the number was 1,766. Gradings at Peterboro and Lindsay were 49 and 123 respectively.

FOUND SLEEPING IN BARN

Kingston, Aug. 28 (CP)—Gerhardt Knoepfel, 22, the 13th prisoner to be recaptured of the 19 who escaped from Fort Henry prison Thursday night, was taken before dawn today while sleeping in a barn near the highway at Brewers Mills, 16 miles northeast of Kingston.

Matthew Murray, farmer, noticed a pair of boots in a wheelbarrow near his barn and soldiers he called found Knoepfel asleep in the hay. Confronted by fixed bayonets, Knoepfel gave up meekly.

Lindsay, Aug. 28 —(CP)— The Lindsay Water Board has approved a plan to give domestic users of water a rebate on their payments. Bottleneck Occurs At Lake Head Says Newspaper

Fort William, Aug. 28 —(CP)— The Fort William Times-Journal in a newspage story Friday said "it was learned authoritatively" a shortage of labor, storage space and shipping facilities has resulted in a bottleneck here in the handling of grain from Western Canada.

The newspaper said there are between 4,000 and 4,500 cars of grain on the tracks in both the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railway terminals while the arrivals approximate 600 cars daily.

"The situation is such that officials are finding it most difficult to alleviate," the newspaper said. "However, it is pointed out that shipments from the west have been curtailed somewhat and both railways are taking care of only a certain number of cars a day in the west

"In July of this year there were 5,000 more arrivals than in July of last year. At the present rate it is expected that there will be nearly 10,000 more arrivals for the month of August than for the same month last year.

"Lake shipments have been fairly steady with approximately 1,000,000 bushels of grain being taken out daily. In addition about 100 cars of grain are being shipped by rail. Never before has there been such a large shipment of grain by rail in the summer time, it is said.

"The shortage of labor and the fact that many of the grain boats are carrying ore has caused a gradual accumulation of cars on the tracks in both terminals."

URGES ALLIED ATTACK IN WEST

London, Aug. 28 (CP)—The Russian army newspaper, Red Star, today urged an Allied land attack in the west, asserting that if the Germans thought they were under direct threat of invasion in the "near future they would hold 100 divisions instead of 45 for the defence of the front line extending from the north Cape to the Bay of Biscay."

The article was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet Monitor.

Series of Blows

These two attacks were only part of a series of blows dealt yesterday in the heaviest raids of the northwest Africa tactical air force since Messina's fall.

Dive-bombers destroyed a railroad junction at Sibari, and also hit the freight yards in the west coast ports of Paola and Cetraro. Seven direct hits were scored on repair shops at Paola and a train with 15 cars was set afire.

Today's communique said it had now been established that the naval vessel attacked by invaders off Italy Tuesday was not a cruiser but a smaller warship. One pilot set the ship afire, and blew off its stern.

LOON DIVES AT HERRING BAIT, GRABS AT FISH

Marmora Fishermen on Way Home Have Unique Experience.

LOON FREES SELF

Marmora, Aug. 28 (Special)—Two local anglers who have had all sorts of experiences in their many years of fishing had the most amusing experience of all on Wednesday evening.

They had been fishing without success down Crowe River below the bridge and were returning about supper time with live herrings on their lines for bait. Alphone Shannon who was one of the pair, noticed a loon dive into the water ahead of the boat. A few minutes later, Harold Nayler his companion who had about twenty-five feet of line out behind the boat, thought he had the prize fish of the season on his line judging by the tugging that was going on.

"I'll bet it was that loon I saw diving in the water," said his companion.

"Oh, heck! it can't be" said the man who was the more occupied for the minute. It later transpired that it was the loon which on reaching the surface of the water released itself.

Brendan Bracken Assails 'Unconscious Fifth Columnists'

New York, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Brendan Bracken, British minister of Information, assailed at a press conference Friday "unconscious Fifth Columnists" who he said fostered Nazi propaganda by spreading rumors that Soviet Russia might seek a separate peace with Germany.

"I don't think that Stalin's inability to attend conferences or the shifting of ambassadors to the United States and Great Britain implies any deal with Germany", Bracken said.

"There are a lot of unconscious Fifth Columnists who do grave harm in spreading rumors about a separate peace. Great Britain and Russia have a treaty governing this point, and Soviet Russia has never broken its word".

Bracken asserted "the greatest disservice that can be done to the United Nations is to spread the rumor that Russia may drop out of the war", and he added:

"I think that Stalin really cannot spare the time just now for conferences. It is highly insulting to Russia to suggest that she might drop out of the war. How indignant she would be if that suggestion were made about Great Britain or the United States. It is of the most importance that we maintain unity among the United Nations".

Hess of 'Low Mentality'

Bracken declared Britain has received no worthwhile information from Rudolph Hess, the Hitler deputy who flew to England and was interned there. He described Hess as "a Nazi of very low mentality" whose opinions were "not of the slightest interest to the British", and that:

"He just babbled like the usual Nazi stooge".

Gen. McNaughton Speaks

General McNaughton has given Canadians knowledge and assurance by the praise he has given the competent character of the training which the Canadian army had received and the competent way with which the campaign in Sicily has been carried out. This embodies his statement that the casualties in Sicily were "extraordinarily small for a campaign of the type fought".

General McNaughton is the expert, thorough and alert to every development. He pointed out that the training was sound and that Canadian army had scouts in various theatres of the war to report back to headquarters in Britain.

In his own language the campaign has given us "what I called the check and audit of our system." The Canadians dropped "right into gear" in Sicily. Canadians had received effective direction and had been handled with sympathy and understanding.

The general's comments on the mass use of artillery to support troops reveals the principle he used in the First Great War that "you get results in battles and campaigns by mass concentrations of guns."

The story in Friday's issue of newspapers revealed the thoroughness of the commander of the Canadian Army overseas. He went through the ground covered by the Canadians in the advance from Pachino to Mount Etna and saw the great battlefield or series of battlefields. From that he could draw lessons, as he said, not only for the Canadians in Sicily but for the advantage of the larger forces in England of which the First Division is a part.

Coercion of Germans at Home

Heinrich Himmler is needed in the present situation in Germany, Goebbels is reported to have said in explanation of the expansion of the power given the Gestapo chief. "Never before in her history has Germany been in such deadly danger and coercion at home is necessary if Germany is to remain strong."

Himmler has been associated with the home front of Germany for long and as one of the leading architects of the terrible manifestation of national depravity of the Nazis, he should know the German people. The German people should likewise know this sinister minister of evil, a man with a record the foulest in history for stark brutality and innate cruelty. And they may well dread his appointment as minister of the Interior of the German Reich.

Goebbels has "let the cat out of the bag" if the people did not already know — Himmler is going to intensify the home front.

As the war proceeds and the danger to Germany of which Goebbels spake grows, the hand of cruelty is to be laid upon the oppressed lands, on lands associated with the Hun and on the German people themselves with the utmost tyranny.

The newspapers on Friday contained the story of the terrible cruelties practised against people in overrun lands as related in the booklet just issued, "Punishment for War Crimes." Arrests, tortures, hostages, wholesale massacres, mass deportations, forced labor, concentration camps and systematic starvation are some of the manifestation of the awful degradation which has control of Germany in its relation to the rest of the world.

Hmmler stands in the presence of these horrors, master demon of darkness and barbarity and prepares to increase to the utmost the force of brutal power over all of Europe he can touch.

European soil if it could speak would reveal countless graves of victims of Himmler and his refined cruelties. Every form of murder and anguish is known to this fiendish minister of Nazism.

It is no wonder the justice of humanity intends to bring Himmler and the rest of these agents of death and brutality to the judgment of this world.

The modern world has not before known such organized crime. The individual gangster in a city may have many crimes to his name but for unnumbered crimes one has to go to the Germany of Hitler and Himmler, who have no mercy, no heart, and possess just the total attraction of evil.

Himmler true to form of a criminal, accepts the new task to add to his crimes and is irresistibly drawn on to the abyss which awaits the Nazis and himself.

When the history of Germany in this war period is written in detail, one of the most awful pages will be read of total brutality as represented in Himmler.

The Germans who allowed this development to come fall under the awful gaze and the demon agents of Himmler. It is the home front of Germany that the brutal Minister of the Interior will work on.

Germany allowed this monster to grow but he will plague the Germans for it is so written in the history of the criminal. He who shows no mercy to a non-German of Europe will be certain to show none to a fellow Hun he condemns.

Hitler's Sea-Wolves Hit

The wolves of the sea, Hitler's U-boats, are not finding the bombing of merchantmen the gay adventure they might have thought it to be. Indeed life on a U-boat must be the most unpopular post a warlike German would like to have. Ten U-boats at least, sunk or damaged form the bag in thirteen air-sea battles with the U. S. air force. Three others were prevented from attacking allied shipping by being forced to dive.

The airplane, especially the long range bomber, has been telling a story of destruction to German submarines.

Neither under the waters of the sea or on the land are Hitler's forces safe for Allied air power has demonstrated its effectiveness on land and on the sea.

The United States air force like the Royal Air Force has been able to render the Allied Nations the utmost of service in neutralizing the enemy submarines.

OUT OF BENEFIT

(Manchester Guardian)

The roving cars of England they now taste of freedom's cup,
Their owners pouch no rotor arms nor lock
the blighters up,
But, O, in little garages throughout this rationed land
The static cars of England how impressively they stand!

Immobilized, immobilized the static cars remain
What time their owners move by bus or bicycle or train;
For roving and important cars the freer writ may run,
But not for little cars that used to buzz about for fun.

Since June went out a year ago the static cars have stood
Propped up at home in garages or sober lumps of wood;
Aye, perched on high, with batteries dry,
there stand they in their huts;
There is no petrol in their tanks or water round their guts.

But never mind; when Spring is kind and peace once more is here
The little cars will burst their bars and no doubt reappear;
As relics they will take the road; but till that day's at hand
The static cars of England, O, how patiently they stand!

Mr. King as Host to History

(Ottawa Journal)

We do not think that the choice of Quebec for this memorable conference was hit upon by chance. Mr. King, undoubtedly, brought Canada this gathering, and in doing so he not merely showed his historic sense but brought for all of us an enduring recognition of this country's part in the war. Nor does The Journal see much in the criticism of some that although the conference was held on Canadian soil Canad' part in it was a minor one. Mr. King was host to Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt and to the representatives of other Allies. In that capacity it was not his part to dictate the character of details of the conference; and it was less his part to push Canada too far into the forefront, or to put our place in the broader picture out of proportion. Mr. King seems to have sensed that accurately, and to have acted accordingly with measure and good taste.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

NEVER GIVE UP

Never give up if it's worth the doing!
Never give up if the end be right!
If it's a purpose that's worth pursuing,
Go for it, morning and noon and night!

Never give up though your best friends
drop you,
Saying that only a fool keeps on.
If it be worthy, let nothing stop you!
Stick to your cause till your strength is gone.

Never give up how so oft you blunder!
Failure is part of a man's career
Sink if you must, but don't stay under!
Keep a stout heart and persevere!

Out of their failures and sharp distresses,
Out of the swamps of despair and doubt,
Brave men have come to their best successes,
Never give up while your strength holds out.

Capital Closeups

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 28, CP)—A battered old motor, with more than a touch of glory about its worn pistons, is part of a National Research Council historical collection housed in Ottawa.

It is the engine used in the Silver Dart, first airplane to fly in the Empire, piloted by J. A. D. McCurdy on Feb. 23, 1909. After the initial flights at Baddeck, N.S., the machine was taken to Petawawa (Ont.) military camp, where it made several hops.

It crashed just before a young man named Lieut. A. G. L. McNaughton was booked to make a flight. The young officer now is a lieutenant-general, commander of the Canadian army overseas and president of the Research Council.

The motor was salvaged from the crash and used for menial tasks. It found its way back to the Atlantic Coast and was put into a fishing boat. The boat sank and the motor rested on the sea-bottom for a couple of years.

But it was ultimately located and salvaged. Brought to the Research Council Building here, it was overhauled. Mr. McCurdy, now living in Ottawa, went down to look it over, and entertained officials by recalling in detail the woes the pioneer endured with the old engine.

One of the notable sidelights of President Roosevelt's official visits to Quebec and Ottawa is the extreme protection provided to ensure his safety.

To the average Canadian it comes a bit odd to see heavily-armed plain clothes officers riding on the running board of the presidential car, running beside it as it moves slowly along a roadway, or taking up carefully pre-arranged guard positions whenever it stops.

The White House Secret Service men who accompany Mr. Roosevelt aren't just for show, either. They mean business. One of our colleagues watched the president change from one car to another while he was in Ottawa.

The change meant not only a transfer for Mr. Roosevelt but also one for a small arsenal of tommy-guns and other protective weapons.

Mr. Roosevelt's references to the post-war period in his speech on Parliament Hill are widely considered a sure indication that steps will sooner or later be launched to form some permanent organization of the wartime United Nations.

The president mentioned that at his Quebec conference with Prime Minister Churchill "there was much talk of the post-war world". He said that discussion was doubtless duplicated simultaneously by dozens of nations.

Then he spoke of the unanimity of the United Nations during the war, and the demonstrated fact that "concerted action can accomplish things."

"Surely," he said, "by unanimous action in driving out the outlaws and keeping them under heel forever, we can attain a freedom from fear and violence."

It is the phrase "keeping them under heel forever" which is taken in many quarters as an indication of intention to establish some permanent United Nations set-up.

Thomas Jefferson suggested that the United States should extend its jurisdiction from the three-mile limit to the Gulf Stream. Under date of Nov. 30, 1805, John Quincy Adams wrote in his dairy: "The President (Jefferson) mentioned a late act of hostility committed by a French privateer near Charleston South Carolina, and said that we ought to assume as a principle that the neutrality of our territory should extend to the Gulf Stream, which was a natural boundary, and within which we ought not to suffer any hostility to be committed".

Canada is now exporting practically no goods except those essential to the waging of war. With only about one half of one per cent of the world's population, Canada has become, among the United Nations, the third trading nation and the fourth in the production of war weapons.

That he became so by the feelings of his fingers, and hence all his faculties. Give, said they, only a hand to a horse, he would rival all the human powers. This I know to be groundless. The opossum, from its feeble, harmless, and helpless faculties, is almost extinct in Pennsylvania; and yet one that I killed on the island at Juniata, had as complete a hand, with four fingers and a thumb, as one of the human species".

Can You Really Farm With Your Gloves On?

Invasion of Young City Folk of the Rural Area Will Bring Many Surprises—Country is Good Place to Learn by Doing, With Accent on Doing.

(From the Christian Science Monitor Magazine)

The length of the pump handle has no bearing on the depth of the well, and rooster eggs are invariably much smaller than those from hens. The mustard that peppers the peas is a weed, makes fair greens, but is not a commercial crop. The top strand of a fence should be tightened first. All in all ,a wealth of such information—some of it useful—will be placed in the vicinity of city boys and girls who are going out this summer to help win the war by helping Farmer Brown. Most of these boys and girls, if recruited through well-meaning agencies, will be given many precepts before they start out. After they have gone home again they will find most of the precepts were a waste of time and that their choicest and more valuable memories involved complete surprises. The country is a good place to learn by doing, with the accent on doing.

A nation of great cities should, naturally, hold decent communion with its sources of supply. Huge centres of population should think highly of and have due regard for those who produce their food. Understanding of this sort has not been outstanding, but we are fast coming to it under wartime pressure. City people who lamented the scarcity of potatoes knew little of the economic ramifications of the shortage—a shortage that may honestly be doubted to have existed. It is highly humorous, but equally indicative, that New York's zoo includes a common milk-producing cow. But in the future our city folks are going to be closer to the facts of production. A great educational experience is about to take place, and we may expect a generation of urbanites who are interested in and aware of the ways and problems of the countryside.

As one who has attempted most of the pursuits grouped under farming, I am currently deriving amusement from the "Do's and Don't" being addressed to the innocent young things who are thus sacrificing their metropolitan sophisication on the altar of food production. The transition is from "worldly" to "earthy". But the difficulty with precepts lies in the lack of mutually understood terms. The city boy or girl can hear what I say, but until they've some dirt under their nails and some hay inside their overalls, they won't know exactly what I mean. If we can bridge the difference and send them back to their high-vaulted past with some rural trimmings, the beans will not have dried in vain and this nation shall have a new knowledge of freedom.

Consider for instance, the precept that cows should always be milked from the right side. It will be too bad if the city child accept this axiom as the all-inclusive truth. As a matter of fact, it needn't be so at all. I have a cow that can be milked from either side, or even from behind. She is a docile cow, and as long as I'm milking she doesn't care if school keeps or not. I believe I could bring in a full band and have it play Semper Fidelis in a minor key and she would let me milk if I stood on my head and braced my feet against her. Sometimes when I am milking disturbing things happen and she pays no attention—such as a hen flying through the tie-up in full squawk, followed by a dog in full cry, followed by a child in full Indian suit waving a pasteboard tomahawk and shouting, "Gelert Gelert! You naughty dog!"

On the other hand, we had a cow once who could not be milked from the left side. Indeed, we never could milk her at all without putting a chain over her knees, and holding her nose with our fingers. It took three people to milk her, one an expert dodger. We perfected our tactics until we got her so she would kick with only one leg at a time, and we sold her to the first customer, a man who still claims he was cheated.

For the most part, cows will want to be milked from only one side at a time, preferably the right—but the stipulation is a minimum of lore. It would be far better to inculcate in our boys and girls the useful knowledge that cows are pretty much of habit. What they do today they did yesterday and they'll do it all their lives. Their bad habits can be broken only by sustaining good habits. Regularity of chores instils in them respect for regularity, and if you have trained them to one-sided lactation you have an eternally one-sided cow. Gentleness, regularity, quiet and enough to eat are about all a cow asks for—these are things to teach city helpers. I never tell my help which side to milk on. I figure a cow will take care of that if she has a preference.

But that isn't all. After the summer is over, I'd like to know how many city helpers really milked cows—other than to try it out. On milk farms, production is so all important that fledgling milkers are shunted aside, because cows dislike being tickled. They like a strong hand that knows what's what and can get the milk speedily. Farmers won't want beginners fooling around their prize udders. Besides, if milking is any more than for home use machinery is bound to figure. In that event the city girl will probably wash equipment, and the city boy will pitch millet.

I've been explicit to make a point: milking a cow involves so much that it seems silly to emphasize precepts about which side to use, I hope the boys and girls learn those other things. I hope they can get back to their tenements and suburbs with an intelligent knowledge of dairy farming—so they can hold up a bottle of milk and tell their amazed parents what it's all about.

Another precept advises cotton gloves. This is sheer bosh, and I can prove it. There is a feel to dirt, a feel to a hoe-handle, a feel to all farm chores. There is also soap and water. And things like cotton gloves and knee pads and rubber cushions are in the way. A person wants to get his hands in the ground, it tells him things. He should enjoy feeling the warmth and moisture. These things are country things, things that deserve intimate contact. The best feature of cotton gloves is the speed with which they wear out.

Another precept is not to tease the bull. The paucity of this is complete. Children who tease bulls seldom do it for long at a time, and rarely more than once. I would never say it just that way myself, I'd rather school the child in the unique place a bull occupies in the herd, his value and purpose, his pedigree and records, his mannerisms and dispositions. If this led to disrespect and my help still tose the bull, I'd pack them back to the city one way or another.

No—I guess the advance information isn't a great part of the program. Most of the farmers around here, who are setting up extra beds for bean pickers and weed pullers, are looking forward to the summer with strange interest. They seem to feel an opportunity has come to them, a chance to tell their story firsthand. They're all laying out extra jobs for themselves, something to demonstrate when their pupils arrive. Nor will it be kindergarten stuff like always closing a gate, or not crying over dropped eggs, or leading a horse to water but not making him drink.

Instead city boys and girls can join in the operation of a vital industry—for war or peace, for them as well as the farmer. For the attentive ear and the discerning eye this summer holds advantages no schoolroom can ever duplicate. If the lessons are well learned our nation will have made a sturdy stride forward.

If not, I know what the farmers will say. They'll say what Hod Baker said when his two-day-old calf broke loose and chased after a dry cow. Hod yelled, "Go it, ye poor fool—ye'll find out the difference come supper time!"

Lovely Isle of Rest In the Pacific

(From the Melbourne (Australia) Argus)

Romantic coral islands, complete with all the conventional trappings of waving palms, blue lagoons and dazzling beaches, have apparently little to do with the war against the Japanese, but in New Guinea such an island has been put to excellent use by the army and is playing an important part in keeping men of the forces healthy.

Under the coconut palms a unit rest camp has been established to enable slightly injured or tired men to recuperate or to regain some of the sleep lost during long periods of shift work. In the months it has been in New Guinea the unit concerned has established a splendid record for hard and ceaseless work in conditions far from ideal, and men, after spending long arduous hours of heavy labor, began to feel the effect of such work in tropic climate. So the rest camp was built. The men usually spend two days on the island, and most of them regard it as not long enough.

"I'd like a week here," one soldier said as he left. "You know this island has got everything except Dorothy Lamour."

Theoretically, the island is a place where soldiers can gaze about and do nothing, but in practice they spend practically the whole day roaming the beaches or coral reef, swimming, fishing, or collecting shells and coral. You reach the island by a lugger manned by natives, and as romantic as anything every described by Ballantyne or Conrad.

Covered with low windswept trees and coconut palms, the island is bordered with beaches of white coral sand, and the sand runs down through glass-clear water to coral gardens alive with brilliant fish. Seawards a coral reef is pounded by surf. To complete the picture-book effect native lakatois drift acros sthe water, their sails contrasting with the black backcloth of mountains on the mainland. It is all very theatrical.

At the camp there is only one rule—punctuality for meals. After a late breakfast the men are free to do as they please. At low tide most popular spot is the coral reef, which holds endless fascination for shell collectors. There are hundreds of varieties, the most prized being beautifully spotted giant cowries, pearl shells, and cat's eyes. Cat's eyes, which are eagerly sought by Americans, are the "safety door" of a species of sea slug that live in a snail-like shell. As soon as the shell is touched the slug withdraws into the shell and pulls his "door" closed, leaving a cat's eye glaring balefully at the intruder. Hundreds of cat's eyes are collected every day, and saved as souvenirs, sold, or made into jewelry.

Coral proves a disappointment to the newcomer. Under water it has shadings of every conceivable pastel color, but there is a catch to it. When taken from the water it first reeks to high heaven, and then turns a drab muddy color that disheartens even the most enthusiastic souvenir hunter. After it dies and has been bleached in the sun, it becomes dazzling white, but few have the patience or foresight to put it through the bleaching process, and the track back to the camp is littered with hundreds of pieces of jettisoned coral. The beaches, too, are a shell collector's paradise, and contain every variety and shade of shell.

The camp is run by members of the unit, who keep the tents in order, clean the camp, and provide meals. The meals are one of the delights of the place. Keen appetites and months of living on canned food make a meal of fresh fish or roast goat the answer to a gourmet's dream.

The life is that of the beachcomber of popular fiction, with all modern conveniences, even a refrigerator.

When all the souvenirs collected there eventually arrive back in Australia many a wife will have to listen to endless tales of the delights of a tropic isle, and will inwardly curse the day her husband ever began to collect shells, coral and cat's eyes. There will be only one way out of such a situation — a return visit to the island to collect more souvenirs.

Miss Marian Clark, as bridesmaid was wearing a striking ensemble of beige lace with matching picture hat and accessories. A profusion of bronze chrysanthemums completed her costume.

Mr. Fred Fisher, of Belleville, twin brother of the groom, acted as groomsman and the ushers were Messrs. Harold Wilson, of Napanee and Ralph Bailey, of Belleville.

For the reception at the Locke cottage following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests in a two-piece printed dress of British tan, with tan hat and accessories and corsage of chrysanthemums. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a blue sheer ensemble with cream accessories and corsage of chrysanthemums.

For the wedding trip, the bride selected a navy blue linen suit and matching accessories. Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Montreal, Ottawa, Napanee, Belleville and Toronto.

Hostesses for the evening, representing the two clubs, were Mrs. Hurst, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Deacon and Mrs. Taylor. Delicious refreshments, served in the Mess Hall of the school, concluded the evening's gaiety.

Newlyweds Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Weese (nee Olive Treverton) of Melrose, have been feted on several occasions in honor of their recent marriage, which took place on July 28th from her family home in the 6th concession of Thurlow.

On July 26th, Mrs. Weese and approximately fifteen of her girl friends of the 5th concession of Thurlow were entertained by co-hostesses Misses W. Huffman and Phyllis Beatty at a delightful cup and saucer shower.

A community shower was staged for the bridal couple on August 5, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Treverton, when two hundred friends, neighbors and relatives gathered together for a social evening. Many lovely and useful gifts were presented to the newlyweds and a rousing charivari tendered them.

The family home was again the scene of great festivity on August 9th, when about sixty relatives paid honor to Olive and Clare.

On August 19th, a huge crowd of folks met at Mr. and Mrs. W. Treverton's for an ice cream party. A number of social activities during the course of the evening were heartily received by the merrymakers.

TWO-IN-ONE

By PATRICIA MONTCLAIR

When families must double up to make room for daughters who come home for the duration, all the adjustments are by no means on one side. Older members of the family may secretly sigh, sometimes, for the solitude and privacy they've had to give up, but it's just as natural that the visiting relative, on her side, should long now and then for a place that's really all her own, to do as she likes in.

With a little planning, such a situation can be handled so that everyone concerned is comfortable and happy. It's quite a simple matter to arrange two-in-one rooms that provide their occupants not merely with sleeping quarters but with miniature homes of their own where they can carry on most of their activities independently.

HERE'S A ROOM that would make any daughter, back home with the baby for the duration, feel that she still had a private life of her own. Her own old crib has been brought down from the attic for the baby, and painted and fitted up to be in keeping with the rest of the room.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Sixteen Too Early For Girl To Have Romance With A Soldier

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am sixteen, and all of my friends of my age have some experience with "romance," but in these war-time days it is apt to be more "serious". My experience concerns a boy who is a very fine young man, and I am very fond of him. We were friends in grade school and have been friends ever since except for a few months after a quarrel. Now he is going into the Navy, and we have made up our quarrel and have agreed to be friends. Anyway I have, but his feelings toward me have changed. Since I'm not as sure of myself as he seems to be of his feeling toward me, do you think I am right in letting him go away thinking I care for him, or should I tell him before he leaves? Also he has asked me to write to him very often. . .should I do this? And, under the circumstances, do you think I should give a gift before he leaves?

W. A. T.

You're probably pretty bored by having people tell you that you are very, very young to be "serious" about this friendship, but it's true, dear girl, and so I suggest that you let the friendship move along without acceleration, and explain to this young man that your idea of "being good friends" means just that. He's going to be mighty absorbed in his new life, his new duties, and I'm sure you're going to be busy with your school work, your social activities— and I hope with doing serious work in the war effort. And this busyness, never fear, will bring a fine sense of proportion to you both and to the status of your friendship.

Of course write to this friend. . . often, if you wish. . .friendly chatty letters about what you are doing and about others you both know. If you are as smart as I judge you are, your letters are going to keep the even keel of a fine friendship, with no references to "romance." No harm in giving him a going-away gift. . .friend to friend. . .and enclosing a sincere note of "very best wishes."

Proposing Proxy Godfather

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I had asked an Army lieutenant, then stationed near our home and a long-time friend of both of us, to be godfather for the baby we were expecting. Now our baby has arrived, and in the meantime the lieutenant has been transferred to a camp far away, and cannot be present at the christening. We're terribly disappointed for this man was the one we most wanted to have as our baby's godfather. Is there anything we can do about this?

Mother

Yes, ma'am! If there is time before the christening write to him and ask him to name a proxy to attend the christening "for him". If there isn't time for writing, wire him, and in case you just can't get in touch with him (which may be possible), you and your husband may ask a relative or friend of the lieutenant's, someone you know of course, to be proxy for him. This will be proper since, as you say, it was definitely understood by the lieutenant that he was to be the godfather and since he had definitely accepted your invitation.

The Marry-Go-Round

These "Ersatz" Elopements

These romantic all-of-a-sudden war marriages have their drawbacks and may be a big gamble; but they have almost completely eliminated the "ersatz elopement," which was born of Hollywood.

Every now and then, we used to hear of some screen beauty or popular glamour girl who was "planning" to elope, and carefully letting the reporters and columnists know all about it, in time for the morning editions.

"Elope?" From whom? From what? And why?

That was the unanswered question. It was the greatest problem of a romantic girl's life. Not to find somebody with whom to elope—but to find somebody FROM whom to elope!

Of course, she might go down to her father's place of business or his club and drag him home and make him stay there long enough for the Boy Friend to bring around a ladder and stage a "runaway." But, somehow that seemed to lack the flavor. There was no point to it!

Besides, it is doubtful if she could have induced her parents to restrain their expressions of relief and pleasure sufficiently to play the heavy Father and Mother and give the elopement a little kick.

Instead of bolting the front door and threatening to shoot the "impetuous" young man, Father would probably have sneaked upstairs and kindly opened the window for him. And Mother would have called her back at the last moment to ask her if she'd like to borrow her fur jacket for the trip or if she didn't want Jenkins to make her up some sandwiches.

You see how hopeless it was becoming—with these modern parents! You simply can't run away and get married if there's nobody to run away from except the butler.

In Hollywood, it was even more disheartening. There was nobody much to elope from, out there, except your manager, your publicity man and your housekeeper. And, of course, a few of your ex-husbands. And the bridegroom's other heart-interests.

But now, all that is changed! You almost never hear of an elopement. And never of an "ersatz" elopement. The war-wedding has enough glamour and adventure and excitement to it to satisfy the yearnings of the most dramatic soul, without any fancy trimmings or romantic camouflage.

Whether it's a big showy wedding, with crossed swords and a wedding-cake, or just a hasty, unexpected trip to the parson with a two-day honeymoon, it will always be a thrilling, romantic memory in any girl's life!

President, Chicago Board of Health.

Several Forms of Neuritis with Treatment Depending on Cause

It is a mistaken notion that vitamin B-1 alone will cure neuritis. While various forms of neuritis have similar symptoms, they require various kinds of treatment because they are due to different causes. Diet is only a small part of the treatment.

For example, one form of neuritis develops as a result of infection. In this disorder there are attacks of pain in the legs. This disease, as a rule, attacks previously healthy persons, even though the diet may be satisfactory in all ways. The condition develops rapidly, continuing for several days or weeks. It may come on following a cold or sore throat. The muscles are tender.

The condition, due to an inflammation of the nerves and known as infectious polyneuritis, may be so severe as to affect the nerves supplying the muscles used in breathing and in such cases the disease may occasionally be fatal. Fortunately this condition is not a common one. When a patient develops it he should be put to bed at once and kept at complete rest.

Dr. Charles D. Aring, of Cincinnati suggests a respirator to keep the patient breathing should be available and should any signs of respiratory failure be noted, the patient should be put into the respirator at once.

Neuritis, or inflammation of the nerves, may also develop as a result of a deficiency of a vitamin now known as niacin. The symptoms consist of pain and burning along the course of the nerves. There may be some tingling sensations and numbness. With the giving of niacin in the proper dose by the physician, the symptoms usually clear up quickly.

Alcoholic neuritis is a condition developing due to a lack of vitamin fails to take foods which supply B-1 because the alcoholic usually this vitamin in sufficient amounts.

From these types of neuritis massage and exercise may be of some value. Dr. Aring suggests treatment perhaps much like that used by Sister Kenny for infantile paralysis. Sister Kenny's treatment he thinks, will get rid of pain and tenderness and then massage can be utilized. The patient's diet should contain plenty of starches and sugars as well as all the necessary food parts in liberal amounts.

DOG AWAY 6 1-2 YEARS

New York, Aug. 28. (AP)—Junior a Spitz dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weinstein of Brooklyn, is home after six and a half years of wandering. A stranger whistled to the dog in February, 1937, and he leaped into a car and was whisked away. Mrs. Weinstein said she saw the prodigal canine stop in front of their home recently, sniff the ground and jump meekly up the front steps.

The Zoo veterinarian ushered her into the elephants' happy land with an overdose of anesthetic after officials decided her rheumatic hind leg, which buckled and forced her to the ground in each case, was incurable. Last time she sat down a derrick pulled her erect.

FASHION FLASHES

NOT ALL furlined coats are fashioned on strictly tailored greatcoat or Chesterfield lines. An easy drape marks a beige woolen coat lined with nutria and made with a rippled Peter Pan collar of the fur.

IT'S CHINA all the way for frocks and many accessories. A big black felt beret is trimmed with a large and sprawly Chinese dragon done in tiny sparkling multicolored beads.

COMING UP year after year is the easy coat trimmed with fluffy fur revers. Rose, blue and pale gold plaid woolen is used for an easy coat trimmed with collar and tuxedo revers of lynx dyed white fox.

THE BEST OPINION of both stylist and consumer is that the short-skirted formal after-dark dress looks unfinished without a hat. Designed for this type of frock is a forward-tilted high pill-box of black felt trimmed with delicate swirls of glycerined ostrich.

NO USE keeping things that are out for the duration, say many women. So one woman has had her short ermine evening jacket made up into a detachable little cape with a rippled flare to wear with a simple black woolen suit. There is also a small barrel muff.

FOR WEAR there's no beating the coat of Alaska seal. Bronze brown is used for a handsome coat made with widening tuxedo revers, slit pockets and big turn-back cuffs.

Under instructors of Alpine Club of Canada new techniques of rock, ice climbing are learned. Men are accustomed to high altitudes, learn to advance over icy surface of glaciers. Toronto, Aug. 28. (CP)—Need in Canada for such athlete-building projects as Calgary Buffaloes' five-year plan was stressed by many sports columnists who commented during the past week on the Buffalo Club's announced intention to provide equipment and coaching for a six-team midget hockey league. Ralph (North Bay Nugget) Adams commented: "If this country had more clubs like the Calgary Buffaloes, who are not afraid to venture a little money for the sake of the coming generation of puck stars, Canada would not have to worry much regarding her sporting future".

Bill Gaynon of the Niagara Falls Review points to baseball building done by sports boosters in the Falls where senior baseball flourishes as a result. The Falls Baseball Association was formed in 1931 as a 10-club Junior League. Its popularity grew and for ten years it has operated more than 50 teams through Midget, Bantam, Juvenile and Junior Baseball. Many of the youngsters went on to star in senior ball and, until the war, the Falls had an over-abundance of high-class material. This year the Association's name was changed to the Falls, Stamford and Chippawa Baseball Association.

R. F. McWilliams, former mayor of Peterborough, Ont., returned to ihs old home town this week on a visit and Fred Craig of the Peterborough Examiner recalled McWilliams was one of the fathers of rugby there. McWilliams, incidentally, is the present lieutenant-governor of Manitoba, a barrister of some note in Winnipeg. In his youth he was one of Canada's first rugby players, a member of the Osgoode Hall team in Toronto which won the first Dominion Senior Grid championship in 1892. After going to Peterborough on graduation, McWilliams busied himself in organizing a football club with co-operation of other kindred spirits. That was the beginning of a great football era in the Ontario City. Peterborough won Dominion intermediate grid titles in 1899 and 1901.

Incidentally:

In a letter to Capt. James Sutherland at Kingston, Ont., managing director Red Dutton of the National Hockey League announced that executives eof amateur and professional hockey organizations would meet in the N.H.L. offices in Montreal in September to consider a site for a hockey hall of fame. . . Jackie Callura has returned home to Hamilton, Ont., to train for his return bout with Phil Terranova, who lifted Jackie's world featherweight title this month. The return go will be in New Orleans in October.

RUDY YORK LEFT THREE DAYS TO BREAK RECORD

18 Homers Hit in August 1937 is Record Held by Himself.

HITLESS FRIDAY

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

A tune most baseball fans would like to hear this weekend would be "the broken record" as rendered by Rudolph Preston York of Detroit Tigers. In August 1937 the big Cherokee slugger hit 18 home runs, a record no other major leaguer has equalled, and he has been busy booming homers this month.

Time is closing in on the husky first sacker and now he has only three games in two days in which to get four homers and eclipse his previous performance.

This is not an impossible feat for York, and Sportsman's Park at St. Louis, where the Tigers are spending the weekend, is not an impossible barrier.

York was trying for the fence last night as Detroit opened the series and as the result was held hitless by Deny Galehouse while the Browns beat the Tigers 3-1.

In the only other American League game Cleveland Indians walloped Chicago White Sox 6-2 behind the six-hit hurling of lefty Al Smith and moved closer to the second-place Washington Senators.

Two games also were played in the National League with the Cincinnati Reds edging out St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 and Chicago Cubs stopping the Pittsburgh Pirates by the same score.

The Cards gave Bucky Walters some rough treatment in the first three innings, but after the fourth the veteran righthander allowed only one hit.

Claude Passeau held Pittsburgh to five safeties and was given an early lead my his teammates.

Object of Discussions With General Franco

London, Aug. 28 (CP).—The object of Ambassador Sir Samuel Hoare's recent discussions with Gen. Francisco Franco of Spain was a frank airing of British complaints that Madrid is biased in favor of the Axis and not to offer any assurances of non-intervention in Spanish affairs, it was learned on good authority Friday.

The purpose of the interview, it was learned, was a frank statement by the Briton. The object was fully carried out and, in order to make the British position unmistakably clear, various specific notes and memoranda were left with Franco.

Some progress has been made in implementing Franco's new policy of equal treatment of belligerents of Spain, but the British government still is not satisfied on several points.

ARMSTRONG QUITS AFTER ROBINSON WINS 10-ROUNDER

Former Triple Crown Winner Fails to Win One Round in Contest.

ALL WASHED UP

(By TED MEIER)

New York, Aug. 28. (AP) —The amazing ring saga of Henry Armstrong ended permanently at Madison Square Garden last night—and more's the pity it terminated amid boos and catcalls at the scene of some of his greatest triumphs.

The fabulous career of the 32-year-old former triple title holder came to grief against the flicking fists of youthful Ray "Sugar" Robinson who waltzed to an easy 10-round decision before 15,371. The gross gate was $60,789.31.

Armstrong retired once before in January, 1941, but changed his mind last year and started a comeback that has grossed him nearly $200,000 in 27 outings.

But after the drubbing he took in losing every round to Robinson, Henry didn't mince matters. He emphasized in the dressing room that he was hanging up his gloves for keeps.

"I'm through", he said wearily. "From now on I'll manage Cecil Hudson". Hudson, welterweight from Los Angeles, outpointed Izzy Jannazzo, New York veteran, in a six-round preliminary.

The crowd, keen for the kill, didn't like Robinson's caution and booed lustily.

Scaling 140 pounds to Robinson's 145, Armstrong chased the Harlem youth from start to finish, but on only two occasions did he come close enough to land some good punches. His weaving tactics from a crouching position made Robinson miss repeatedly, but not enough to reduce his big lead on points.

Armstrong, who started fighting in 1932 and has engaged in approximately 300 fights, is the only man ever to hold three world titles—featherweight, lightweight and welterweight—at the same time. At one time he won 44 bouts in a row.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS SURE OF PLAYOFFS

In Third Place and Cement Hold by Beating Baltimore Orioles.

(By The Associated Press)

Give Leo Miller enough cigars and he will wind up with a team in the international league playoffs

His Syracuse Chiefs, candidates for the cellar championship early this season, right now are a healthy third-place outfit and give every indication of finishing in that position.

Miller, business manager of the club, spends most of his waking hours smoking big, black cigars and digging up the baseball players that develop into international league threats.

Last night his Chiefs dropped Baltimore Orioles, 8-2, in the Maryland City while defeating the Shaughnessy circuit's outstanding hurler, Ed Klieman. The verdict was the 18th for Tommy de la Cruz.

It was the only game played in the international league last night, Rochester-Buffalo game being postponed and the remaining four clubs having a scheduled vacation.

74 Teams Pair Off for Initial Matches for Soccer Season

By the Canadian Press

Whistles blew on many fields in England and Wales today for the opening of the football season, with 74 teams pairing off in the initial matches of a campaign which will wind up with cup games and league championships next Spring. Early indications were that great crowds of raid-free enthusiasts will flock for their fill of soccer once more.

Team managers were having their worries, however, through migrations of players engaged in war work or in the Armed Services and, in some instances, the loss of playing facilities. The chief reliance is on over-age veterans and tender youths. Millwall, in the Southern League, had the most difficulty in the matter of accommodation, its grandstand having been destroyed by fire following Nazi bmobing last Easter while Arsenal will be playing home matches at Tottenham through diversion of its grounds to wartime purposes. The pay of players has been boosted from 30 shillings ($56.60 to £2 ($8.80) and there is an increased entertainment tax but the civilian spectator will continue to pay 35 cents admission, or 13 cents for a member of the Armed Forces.

There will be a sprinkling of star players from occupied countries who are now in the British Isles. One of the outstanding is Emile de Busser, a former Belgian forward who has been signed by Queen's Park Rangers.

Pitcher Al Milner, 29, has been obtained by St. Louis Browns from Cleveland Indians on waivers. When Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns was coaching Indians in 1940, Milnar won 18 games and lost 10. Sewell moved to St. Louis and Milnar won only six games last year, losing eight.

When he was severely wounded in the last war, Charles J. (Terry) McGovern of Pittsburgh refused to have his leg amputated because he wanted to play hockey after the war. He was a player of the Hornets who won the U. S. Amateur Hockey title in 1920-21 and eventually became a referee. Yesterday he joined up with the U. S. Maritime Service.

The purchase of pitcher Rufe Gentry and outfielder James Outlaw from the Buffalo Bisons was announced last night by the Detroit Tigers in apparent team-building move for 1944, both players being fathers. Gentry is expected to round out a string of 20 victories before the close of the season with the International Leaguers.

Redmond Quain of the Ottawa Rideau Tennis Club went down to defeat yesterday at Montreal in the final of the Province of Quebec Junior singles when he lost in straight sets to Yvon Gauthier of Quebec City. As many as 20 exchanges were made in some of the rallies by the finalists.

After a conference at Chicago yesterday on sending two picked Major League teams overseas to entertain the troops, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis declared he was "hopeful" but that a number of difficulties had to be overcome. With him were President Will Harridge of the American League and President Ford Frick of the National circuit.

Bee Mack, two-yearold filly which took the spinaway stakes two weeks ago, is favored for the 39th running of the hopeful stakes, the getaway feature of the Saratoga meeting at Belmont track today for which a field of 13 juveniles has been posted.

The New York Giants yesterday "called up" five recruits from the Jersey City Giants of the International League. Only one, however, outfielder Charlie Mead, was ordered to report to the National Leaguers immediately, the others being instructed to join the team next Spring.

Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland negro heavyweight, yesterday was matched to take on Cpl. Mello Bettina of the U. S. Army for a 10-rounder at Cleveland Stadium Sept. 15. Promoter Larry Atkins said Bivins had been given a guarantee while Bettina will receive a gate percentage.

Tommp Cooper, formerly with St. Catharines in the Senior O. H. A., left the Garden City yesterday to enlist in the R. C. A. F. Previous to coming east, Cooper had been top scored in the Western Canada Hockey League with Moose Jaw Millers. Last winter he turned down an offer from the Toronto Leafs.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Shakamak State Park, Ind. —(AP)—Joan Fogle, 15, of Indianapolis, was the only one of three 1942 swimming champions to defend her title in the U.S. Women's National Swimming championships here yesterday when she came through in the 300-metre medley event to win in 4:35.6.

Dayton, O.—(AP)—A 35-year-old Dayton tool-maker who had been shooting four years, Jasper Rogers, captured the highest honor of the sport, the Grand American Trapshooting Handicap yesterday in a six-way shoot-off at the championship tourney here. He cracked 47 of 50 targets in the extra contest.

Chicago—(AP) — With only six horses entered, the smallest field in the history of the race, goes to the post today for the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park track. The favorite is Slide Rule, owned by W. E. Boeing of Seattle, winner of the $50,000 Arlington classic a short time ago.

Port Colborne—(CP)—Port Colborne Victorias won the first game of the Niagara district senior baseball finals here last night beating Welland Atlas Steels by 5-1.

Kitchener—(CP) — Inter-County Baseball Association officials Friday objected to the play-off draw in the minor series of the Ontario Baseball Association. Under the new set-up, inter-county juvenile, midget and bantam champions would be faced with the necessity of play-offs. Three series to win the championship in each of the three divisions. Against that, Niagara District Association Clubs would be playing two series and Toronto representatives would contest only the finals.

A Few Gleanings

By
C. D. T.

The second round of the O.A.S.A. Intermediate "A" playdowns between Belleville Reliance and Trenton will commence at the Agricultural park in Belleville on Monday evening, it was announced today by Harry Rollins, vice president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

The series will be the best two of three games with the second game to be played back in Trenton on Wednesday night and a possible third game to be played in Belleville. It was the Trenton team's choice that the possible third contest will be played in Belleville.

Reason for staging the first game of the Belleville-Trenton series in this centre was given by Vice-President Rollins as through a wish to co-operate with the local Juniors, who will play hosts to Oshawa in the second game of their series here on Wednesday night. Today Belleville Juniors travel to Oshawa for the first game of their series.

A race horse committee of James Barber, James Haggerty and Dr H A Welbanks in conjunction with the Belleville Fair Board have arranged an excellent race program for the three days of Belleville Fair. Racing will be held on the Tuesday and Wednesday of the fair and two classes will be offered on each day with substantial purses On the first day a 2.27 class for $250 and a 2.17 class for $300 will be raced while on the second day the free-for-all will go for a purse of $350 and a 2.30 class for $300. These purses are the best that have been offered by any driving club or organization excepting the futurities, which are stake events and the horsemen will no doubt be on hand to collect some of the spoils. It is hoped that some of the better wigglers, such as Lastei Grattan, Pine Ridge Hill and Pine Ridge Jim, Lola Peters and others will decide to take a crack at the Free-For-All and they would be well advised to do so because they are racing for lots less money in Western Ontario. Five percent will be the entry fee and free stabling and straw will be provided. More anon.

Coach "Spike" Pryke and his Reliance crew are hitting on all nine cylinders right now as they enter the second round of the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Pryke has four good hurlers in Bawden, Luffman, Vasil and Anderson to throw at the opposition, while his infield is clicking perfectly and his outer gardeners can go and get them. The team has not been hitting as well as they were earlier in the season but they are making their hits count and clutch hitting produces runs. The team has visions of another O.A.S.A. Intermediate "A" title and if they survive this round they will meet the winner of the Oshawa-Peterborough series and methinks they have a little score to settle with that Oshawa crew guided by the sports editor of the Oshawa Times, George "Soup" Campbell.

It would be well if the softball teams would do more playing and less crabbing at the umpires or else have the O.A.S.A. authorities inform their umps that they are the real bosses while on the field of play. Spectators don't go to sports events to hear wrangling and useless arguments such as was heard in Kingston on Thursday night. Harold Bawden and Pat Corrigan were the officials and each one of them turned in a "Good" job. On the play that Kingston Ordnance crabbed so much about, it was apparent that the catcher went to sleep not the umpire. Richardson knew there was a play to be made at the plate and he should have made it his business to get to the plate without so called interference from the umpire. We always thought that the umpire was part of the game and we always thought that if the ball hit an umpire in fair territory it was still in play. Bawden had to stand somewhere on the playing field and we don't think he moved over intentionally in the way of the catcher. As for the calling of the ball on pitcher, the umpire was perfectly justified. The only thing that hurt was that it was called against Kingston. And another thing the Kingston Ordnance ball club should be made to pay for the protector that was ruined by some rowdy fans, who pushed the umpire around. The Reliance club are rejoicing that they have buried Kingston in two straight games because they took the same dose only a year ago from an inferior team.

Wrestling mogul Frank Tunney and his gallant band of wigglers should pack them into the Arena on Wednesday night with the card that has been offered for approval, "Whipper" Bill Watson and "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne for the final bout. What could be sweeter? This match could be served up in any of the better houses across the continent and pack them in. Watson was practically stolen from under the eyes of the Montreal promoters, who wanted him against Robert but the chief executive body was determined that Belleville should have the best. This match will be a clever, scientific bout between two high-class wrestlers and not an eye gouging, bite'm and drag them out affairs. A fine supporting card has been arranged for the wrestling fans on Wednesday night.

It was a pleasure to renew old acquaintances of many years standing at Kingston on Thursday night. The first one to shake hands was Joe Daley, mentor of the old Kingston Ponies ,that sported many celebrities in their days and following him came Hewitt Smith, a brilliant third sacker of these teams and now a little gray around the temples, Bob Elliott an all around athlete and prominent now educating the younger generations in playing the game he so dearly loves. Finally Bill Walshe, able sports editor of the Kingston Whig Standard called around and his chest has not yet receded after catching that whopper of "lunge" down the St Lawrence. Bill is very enthusiastic about the hockey chances of the Kingston club this winter stating that it would be a much better team than last winter. The hockey club is running a carnival down in Kingston for this week and the response has been most generous. We enjoyed meeting the old gang on Thursday night, especially the arguments that come up years after the games have been played. When will the C.O.B.L. be reorganized again?

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 28. (AP) —It's hard to blast a fellow who has given fight fans their money's worth as often as Hank Armstrong, but Henry's announcement last night that he was through with boxing, except as manager of Cecil Hudson, was long overdue. We never saw Armstrong at his best, but we'd much prefer to remember him as the little fellow who won three world championships and lost them gamely than as the outworn prize fighter who shuffled around the ring swaying his head like a sea lion begging for a fish.

Guest Star.

Charles P. Ward, Detroit Free Press: Capt. Ray Barbuti, the old Syracuse quarter-miler, recently was discharged from a military hospital in North Africa. He had fly fever. . . .Babe Herman often was accused of having the same trouble but never went to a hospital for a cure".

Cleaning The Cuff

George Strickler, the National Football League Tub Thumper, claims he's going to protest the Chicago All-Star game because 20 points for the stars were scored by ineligible players. "Harder and Graham are only college juniors", he insists. . . .Manager Steve O'Neill of the Tigers recently received a cheque dated July 31, 1924, from the town treasurer of Bridgewater, Mass. Steve recalled that he had helped fight a forest fire when he visited the town 19 years ago, but he always figured it was just water under the bridge.

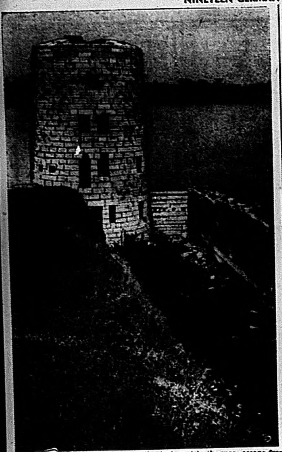
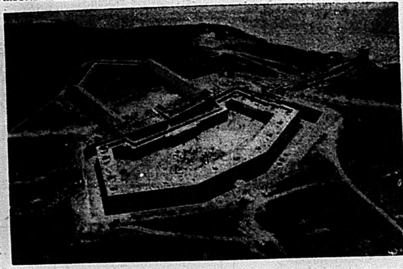
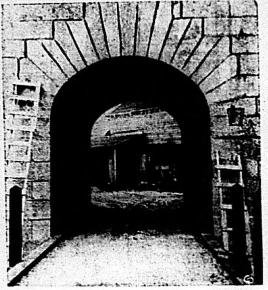
NINETEEN GERMAN PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM OLD FORT HENRY, KINGSTON







Thirteen German prisoners, who took part in the mass escape from Fort Henry at Kingston, have been captured, leaving six still lat large. LEFT, ABOVE, is the massive old gun tower connected to the main fort by a deep trench leading between earthwork and the stone wall. At the RIGHT is an aerial view of the Fort Henry prison camp. The belief of camp officials is that the 19 escaped Germans tunnelled their way under the heavy stone walls into an abandoned sewer and through this sewer into Kingston harbor. BELOW is the main gate of the fort showing the drawbridge.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 161

(By SAM GORDON)
The Kibitzer

Don't worry yourself into a lather over every bid in bridge. Let T-A-N lead you to the correct bid without effort. T-A-N means takeout, assist, no-trump; the order of choice of bids.

You have four tricks in either suit or no-trump with this responding hand;

♠ K Q 8
♥ 6 4 3
♦ Q 5 4
♣ A 9 6 4

A responder is assumed to have a basis of two tricks. Each raise consumes another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid consumes one more no-trump trick. You have two suit raises; two no-trump bids.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart. With no suit takeout or assist, your response is one no-trump. Your voluntary no-trump bid consumes your third no-trump trick.

You thus have left one no-trump trick for a later voluntary bid in no-trump. You did not raise the contract. So you still have left two unused suit tricks for later suit raises.

Suppose partner's next bid is two clubs or two diamonds or two hearts or two spades. You now have adequate support. Following T-A-N, you assist partner's suit before bidding no-trump again.

Your assist in that case will be a raise. Each raise in your assist will consume a suit trick. But you will still have an unused no-trump trick for a future voluntary no-trump bid, if necessary.

When partner opens one heart and you respond one no-trump, suppose he bids two no-trump. You still have no suit bid. Make a voluntary bid of three no-trump with your unused no-trump trick.

Suppose your ace of clubs was the ten of clubs. You now have only three tricks in suit and no-trump; one suit raise and one voluntary bid in no-trump.

With that you also respond one no-trump to partner's opening of one heart. If he then bids two no-trump, you have no unused no-trump trick for a voluntary no-trump bid. So, you pass.

Men seldom make passes with gals who need glasses.

HUNDREDS OF TONS

The city, in addition to being a railway junction, is one of the most important strategic points in Germany's electrical supply system and an industrial centre whose factories produce diesel engines for submarines and tanks. Nazi party rallies are held there is peace-time.

German radio stations including Deutschlandsender, which serves the Berlin area, went off the air around midnight. The Daily Sketch said listeners reported that only Australian and Czech stations were on the air at 1 a.m.

The British and Canadian attack started shortly after dusk when large formations of heavy bombers escorted by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Spitfires, returned from attacks on German airfields and factories in occupied Europe.

Dawn was breaking when the last of the R.A.F. and Canadian bombers crossed the straits on their return trip. As they roared back for two hours, fierce anti-aircraft fire was sent up by the Germans from the French side of the channel.

Nazis Very Jittery

One eyewitness from a high spot on the English coast said the Germans appeared to be putting up everything they had and seemed "very jittery."

Returning fliers from the daylight raids reported 16 Nazi fighter planes were downed and that four bombers and seven Allied fighters were lost. All Canadian planes checked in safely, however.

The Flying Fortress attack was the second of the day by American planes. Earlier in the day R.A.F. medium Marauders, covered by R.C.A.F. Spitfires, attacked the Nzai flying field at Poix, in France Two German fighters were shot down.

Other R.A.F. warplanes struck at targets in France yesterday. Mustangs damaged several locomotives in Brittany and an enemy ship off the coast at Dunkirk. Bombers dropped mines in enemy waters and Boston bombers, escorted by Typhoons, bombed a power plant at Gosnay.

Ontario Labor Relations Com. Has Been Formed

Toronto, Aug. 28 (CP)—Ontario Labor Minister Charles Daley today announced formation of an Ontario Labor Relations Committee to survey existing labor legislation. He said the move implements the fifth of 22 points contained in the Progressive-Conservative platform during the Ontario election Aug. 4.

"In view of the fact that neither management nor labor are entirely satisfied with present labor legislation, it is intended the committee will be established so that the government may have information gathered", Mr. Dales said. "The committee will be asked to report and make recommendations, if it desires to do so, for enactment of new legislation to do with labor relations in industry and commerce."

He said that labor and employing interests would have equal representation on the committee, and that it would function "free from government influence".

It is believed that the committee will start to sit within a month, probably holding its enquiries at Queen's Park.

L.C.B. Now Under Jurisdiction Of Attorney General

Toronto, Aug. 28—(CP)—Removal of the Liquor Control Board from the jurisdiction of the Provincial Treasurer was announced yesterday by Premier Drew following a meeting of the Ontario cabinet at Queens Park. The Premier said the Board would be transferred to the Attorney General's department.

The move was made because law enforcement and restrictions imposed by the Dominion Government "fall more logically" under the Attorney-General's authority, he added.

"There will be no change in administration until there has been an opportunity for full consultation between the Attorney General and the Liquor Board," the Premier said.

An order-in-council cancelling the contracts of seven companies who had been granted timber rights in Northwestern Ontario was another item of business completed by the cabinet. The contracts were cancelled because the firms had failed to erect mills on the timber-sites.

The companies are: Pulpwood Supply Company, Ltd.; General Timber Company, Ltd.; Huron Forest Products, Ltd.; Soo Pulp and Paper Products, Ltd.; English River Pulp and Paper Ltd.; Ver Illion Lake Pulp Company, Ltd.; and Western Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd.

SATISFACTORY BASE ACHIEVED SAYS RADIO FRANCE

London, Aug. 28 (CP). — Radio France at Algiers said today that the action taken by Britain, Canada and the United States with regard to limited recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation represents "a satisfactory base for common prosecution of the war and for liberation of France."

The broadcast was recorded by The Associated Press.

"THE HARD WAY"

A tense, moving drama of a woman's driving, ruthless ambition coupled with an intensive love for her sister and its effect upon the lives of others, makes its bow Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre when Warner Bros.' "The Hard Way", starring Ida Lupino, Dennis Morgan and Joan Leslie opens. The film has a supporting cast of unusual merit, topped by such able players as Jack Carson and Gladys George.

The picture tells the story of a relentless and frustrated woman, Helen Chernen, played by Ida Lupino, who is so determined for a better way of life for her sister that she breaks all the rules of human decency to attain it.

"The Hard Way" was directed by Vincent Sherman.

"DR. BROADWAY"

The reason for the authenticity of Broadway atmosphere and characters in the new Paramount romantic comedy-drama, "Dr. Broadway", is that the screen play was written by ex-Broadway columnist, Art Arthur. Opening Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, "Dr. Broadway" features Macdonald Carey, Jean Phillips, J. Carrol Naish, Richard Lane and Edward Ciannelli.

AT THE BELLE

"Pilot No. 5"

A dramatic character study of what makes an American pilot tick is presented by employing a flash-back method against the timely background of Java under fire in M-G-M's "Pilot No. 5" now showing at the Belle theatre.

Starring Franchot Tone, lovely Marsha Hunt and Gene Kelly of "For Me and My Gal" fame, the screen unfolds the life story of the pilot who has just departed on a sure suicidal mission against the enemy. Franchot Tone is the daring pilot. The recollections of the men who knew him point him up as a brilliant lawyer who becomes involved in Fascist politics and loses his sweetheart, played by Marsha Hunt. When he realizes his mistake, he helps break the grip of the fascists on his state government, although this action wrecks his career. But when he stands ready to give his life for the cause of democracy he again finds a brief moment of happiness.

Franchot Tone is at his best as the misguided lover who finally comes to his senses. Marsha Hunt is outstanding as the girl who sees the man she loves change into a stranger while she is powerless to help. Gene Kelly plays a weakling who reforms into a thoroughly likeable character and emerges a hero.

Although the film is presented against a background of war, it is not actually a war picture. A beautiful and tender love story runs through the screen play, which was written by David Hertz.

Up and coming Van Johnson, Dick Simmons, Alan Baxter and Steve Geray give stirring performances as the fellow flyers who tell the story. Starlet Dorothy Morris becomes a character actress with her capital portrayal of a half-wit. She also plays an important part in bringing Tone nd Kelly to their senses. An effective role is enacted by Howard Freeman, formerly of the New York stage as the Fascist-minded governor.

4 Excellent Short Treats

The Canadian Paramount News of the World, the Radio Rogues in a multiple-reel musical comedy, studded with fun entitled "Love is Glum," a M-G-M. colorfun cartoon "Who Killed Who" and a interesting Passing Parade subject, "Madero of Mexico" completes the program. Continuous show will be presented today.

AT THE BELLE

Gene Kelly tries to win over pretty Marsha Hunt with a flower in "Pilot No. 5", due today at the Belle Theatre. Her heart belongs to Franchot Tone, who heads a stellar cast including Van Johnson, Alan Baxter, Dick Simmons, Steve Geray and Howard Freeman.

CHAPTER 15

We sat around, all of us depressed, and it seemed an eternity before Hall got back. It was really two or three hours and I was beginning to think it had turned into something good and he was going to scoop me on it, which was what he subsequently did, though unintentionally, as, of course, the morning papers got it first.

Not that it amounted to so much after all. It was this way:

Inspector Hare sent for Utz, and when he got him down at headquarters, told the poor fellow that a special officer on duty in the building heard him groaning and crying out, evidently in his sleep, and proceeded to listen at the keyhole.

Hare told him that he had said some very incriminating things and he had better make a full confession at once. Then Utz, the bully who made his timid wife's life miserable, went all to pieces and began to blubber and carry on and Hare thought he had something. They had witnesses and a stenographer taking it all down, but it amounted to only this:

It seems that Utz finished some rush work very late, about 1 o'clock and went down to wash before going to bed. He said he did not know why, but he had an uncontrollable desire to open the door to Jan's studio as he passed. He said there was a lot of gossip in the building about Jan's late parties—he indicated they were orgies (alas for our innocent scrambled eggs and coffee and our long, fervent talks about the future of the world, the war and the abstract in art and music!) and he had the idea it would be a good joke to open the door and pretend it was an accident.

He said that he stepped aside as he opened the door and then hearing nothing, tiptoed closer and looking in, disappointed that there were no lights on and apparently nothing going on. And then in the moonlight from the long windows he saw the body on the floor.

He said that his hand just closed on the doorknob and he shut the door and went upstairs in a kind of daze. He undressed and got into bed but he could not sleep. He knew it was his duty to report what he had found but he did not wish to be involved and he was afraid that he might even be suspected. So he lay there and shivered and shook for about two hours and then it dawned on him that he had left finger prints on the doorknob.

This scared him half to death, so he said he got up and made his way downstairs again and started to wipe off the doorknob with his pajama coat, but in so doing he inadvertently opened the door again, and this was too much for him. Leaving it open, he ran.

He said he thought he had erased his fingerprints and could not be connected with the crime, so he told no one, though it was on his mind day and night. He did not know what he had said in his sleep, but this was the truth so help him, and he had never seen Castle before, didn't even know who it was until he was told the next morning.

That tied in with what the Stroms and I had heard and I think they were pretty well satisfied with the truth of what he had to say. They worked for quite a while, trying to find a motive, but in the end nothing came of it and it was dropped.

On the whole, Inspector Hare, who came back with Chris Hall, was more pleasant about it than I had dared hope and sat around with the rest of us, talking and having coffee and sandwiches that Peg and I had rustled up. It was around midnight, or perhaps later when he left and Hall and Jan said goodnight a few minutes later.

Our door was open, with them just leaving, when there was the loud report of a shot and then two others in quick succession. Hall pushed Peg and me back into the room and shouted to Jan to stay with us. Then he went tearing down the stairs.

We stood quaking in the doorway, like scared rabbits.

Of course Jan, man-like, had to see what was going on, so he went to the head of the stairway to look down, but it was too dark, he couldn't see a thing. He wanted us to stay back, but we wouldn't so he started down the stairs, with me holding on to his sleeve and Peg tugging at his coat, complaining, but coming right along, too.

When we were about halfway down the stairs there was a commotion and loud talk and then somebody turned the light switch and we ran on downstairs. There in the lower hall was Inspector Hare and Chris Hall, with a man between them.

The foyer smelled of smoke and the man, who was a rather sporty looking individual in a loud suit and brown-and-white sport shoes (i the dead of winter) was fighting mad and cussing Inspector Hare for all he was worth.

"I don't care if you did have a murder here. Is that any reason for shooting at me?" he bellowed.

Hare said:

"Don't get excited, if I'd shot at you, you wouldn't be saying anything now. I just shot over you."

"You shoot too darn close for comfort. Besides, why shoot at all? That's the way with you cops. Shoot first and talk afterwards!"

"All right," Hare said, "you are not hurt. Stop beefing. Now who are you and what are you doing here?"

"My name is Pete Raymond. I run the Star Pool Hall, on Turk Street," the man said.

He took out his wallet and brought out some identification and driver's license cards and a bank book.

Hare looked them over.

"And why are you in this building at this hour?"

"Why not? Is it against the law?"

"Doors are locked after 9."

"I came at 8."

"Whom did you come to see?"

"My wife," he said simply. "She is sick. She's got the flu."

Raymond . . Emilie Raymond, of course. Emilie's husband. But I always thought she was single!

Peg took the words out of my mouth.

"Not EMILIE Raymond!"

"Why not?" he demanded angrily.

"Well," Peg said, "I didn't know she was married, that's all. I've never seen you around here before, and she's never spoken of you."

"Fact is we're divorced and I don't mind saying I'm sorry. I keep as friendly as I can. And a good thing for her, for none of her so-called friends around here seem to notice whether she's alive or dead. She ought to have a doctor right now."

Emilie herself came part way down the stairs.

"Pete, are you all right?" she called.

We went up to her. She was wrapped in a light blue blanket robe and looked pale as a ghost.

"I'm going to send a doctor," the ex-husband said and with another look at Hare, he stormed out of the door.

Chris wanted to carry her upstairs, but Emilie wouldn't let him. She wouldn't let Peg or me help her, either, but walked alone, holding on to the banister, breathing hard.

The doctor whom her husband sent took her temperature and got out his stethoscope.

"Young lady," he said, "I think you'd be much more comfortable in a hospital."

"Oh, no," Emilie cried, "oh no, no —I can't go! Please let me be. It's just flu. I'll be all right. I didn't even want a doctor. I don't need one. Just let me alone, let me ALONE!"

"Well," he said. He looked at her doubtfully. "Will you stay with her tonight?" he asked me, "and see that she doesn't leave that bed? Then we'll see how she is tomorrow."

I promised and he said goodnight and then beckoned me into the hall, leaving Peg with her. Jan and Chris were waiting there and Jan was dispatched to the drug store while Chris came upstairs with me, because he said he knew how to make a mustard plaster.

He did, too. He made it quickly and easily, without any fuss. Then I went back to Emilie, and I thought he had gone, but he was back in no time with a folding cot he had found in Jan's studio and the down coverlet from my own bed.

"I want you to get some rest," he said.

It was decent of him. I lay there, thinking about it for a long time after Peg had gone back to our rooms and I was alone with Emilie.

Neither of us slept very much. I kept her in bed and did as the doctor directed but I couldn't keep her from talking.

In all the months that I had known her, she had never talked very much about herself. She worked very hard and was usually in her room, a paintbrush in her hand, boxes and wastebaskets and things drying all over the place. Sometimes she would go out, dressed very smartly, all in black, to call on buyers and decorators. And sometimes we would see her going out to dinner or dinner-dancing with some man, always very smart looking and gay. We never dreamed that she was married.

The story that she told about herself was just about the last that I would have expected to hear. She was so worried about this ex-husband of hers, so afraid that he would get mixed up in the trouble some way.

"If he comes again, Mary, please try to get rid of him. Tell him I'm fine, but I'm asleep or something. You heard him bellowing at the inspector. That's the way he is. He means so well, and he gets into such messes. He has no sense at all. If he would just stay away, at least until all this is over!"

Little Benny's Note Book

I was listening to the radio with pop before dinner, and the announcer said, And now, friends, before Eddy Mock and his Madcaps resume their melodies, let us devote a few tuneful remarks to Glissen-O, absolutely the best of all possible shoe polishes. Are you ready, Madcaps? Let's go, he said, and all the men in the band started to sing. If you want your shoes to shine and gleam, Like footwear in a lovely dream, Just bend an ear and listen-O, There's nothing quite like Glissen-O.

Yee gods, that's the 3rd operatic guide to living I've had to listen to in half an hour, pop said. I've got a little head ake anyway, maybe you can help me walk it off before dinner, he said.

And we started to take a walk, and pretty soon I said, Have you still got a little head ake, pop? and he said, No, it's gone, I've got a big one now. I'd better stop in at this drugstore for some asperin, only according to what I gather from the radio, no asperin can be any good unless its virtues have been extolled in song, and I dont know of any such asperin, he said.

Why dont you ask the man in the drugstore, pop? I said, and pop said, and by gollies I will.

And we went in and pop said to the man, Can you tell me if there's any musical theme song on the radio relating to Larkins asperin? and the man said, I dont know of any. There's one on Click cough drops, he said.

And he sang it, being Stop that cough and stop it quick, Stop it with Click, and pop said, I haven't got a cough, I've got a head ake. We'll have to make up a theme song. I'll start it and you finish it, he said. And he started to sing, When you're moanin' and you're gasperin', and the drugstore man sang, Then's the time for Larkins asperin.

And he sold pop a box and lent him a glass of water so he could take some right away.

306 Enemy Ships Destroyed From August 5 to 17

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 27 (AP)—Allied fighters destroyed or damaged a total of 306 enemy ships of various types evacuating German and Italian troops from Sicily between Aug. 5 and 17, a joint British-American air report said today.

(R.C.A.F. squadrons were operating with the R.A.F. in these operations.)

Of the total, which ranged from barges to medium-sized merchant ships, 34 were listed as definitely destroyed, 47 as knocked out by direct hits and 225 severely damaged by near misses.

Coastal air force planes were credited with an additional four enemy ships sunk, 17 probably sunk and 31 damaged, during the Sicilian campaign in addition to destroying 40 enemy aircraft and rescuing 75 Allied airmen from the Mediterranean.

The report showed the combined Allied air forces flew over 50,000 sorties aggregating over 200,000 operational flying hours in the 38-day campaign. A record was set by the tactical air force on the first day of the invasion when its planes flew 1,400-sorties—1,200 of which were by fighters.

O'KELLY HEADS FIRE CHIEFS OF DOMINION

Recommendation Urges that Firemen be Frozen to Jobs Except for Enlistment.

St. Catharines, Aug. 28. (CP) — Capt. J. J. O'Kelly, fire marshal's department, Canadian Army Headquarters, Ottawa, and chief of the Ottawa Fire Department for seven years, today was elected President of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs as 35th Annual Convention concluded.

He succeeds Chief Ernest Wood, York Township.

On Sunday, August 29, Capt. O'Kelly will complete 33 years service with the Ottawa Department and will be superannuated. He has been on leave of absence for the past year serving with the fire marshal's office and in September he will be retired from the Canadian Army.

A recommendation was placed before the executive that National Selective Service be requested to adopt legislation to provide for the deferment of key firemen who have been attached to a department prior to Sept. 1, 1939, and that firemen be "frozen" to their jobs except for enlistment in the armed forces and service as firemen in war industries.

In addition, the Legislation Committee report, presented by Chief George Gimblett, Peterborough, proposed that "a priority rating be granted for new firemen sufficiently high to enable fire departments to recruit men who have been turned down by the armed forces and who are under the age of 35 years, but who are still reasonably fit".

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 27 (AP)—Allied fighters destroyed or damaged a total of 306 enemy ships of various types evacuating German and Italian troops from Sicily between Aug. 5 and 17, a joint British-American air report said today.

(R.C.A.F. squadrons were operating with the R.A.F. in these operations.)

Of the total, which ranged from barges to medium-sized merchant ships, 34 were listed as definitely destroyed, 47 as knocked out by direct hits and 225 severely damaged by near misses.

Coastal air force planes were credited with an additional four enemy ships sunk, 17 probably sunk and 31 damaged, during the Sicilian campaign in addition to destroying 40 enemy aircraft and rescuing 75 Allied airmen from the Mediterranean.

The report showed the combined Allied air forces flew over 50,000 sorties aggregating over 200,000 operational flying hours in the 38-day campaign. A record was set by the tactical air force on the first day of the invasion when its planes flew 1,400-sorties—1,200 of which were by fighters.

O'KELLY HEADS FIRE CHIEFS OF DOMINION

Recommendation Urges that Firemen be Frozen to Jobs Except for Enlistment.

St. Catharines, Aug. 28. (CP) — Capt. J. J. O'Kelly, fire marshal's department, Canadian Army Headquarters, Ottawa, and chief of the Ottawa Fire Department for seven years, today was elected President of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs as 35th Annual Convention concluded.

He succeeds Chief Ernest Wood, York Township.

On Sunday, August 29, Capt. O'Kelly will complete 33 years service with the Ottawa Department and will be superannuated. He has been on leave of absence for the past year serving with the fire marshal's office and in September he will be retired from the Canadian Army.

A recommendation was placed before the executive that National Selective Service be requested to adopt legislation to provide for the deferment of key firemen who have been attached to a department prior to Sept. 1, 1939, and that firemen be "frozen" to their jobs except for enlistment in the armed forces and service as firemen in war industries.

In addition, the Legislation Committee report, presented by Chief George Gimblett, Peterborough, proposed that "a priority rating be granted for new firemen sufficiently high to enable fire departments to recruit men who have been turned down by the armed forces and who are under the age of 35 years, but who are still reasonably fit".

DANES RIOT CAUSING SEIZURE OF COPENHAGEN

This photo, radioed from Stockholm, shows German military forces, with drawn swords breaking up a crowd of Danish patriots during the uprising in Copenhagen, the Danish capital, on Sunday, August 22. Danish Freecorps members aided the Nazis in suppressing the strikes and acts of sabotage that marked the Danes' resentment against the Germans. The Germans in a further effort to quell the unrest of the Danish people, have now seized Copenhagen, with 50,000 troops.

Pigeons Doing A Grand Work In The Driving For Victory

These are days of scientific marvels in the way of communications, yet never in the history of war have homing pigeons been used in such numbers and for such a variety of purposes as they are being used today. The article below describes some of the work of pigeons in war.

(By MOORE RAYMOND, in London Calling)

Nearly every aircraft of Bomber Command and Coastal Command on operational duties carries two pigeons. The Army Pigeon Service with its thousands of birds, is a very important part of the Royal Corps of Signals.

You would be surprised if I could tell you just how much our pigeons helped in civil defence during the bad days of the big blitz.

It is a rather chastening thought to consider that in these days of scientific marvel — especially global communication by radio—we still depend so much on the fact that a certain little grey and graceful bird always wants to go home.

These birds are mostly used to supplement the normal means of communication by radio or land line or despatch rider. They can fly through heavy gunfire, smokescreens, over water and marshlands and demolitions that would hold up a messenger on a motorcycle. Gas does not worry them because they fly over it.

Sometimes an Atlantic convoy's sky shepherds want to send a message without leaving the convoy and without sending out radio signals that might attract the attention of the U-boats. In such cases the pigeons are given the job of taking the messages home, if one of our planes comes down in the sea with the radio out of commission, off go the pigeons with an S.O.S.

As you can see, the most important requirement of any pigeon in modern warfare is reliability. Our pigeons in uniform have proved themselves a reliable lot, but it has not been an easy or simple job getting them to this high standard of efficiency. This is how it happened.

During the crisis of September 1938 the Air Ministry got offers of birds from thousands of pigeon fanciers all over Britain. By the time war broke out, the Army and the Air Force were training these racing pigeons for their new jobs. It was like getting hold of a lot of race-horses and putting them to a lot of different jobs from hauling drays to mustering cattle.

Most of the birds had been trained for racing over long distances up to 700 miles, and it was quite likely that out of every thousand of these birds released together in a long race, nearly half of them would not get home.

Obviously this unreliability would not do in the scientific warfare of today, so the birds had to be trained for reliability at a new kind of job.

This is the way an R.A.F. pigeon trainer sets to work. On the first day he takes his bird five to ten miles north of its loft and releases it. Next day the same distance east. Next time he takes it north again, but this time it has to fly a longer distance. Then east again, then north, then east, and so on, till the bird can get home in either direction over about 300 miles. Soon he weeds out the slow birds and the ones that are hazy about their direction. If a bird is late home once, it becomes suspect. If it dawdles twice, it is dismissed the service.

At least 40 per cent turn out to be duffers. The birds that graduate are then taken into planes on the ground with their engines running. At first they are frightened of the noise, but they get used to it before long. Finally, every bird is given at least one release in mid-air over the sea—and then its training is considered finished.

The result of all this thoroughness is that 80 per cent. of the messages sent by R.A.F. pigeons on operational flights reach their destinations. The birds are not expected to be 100 per cent efficient over distances more than 300 miles, though there are records of birds coming home from the Baltic. And one pigeon even made a 700-mile flight through the worst possible weather.

At first the R.A.F. took its birds up in wicker baskets like those used in the trenches during the last war. But they soon discovered that when a plane came down in the ditch and the crew took to the dinghy, that the birds almost invariably got wet—and this made them practically useless for a flight over any distance. Designers began to experiment with a metal container. After a lot of modifications, they worked out a tin box measuring 8 in. by 8 in. by 13 in. It has a shock absorbent lining — and an ingenious device prolongs the breathability of the air inside when the container is sealed.

And when it is sealed, it has a buoyancy lift of 25 lbs., which is enough to support a man in the water. So when a plane is about to be ditched, the radio operator—he is in charge of the pigeons—seals the container and slings it on his back to leave his hands free. This operation takes about four seconds.

If anybody gets into trouble in the water before getting into the dinghy, the container will act as a little lifebuoy.

If a plane comes down in the dark the container is easily spotted, because a certain part called the breather cap is covered with luminous paint. A pigeon can live for one hour in a sealed container before it needs fresh air.

The pigeons carry their messages in a little bakelite cylinder attached to the leg by a non-chafing ring. The cylinder holds a 1½ in. by 2 in. piece of paper giving particulars of the birds and the plane to which it is attached—all in code, of course.

Sometimes it is not practicable to write a message on this paper when the crew of a plane is forced down in the sea and have to take to the dinghy. So the cylinder is painted on the outside with a white dope that will take a brief message in delible pencil. It does not matter if the writing gets wet and dirty and smudged. When the dirt and smudges are wiped off, there is the message still indelibly recorded on the white dope.

But if a man's hands are cold and numb, and if there is a choppy sea running, it will not be easy to write a message on a little cylinder. So now there is a new device. This is a clip consisting of three flat, flexible panels covered with white dope and kept inside the door of the container. It is easy to write on this flat and comparatively broad surface, and then the device is bent into a ring and slipped on to the bird's leg in a second or two.

There is an art in launching a pigeon. If a bird has to leave a plane in mid-air, then it must be properly launched, because throwing it out any old way in just plain murder. If it is caught in the slipstream it is smashed against the fuselage. If its wing feathers are ruffled, the wind tears them apart and snaps the wing and then the injured bird drops to the ground. So radio men are taught how to hold the bird correctly. Wings sleeked and held tight against the body near the tail. Body horizontal and head facing direction of flight.

As no pigeon has described its feelings on being tossed out of a plane at 250 miles an hour at a height of 10,000 feet, we do not know what makes it do a dead drop to about 2,000 feet before opening its wings. Maybe it is caused by fright paralysis, or a blackout, or some sort of pigeon sense.

And when the pigeon has survived all this . . . when it has flown hundreds of miles over the sea through all sorts of weather and at last makes landfall.

The Army Pigeon Service, by the way, is experimenting with birds that will make boomerang flights —that is they will take out a message and bring back a reply. But the experiments are still in their early stages, and I've nothing to report at present except that they have so far had encouraging success.

The Army Intelligence Section finds the birls invaluable at times. When we raided Dieppe on August 19 last year, wireless silence had to be maintained on the spot for security reasons. So as soon as we landed on Dieppe beach, two pigeons were released. One was shot down, but the other flew safely through the flak at 50 miles an hour and got the message back to headquarters.

Another outstanding bit of work was a job done by a pigeon serving in the Middle East during the advance of the Eighth Army. It made a flight of 870 miles over the desert at an average speed of 50 miles an hour. The speed of a bird varies from 30 to 60 miles an hour, depending on the direction of the wind and the state of the weather generally.

By the way, pigeons often come in on a love beam. If one of them shows a liking for a certain hen, he is shown the lady before he leaves. It makes him hurry home. And if he shows signs of coldness, the urgencies of the eternal triangle are introduced. He sees his mate billing with a rival just before he is carried off to his container. It is the same with the females. The fastest recorded speed of an R.A.F. pigeon — 68.7 miles an hour—was made by a jealous hen.

Wine and Kisses

War Correspondent of the London Sunday Chronicle tells of his reception by the people of Palermo, Sicily, one of Italy's largest cities.

The houses grew bigger and more urban. People were sitting on the pavement in the cool of the evening and each group gave us a collective cheer. They called out offering us wine and they sprang up to shake our hands.

Then suddenly we were in real crowds — crowds waiting impatiently for the troops not yet allowed in—and they seized on the three of us (three correspondents) as targets for the enthusiasm.

Our hands were wrung until they were limp and sore. Men and women kissed us—it was noticeable that there was no shortage of garlic. We found ourselves laden with flowers and boughs of lemon trees with the fruit still on, and our pockets full of fruit and nuts.

When our hands were full they forced wine down our throats. They slapped our backs and shouted into our ears little bits of English they had learned. Like: "You are welcome", or 'America, England, Sicily, I come."

Even Italian soldiers drifting along to be captured joined in the cheering. For perhaps a hundred yards we fought our way onwards through this welcome. But finally we were frankly defeated. Coping with enthusiasm like this is more exhausting than you could believe possible.

An American jeep came up the road in the other direction and we jumped on it quickly and drove back out of the town.

There was the sort of reception I had hoped we would one day get in Athens or Oslo or Warsaw. It didn't seem reasonable that we should get it in Palermo. One of Italy's biggest towns.

At length vehicles began to filter into the town. So we tried again —this time in our jeep. It was getting dark now, but the people were still waiting offering wine and throwing fruits and flowers. They stood on the tramlines in the middle of the double-laned boulevard and cheered vehicles going in either direction.

LIEUT. WINANT LANDS SAFELY

London, Aug. 27. (CP)—The U.S. Army Air Force Bomber Command announced that Lieut. John G. Winant Jr., son of the United States Ambassador to Britain, had landed safely in North Africa after turning back from a Britain-bound shuttle bombing formation August 25.

Engine trouble apparently forced him from the formation on the trip to Britain.

Young Winant's plane was one of the Britain-based bombers which attacked Regensburg August 17 and continued on to North Africa

A Tribute To The Men Who Built The Ramparts Of Yorkshire

Four thousand pick and shovel workers from Hull wrote a notable chapter of Britain's war history in the dark days of 1940 when the Nazi invaders were awaited daily. Toiling long hours, sometimes under machine gun fire, they raised a defence along a rugged coast to be held against the Hun.

"THEY WERE JUST NAVVIES—"

(By J. Illingsworth in the Leeds Yorkshire Post)

"There is one body of men which has never been given credit—that marvellous crowd, the old British navvies, who transferred in their thousands and worked like Trojans throwing up the defences around our coasts. Their alacrity and speed were wonderful, always remembering they were not a military force. They were just navvies".—Mr. Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor.

This is the Yorkshire chapter of that remarkable story. But they were not all navvies, Mr. Bevin. Perhaps 10 per cent of them were craftsmen—bricklayers, concreters, joiners, and so forth; and 20 per cent experienced navvies. But as for the rest, there were large numbers of them who had never before handled pick or shovel.

Some of them had been out of work for many years. Among them were men who were so poor that they tied their boots with string. Others were such novices that they turned up to dig in sandals and shoes.

They included, at one point on the coast, a local chemist "who was not very busy in his shop just then," and a local tailor who said he was "used to digging in his garden." There were hairdressers and small shopkeepers. There were fishermen.

They were a moving—a magnificent—miscellany; and they toiled through those summer months of 1940 throwing up ramparts which daily seemed as if they would be assailed. They toiled the full seven days in every week, 14 to 16 hours in every day.

They took their meals with them to the beaches. They were often drenched by the severe thunderstorms of that period which turned the bleak, inaccessible places into quagmires. Sometimes they worked furiously, waist deep in the seas to beat the tides whipped suddenly into fickleness by a nor'-easter. Occasionally, they were machine-gunned by enemy planes. Sometimes when it was dark, the sirens sounded.

They were an army whose only banners were their shirts and vests hung out to dry on bushes and on cliff tops after the latest downpour. They won a victory which was unspectacular but complete.

A great part of this army was recruited from Hull. Britain owes the people of this city much, and this is part of the debt. It has not been pressed. Until Mr. Bevin spoke those glowing words we had no hint of it. But now it can be described:

"At that time," said Mr. Robert G. Terrant, of Hull, to me, "the building industry had lost a great many of its skilled navvies to the services, and the bulk of those who were left were occupied on big government contracts of one kind and another. Nevertheless, it was mainly navvy work to throw up these defences—navvy work and concrete mixing.

"I saw from my instructions that I needed at least 3,000 men, that I must get them within ten days, and that, to such pressing circumstances the majority of those I could draw upon would be the casual dock workers, the fish-dock workers — many of whom were unemployed because our trawlers had been taken for mine-sweeping—men out of light industries which did not require them for the time being, and men who had been unemployed for a long time. Yes, the bulk of them were without skill in the work for which they were wanted. But it was hands that counted.

"There were tall men and short men; some very thin; some very stout who, but for the special circumstances, ought never to have being going. Old men and young perhaps, in the absence of training, —some too old, some too young, for the strenuous tasks that lay ahead of them."

Mr. Tarrant described how this remarkable army was set in motion — the organization of the works to feed it with shuttering, concrete mixers, shovels, gravel, cement, water, timber, bolts; the special billeting arrangements; the transport (70 to 80 buses a day) for the men who travelled to and from Hull; 300 lorries for the materials);the setting up in empty houses at intervals of ten miles along the coast of contract managers, at intervals of two miles of general foremen; at still shorter intervals of gangers.

"The difficulties of organization were appalling, but the drive came from the management and the foremen. At the end of ten days the organization was working full speed ahead."

Most of the coastline was isolated and treacherous, in some districts these men were working many miles from the nearest habitation. We put boilers on the beaches where they could make their own tea. We commandeered beach bungalows.

They drove their lorries across fields. Where the lorries could not go the men got out and walked, sometimes for miles.

Some of the gangs had to use motorboats to get themselves, their concrete mixers and their gravel to beaches that, otherwise, were inaccessible.

At one place which could not be reached from the beach we had to build two ramps — one 120 feet long, the other 200 feet long — down the cliff faces to get the concrete down. Men were perched on ledges at intervals down the cliff face to assist the concrete on its way.

Where water was scarce—and it was in most places, sea water being out of the question because of its salt content—the men had to carry it in farm carts and barrels where they could, or to organize themselves into bucket chains.

They worked from dawn till dark, in moonlight as well as sunlight.

The men who went daily from Hull often arrived back at their homes at 10 o'clock at night, got a meal, went to bed, probably got disturbed by an alert, and then left home at 4.30 next morning to catch a 5 o'clock bus.

At the height of the operations there were between 4,000 and 5,000 men on the job.

"I don't think you can possibly exaggerate what the willing navvy did for the defence of Yorkshire," said Mr. Terrant. "The full story of this great body of men will never be fully and truly told, their patriotism, their grit and determination under conditions of the greatest adversity, the hot sun, the rainstorms, the long days, the sleepless nights, the machine-gun bullets the constant pressure of orders. The work went on. The defences shot up like mushrooms."

GERMAN FRONT IN SOUTH RUSSIA CRUMBLING

Vacate Taganrog To Avoid Being Isolated by Reds

Russians Had Cut Only Rail Line to North and West Just a Week Ago

800,000 FOE IMPERILLED

(By HENRY B. JAMESON)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Premier Stalin announced the capture of Taganrog, southern anchor of the 1,500-mile Russian front, today in a special order of the day

Capture of the southern flank of the Russian front indicated the Nazis' entire southern front positions were crumbling.

Stalin, whose order of the day was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by The Associated Press, said the new victory was achieved as a result of a bold manoeuvre by Soviet cavalry and mechanized formations which broke through to the rear of the enemy troops.

The fall of Taganrog came as a surprise, since there had been no reports of heavy fighting in this region recently from either Moscow or Berlin, but the position of the city had been obviously imperiled since the Russians captured the railway station of Donetsko-Amvrosievka just a week ago, cutting Taganrog's only rail line to the north and west. Donetsko-Amvrosievka is 40 miles north of Taganrog.

Evacuation of Taganrog makes it clear the whole right flank of the German army is comprised and indicates that a general pulling back, started with the Soviet offensive in the Donets Basin a few days ago, has been stepped up.

Was Heavily Fortified.

Taganrog had been heavily fortified by the Germans, and its recapture by the Russians indicates the power of the current Red Army drive. Last year's Soviet offensive, which began with the victory at Stalingrad, swept on past Rostov in this region but stopped short just east and north of Taganrog in the face of a violent Nazi defence of the city.

There was no immediate indication whether the Germans would attempt to stand a few miles west of Taganrog on the west bank of the Mius River, or withdraw some 60 miles farther to the west to Mariupol.

The Berlin radio claimed the Russians had suffered heavy losses, mainly through minefields left by the retreating Germans in the Taganrog area.

The German announcement of the withdrawal said:

"In accordance with measures prepared for quite some time and in order to shorten the front, Taganrog was evacuated by German troops last night. All military installations in the town and harbor were destroyed according to plan".

The broadcast claimed the Russians had suffered heavy losses, mainly through minefields left by the retreating Germans.

The German withdrawal from Taganrog suggested that Stalino, the Nazi southern front headquarters about 120 miles to the northeast, might also fall soon to the flanking Red Army. Red troops have been pressing on this Nazi stronghold from the north for months.

City of 70,000

Taganrog, a city with a normal population of 70,000, had been in German hands since the early summer of 1942.

The Soviet communique today indicated fast-moving Soviet columns south and west of Kharkov are threatning 800,000 Nazi troops in the Donets Basin salient with possible encirclement.

Hard-driving Russian troops advanced 3 to 7 1-2 miles to recapture 50 villages, including the railroad junction of Lyubotin, 25 miles west of Kharkov on the Kursk-Kiev line, the war bulletin announced.

The push seemed to be aimed at by-passing the big Nazi base at Poltava, 85 miles to the south and west of Kharkov, on the north. At the same time another Soviet spearhead further south was pointing in the direction of Krasnograd, in a drive apparently aimed at pinching off the base just as the Nazi bastion at Orel was cut off earlier this summer.

U.S. Bombers Attack Orte North of Rome

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 30 —(AP)— Four-engined bombers struck at Orte, railway centre 40 miles north of Rome, for the first time, and two-engined bombers delivered heavy new blows at vital rail targets at Torre Annunziata on the Bay of Naples Sunday in the methodical daily destruction of the Italian communications system.

Last night R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Wellingtons again smashed the Torre Annunziata railway yards which also received a heavy pounding yesterday by American medium bombers.

At the same time light and medium bombers, dive-bombers and fighters ranged far and wide over the toe of Italy, laying waste the enemy's gun positions and rail and road links and encountering only slight opposition in the area already reported nearly deserted.

Bombarded Enemy Battery

A British cruiser and destroyer bombarded an enemy battery near Cape Pellaro on the southern Calabrian coast Saturday.

(Rome reported in its daily communique, recorded by the Associated Press, that Orte, the vicinity of Naples, Sallerno and Catanzaro had been raided and that considerable damage was caused. Seven Allied aircraft were claimed shot down.

Italian and German air formations attacked Allied naval units in the Port of Augusta, the communique asserted, adding that one oil tanker of 8,000 tons was seen to explode and another of equal tonnage set afire. An attack on an Allied convoy in the western Mediterranean by German bombers was said to have damaged a battleship and cruiser.)

20 Planes Destroyed

Twenty enemy planes were destroyed in the day and night operations, 17 of them shot down by bombers and a fighter escort in the raids on Orte and Torre Annunziata. Three Allied planes are missing, said an Allied Headquarters communique.

British and American medium bombers and fighters participated in the concerted attacks on the Italian toe, hitting gun positions near Reggio Calabria and San Giovanni on the eastern shore of Messina Straits, railway junctions at Cosenza and freight yards at La Mezia. Dive-bombers also scored a direct hit on a temporary bridge over the Angitola River.

An official announcement said that return fire to the British naval bombardment near Cape Pellaro was "ineffective."

POPE TO BROADCAST

London, August 30 — (CP)—Pope Pius XII will broadcast a message over the Vatican and all Italian radio stations Wednesday at 7:15 a.m., E.D.T., the Rome radio said Sunday.

Five Minutes After Flash of Break Soldiers Were Searching for Escapees

By ROBERT R. ROBINSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Kingston, Aug. 30 —(CP)— Five minutes after the first escape alarm was flashed from Fort Henry, Kingston prisoner-of-war camp from which 19 Germans escaped Thursday night, the first of 1,200 soldiers, at present seeking the three escapees still uncaptured were on special duty. An authentic behind-the-scenes glimpse of the military machine cleaning up Canada's second-largest war-prisoner break was given The Canadian Press last night.

At 9:50 p.m. Thursday — five minutes after the break became known at Fort Henry—soldiers from Canadian Ordnance Training Centre, Barriefield, two miles east of Kingston and near the historic fort, had mounted guard on the Toronto-Montreal highway, halting all traffic for identification. Within the next 10 minutes, foot patrols and squads in jeeps were covering the Barriefield area and fanning out over several miles. Before Friday noon ordnance patrols totalled 700 officers and men, covering all Frontenac County under command of Lt.-Col. R. G. Peate, of Toronto, second-in-command at Barriefield Ordnance Centre.

On 24-Hour Alert

Since the first alarm, Col. Peate revealed, a flying squad has remained on 24-hour alert—one officer and 20 other ranks "sleeping with only their boots off." Immediately one squad speeds to an area reporting suspicion of an escapee's presence, a reserve squad moves up for the next fall.

Of the 16 Germans brought in to date, ordnance men have been credited with five. Two—the first pair recaptured, minutes after their escape—were Kingston City Police Game. Nine are chalked up for the men from Canadian Signals Training Centre, Vimy Barracks, adjoining Barriefield.

Lt.-Col. W. H. MacMurray is O. C. of the 500 signals men in the field. His men are patrolling roads and countryside themselves, in addition to supplying 11 mobile wireless units for constant intercommunication between far-flung searchers and Fort Henry where Lt.-Col. C. P. Armstrong is in touch with all phases of the manhunt.

BULGARIAN GOV'T UNSETTLED BY DEATH OF KING

Five-Member Regency For King Simeon II Dominated by Pro.-British Church Leader

PEACE DEMONSTRATIONS

(By FRANK J. O'BRIEN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Istanbul, Aug. 30. AP)—Bulgaria, unsettled by the death of King Boris, presented a potential problem to Hitler today as Premier Bogdan Philov strove to reconcile conflicting elements in the country, which make his position none too secure.

The five-member regency which, according to German broadcasts, will rule in behalf of the boy King Simeon II, apparently is dominated by an anti-German, pro-British church leader—the Metropolitan of Sofia, Stefan, who has protested against Gestapo activity in Bulgaria and against anti-semitic laws passed during the last two years.

The Queen Mother Ioanna, second member of the Regency, also is regarded as decidedly anti-German Prince Kyril, brother of the late King, and Philov are both pro-German but far from strong, while the fifth regent is a politically unknown supreme court justice.

May Be Military Cabinet.

Composed of such diverse elements, it seems highly unlikely the regency will be able to prevent the orphaned Philov government from collapsing and being replaced with a military cabinet.

In that event the leader of the government probably would be selected from the military hierarchy which is enthusiastically pro-German. Such a government doubtless would be pliant to German desires and might break off relations with Russia and agree to assume the chief burden of the defence of Greece or even participate in the Russian war.

W.A.C. Corporal Found Murdered

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 30—(AP)—United States Army officers said today that the 32-year-old W.A.C. Corporal who was found slain in a downtown hotel, her throat, arms and wrists cut and her body only half clothed, had been murdered, but they gave no hint of being close to a solution of the mystery.

The body of Cpl. Maoma L. Riddings, attractive divorcee and member of a prominent Warm Springs, Ga., family, was found in a seventh floor room at the Claypool Hotel Saturday night, three hours after she had rented the room. She had been stationed at Camp Atturbury, 25 miles south of here, since March.

ANNOUNCE RATION ALLOWANCE FOR JAMS, SYRUPS

Coupons May be Used to Obtain Half-Pound Sugar as Alternative

2 COUPONS MONTHLY

Ottawa, Aug. 30. (CP) — The Prices Board last night announced ration allowances for jams, jellies, syrups, canned fruit and similar products. Sales of these goods are under suspension until Sept. 2, when "D" coupons from the new No. 3 ration books become valid for sweetspreads and other goods of this type.

Two "D" coupons will become good each month. For each coupon the purchaser will have the choice of:

1.—Six fluid ounces of jam, jelly, marmalade, extracted honey, apple butter, maple butter or honey butter, or:

2.—Ten fluid ounces of molasses or maple syrup, or;

3.—Ten fluid ounces of canned fruit, or;

4.—Twelve fluid ounces of corn syrup, cane syrup or any blended table syrup, or;

5.—One-half pound of maple sugar or comb honey in squares.

As an alternative to any of these commodities the consumer may obtain for his "D" coupon one-half pound of sugar.

"The ration plan is similiar to that used for meats since the consumer may 'spend' a coupon for any one of the commodities rationed, depending on his choice and upon what is available", the Board's announcement said.

Why Sugar Available.

The "D" coupons will become good on the same dates as sugar coupons. The Board said the plan will make for a more equitable distribution of commercially packed preserves and homemade preserves, as well as providing the alternative of the extra sugar for "D" coupons. There will be no restriction on the use of sugar obtained in this way.

"It is possible to make more sugar available because of the substantial reduction in the commercial pack of jams, jellies and canned fruits occasioned by the short fruit crop and the consequent reduction in sugar used for these purposes", the Board said.

Announcement was also made of an increase in the quotas of other industrial users of sugar, except wine manufacturers, from 70 to 80 per cent of 1941 usage. This increase

AMERICANS LAND AT ARUNDEL IS. WITHOUT FIGHT

Now Within Artillery Range of Japanese - Dominated Kolombangara

MANY BARGES SUNK

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 30—(AP)—Fierce Japanese counter-attacks along the entire front at Salamaua, New Guinea, have forced Allied troops to yield ground at some points, while in the Solomons American infantrymen have landed unopposed on Arundle Island, just west of New Georgia and with artillery range of Japanese-dominaed Kolombangara.

Australian and American troops, powerfully supported by aircraft, slowly but methodically have been closing in on the Salamaua airdrome during the last few weeks. The airdrome is about two miles from the Isthmus on which the town of Salamaua is located.

Supporting the Allied ground forces, attack planes made low-level sweeps against enemy barge hideouts and waterfront installations at Salamaua.

Can Shell Airdrome

Near Lae, 10 miles east of Salamaua, heavy bombers dropped 29 tons of bombs, destroying three jetties and 20 barges at Voco Point.

The landing on Arundel took place last Friday. The island, on which Japanese troops were stationed until recently, is only three miles south of Kolombangara Island and provides positions from which field artillery could shell the Vila airdrome.

A strong force of medium bombers last Saturday morning delivered a second heavy attack within a week against Hansa Bay, Midway between Wewak and Madang on the northeast coast of New Guinea. A 2,000-ton ship, a patrol boat and 31 barges and luggers were destroyed. Roaring fires were started in fuel and ammunition dumps.

Medium aircraft bombed Dili, Timor, at night, leaving a spreading fire visible 15 miles away.

45 DANISH NAVY SHIPS SCUTTLED, TEN IN SWEDEN

Martial Law Declared In Denmark by Nazis And Violent Disorders Reach Peak

KING IS INTERNED

(By JOHN H. COLBURN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Aug. 30. (AP) — Big fires blazed fiercely today among the scuttled hulks of Denmark's naval vessels in Copenhagen Harbor, and offshore Nazi patrol boats and planes shot at Danes fleeing a new German military dictatorship clamped upon the rebellious kingdom after the Danish government resigned.

Refugees streaming into Sweden said scores of persons drowned as the Nazi gunners sank many small motorboats, sailboats and fishing smacks in the Oeresund, the narrow stretch of water between Denmark and Sweden.

The Germans ignored the usual Copenhagen blackout during the night. Street lights blazed brightly as patrols in tanks and armored cars toured the city enforcing the martial law decree by the German military commander.

Seen From Swedish Coast.

The fires in the harbor area could be seen from the Swedish coast. A series of explosions set them off at dawn yesterday as Danish naval forces sent the greater part of their small navy to the bottom.

The Germans' drastic action was the upshot of a series of violent disorders in the tiny country during the past two weeks.

Nine naval ships, two of them small destroyers, reached safety in Swedish ports yesterday. Another torpedo boat arrived at Landskrona last night, raising to ten the number now docked in Sweden.

Reported Cabinet Interned.

6 Persons Meet Violent Deaths

(By The Canadian Press)

Six persons met violent deaths in Eastern Canada during the weekend. Three men died in traffic accidents, two were drowned in the St. Lawrence River and one man was electrocuted.

Charles Edwards, 64, died in the hospital in Toronto Friday from injuries suffered after a truck ran into an excavation where he was working

Norman Arnold Cripps, 35, of Owen Sound, Ont., died in the hospital in Montreal late Friday, shortly after he was hit by a truck while crossing a street in the centre of the city. Fortunat Langlois of Breakeyville, near Quebec City, was killed late Saturday when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a truck on the St. Lambert-Breakeyville highway.

Guy Payant, 22, of Ville LaSalle, near Montreal, was drowned Sunday when his canoe overturned in the Lachine Rapids. Raoul Larmarche, 49, drowned late Saturday when he fell into the St. Lawrence River.

307 Enemy Fighters Knocked Down By U.S. Air Force in Two Raids

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—The U.S. 8th Air Force knocked down a record 307 enemy fighters in the two-play assault on Regensburg and Schweinfurt, Germany, on Aug. 17, but suffered a loss of 59 Flying Fortresses, a new high for American operations in this theatre, according to headquarters compilations.

Thirty-six of the heavy bombers were lost in the Schweinfurt raid, but the books were more than balanced by the destruction of 167 Nazi fighters.

In the companion attack on the Regensburg Messerschmitt factory, the Fortress force which went on to North Africa in a shuttle operation lost 23 planes and shot down 140 of the enemy's interceptors.

The 8th Air Force's loss that day was one more than the biggest for the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. for one night. In the raid on Berlin six days later on Aug. 23 the bomber command lost 58 planes, seven of them Canadians.

The previous record for enemy planes shot down by the Americans in a day's operation was 87. This score was made on June 11 in the raid on Wilhelmshaven.

Although 59 Fortresses were lost Aug. 17 an unknown number of the crewmen escaped with their lives.

Crews of four of the American bombers lost in the Regensburg shuttle raid were rescued by the British air-sea rescue service.

Greater Economy In Manpower Is Expected to Result

Basic and Advanced Training Will Be Linked at the Same Camp

FEWER CAMPS USED

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 30 — (CP) — The Canadian army today enters a new phase in its career in the Second Great War. With the "expansion stage" passed it has a new and more concentrated system of training centres, designed to effect greater economy in manpower.

In the first important change in the army's training organization since its formation, the Defence Department last night announced adoption of the "link training plan."

Under it, basic training centres are designated to receive recruits for a particular arm of the service and linked with advanced training centres for the same arm.

Eight Training Centres Closed

Eight training centres, including two officers' training centres whose closing was announced previously, will no longer be required and the properties will be devoted to other uses.

"This reduction has been made possible because the expansion stage in army units has passed and training centre facilities will be mainly devoted to the training of reinforcements," said a departmental statement. "The future use of these establishments will, of course, always be subject to change depending upon developments."

In the case of Artillery, Engineers, Army Service Corps, Ordnance, Provost Corps, Armored Corps (Reconnaissance Regiments) and Forestry Corps it has been found possible to link both basic and advanced training at the same camp. In other cases basic training centres at different points are linked with the nearest advanced training centre for the same arm of the service.

In addition to releasing the administrative and training staffs at the eight centres to be closed, the change is expected to effect other economies in manpower. The men employed on training operations will be re-allocated.

Those not further required, if of suitable age and medical category, will be turned into the active service reinforcement stream. Those not fit will be returned to civilian life to thus become available for civilian employment.

The move is regarded as the first important step towards reduction of the army establishment in Canada. The number of troops in Canada was estimated earlier this year at more than 250,000, and some 32,000 were employed in staffing the training centres, which numbered 87.

The present system of training was a new policy when inaugurated and its main outlines are unchanged by the revision.

The training centre system marked the introduction of the mass production technique of industry to army training. The training centres are permanent establishments through which recruits pass in classes to be assigned to their units when trained.

Linked Training Centres

Under the new set-up, linked training, both basic and advanced will be carried on at one location in the following cases:

Artillery, Petawawa, Ont., Brandon, Man., and Shilo, Man.; Engineers, Petawawa and Chilliwack, B.C.; Army Service Corps, Camp Borden, Ont. and Red Deer, Alta.; Ordnance and Signals, Barriefield, Ont.; Provost Corps, Camp Borden; Armored Corps (Reconnaissance Regiments), Dundurn, Sask.; Forestry Corps, Chicoutimi, Que.

Basic training centres at Newmarket, Brampton, Orillia, Stratford and Listowel, Ont., are linked with advanced artillery training at Camp Borden.

Basic centres at New Glasgow, N.S., and Charlottetown are linked with advanced coast defence and anti-aircraft artillery training at Halifax.

The basic centre at Peterboro, Ont., will feed the advanced Medical Corps training centre at Camp Borden.

Linked with 10 infantry advanced training centres, spread across the country are 18 basic centres. The grouping is: With Camp Borden, Brantford and Cornwall, Ont., and Valleyfield, Que.; with Ipperwash, Ont., Chatham and Simcoe, Ont.; with Farnham, Que., Sherbrooke and St. John's, Que.; with Valcartier, Que., Sorel, St. Jerome, Montmagny, Que.; with Aldershot, N.S., Yarmouth, N.S.; with Shilo, Man., Portage La Prairie and Fort Garry, Man.; with Calgary, Camrose, Wetaskiwin, Grand Prairie, Alta.; with Maple Creek, Sask., Prince Albert; with Utopia, N.B., Fredericton and Edmundston, N.B.

Plan Disrupted By Russian Army

Moscow, Aug. 30—(AP)—A German plan for a counter-offensive against Kharkov was reported today to have been disrupted by the Red Army capture yesterday of the Liubotin Railway Junction 17 miles west of Kharkov, where the Nazis had concentrated a strong force.

A Pravada dispatch said the Germons made a supreme attempt to hold Liubotin, planning to use it as a springboard for their attack on Kharkov, ut a powerful Russian push drove them out of the city.

The battle for Liubotin had been fought since the fall of Kharkov Aug. 23, while the Red Army was expanding its reconquest of the Ukraine as much as 100 miles farther west to the banks of the Psel River.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation which made the arrests refused to comment on Mrs. Behrens' condition or even confirm she had started a hunger strike.

SEVERAL LARGE BLACK BASS CAUGHT

Bass fishermen reported some fine strikes in Big Bay over the weekend. For instance Hilliard "Speedy" St. Louis, well-known Belleville hockey and softball player, hooked a four-and-one-half pound black bass off Mills' Bar in Big Bay, while from the same boat Cec. Reeves, Brock St., caught a four-pound black beauty. Mr. St. Louis' bass measured over 19 inches with a 14-inch girth. Several fine catches of black bass were reported from the same vicinity of the Bay of Quinte, Roland "Spike" Pryke, manager of the Reliance softball team, bringing home one bass that bordered the four-pound class.

CAUSE OF ALARM ONLY DEAF MUTE SEEKING SHELTER

With three of the escaped German prisoners of war from Fort Henry still at large it was little wonder Mrs. E. Potter, Sidney Township, became alarmed and notified Provincial Police of the presence of a suspicious character late Saturday night.

Reports that a man, who refused to make verbal replies but restricted his actions to motions after he entered Mrs. Potter's highway refreshment booth and indicated he wanted shelter. Provincial Constables Caldwell and Driscoll hastened to investigate the matter only to ascertain the youth was a deaf mute from Northern Ontario, who was hitch-hiking through eastern Ontario and merely wanted a night's lodging in the Potter barn.

ADDITIONAL CHARGES ARE PENDING FOLLOWING CRASH

As a sequel to a head-on truck-motor car crash on Highway No. 14 three miles south of Belleville late Saturday night, LAC. R. J. McIntosh, of the Mountain View air base, was arrested on a charge of dangerous driving. Traffic Officer W. G. Milton, who investigated, today stated additional charges of a more serious nature are pending.

McIntosh is said by police to have been driving an R.C.A.F. truck that allegedly crashed into the front of a parked automobile driven by James Young, 97 Station Street. The entire front of Mr. Young's car was shorn off as the result of the impact from the larger R.C.A.F. truck. An Air Force investigation, as well as the charges preferred by the civil authorities, is also in progress. McIntosh will appear in Picton court.

The bike had apparently been dismantled and the unwanted parts tossed with abandon into the bushes off Wellington Street.

Business College Offers Valuable Service

Various appeals are made to young people to engage in some essential industry or war service. Whatever field they enter, their success depends upon efficient training. In addition to their desire to make a worthy wartime contribution, they do well to think of preparing for some useful, permanent employment after the war, when great opportunities will come to those qualified to take advantage of them.

Educational training given by a good business college is primarily a preparation for business, but it is also of great value in a profession or any other occupation. Right here in Belleville is such an institution that has drawn thousands of students great distances because of the superiority of its courses and the success of its graduates. Young people and their parents should get reliable first-hand information by asking for the prospectus of Ontario Business College. The summer vacation is over and students may start at O. B. C. any time now.

Decoration Day, At 2 Cemeteries Held by Veterans

Simplicity marked the annual Army and Navy Veterans, Unit No. 201, decoration day services held at the Belleville and St. James' cemeteries on Sunday afternoon when flowers were placed upon the graves of 212 departed comrades. A short, but impressive service was also held.

The customary parade and presence of military bands were dispensed with as the most simple ceremonies were conducted owing to the lack of transportation and other wartime conditions," President Thos. York announced. However, upwards of 50 members of the local veterans and ladies from the associated Ladies' Auxiliary were present to place flowers upon 212 graves of departed comrades of all wars, including the present conflict.

A devotional period was held with Adjutant Wm. Marsh of the Salvation Army in charge of the short but impressive service following which "The Lament" and the "Prince of Wales" were played by two pipers as the grey-haired veterans of other wars stood with heads bowed in memory of fallen comrades. The graves of men, who made the supreme sacrifice in the present conflict were also decorated with flowers and following the ceremony President York expressed the appreciation of the Army and Navy Veterans here for the kind expression of flowers contributed by the citizens of Belleville for the annual War Veterans' decoration day services.

Albert Jones, president of the C.N.R. War Veterans, was present representing that organization, while the officers of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada unit 201 present were: President T. York; 1st. Vice-President: Robt. Browning; 2nd. Vice-President: J. Samain and Secretary James Lazenby. Other officers also assisted in the service and transporting the flowers to the cemeteries.

Police, Soldiers Hunt Escapees

North Bay, Aug. 30 (CP)—Police and soldiers today are searching the bushland region of Trout Lake for two or three prisoners who made their escape from the Nipissing district jail on Sunday evening. The jail is locatetd about two miles northeast of North Bay on the Trout Lake Road.

The third prisoner, German Leduc, 17, of Timmins, gave himself up this morning. He is being held for high court trial on a manslaughter charge arising out of a motorcar accident in which a Sudbury woman, Mrs. Annie Soutar, was killed.

Still at large are two soldiers, Isadore Huard, 18, and George Victor Reynolds, 21, both of Mattawa. They were both serving six-month terms for breaking and entering.

The three men were in a cell block on the second floor when they slugged guard Joe Martel, punching him on the head and in the stomach. They took his keys, but had only gone a few steps when they encountered another guard, Fred Gratton. Gratton hurriedly locked a door in their faces, not knowing the prisoners had the master key. A few minutes later they unlocked the door and were able to escape.

5,000 Crowd Armouries Lawn And Adjoining Streets to Enjoy Concert by Combined Bands

Estimated at more than five thousand persons, a crowd of enthusiastic and appreciative music loving Belleville and district residents jammed their way onto the Armouries lawn, on post office and hotel steps, and on neighboring streets Sunday night as the first massed band concert since pre-war days was staged by the combined forces of the Belleville Municipal Band and that from the Trenton R. C. A. F. station.

From the opening number which promptly at eight-thirty wafted the martial strains of "The Thin Red Line" to listeners to as far distant as the St. Thomas Church lawn until the national anthems of Canada and the United States rang out one-and-one-half hours later, the combined band personnel commanded the undivided attention of listeners. It was truly an outstanding performance and one which will live long in the memories of Belleville music lovers.

Mayor Extends Welcome

Mayor Harry Rollins officially welcomed the largest crowd ever to listen to a band concert in the city of Belleville as from the new portable band stand he voiced appreciation for the efforts of the Belleville Muncipal Band and to Group Captain R. E. McBurney, officer commanding Trenton Air Station for his kind gesture of permitting his station musicians to combine with those of Belleville in staging the concert.

"It is only through the kind permission of Group Captain McBurney and the co-operation of band Master WO. 2 E. Hancock, that this massed band effort is made possible," stated the Mayor. "Belleville music lovers have in the past appreciated the efforts of the Trenton Band, while much credit is also due to the Belleville Municipal Band. This organization has contributed much to the social life of the city." Appreciation was also expressed to Lieut-Fred Jobson, the band leader, and to Mr. Harry Moorman, band manager, and to Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry for his gesture in offering the use of the Armouries lawn for the concert.

Approximately 75 musicians, about 30 of them R. C. A. F., gave of their best as eleven popular and well-loved band numbers were played under the alternate direction of bandmasters W. O. Hancock and Jobson. Two of the numbers, the "H. M. Jollies" and the "Stars and Stripes", were conducted by Lieut. Reg. Hinchey, Belleville's outstanding band music composer, and by Sgt. Davidson of the R. C. A. F.

Well-Balanced Program

In a well-balanced program giving accent to all the various instruments of the combined bands, two solo numbers were enjoyed. Sgt. Davidson delighted with a cornet solo rendition of "The Perfect Day", while Mr. W. Grant, Belleville's premier xylophone artist, presented "Sparks" and the "Maple Leaf Rag", both arrangements by Reg. Hinchey, and as an encore gave a rendition of "Annie Laurie" to receive appreciative applause from an attentive audience.

All in all, it was an evening of top-ranking entertainment, an evening of entertainment which gave to Belleville music lovers a clearer picture of the splendid musical contribution, which the two bands are capable of giving their listeners.

Enthusiasm over the locale of the concert was expressed by both band leaders and by Mr. Harry Moorman, manager of the Belleville Band. Highly encouraged by the splendid turnout, band leaders agreed the Armouries lawn was ideal for band concerts. Mayor Rollins intimated in his brief opening address, that such concerts would be more frequent in the future.

More Than 18,000 Ration Books Issued in Four Days in City

More than 18,000 ration books were issued at the Belleville City Hall during last week's distribution of Ration Book No. 3, it was announced Monday morning by Mr. Harold Bateman, chairman of the local ration board. The entire number were issued in less than 16 working hours with at no time more than 30 women writing books.

The number of books issued on Saturday was 2,300, this being a comparatively quiet day considering the rush of Thursday and Friday afternoon when more than 13,000 books were distributed. Lineups, on the aforementioned days were caused almost entirely by residents neglecting to understand the hour for opening was two o'clock, it was stated. Many persons arrived at the City Hall well before one o'clock, while also many failed utterly to complete writing their application cards at home or follow other instructions.

In one instance a rooming house mistress signed the cards of her ten roomers and sent her neighbor's 14-year-old daughter to secure the new ration books. This was strictly against regulations and officials could not give her the ration books.

Volunteer Workers Thanked

With the issue of the No. 3 ration books now completed local ration board officials this morning expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the manner in which this project was carried out. Much credit must go to the staff of volunteer workers from the following organizations: University Women's Club, Catholic Women's League; Y.W.C.A. War Services, St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E.; Jewish Women's Auxiliary, Locomotive Engineer's Auxiliary, Kiwanis Ladies, Quintena Rebekahs, Young Women's Guild, Bridge St. United W. A., and the O.E.S. Belleville No. 55. A number of volunteers were on duty each of the four days the books were issued. The operation of writing the books was performed with the smooth efficiency of experienced workers.

Mrs. Mary Upper, under whose direction the new books were written, said today that it would be wise to have the addresses filled in on their covers. In case of loss of a ration book, much inconvenience will be saved if the book has been completely filled out, she stated.

Boys Appreciate Fine Work Of C.N.R. Veterans

That the boys serving overseas appreciate the fine gesture of the C.N.R. War Veterans' Association of this city in sending "smokes" is conveyed in the several letters received by William Hart, secretary of the Association. The Association started the innovation at the outbreak of hostilities and since its inception more than 800,000 cigarettes have been sent and through the recent draws held by the organization more money has been secured to keep pace with the steady requests for "fags."

In each of the letters received and most of them are from boys whose fathers are employees of the C.N.R. and who served with the Canadian Army in the last war they state that the cigarettes have arrived in good shape and are very much appreciated. Sgt.-Major C. Woods wrote "You do not know the way the boys feel when they get a package of "smokes" from home. We like them better than the English make." Another wrote, who is a member of the R.C.N.V.R., F. E. Morton, thanking the Association for making him an honorary member of the Association and how much he appreciated the attending of a meeting in this city. "I was made to feel at home and that the Association had a real objective in view, that of bringing a little joy and comfort to the men who were serving their country. May your good work continue."

Mr. William Hart, the secretary, stated that the veterans of the C.N.R. located in this city were only too pleased to administer the cigarette fund and that the veterans had given the fund their whole-hearted support in every way possible. Only through contributions can the fund be made available to the boys overseas.

A Popular Appointment

The appointment of Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme commander of Allied forces in southeast Asia has been welcomed particularly by the Chinese and we think it will meet with general satisfaction by the British Commonwealth of Nations as well. Britain has much to recover in that part of the world chiefly her prestige which took a severe drop after the fall of Singapore. The stronghold was regarded as impregnable but it went down before the Japanese in a matter of days in one of the most surprising debacles of the war.

Now that Lord Mountbatten has been entrusted with the task of regaining, not only lost British territoryy, but succoring China as well, there is no doubt of the ultimate outcome. The Allied Nations are not going to be satisfied with less than complete victory for they have the equipment and the armies and they will smash the enemy until he is brought to his knees.

Lord Mountbatten is the only British leader who has had experience in all three branches of the fighting forces, having been in charge of a destroyer flotilla, chief of the British Commandos and Air Vice-Marshal as well. He is young, energetic and capable. We have every reason to believe he will lead the Allied forces to victory and restore the good name of Britain to its rightful place in the eyes of the millions of Asiatics whose goodwill it is important to have.

One Reason for Butter Shortage

Some people who are inclined to complain about the butter ration and who read statements forecasting a shortage of milk in some centres this coming winter yet see statistics in their newspapers which show a fairly substantial increase in total milk production may well wonder how they are to reconcile apparently conflicting statements. The answer, comments the Ottawa Journal, is the huge quantity of milk needed for dairy products shipped overseas.

One single item of Canada's overseas commitments illustrates. In each of the 100,000 prisoners-of-war parcels packed weekly by the Red Cross in Canada there is a pound of butter, a pound of dried whole milk and a quarter pound of cheese. Roughly it would take something like 3,000,000 pounds of milk weekly to make up this amount. In short these prisoners-of-war parcels alone, actually a small part of the dairy products which must be shipped abroad from Canada, require nearly as much milk as a city the size of Ottawa for all purposes.

Mr. Churchill Fishing

Prime Minister Churchill has been fishing in Quebec Province.

A very Atlas who has carried the great share of the load of the wartorn earth for more than three years, Mr. Churchill deserves a rest, that a summer retreat, fishing, and the quiet association with friends can bring him.

No man has borne more and has triumphed more for the United Nations than he.

The world is so dependent upon its great men that they have to bear loads for all humanity. Their supreme wisdom is so valuable in a time like this.

The other day Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the great amount of work and the long hours Mr. Roosevelt and he spent in the conference at Quebec.

Great men work harder than others because they are unselfish and possessed of a lofty ideal.

But they need the relaxation which a brief holiday brings. A mind of the greatness of Mr. Churchill's has the capacity for great meditation, makes him a master in conference and a leader of great personal magnetism. But at the same time a man so truly great can enjoy that little relaxation that means so much to tired mind and body.

So the world of free men does hope that Mr. Churchill's outing in Quebec after the work and the inspiration of the conference in the Citadel will prove a blessing to this hard-working leader.

Ancient Baths Still Functioning

Many of you have seen the Roman baths during your victorious advance through Libya and Tunisia, but we have here the only Roman bath in the world which is still capable of being used as such."

That remark was made in a talk given to BBC overseas forces listeners. by the guide at the Roman baths in Bath, Somerset. While he broadcast he was standing near the famous natural hot minéral springs of Bath which supply the famous Roman baths of that city. He declared that the Roman reservoir and drains are functioning today just as they were nearly 2,000 years ago. In this war, as in the last one, the baths are being used in the cause of healing.

The war has suspended the visits of the world's tourists to this noted British spa, but the guide, who has been associated with these baths for thirty-three years, was sure they would come again. Among his more amusing recollections was that of a little boy who turned to his mother and asked: "Are all the Romans dead except the one who took us around?" He had seen the word Roman in the guide's coat collar, but had missed the word Bath on the other side. And a visitor who said: "I don't believe the springs have been hot for 2,000 years. They would have got cold in that time."

Don't Kill the Bat!

(Minneapolis Star Journal)

If bats get into your house these summer evenings, it isn't necessary to call the cops or firemen, as some Minneapolis residents have been doing. Open a door or take off a screen, turn out all the lights except the one near the exit, and the bat will be happy to be on his way.

Don't kill the bat, he has a useful appetite for insects — flies, mosquitoes, beetles, moths. In many parts of the world he is protected by law, so he can eat coddling moths that injure fruit, pests that damage cotton and other crops, and mosquitoes that spread malaria. Some grateful states erect houses for bats. Scientists, investigating why certain Florida keys have mosquitoes and others have none, found that the insects were absent where bats were prevalent.

Watch a bat at dusk as you finish work in the garden. He darts about as fast as a bird — an elusive shadow grabbing mosquitoes on the wing. He won't get into your hair, and he doesn't harbor any more parasites than other animals or birds. His wife is a careful mother who often carries her twin babies along as she hunts food; or she may hang them upside down on a branch to wait her return.

Some tropical bats live partially on fruit but in this region bats eat only insects. The flying animals come out at night and hibernate — usually in a cave — all winter.

The bat is more afraid of you than you are of him. If by mistake he gets into your house, let him live to make your life pleasant by reducing the number of insects.

China Says "No"

(Detroit Free Press)

Japan has recently put out three peace feelers and the Chinese Government has spurned them all, well-informed sources in Chungking report. What else could Tokio expect? China is pledged to stand by the United Nations and not make a separate peace. Also self-interest compels it to fight on until the Japanese are driven from its soil.

Japan would obviously like to get its foot out of the trap in China but the Chinese, who have been fighting for more than six years under disheartening conditions, are not likely to agree to anything short of unconditional surrender.

HOME ON LEAVE

There's a twinkle in her eye
  Haven't seen for quite a while.
Even strangers passing by
  Catch the beauty of her smile.
What's the reason? I believe
It's because he's home on leave.

I've been whistling 'round the place
  Tunes I fancied I'd forgot.
There's a grin upon my face.
  Now my troubles matter not.
Ask me why? I'll not deceive.
It's because he's home on leave.

Janet hums a bit of song;
  Dances lightly to and fro;
All is right she fancied wrong
  Just a day or two ago.
Why has Janet ceased to grieve?
It's because he's home on leave.

Now the laughter's as of old!
  Now the table's gay once more!
Now the jokes are being told!
  Home is as it was before.
Happiness we now retrieve,
Just because he's home on leave.

Whither American Policy?

III

When Mr. Litvinoff left Washington last May informed persons knew he would not return. They also knew that he was deeply discouraged. He had been sent not as a mere ambassador, but as a great statesman, whose mission was to inaugurate a new policy, and establish the basis of a sound and permanent co-operation between Russia and America, in war and peace.

The orientation toward America would, it was hoped, become the main line in Soviet foreign policy.

There were good historical reasons for this. In the history of both states, there have always been antagonisms regarding internal administration, but never conflicts in foreign policy.

Of all the people whom the Soviet government could have selected Mr. Litvinoff was best fitted for the task. He is a genuine internationalist. He has been, throughout the history of the Soviet Union, a champion of co-operation with the democracies of the west.

It is on open secret that when he left, he was thoroughly depressed and felt he had failed in his mission. He had been unable to produce concrete results, either regarding military policy, or in the matter of Russia's western frontiers and strategic interests. Even more important was the general atmosphere in Washington, which appeared hostile to Russian influence where ever it might appear, and which seemed to find it unimportant to take account of the Russian attitude.

This situation, which was unhappy enough, has certainly not been improved by the enforced resignation of Mr. Sumner Welles.

When Mr. Litvinoff left there was an unclear situation in the State Department. The dominating position was occupied by the Secretary, whose interests have always been tariff questions and Free Trade, and who has displayed a deplorable lack of understanding of the larger political questions of Europe and the psychology of other peoples.

Mr. Welles, as Under-Secretaary of State, was neither pro- nor anti-Russian, but actutely conscious of the supreme necessity of reaching basic agreements with all our allies. Younger and more versatile than his chief, he knew that the time to reach decisions is in advance of major operations, and not after them. He was in favor of pursuing a more energetic and constructive policy. Or—to say it all more simply—he was in favor of a policy. He was not the man to be discouraged by difficulties, that frankly, were and are, in the way. By that fact alone, he was bound to come into conflict with the people who apparently believe that a policy is a luxury not to be afforded in wartime.

Now, it has not been amusing to see how this difference of opinion and temperament degenerated into a bitter personal fight. To put it bluntly, it has been disgusting.

Through different channels, a personal smear campaign was begun against Mr. Welles, much of it a whispering campaign irrelevant, untrue, and completely libellous in its nature.

And whatever Mr. Welles did cause suspicion in Mr. Hull's bosom.

For instance, Mr. Welles was accessible to top-rank journalists, writers and editors, who have spent their lives in a study of foreign affairs and other countries and peoples. Always discreet, and of impeccable loyalty to his Department, he felt the necessity of understanding what was going on in other peoples' minds. He was profoundly concerned about the political position of America in this war and in the world to come. And there is exactly no one who can take Mr. Welles' place and enjoy equal prestige amongst knowledgable people in this country, in South America, and abroad in general.

The situation was critical enough, and this move makes it more critical. It will cause distrust amongst the Russians, the French, the Latin Americans, the British, and the best informed Americans.

It is of no use to explain to other nations that there were domestic necessities impelling this move. If the President's authority with his own party is so weak that he must take a move which he well knows is, to say the least, internationally unfortunate, in order to hold a majority in line, what confidence can any nation have in the continuance of any policy? Other nations, fighting for their very lives, simply cannot understand such frivolity.

It has been proposed, as a way out, to send Sumner Welles as Ambassador to Moscow. Somebody of the calibre of Sumner Welles certainly should have been sent here a long time ago. But this indecorous affair makes that impossible. It is not a question of finding a face-saving device for Mr. Welles. Mr. Welles can save his own face.

What is at stake is our relationship with our strongest ally on the European continent. One cannot denote an under-secretary to such an ambassadorship, nor would he have the slightest authority in Moscow or anywhere else on earth, as long as he was subordinated to Mr. Hull. No one would believe that his reports would find a sympathetic ear.

What is needed is for the President to cut through party politics with a forthright policy and mobilize the forces he can control and influence behind it, instead of bickering for a majority and adapting a policy accordingly.

Washington's Salary

The common notion that George Washington did not receive a salary as President of the United States is the result of the confusion of two situations.

Washington refused to accept anything for his personal services as commander-in-chief of the Continental army during the Revolutionary war.

He accepted only reimbursement for his personal expenses.

On his way to Annapolis, where he resigned his commission to Congress December 23, 1783, General Washington stopped at Philadelphia and gave the comptroller of the treasury a neatly written manuscript containing a detailed and accurate statement of his expenses in the public service from the time he took command of the army at Cambridge. The total was $64,315, which was paid by Congress.

Washington became President of the United States under the new federal government ~~in 1789,~~ he wished to serve his country on the same basis.

In his first message to Congress he said:

"To the preceding observations I have one to add, which will be more properly addressed to the House of Representatives. It concerns myself, and will, therefore, be as brief as possible.

"When I was first honored with a call into the service of my country, then on the eve of an arduous struggle for its liberties, the light in which I contemplated my duty required that I should renounce every pecuniary compensation. From this resolution I have in no instance departed. And being still under the impression which produced it, I must decline, as inapplicable to myself, any share in the personal emoluments which may be indispensably included in a permanent provision for the executive department; and must accordingly pray that the pecuniary estimates for the station in which I am placed, may, during my continuance in it, be limited to such actual expenditures as the public good may be thought to require".

But Congress would not stand for this. By act of September 24, 1789, it fixed the compensation of the President at $25,000 a year, payable quarterly.

Washington served two terms and should have received $200,000 as salary, but he actually received only $196,092. The salary from March 4 to April 30, 1789, amounting to $3,908, was lost to him because of the delay in organizing the government, owing to the failure to secure earlier the attendance of a quorum of the Congress.

HELP LIBERATED LANDS TO BECOME SELF-SUSTAINING

540 Million People Under Axis Rule Will Need Help.

STEPS TO BE TAKEN

Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 27 (CP).—The United Nations will play neither Santa Claus nor Simon Legree in helping liberated peoples in this war and afterward, it was indicated by Eugene Staley, technical expert of the United States Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation.

Staley, speaking before the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs said the program would be "directed toward rescuing people, by soup kitchens and handouts where necessary, but above all by helping them to become self-sustaining again as quickly as possible."

The problem will be the oldest in economics, Staley said—to go as far as possible with limited resources toward meeting almost unlimited needs.

540 Millions Will Need Relief.

Some 540,000,000 people, he said, are under the rule of the Axis, for whom relief and rehabilitation will be necessary, for three reasons:

1. Humanitarian and moral.
2. Military—to help efficient military occupation and operations.
3. Long range political and economic reasons—to restore liberated peoples uickly to a self-respecting, self-sustaining basis—"in their interest, and our own, too."

"The problem is how to make too little food do the job, and how to make too little shipping and too few railway cars do the job, how to make too little money do the job," Staley said.

Steps To Be Taken.

This would be attacked three ways, he said:

1. All available resources must be mobilized—the job is too big for any one country to handle alone. All countries must contribute what they can.
2. Distribution must be efficient and equitable—where it will do the most good.
3. Rehabilitation — helping people to help themselves. Measures should be taken to restore public utilities, provide repair parts for productive machinery, seeds for agriculture, and rebuild credit and currency systems.

Getting liberated peoples back on their economic feet, Staley said, would provide "the best kind of customer for the products of the new world."

BULGARIAN GOV'T

The possibility of a popular uprising which would overthrow the monarchy and establish a republican or socialist government under the sway of Russia—upon whom the Bulgarians have traditionally looked as a friend—was not entirely discounted here.

Demands Close Watching.

However, such a revolt was considered possible only if the Germans are unable to send sufficiently strong forces into Bulgaria or to the borders to keep the situation in hand.

In any event the situation apparently will demand close watching by Hitler.

First reports indicated that the death of Boris provoked consternation throughout Bulgaria.

(The BBC reported yesterday crowds had staged peace demonstrations in the streets of Sofia and said the German Embassy in the Bulgarian capital had been stoned. The broadcast said Boris' death had precipitated an internal crisis and that communication with other countries had been suspended. The peace demonstrators were said to have shouted for Philov's resignation.)

45 DANISH NAVY

One of the latest reports reaching Sweden said members of the cabinet, including Prime Minister Eric Scavenius, were in interment with King Christian at Sorgenfri Castle.

The cabinet conferred with the King until the early hours Sunday before Gen. Hermann Vón Hannecken, German commander in Denmark, issued his proclamation at 4.10 a.m., announcing the Nazi martial law.

The King threatened to abdicate if the cabinet accepted a drastic ultimatum submitted by German Minister Werner Best on Saturday.

The Danish people received little information of the swift movements of events in their country, as no newspapers had been published for two days.

Take Over Court Functions

The Danish radio later announced Von Hannecken had taken over all court and civil functions. The radio broadcast a warning that courts martial would be established to impose the death penalty and other severe sentences for violators of martial law.

Danish laws will be revised along Nazi lines, in addition to "a new arrangement of the public life of Denmark", the Von Hannecken announcement said it added loyal civil servants would be retained under German control.

(The Nazi-controlled Kalundborg radio in Denmark, meanwhile, was recorded by U.S. government monitors as asserting: "It can now be stated absolute quiet reigns all over the country". The broadcast added the "state administration and all enterprises, including those hitherto on strike, now are working.")

Marine and royal guard forces fought a brief but spirited battle with German troops who tried to invade the royal barracks and naval yard in Copenhagen as the scuttling was in progress, Danes who escaped to Sweden reported.

Forty-five vessels of various types, including two new destroyers and nine submarines, were sunk, ammunition dumps blown up, and harbor fortifications wrecked.

The light cruiser Niels Juel tried to escape but a German war plane bombed and sank her. The crew of 369 was saved and landed at Helsingoer.

Surround Royal Palace.

Nazi troops surrounded the royal palace at Amalienborg, but the royal guard blocked all entrances and exchanged a barrage of gunfire with the Germans. Resistance ceased only when King Christian X gave the order.

The king, who will be 73 next month, was interned in Sorgenfri Castle outside Copenhagen. Nazi troops were posted around the castle.

(The London Daily Telegraph reported from Stockholm this morning that King Christian was expected to abdicate. This report said diplomatic circles in the Swedish capital were discussing formation of a free Danish government in London.)

The military dictatorship was imposed as the climax of a rapid series of sabotage acts in the past two weeks throughout the reluctant German vassal state, overrun by Hitler's forces in 1940.

Gen. Hermann Von Hannecken, the German commander in Denmark, issued the decree, threatening "ruthless use of arms" to enforce it.

All Strikes Banned.

It banned all strikes, civil communications, street traffic after dark and assemblies of more than five persons except for church services. The death penalty was provided for those who incide workers to strike "to the detriment of German armed forces".

The German move to take over full control of the kingdom—with Danish civil servants instructed to stay on the job under direct Nazi supervision—came after the government of Premier Eric Scavenius flatly refused to bow to a drastic eight-point ultimatum presented Saturday by German Minister Werner Best.

It was said this ultimatum carried many of the same terms embraced within the martial law order.

Travellers reaching Sweden said the Danish cabinet promptly resigned when the demands were presented. All were said to have been arrested, although there appeared a possibility some may have been included among a group of civilians brought to Sweden by the fleeing naval vessels.

Admiral Vedel, commander of the Danish navy, was reported without confirmation to have reached Malmoe.

Stockholm, Aug. 30, (AP)—Prime Minister per Albin Hansson of Sweden said in a speech at Kalmar yesterday that swiftly-changing events in Denmark were a "warning to all of us always to be watchful".

Observing the Danish crisis was an example that "situations can change very soon", he added—

"Our hearts are beating for Denmark".

The Prime Minister and other Swedish Government leaders have maintained that neutral Sweden is in a dangerous war position.

Commenting editorially on Denmark, the Stockholm newspaper Tidningin predicted difficulties for Germans handling Danes "who will not surrender freedom". It said "German militarists, irritated by sabotage acts, were guilty of all encroachments and provocation between German soldiers and Danish civilians".

The Stockholm newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda said that tightening of the German Reich over Denmark "comes as Germany's position changes for the worse".

"After defeats on the Eastern front, Africa and Italy and with Allied invasion threatening, Germany behaves more and more desperately in occupied countries", the paper added.

Calgary, Aug. 30 —(CP)— Two training aircraft, one R.C.A.F. and the other R.A.F., collided in midair over Calgary Saturday, plummeted down, just missing residences and carried three airmen to their deaths. One trainee, an Australian, parachuted to safety, landing in the same block as the plane carrying his comrades, an Australian and a Briton.

Police Investigate Many Calls Relating To Escaped Prisoners

Trenton (Special) — Starting about 7.30 Friday night the Trenton police have been constantly on the lookout and answering calls from citizens regarding the escaped German prisoners from Kingston. They have spent hours searching in swamps and bush-land in Trenton and up to a late hour Sunday they were still receiving calls. However, none of the suspects have proved to be the wanted men.

Police, however, are pleased to know that the public are on the alert and they are always ready and willing to investigate all calls.

Saturday Market

Though all the edible products were in abundance on the market on Saturday, no stall drew the crowd as did one out-of-town vendor with several tiny spaniels. These little black and white, and liver and white, baby puppies, with their drooping ears and sad eyes, were all dancing about endeavouring to make a good impression on the shoppers so that each might secure for himself a permanent home with some kindly family. Needless to say several were carried home where they are probably now romping about with some loving child. The males brought $15.00 each while females went for $10.00. With them was one lone frisky Irish terrier who seemed to be getting not much attention.

Fowl was extremely plentiful, varying from the smalled of broilers to huge mature fowl, the price ranging from 75c for the broilers to $2.00 for the larger birds. On the whole the price had dropped a little as several farmers were varying from the smallest of broilwith 40c and 42c of the previous weeks. Eggs were 48 and 50c for Grade "A" extras with talk of the top price next Saturday being 55c.

All the vegetables were in abundance. Corn dropped to 20c per dozen, cauliflower from 15c up, cabbage 5c up, potatoes 50c per peck, celery 10 and 15c, tomatoes 10c per berry box or 25c per six quart basket, carrots, beets and all the other small vegetables 5c per bunch. Cukes ranged from 25c per basket to 75c for gherkins and were so plentiful some farmers were left with them to take home. Beans brought 5c per box or 25c per basket. Pepper-squash were 5c each, marrows 10c and the huge Hubbard squash up to 30c.

Apples were plentiful Melbas at 50c per basket, Duchess and St. Lawrence from 35c up. Still huckleberries at 35c per box or $1.75 per basket, with very few plums offered at the early market.

Gladioli were in prufusion bringing all the way from 25c per dozen to 15c per spike for the more rare varieties. Other flowers sold from 15c per bunch up.

HERE'S HOW I MAKE COFFEE GO FURTHER

FIRST of all—buy coffee for flavor! I use super-rich Chase & Sanborn Coffee!

Then I make it a rule to keep coffee in an air-tight container. And to get the right strength, I always measure the coffee and water carefully. Of course, I keep the coffee-pot scoured clean, and make only the exact amount of coffee needed—never more. And I serve it as soon as possible.

But getting plenty of flavor in the first place is most important! So I say—be sure you get super-rich Chase & Sanborn Coffee. More flavor ounce for ounce. Remember—quality coffee goes further.

A Report to the Canadian People on the War Production Effort of TIP TOP TAILORS Limited

TIP TOP TAILORS

In 1939, when Canada joined the war against the Axis, Tip Top Tailors was assigned to its production job—uniforms for the Armed Forces.

As a leader in Canada's clothing industry, it was only natural that we should be in the forefront of this gigantic task of helping to outfit our fighting men.

Our entire plant facilities were at once radically re-arranged. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were expended in new plants and equipment. Additional hundreds of workers were employed. The watch-word at Tip Top Tailors became (and still is) "full speed ahead on war production!"

Naturally, we encountered many problems at first. However, our three decades of clothing experience, the collective skill and knowledge of our personnel, overcame all problems in short order.

What is the situation today? For over one year and a half now, our plant on Fleet Street, Toronto, has produced a military garment at the unprecedented rate of one every 8 seconds! Over 80% of our complete production is now ear-marked for our fighting men. These uniforms are made to rigid standards. Only the finest materials and the highest type of workmanship are permitted.

And what about civilian clothing? We are still helping to dress Canadian men and women in fine tailored-to-measure clothing—but in proportion to the facilities available. If you are in need of civilian clothing, the above paragraphs will help you to understand why you may be asked to wait a little longer than usual for delivery of your Tip Top garment. Victory comes first, and to ensure victory our armed forces must come first—every time.

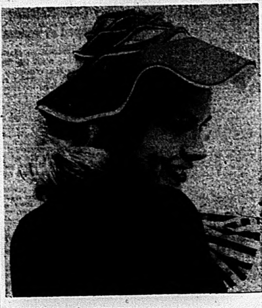
The May Basket Bonnet



No sewing, no elastic, no pins, to complicate this. cutout. felt. hat which is a latticed. pair. of felt pancakes when off the head. Mix-mate your own colors in dewy or brave colors.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

VERSATILE as a hat can be; here is one which should charm the younger set into covering their pate: prettily. It is called the May basket hat, because it is cut from felt in two layers of contrasting color, as is a crepe paper May basket . . but it's worn thrown over the crown instead of being gathered about the edge for a basket shape. There is a pin money price tag on this bonnet, and as the double layers are not stitched together, one can quick-change color schemes at will, by owning several discs. The hat lies flat as a pancake when off the head, which makes it a good item for the traveler. Wear it on the back or the front of your head.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Church Etiquette at Wedding For Non-Members of the Faith

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother and father are dead, and for several years my two sisters and I have lived together. Now my oldest sister is to be married to a young man who is a Catholic. She has become a Catholic, and is to be married in the Catholic Church. We are Protestants, know nothing about the Catholic service and are, I must admit, very worried about what to do at her wedding. Do we have to kneel and try to follow the Catholic service, or would it be proper for us to do as we would in our church?

—R. O. N.

It is entirely unnecessary for you and your sister to be at all worried about what to do during your sister's marriage ceremony. Although it is not necesary for you to take part in the Catholic service, you should follow the order of the service, and you should rise, sit or kneel when the worshippers do so. This is etiquette in any church. Your sister and her fiance will give you some helpful directing, will show you the words and directions of the ceremony and with this preview and some alert attention on your part during the ceremony, you will, I am sure, find yourselves sufficiently equipped to follow the service.

Car-sharing at Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Under the present difficulties of transportation by car, would it be correct for my bridegroom and me to take my two bridesmaids in the car with us, after the ceremony, to the studio to have the photographs taken and then on to the reception? 2. I have a stepfather, but I have retained my father's name. I would like to send my announcements in the name of my mother and stepfather. Is this correct and if so, what is the correct wording?

—R. B.

1. Yes. Nowadays this "car-seating arrangement" very often must be made. 2. Yes, it is correct for you and a gracious gesture too, to send your announcements in the name of your mother and stepfather. Then the announcements usually read:

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Smith announce the marriage of their daughter, Roberta Robinson etc.

gracious as this form, is:
grasious as this form, is:
announce the marriage of Mrs.
Smith's daughter

Where Man Wears Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a man wears a wedding ring on which finger should he wear it?

—J. L.

Customarily the groom wears his wedding ring on the third finger of the left hand, the traditional "wedding ring finger." But occasionally a groom prefers to wear it on the little finger of his left hand.

Doing Our Bit

In the very words "doing our bit" is implied the thousand-and-one things we must do and keep on doing, no matter how trying, no matter how monotonous. For these thousand-and-one things contribute to the millions of things needed to keep our soldiers and sailors fed and marching, to bring them home sooner.

The Marry-Go-Round

Character Always Wins

It is character, stamina, staying power, which is winning the war in Russia and in Africa. It is character which always wins in the long run. The power to hold-to, hold out, to hold on!

When the motion-picture director shouts the little command "Hold it," he sets the star the most difficult task possible. It is easy enough for her to catch the mood, (love, hate, fear) and register it. But the HOLD it until the camera stops clicking — that's something else!

That's the real test of the actress and incidentally of all the rest of us. It applies to everything in life, whether it's a war, a job, love, fame, success or money.

Fame and popularity are sometimes won overnight, by a simple twist of luck or fate—or the publicity man. A brand new idea, a clever stunt, a stroke of luck, a brilliant piece of press agenting—and there you are, right on the MAP. But where are you tomorrow?

It is easy enough to catch the public eye—but holding the public attention for more than a fleeting moment is a Herculean feat in these days. Catching on is only the first step—it's holding on that counts. Any writer, actor or public character will tell you that.

And it's the same with money. It may be hard to make money and harder still to save it; but, as a financier once told me, the most colossal achievement of all is to hold ONTO your money after you have saved it.

The world seems to be full of people hanging around eagerly waiting to take it away from you or to show you how to spend it or to invest it or to gamble it away. But it takes character and eternal vigilance to keep it.

And there's love. We get our little slice off the loaf of love, soon or late. Everybody is loved, sometime, somewhere, somehow by somebody.

But to HOLD love—the glamorous, intangible elusive gift, that is the feat magnificant, which requires the greatest amount of self-control, self-sacrifice, patience and flatter'SfipredikSil fP ho N o

STAYING POWER: That is the one great vital quality in everything, from human nature to battles—from marriage to war—from love to work!

Whether it's success, popularity, power, happiness or a fortress, those who can HOLD it, are the conquerors of life.

Genius, luck, beauty, charm—we all want these. But the thing that counts is CHARACTER.

AT HOME dresses that are slightly more formal than the negligee are in demand. Black crepe is used for one of these floor-length at-home dinner dresses. It has a full-length skirt panel of light blue crepe that hangs in soft folds. Long sleeved, it has a surplice neck and bodice in matching blue crepe with criss-cross drape through the midriff.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Essential That Children Drink Sufficient Fluids

About 70 per cent. of the weight of the body is made up of water. This water comes from the food eaten and from various fluids which are drunk. Children especially require large amounts of water. If they do not get enough, they are liable to develop disturbances of the stomach and bowel which, in turn, may cause even more water to be lost from the body. Children are exceptionally susceptible to any changes in the water content of the body. It is therefore of great importance to make sure that infants and older children do get enough fluids.

Water may be lost from the body in various ways. It may occur from continued vomiting. When this happens the body also loses a large amount of hydrochloric acid which is secreted by the stomach. This removal of acid leads to an increase in the amount of alkali in the blood and tissues so that a condition known as alkalosis may develop. In this disorder there are slow and shallow breathing, spasm of the muscles and headache in older persons.

When alkalosis occurs, Dr. Chester A. Stewart of New Orleans suggests that the patient be given injections of a fluid called Ringer's solution. This solution supplies alkali and acids in equal amounts and tends to restore the normal balance between acids and alkalies in the blood and tissues.

If convulsions occur as a result of alkalosis, injections of calcium gluconate may be useful. The patient may also be allowed to breathe in carbon dioxide and oxygen. If the loss of fluids in the body occurs as a result of diarrhea an opposite condition develops because the diarrhea alkalies are lost from the body and acidosis occurs. In such instances the symptoms are much like those of shock. There is deep breathing and often loss of consciousness. In treating this condition a substance known as sodium lactate may be injected into a vein. A solution of bicarbonate of soda may also be used to relieve the severe acidosis, but in both of these conditions the important thing is to restore the fluids to the body.

Whenever the loss of body fluids is more than about one-sixteenth of the body weight, symptoms will occur. It is important in new-born infants, particularly, to offer water at regular intervals between feedings although, of course, no effort should be made to force a baby to take water when he does not want it.

Honor Recent Bride

Consecon — The Misses Marion, Evelyn and Barbara Mikel were joint hostesses at a cup and saucer shower given in honor of Mrs. Claude Ebbett (nee Leora Simonds) of Consecon, at their Consecon lakeside home.

The guests spent an enjoyable hour of social chatting on the lawn before entering the living room which was decorated with pink and white streamers and bells, pink petunias, gladioli and ferns.

The Bridal Chorus was played by Miss Barbara Mikel as the bride entered the room and took her place in a chair over which there was an arch of spruce boughs, pink and white streamers and a bell. Miss Inez Symons, of Port Hope and Miss Marion Mikel carried in a prettily decorated basket containing the many cups and saucers which Mrs. Ebbett unwrapped and then fittingly expressed her sentiments of gratitude to all the girls present. She invited all to visit her and her husband at their home in Consecon.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses. The dining room table was centred with blue and white bachelor buttons and blue candles.

A unique feature of the gathering was that ten school teachers were present, eight of them having been room-mates while attending Peterborough Normal School.

Guests were present from Port Hope, Oakwood, Wellington, Carrying Place and Stockdale.

WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

Meat en Brochettes

Many intriguing combinations exist of meats and vegetables on skewers

Have you tried cooking 1-inch cubes of lamb shoulder this way? Push the pieces of lamb on to wood or metal skewers till skewer is filled—season—brush with melted fat. Broil or pan-broil under a hot broiler or on a hot pan for 10 minutes; turn and cook for 5 minutes more. Serve on a bed of rice with barbecue sauce. That is the standard "en brochette" procedure. But the same cooking method can be used both to introduce the nutritionally-so-desirable variety meats into the diet—try slices of parboiled beef kidney or liver between the cubes of lamb—and to give interest to meat left-overs. Almost any previously cooked meat can be used to "extend" fresh meat on skewers. Or, in fact, can be used alone with suitable vegetables . . . mushrooms, parboiled tender young carrots, small, firm tomatoes, pieces of peppers, or with variety meats as suggested above. This is another dodge—so useful in wartime—for dressing up quite ordinary materials to give a festive feeling.

MERE WORDS CAN'T TELL YOU the difference between an ordinary wash . . . and clothes washed the Sunlight way. You have to see the gleaming brightness and sweet-smelling freshness yourself. For Sunlight does far more than remove surface dirt. A touch of Sunlight on collars, cuffs, edges, puts a film of soap right on the dirt. Then the rich Sunlight lather loosens even deeply imbedded grit and grease.

NO WONDER CLOTHES COME BRIGHTER! Not a streaky bright. Not "Half-Washed". But spotlessly radiant. Yes! Even grimy work clothes win admiring glances. Try Sunlight this washday—and see what its "extra-soapiness" means to you!

PROPAGANDA AMMUNITION FIRED AT NAZIS IN SICILY

A type of ammunition though not lethal but one that brought a great deal of results was the propaganda shells used by the Allies in Sicily. Here we see how the Allies fired "common sense" into Sicily. To the LEFT, Private G. Harper of Aberdeen, Scotland, and Sergt. J. Jarvis, of Paddington, England, members of the unit, unpack the sheets containing the verbal "pleas" telling the Nazis of the fast progress of the Allies and the futility of fighting it out. The shells that these rolls were put into are seen alongside the packages. At the RIGHT is shown a shell being placed into the gun breach and then sent on its way to save lives.

A series of pictures made by the U.S. Army Air Force anti-submarine command and just released, showing the sea-air duel between a Nazi submarine somewhere in the North Atlantic, and a B-24 plane patrolling the high seas. This was one of 13 clashes with subs during which the planes probably destroyed five subs and damaged five others. This sub was surprised on the surface. Going into a steep dive the pilot ordered bomb bay doors opened and depth charges enveloped the target. The pictures in sequence shows Nazis in the conning tower, apparently too surprised to man the deck guns. In the second picture the sub starts to crash dive as depth charges splash in the water. In the third picture the depth charges explode as plumes of water rise into the air.

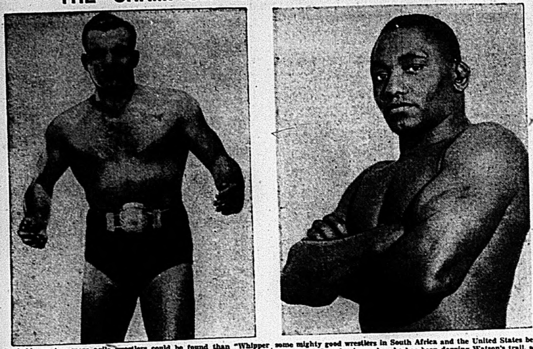
THE CHAMPION AND THE CHALLENGER



Probably no two more agile wrestlers could be found than "Whipper Billie" Watson, British Empire heavyweight wrestling champion, and "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne, the ebony-hued lad from Cape Town, who meets "The Whip" at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night for the Empire title. Besides two great preliminaries, that include villains like Jerry Monahan and John Katan, the main bout is the big thing Promoter Frank Tunney is bringing to Belleville. Claybourne had beaten some mighty good wrestlers in South Africa and the United States before he invaded Canada since when he has been dogging Watson's trail, seeking a shot at the Empire crown. Claybourne is a strong,speedy wrestler, who feels his style is equal to that of "The Whip." Wednesday night will answer all questions and doubtless will be the greatest bout ever staged in the Hume Arena. Reserve tickets are even now at a premium, so call Cook's cigar store at 74 and don't be disappointed.

TORONTO LEAFS NEED FIVE WINS TO CLINCH FLAG

Syracuse Chiefs Playing Best Ball in Loop at the Present Time

NEWARK OUT

By the Associated Press

Syracuse's uprising Chiefs have been playing .773 ball for the last 2 1-2 weeks but there is little likelihood the third place club will be able to take the International League lead away from Toronto Maple Leafs in the two weeks left of the season.

The Leafs need only five victories to shut the first-place door in the face of both Newark and Syracuse.

Syracuse won its 17th decision out of its last 22 starts yesterday by taking two games from Baltimore, 6-1 and 7-1. Arnold (Lefty) Carter pitched the first triumph and Red Bartleson handled the mound duties for the winners in the second.

Newark's losing streak was extended when Jersey City swept the Sunday twin bill, 2-1 and 1-0. In the nightcap Bob Wells handcuffed the second place Bears with a lone hit, a single by Don Savage in the fifth.

Rufe Gentry won his 19th game of the year as Buffalo pushed Montreal to the .500 mark, 10-7, and Toronto's Nick Strincevich blanked Rochester, 4-0.

Strincevich was in such command over the Red Wings that not one of Pepper Martin's Atheletes reached second base. It was the Toronto hurler's third victory of the year over Rochester.

Toronto split with Montreal in Saturday's games, winning the first half of a doubleheader 1-0 and dropping the second 3-0. Rochester swept a twin bill from Buffalo, 9-1 and 6-0, and Jersey City defeated Newark 3-2 and Syracuse shutout Baltimore 1-0.

Golf Tournament Tied Up as Flyers Win Third Match

It's all tied up in the Bay of Quinte team golf tournament with divot-diggers from No. 6 Repair Depot (R.C.A.F.) winning the third match played over the Belleville Golf Club course. The Quinte golfers took the initial 18-hole tournament while Belleville Golf captured the second match, but the Air Force golfers bounced back into the picture by taking 30 points in the third contest to Belleville Golf's 27 and Quinte Club's 15. The fourth and final match will be played over the Trenton course.

Bud Corbett, of No. 6 R.D., tied with Ted Hughes of the Belleville Golf Club for the low net score at 33, while R. Brown was next with a 34. The low gross score went to G. Watson of No. 6 R.D., who shot a 35 par course game.

The individual net scores were:

No. 6 R. D. — Corbett 33, Deduke 35, Watson 35, Bayliss 36, Proctor 36, Greenfield 40, Davidson 41, Humphries 41, Clarke 43, Meville 43, Weese 44, Wilson 46.

Belleville Golf — Hughes 33, Brown 34, Ketcheson 37, Ogilvie 38, Cousins 38, Brown 41, Hibbard 42, Wonnacott 43, Anderson 44, White 45, Davis 46.

Quinte Club—Yanover 35, Walker 36, Carruthers 36, Green 38, Steer 40, Orr 40, Jewell 40, Cooke 41, Ridley 42, Hart 45, Little 45, McIntosh 47.

JUNIORS BEATEN 19-1 AT OSHAWA IN FIRST GAME

Comedy of Errors by Locals Enabled Winners to Run Bases at Will PLAY HERE WED.

Playing listless ball against a heavier hitting and snappier fielding team on the day's play, the local Army and Navy Veterans' Junior softball aggregation absorbed a rather lopsided shellacking at the hands of "Soup" Campbell's Oshawa Juniors at the Motor City on Saturday afternoon in the first game of the O.A.S.A. Junior playdowns.

The score was 19-1 with the locals committing a comedy of errors that permitted the Oshawa nine to run bases almost at will. The return game will be played back in Belleville Wednesday at 6:15 with a possible third game to be played back in Oshawa.

"Red" Carson, Belleville's lanky first sacker was the only player on the Army and Navy team to play anything like the ball that the club is capable of, according to the team's mentor, Homer Townsend. "Red" fielding practically everything that came his way and represented practically the team's entire offensive strength as he conked out three hits in four official tries at the plate.

Pitching chores for the locals were shared by Young and Boyle with the former starting the game. Arnott did the receiving in place of Rogers who has enlisted in the navy. Failure to hit in the pinch and the comedy of errors committed by the locals dispelled any chances of their gaining a game advantage on the Oshawa nine as 16 of the Army and Navy lads were left stranded on the baselines.

Oshawa presented a fine fielding team and a bunch of hitters that really went places at the plate, according to reports of returning players, but Coach Townsend feels the lads got a poor game out of their systems and is assured of giving the western team a real battle on Wednesday evening.

There is a possibility Cincinnati Reds may overhaul St. Louis Cardinals in another of those hot September finishes usually associated with the National League.

A glance at the standings shows the Cards out in front by 10 1-2 games with only 34 left to play. If the Reds maintain their remarkable .778 pace of the last fortnight and sweep a four-game series with the Cards at St. Louis next week-end, the senior loop will witness another dogfight right down to the wire.

The largest crowd in the history of Crosley Field—38,017—turned out in Cincinnati yesterday and watched the Reds win the opener of a double bill from the Cards 5-3, and lose the nightcap, 3-2 in 11 innings after coming from behind to tie the score in the ninth on Max Marshall's single.

Elmer Riddle received credit for his 17th victory in the first game, although it took Clyde Shoun's relief pitching to stop the Cards from the seventh on. In the nightcap it was hurler Max Lanier who kept the Cards' lead from being shaved to 8 1-2 games.

Shy of Record

Rudy York, Detroit slugger, clouted two homers, his 29th and 30th of the year, as the Tigers beat St. Louis Browns twice, 15-5 and 4-2. York fell one shy of tying the record of 18 roundtrippers in one month. The Tigers are idle today and tomorrow.

Charley Keller and Roy Weatherly each walloped two homers and Spud Chandler won his 17th of the season as New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Boston Red Sox, 6-4 and 5-1 to maintain their 9 1-2 game edge in the American League.

Rip Sewell of Pittsburgh, failed to become the first 20-game winner in the Majors when Chicago Cubs knocked him out of the box with a seven run uprising in the ninth to win the first game of a twin bill, 11-2. The Pirates gained a split by taking the nightcap, 3-1.

Washington came from behind in both games to beat Philadelphia Athletics twice, 5-4 in 11 innings and 2-1.

Mel Harder and Allie Reynolds pitched Cleveland to a double victory over Chicago White Sox, 2-1 and 6-1.

Dodgers Win Double Bill

Brooklyn swept a doubleheader from the Phillies, 3-1 and 8-0. Whit Wyatt pitched perfect ball for six innings of the opener, then yielded six hits in winning, 3-1. Ed Head likewise held the Phillies to six hits in chalking up his shutout.

Jim Tobin and Al Javery each won their 12th games of the season in pitching Boston Braves to a double triumph over New York Giants, 4-1 and 1-0.

In Saturday's National League games, the Giants landed on the Braves for 14 hits and a 12-0 shutout. Brooklyn got 20 hits off four Phillies pitchers for a 14-7 decision, Pittsburgh nosed out Chicago 5-4 and Cincinnati won a 4-3 decision over St. Louis.

In the American League, Chicago defeated Cleveland 7-6, the Browns defeated Detroit 10-5, Boston won 3-1 over New York and the Senators turned back the Athletics 1-0.

Hurling Duel Is Broken Up By Triple With Army Winning

By the Canadian Press

Pitching duel between Max Samuely of Stratford Nationals and Tom White of London Army in the first tilt of the Inter County Senior play-offs at London Saturday was broken up when centre-fielder Art Herchenratter slammed out a triple in the 10th inning with none out, then ambled home on an error with the winning counter of a 3-2 decision.

Herchenratter, who had played hockey with Detroit Red Wings until the war intervened, previously clouted out a three-bagger which brought in a valuable run and played errorless ball in the centre garden while seven boots were being recorded against other players. White was effective on the mound for the soldiers, too, allowing only five hits and twice retiring the side when Stratforders filled the bases.

Needing three hits to round out a total of 2,000 safeties in his Major League life, shortstop Arkie Vaughan of the Brooklyn Dodgers hit the mark in yesterday's doubleheader with the Phillies at Philadelphia by notching a single in the opener and a single and two-bagger in the second game. Vaughan started the current season with 1,846 hits.

Four entries from Ottawa made a clean sweep of the Inter-city Armed Services lawn tennis tourney at the Seigniory Club Saturday, taking the four singles and doubles matches from Montreal opponents. The capital team comprised Sub-Lt. Gordon Shorter, Sub-Lt. Ken Black, Flt. Lt E. Kemble and WO. R. Baker, the last-named from Australia.

With the assistance of George Elliott, a sexagenarian who batted 39 runs before retiring, Brantford cricketers Saturday won from Galt on their home grounds by scoring an even 100 for six wickets against 39 all out for the visitors.

In the first of the Senior "B" Baseball playoffs at St. Catharines Saturday, the Combines took Niagara Falls into camp 9-2 behind the six-hit twirling of Gordon (Lefty) Weeks, with the Saints collecting 14 hits off the offerings of Bill Poole and Jiggs McMurtrie.

Dick Pawley of Dundas, and Larry Angus of Windsor, Ont., pitched Royal Canadian Navy to a 4-3 victory against Air Force in the Halifax Senior Baseball League Saturday, the Tars qualifying to meet the Army team in the finals which open tonight.

Ridden by Jockey George Woolf from Alberta, Askemnow, owned by H. P. Headley, Lexington, Ky., held off Bold Captain in a stretch duel to take the $74,7000 American derby at Washington Park. Saturday. The two horses were 12 lengths ahead of Famous Victory for show. It was Woolf's fourth stake win in a week.

Bill Terry, former manager of the New York Giants, has wired President Ford Frick of the National League from his home in Memphis, Tenn., to ask for the appointment as manager of one of the Major-League all-star teams for the proposed tour of overseas military camps.

At Princeton, N. J., Saturday, Bill Hulse, fastest runner of the United States with a mark of 4:06, failed in his announced attempt to lower the American mile record of 4:05.3 made recently by Gunder Haegg. With the help of handicap starters, Hulse could do no better than 4:08.7.

Softball Round-up.

"Red" Townsend's Army and Navy kids ran into an abrupt snag over at Oshawa on Saturday, when they lost 19 to 1 to the Motor City crowd in their first O.A.S.A. playdown. However, Skipper Townsend says his charges selected Saturday for a general display of their poorest form and he feels the Army and Navy kids will even the series back here Wednesday evening.

At that the local "juniors" were minus the services of their regular catcher Graydon Rogers, who enlisted in the Navy last week. Rogers is expected back for a week and will be back at his accustomed position Wednesday night. "Bing" Cross took over part of the catching duties Saturday and unaccustomed to wearing a mask, tossed the bird-cage away with the result he sustained a badly flattened nose when struck by a foul tip.

At that the Belleville kids left eleven stranded on runways Saturday in the first five frames, which indicates Townsend's kids were at least getting men aboard.

More Softball.

Grant Wright started for the kids and Don Boyle finished the pitching chores for Townsend's darlies. A little moral support might do the Belleville kids a world of good, as juniors play better when in front of a friendly crowd.

Tonight it's Trenton Town versus Reliance in the second round Intermediate "A" playdowns of the O.A.S.A. The strength of the Trenton team is unknown here, but reports from Harry Moore's town inform us that the Trenton team is loading up with players from nearby No. 6 Repair Depot of the R.C.A.F. Incidentally this latter team was originally supposed to go out into the O.A.S.A. playdowns in the Senior "B" series. Seems there, was something of a slip-up along these lines with the result the Repair Depot lads are said to be lining up with the Trenton Town nine, which should make matters interesting for "Spyke" Pryke's Reliance.

Remember When.

Tommy Farr, the Welshman who didn't have a chance, left the co-called boxing experts talking to themselves with his plucky 15-round showing against Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion at New York six years ago tonight. The Brown Bomber had little difficulty in winning the decision, but he couldn't knock out the courageous Welsh challenger.

Whipper Bill Puzzled.

The other day we ran into Billie Watson in Toronto and "The Whip" was anything but happy about his bout here with Claybourne on Wednesday night.

"Why is Tunney making me defend my Empire title in Belleville with that black boy? Why in Montreal I could be guaranteed a lot more money for an Empire title bout with Claybourne. Tunney has been trying to help the challengers for some months past, but he does not want to pull any funny stuff in Belleville or else I'll give him a taste of what's in store for Claybourne", stated Watson as he seemed quite concerned about the whole thing.

Leo Numa, the former Red Shadow, was with Watson at the time and gave the "pride of East York", quite a rib. "It's a good thing for you I'm an American and can't get a shot at this Empire crown of yours"", quirked Numa.

However, Tunney is giving Watson an extra five per cent off the top to defend his crown here, so why all the fuss?

THIS AND THAT—The district three-some golf tournament, between teams from the Bay of Quinte, Belleville and No. 6 R.D. golf clubs have developed some keen competition....Each team, consisting of 12 players each, has won a match in three played.... Now they're moving over to Trenton for a fourth and championship go at it....See where Arkie Vaughan made his 2,000th major league hit while playing a doubleheader with the Dodgers yesterday ....At the opening of the current season Arkie needed 154 bingles to reach the select 2,000 circle.... Johnny Vandermeer, star moundsman for the Reds, was rejected by the United States Army the other day....However, outfielder Bert Haas was accepted by the same draft board....In the senior O.B.A. semi-finals it will likely be Trenton "Flyers" versus Toronto Army "Invaders" with the first game at Trenton early in September.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 162

By SAM GORDON
THE KIBITZER

You don't need much for an expert game of bridge. A few snappy rules are enough. Horse Sense tells you the fewest rules you can get by with for accurate results.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows a minimum of five suit tricks (high cards and short cards), four high cards (no-trump tricks), two sure tricks, and a biddable suit.

The responder should pass with not more than two tricks. If he bids, his basis before any raises is two tricks suit tricks and no-trump tricks.)

Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N. That means takeout, first; assist, next; no-trump, last. Each raise consumes another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid consumes another no-trump trick.

Try that out with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ 10 7 3
♥ A K J 3
♦ K 6
♣ A 8 5 4
NORTH
♠ K J 5
♥ Q 4
♦ A J 9 4 2
♣ 9 8 3

South starts with an opening bid of one heart. With only five suit tricks and four no-trump tricks, he has no future suit raises or voluntary no-trump bids.

North has four suit tricks and three no-trump tricks. They are enough for two suit raises and one voluntary no-trump bid. His first response is a takeout to two diamonds.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. So, south is forced to bid again. If he were not forced, he would have passed. Because he had no more unused tricks.

Being forced to bid, he selects his bid from the order in T-A-N. He has no new takeout. Nor has he an assist. That leaves him nothing to do but bid two no-trump. Since he must not pass.

North selects his second round bid from the order in T-A-N. He has not another takeout. Nor has he an assist for any suit bid by south. Nor did his partner's no-trump bid force him to bid.

So, north would have passed if he did not have an unused no-trump trick for a voluntary no-trump bid. His bid is that spot, therefore, is three no-trump.

If he is forced to bid and has no honest suit bid, a partner must bid no-trump. If he is not forced to bid, he should pass unless he has something more to show.

When not forced to bid, if partner raises, he shows another no-trump trick.

One added to what you had is just one more. Any argument?

AT THE BELLE

"Pilot No. 5"

Making his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture in several years, Franchot Tone has one of the finest roles of his career in "Pilot No. 5" now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Marsha Hunt and Gene Kelly are co-starred with Tone in this dramatic story of an American fighter-pilot. Miss Hunt last appeared in "Seven Sweethearts", while Kelly made his screen debut in "For Me and My Gal," with Judy Garland.

Laid against a timely background of the fall of Java, the story, rather than a picture of the war, is a complete tale of the background of an American hero. Tone portrays Geo. Collins, who embarks on a suicidal mission from a bomb-blasted Java airport. While he is gone, his comrades discuss him. His dramatic life story is told by means of flashbacks.

The supporting cast, headed by Van Johnson, includes Alan Baxter, Dick Simmons, Steve Geray and starlet Dorothy Morris.

The Canadian Movietone News, an M-G-M comicolor cartoon "Tale of Two Kittens," and a big fun and dance treat "Vodvil Days" revealing a wealth of fame talent.

"Background to Danger" Thrilling

The great Canadian appetite for exciting mystery and adventure stories should find satisfaction in the new Warner Bros. film "Background to Danger" which opens next at the Belle theatre. Little-known Turkey holding the strategically important Dardenelles is the colorful locale of the film.

A sensational plot to disrupt Russian-Turkish relations is the basis for "Background to Danger," a story laid against the far-flung counter-espionage network of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The picture, directed by Raoul Walsh, stars George Raft and Sydney Greenstreet and has a competent supporting cast headed by Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall.

UNDER ARREST

Count Galeazzo Ciano, former Italian foreign minister, who with his wife, the former Edda Mussolini, is under arrest at their residence in Rome, according to a Madrid report.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Hard Way"

Warner Bros.' "The Hard Way" is a dream-come-true picture for four stars. They'll do the things they always wanted to do but never have done before the camera.

Ida Lupino, who has looked like Cinderella in the fireplace in all her recent pictures, has 28 costume changes;

Joan Leslie, still regarded as a schoolgirl (which she is), has a grown-up role and two marriages;

Jack Carson, a comedian, will play a straight dramatic role and will achieve the height of all funnymen's ambitions a death scene;

And Dennis Morgan will sing. Morgan who has been angling to sing a a feature-length show ever since he hit Hollywood, has always been cast as a non-musical leading man.

"Dr. Broadway"

Jean Phillips, who has stardom within her grasp as a result of her performance in Paramount's exciting comedy-drama. "Dr. Broadway," was a stand-in before she got her film break.

She plays the leading feminine role opposite MacDonald Carey in the new picture, now playing at the Capitol Theatre. Featured with them are J. Carrol Naish, Richard Lane, Edward Ciannelli and Warren Hymer.

Originally Jean planned to be a secretary, but she switched to an acting career when she won a beauty contest in Culver City, Cal. She was born in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, but moved to California with her family.

Bacchus, Dog Mascot of French Sub, Given Valiant Dogs' Medal

A British Port, Aug. 30 —(CP)— First to win the award, Bacchus, mascot of the Fighting French Submarine Rubis, had the Valiant Dogs' Decoration placed about his neck at an "investiture" in the presence of the entire crew during a brief stay in this port.

The crew's exploits have been rewarded by decorations on several occasions and Bacchus, who shared the dangers of every cruise, received the honor after the League of Dogs heard of his adventures. The official citation reads "for outstanding service with the forces of the United Nations" and Bacchus wears the award beside the Cross of Lorraine on his collar.

Eden and Maisky Expected to Meet To Arrange Parley

London, Aug. 30 —(CP)—Speculation on the possibility of an early Anglo-Russian American conference was given a new boost today when it was learned Foreign Secretary Eden will meet both Ivan Maisky, former Russian Ambassador to Great Britain and U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant tomorrow.

The meeting between representatives of the three big powers might have been held even earlier, diplomatic sources indicated, except for the fact Eden is reporting today to his war cabinet colleagues on the result of the Quebec conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Many diplomatic observers are convinced Eden, Maisky and Winant will consider the possibilities of joint, personal, three-power conversations, at least on the "foreign minister level."

Returns to Britain

It was announced yesterday Mr. Eden had returned to Britain by plane from the Quebec war councils and at the same time it was reported that Maisky, replaced in Britain as ambassador only recently, had returned.

The Daily Mail, featuring the story, said a tri-partite conference probably would take place within two weeks either in London or Moscow or "at some intermediate spot." It said Mr. Eden would represent Great Britain and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov would represent Russia, while a high-ranking American delegate would be chosen by President Roosevelt. The Daily Mail hinted the latter might be Norman H. Davis, formerly Mr. Roosevelt's special ambassador in Europe, now in London on Red Cross business.

The paper noted the Allies "are in fullest agreement."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Children With Frequent Colds and Stomach Upsets May Need Thyroid Extract

When an individual is nervous, jumpy, overactive mentally and physically, heart rapid, the physician usually advises a metabolism test which shows the rate at which the body processes are working. In a case such as the above, the test will usually show that the body processes of this individual are working 15 per cent or more faster than normal. And the cause of this speeding up process is an overactive thyroid gland. The treatment is rest and iodine and if necessary removal of the thyroid gland by surgery or Xrays.

On the other hand where the individual is sluggish mentally and physically, is overweight, and skin shiny, the metabolism test will usually show that the body processes are working at a rate of 15 per cent or more below normal. The cause is an underactive thyroid gland and these patients are given thyroid extract daily to bring the rate at which the body processes work up to normal.

The above symptoms of the overactive and underactive thyroid gland describe what should be called advanced cases. What about cases where the symptoms are not so pronounced?

In the slightly overactive cases, rest of body and mind is needed, and in this slightly underactive cases some stimulation of mind and body is needed.

Physicians have been finding many children in whom nose and throat infections, and also intestinal disturbances and infections occur so often that they suspect some underlying condition of the body as being the cause. Dr. M. H. Stiles in Archives of Pediatrics (children's diseases) states that because some children were having distension of the abdomen and other symptoms pointing to a lack of thyroid juice in the body, studies of the basal metabolism were made in a group of 30 children and teen age boys and girls, in whom there were persistent colds, bronchitis, and inflammation of ears and of stomach and intestine. Of the 30 children studied, 90 per cent had basal rates below zero or less, and 60 per cent had rates of minus 10 or less, and for the whole group, the average rate was minus 11.

Of the 30 patients studied, 18 were given thyroid extract. Of these 18, there were 15 who showed great improvement, and only 3 were not improved. Where, then, these symptoms keep occurring, the metabolism test might well be given.

AT THE BELLE

In one of the happier moments of M.G.M.'s "Pilot No. 5" now at the Belle Theatre, Franchot Tone and Marsha Hunt are seen as the lovers. There is a misunderstanding later but they are reconciled when Tone redeems himself. Gene Kelly and Van Johnson are featured.

Swedish Protests Are Rejected By the Germans

Stockholm, Aug. 30 — (AP) — Swedish protests over the sinking of the fishing boats by German minesweepers were rejected by Berlin in a reply to the Swedish Foreign Office yesterday which insisted the boats were operating in International waters the Nazis have declared blockaded.

At the same time the Berlin Press opened an attack on the Swedish Press, warning Germany "would not tolerate" what it described as the anti-Nazi attitude of certain Swedish newspapers.

The German Minister in Stockholm presented his government's reply, which said Nazi minesweepers who fired warning shots before attacking the fishing boats which the Nazis said were operating in forbidden waters off the Danish coast.

The Germans contended the presence of the fishing boats in those waters constituted an act of "support to Germany's enemies."

The note warned the Germans would take "suitable steps against such fishermen in the future."

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 16

It seems that Emilie married six years ago, when she was 20. She came from a small town in the northern part of the state (and I never saw a more urban looking girl than Emilie) and had a desperate time of it before she got a job in one of the 5-and-10 cent stores.

She was terribly lonely when she met this Peter Raymond, a clerk in a cigar store at that time, and though she didn't know it, already mixed up in two or three race track and gambling rackets and doing very well, indeed.

"Pete was pretty near 40," she said, "and I know he thought I married him because he could buy me things, but that wasn't the reason at all. I was lonely and I loved him because he was so generous and goodhearted. But he didn't know it, because he never really knew me. He didn't love me. He just married me because I was young and pretty. He didn't understand me, or trust me, until after I left him and then he began to love me, but, of course, it was too late then. If he loved me in the beginning it would have been so different. Then we wouldn't have been divorced. Oh, I wish we had never been divorced."

After a murder and a shooting and a scare about someone being ill, it's a relief to glimpse a romance in the offing, even if it's a sort of beauty and beast romance. I could not picture a girl like Emilie going through life with a Pete Raymond. Still, if she loved him . .

"Why don't you marry him again?" I suggested, practically.

"Oh, no," Emilie said. "Oh no, I couldn't go back to poor Pete—ever. I lost my love for him, don't you see?"

I didn't, but I did not want to encourage her to talk. She went on talking anyway:

"We lived in hotel rooms and I longed with all my soul for a home. He just laughed when I told him how much I wanted a home. He couldn't understand. I wanted a real home and I wanted to make pretty things for it, and cook and put up jellies and pickles, like my mother did. I wanted children too—not just one, but two or three or half a dozen—a real family.

"When I tried to tell Pete, he would put his hand in his pocket and give me money, sometimes a couple of twenties, sometimes two or three hundred dollar bills from the roll he always carried. 'There,' he would say, 'go get yourself some pretties.' He meant all right. He thought money could buy anything. It was all he knew, all the life he had ever known.

"After a year," she said, "he let me get an apartment and buy some furniture for it, and for a little while we were happy there. I thought he would see what a home would be like, but he hardly noticed the things I bought and the things I made and he never wanted me to cook and to eat at home. He wanted me to dress up and go out with him—'Let's get out among 'em,' he used to say.

"He kept making more and more money and staying out more and more at night and I got frightened and began to nag and scold him, and I was afraid of the rackets he was in. When I talked too much he'd bellow and curse at me and one night I just couldn't take it any more. I cried all night and the next morning I took a suitcase with a few clothes in it and walked out on him. I wish I hadn't, but I did."

"I guess he tried to get you back," I said.

"Yes, I took my maiden name, Hemmett, for a time, but he traced me. Then I changed back to Raymond, thinking that was the last name he would look for me under, but he traced me again. He has so many hangers on, all so ready to help him. So I gave up trying to hide, and when I had saved up enough, I got the divorce. He had said he would fight it, but he didn't. He has been keeping away, until lately. Of course, he would have to turn up again right now."

"He is worried about you."

"Oh me . . flu . . It's just because I haven't done much about it. It's nothing, just sort of bronchitis. I could just see that silly doctor, thinking about pneumonia, talking about a hospital. He probably thinks he can run up a bill and Pete will pay for it. But he won't. I won't let him. I'll pay my own bill. Oh, I wish he'd go away and stay away especially now with all this murder business. Oh, I WISH he'd stay away—his record isn't any too pure, he can't afford to get mixed up in this!"

Yet when he came back the next night, while I was still at the office working and Peg was with Emilie, she seemed glad to see him. Peg wasn't going to let him in, but Emilie said, "I'm so much better. Let him come in if he wants to, please, Peggy."

She was so very much better that the doctor said she would be all right alone that night and Peg was already in bed when I got in about half-past nine.

"I'm so tired I could sleep standing up," Peg said.

I felt the same way, so I tumbled into bed too and we even turned off all the lights, we were feeling so brave.

I don't know how long we had been asleep, perhaps an hour or so when we were awakened by the most terrific din downstairs . Mrs. Castle's special officer wasn't in the building any more and there we were, half a dozen women and a few elderly men, unless you count Utz, and I didn't. I knew how he would act in a crisis.

There is no way to turn on the lights except with a key on the first floor or the main switch in the basement. The halls were black as pitch and above the sound of fighting and cursing and shouting we could hear somebody, Madame Hurd, I think, screaming terribly.

Peg and I hung over the banister, trying to see, clinging to each other and I am afraid, doing a bit of screaming, too.

"It's just below, on the fourth floor landing," I whispered to Peg. "It's two men fighting!"

As I spoke there was a shot and a cry and then I shut my eyes and put my hands over my ears because I couldn't stand it. But I couldn't shut out the sound and in all the world there can't be another like it.

When I opened my eyes I was crouching on the floor, hanging on to the banister with one hand and Peg with the other. The men had gone over the railing, onto the mosaic paving four flights down. In the dim light from the hall window I saw them go.

There wasn't another sound. Peg and I might have been alone, at the end of the world.

I don't know how long it was, perhaps only a minute, but after a while I went back into our apartment for my coat, and a flashlight. Then I started downstairs. Peg followed right after me. I think we were both crying.

Emilie was standing silhouetted against the light of her open door, and without a word she snatched the flashlight from my hand and ran swiftly downstairs. We couldn't keep up with her.

Down in the lower hall Utz and Strom and Mr. Fissel were striking matches, trying to see. I didn't want to see, but I couldn't help it. They were terribly hurt. Emilie supported one man's head in her lap. It was her husband, Pete. He seemed to be conscious. He was holding tight to her hand. The other man wasn't moving. He was a small, fat man and his head was bald.

"They went over the fourth floor banister together, I heard the fall," Utz said. "Feel the bald fellow's pulse. I think he's dead. The other guy musta shot him. Why no, he shot the other fellow! He shot Miss Raymond's husband!"

I left them my flashlight and started up the dark stairs again. I was past fear. I crept up those five flights of stair to our own rooms, called for the police and an ambulance, telephoned Josh Beane at his home, gathered up what first-aid material I could find and started back. When I was at the third floor landing the lights came on—Mr. Strom had gone to the basement and thrown the switch.

Emilie's Pete was moaning and turning his head from side to side muttering. "Double-crossed me . . Ben turned on me . . Ben's a rat, a double-crossing rat."

"What does he mean?" I whispered to Emilie.

She was just as I had left her, sitting on the floor, poor Pete Raymond's head on her lap. She had on the light blue dressing gown and her dark hair hung over her shoulders. She looked like a ghost.

I said to Pete Raymond, "Why did he turn on you? Why did you fight? Why did he try to kill you?"

He couldn't or wouldn't answer and Emilie just sat there looking neither to right nor left, staring straight ahead.

Pete Raymond died at five o'clock the next day, but the other man, whom Pete identified as Ben Howell, an employee in one of his poolrooms, never regained consciousness, and died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

I can't tell you the relief it was when the ambulance got there and the doctor took charge. He looked very young, almost like a boy, but he knew just what to do. We had time to think of ourselves after he got there. My knees began to knock together and my teeth to chatter, and Mrs. Utz got hysterical and Utz had to take her upstairs and stay there with her, which probably nearly killed him as he hated to miss anything.

(To be continued)

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper I was allowed out for an hour, and I was beginning to get ready to start and ma said, Benny, I want you to go up to my room and bring me my beeded bag from the right top draw of my dresser.

Well aw G, ma, I mean gosh, I was just on my way out, I said, and pop said, And now you're on your way to your mother's room. My my, these are indeed times of swift and sudden changes, reaching even into the second generation, he said.

Meaning me, and I went up to ma's room and looked a while and went back again saying I cant find it, ma.

The same old story, such a boy, ma said. Really, William, I mean really, she said, and pop said, Yee gods, can it be that a son of mine is going to grow up into an inefficient cant finder in this streamline plastic age? I'll go up with you and show you how to look, and I'll stay with you till you find it, by gollies, he said.

And he made me go up again with him, saying, Now, what was it your mother wanted?

G, pop, that's funny, now I forget too, I said, and pop said, What do you mean, too? I never really knew what she wanted.

Well then jimminy, pop, why did you come up? I said, and pop said, Never mind changing the subject. We'll go back and get started on the right foot, that'll show you that nothing can take the place of a correct start, he said.

And we went down again, pop saying to ma, Where did you say it was, my dear? and ma saying, Oh for land sakes, in the top right draw of my dresser.

Well what I meant was, what did you say it was? pop said, and ma said, Oh, you're just 2 birds of a single feather, I'll go and get it myself.

Which she did, finding it perfect.

Powerful Blows Being Prepared Against Japanese

Washington, Aug. 30 — (AP) — Powerful new blows against the Japanese, with carrier-based aircraft playing a dominant part, are being prepared in the Pacific War zone.

Vice Admiral John S. McCain, United States Deputy Chief of Operations for air, said yesterday, the 30th anniversary of the establishment of the United States Naval Air Force, that aviation would "spearhead" an attack to smash the Japanese military machine.

"Naval aviation has become an extremely powerful weapon, possibly the most powerful," McCain said.

"Huge task forces, spearheaded by carrier-ased aircraft, are poising for new pile driver blows against the enemy. The Navy has always sought to bring all its weapons to bear against an enemy simultaneously, believing that such co-ordinated attack is the most effective."

He predicted that the dozen or so new combat carriers launched since the United States entered the war will help bring about the "complete defeat" of Japan.

191 Jap Planes Downed in Month By U.S. Fliers

Guadalcanal, Aug. 27—(Delayed)—(AP)—United States fliers of the Solomons Air Force and American ground defences maintained a superiority ratio of nearly 14 to 1 in destroying 191 Japanese planes in the Solomons area during the past month.

Maj.-Gen. Nathan F. Twining cited these enemy losses at a press conference today and disclosed United States losses during the same period, between July 25 and Aug. 26, were only 14 fighter planes.

The general's figure showed U.S. fighters downed 100 enemy fighters, 16 dive bombers, one medium bomber and 15 float-type planes during the month. United States bombers felled 38 Japanese fighters while night fighters brought down two enemy medium bombers. Anti-aircraft guns accounted for one Japanese fighter, 13 dive bombers, six medium bombers and one float plane.

POLICE BLOTTER

Early Sunday morning police apprehended two teen-aged lads who admitted they had been on the roof of the York Trading Company building, off Station St. P. C. Evans answered a complaint from nearby residents who saw the lads atop the room. The officer caught up with the boys on Cannifton Road but they contended they were hiding from another lad, that being the reason for taking to the roof. No attempt to enter the premises was noticeable, however.

Reports that a sail boat has been beached off the bay onto the Stephens-Adamson Company property for the past three days reached police this morning.

Bicycle, Accessories Stolen

J. R. Wellman, 20 Jones St., reported his bicycle had been stolen from out of a shed at the rear of his home some time Saturday night while George Scott, 302 Dufferin Ave., reported a headlight had been taken off his bicycle also.

City police experienced a busy weekend as several inebriates caused sufficient trouble to prompt police to place them under arrest, while minor motor crashes were in evidence, but no personal injuries were reported.

5 New Companies To Make Penicillin

Washington, Aug. 30—(AP)—Five new companies were preparing today to take up the manufacture of penicillin, bringing to 12 the number of firms in the United States ready to produce the sensational "wonder drug".

The United States War Production Board disclosed it had approved the expansion of facilities for nine companies for penicillin production, at a total cost of more than $3,000,000.

Many scientists consider penicillin the most powerful weapon ever found for treatment of pneumonia, gonorrhea, blood poisoning and other diseases. Physicians have found it far more potent than the sulfas.

W.P.B. officials predicted producers would have supplies of penicillin on hand within three to six months, although a scarcity is almost certain to exist for the war's duration.

THE CONQUEROR RETURNS

THE WAR TODAY

(Associated Press War Analyst)
(BY DEWITT MACKENZIE)

Hitler's empire of conquered and satellite peoples is breaking up before his anxious eyes, from the Balkan cockpit of eastern Europe clear across the contingent to the other cockpit on the shores of the North Sea.

Signs of disintegration multiply. Latest among the crises to tear the foundation of the Hiterlian structure are the grave situations in the widelp-separated states of Denmark and Bulgaria.

It's significant these two countries are among those which have been more favored by the Boche. They haven't, like Poland, endured the atrocities which today drew from Britain and the United States denunciation and a promise of retribution. Hitler has adopted an air of beneficence towards the Danes and Bulgarians, hoping to use them among the foundation stones of his new order.

Still, it's not surprising that the liberty-loving Danes hardy descendants of Vikings, finally have broken out in fierce revolt against the Boche. That creates an especially grave danger for Hitler, since Denmark provides one of the several potential invasion coasts for the allies, and the latter might take quick advantage of the situation if things looked particularly good. problem for the master gangster

Also a grave politico-military is the situation in the Balkans—another potential invasion theatre for the allies. Bulgaria, his buffer state against the unpredictable Turks and one of his chief bulwarks against an assault by the United Nations up the peninsula, is tottering in loyalty. King Boris has met sudden and mysterious death, and his people have been parading the streets of their sombre capital, demanding peace. Pro-German Premier Philov apparently is trying to hold the fort for Hitler, but his chances of success don't seem good as things now stand.

There's another aspect to the imbroglio in Little Denmark. Relations between neighboring Sweden and the Reich have become so strained that the Swedes are walking close to war with Nazidom. If they came into the conflict under those circumstances, they would automatically become one of the allies. That would make Hitler's western front a hot spot.

BISHOP O'BRIEN, KINGSTON, DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Appointed Bishop of Peterboro in 1913 and of Kingston in 1927

BORN AT PETERBORO

Kingston, Aug. 30 (CP)—Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, 69, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Kingston, died in Hotel Dieu Hospital today. He suffered a heart attack yesterday, one of several which had afflicted him during the past six months.

Born at Peterborough, Archbishop O'Brien was educated there, at St. Michael's College, Toronto, and in Montreal. He was ordained in 1897 and two years later received his Doctorate of Divinity from the Propaganda University, Rome. Queen's University conferred the Honorary Degree, Doctor of Laws, upon him.

He was appointed Bishop of Peterborough in 1913 and identified himself with many activities there, including the St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society which he led. In 1927 Archbishop O'Brien was appointed Ontario Chaplain of the Knights of Columbus.

In 1929 he was transferred to Kingston as Coadjutor Archbishop, and, following the death of Archbishop M. J. Spratt in February, 1938, succeeded to the office which he held at his death.

His funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday from St. Mary's Cathedral to St. Mary's cemetery. The councillors of the Archdiocese meet tomorrow at four p.m. to elect an administrator to run church affairs, until Pope Pius names a successor.

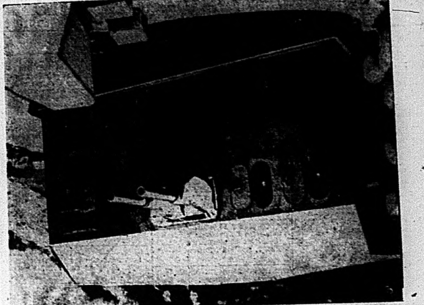
RECORD BERLIN RAID CALLS FOR R.A.F. TOAST

Crewmen of an R.A.F. bomber are shown toasting the captain of their ship, Flight-Sergt. S. Mason, TOP, on their safe return to a base in England following their devastating raid on Berlin. So powerful was the blow by an estimated 700 bombers which dropped more than 2,000 tons of explosives, flames rising above the German capital could be seen 250 miles away.

COMMANDER IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

Lord Louis Mountbatten, who was leader of Britain's Commandos, has been named supreme Allied commander in southeast Asia. His chief job will be to drive the enemy out of Burma and so regain the Burma Road.

HERE ARE ENGLAND'S INVASION REPELLERS.



These twin six-pounder guns bristle from the coast of England ready to repel an enemy invasion which thus far has not materialized. Just off the military "secrets" list, this rapid-fire weapon has a range of over 5000 yards. Its chief purpose is to deal with light coastal motorboats and small torpedo boats. Mounted in pairs in turrets that have a turning circle of 360 degrees, the guns have high muzzle velocity and throw high explosive projectiles.

Teacher Shortage Very Acute In Eight Provinces

(By The Canadian Press)

The bell won't ring in numbers of Canadian country schools this fall. For the most part, of course, youngsters will troop back to their desks as usual, but in some sections, reaching into at least six provinces, the vacation-time padlock will stay on the door. The reason: a shortage of teachers.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows Alberta apparently the hardest-hit province, with Nova Scotia probably next in line. Preliminary reports from Alberta indicated a shortage of 800 teachers—the normal number is 6,200—but shortage will be halved by using the services of 400 Normal School students who will be available for teaching duties November 1.

In Nova Scotia efforts are being made to sign "floating teachers to replace an estimated shortage of 600. Possibly about 100 one-room rural schools will close.

Shortages of varying degree are anticipated in British Columbia, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Enlistments in the services and employment of teachers in higher-paying war jobs are given as reasons for the dearth of instructors.

The situation is being met in various ways—by combining school districts, employing married women and granting permission to teach to students not qualified under peacetime conditions, and correspondents courses.

Schools in most provinces are scheduled to open Sept. 7, though many school boards have announced the opening will be postponed two weeks or more to permit students to help the farmers get in the crop. In Alberta for instance, schools generally will not open until October 11, and some not until November 1.

Ontario is the only province to say definitely there is no lack of teachers. Dr. G. F. Rogers, deputy minister of Education, says the requisite number will be obtained by employing married women and retaining those due to be superannuated.

CONDEMNED WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE

Pontiac, Ill., Aug. 30—(AP)—Mrs. Mildred Mary Bolton, who was granted a last minute reprieve from a sentence that had decreed her to become the first woman to die in the Cook County Electric Chair for the shooting of her husband, has killed herself in prison, Sheriff Robert Jones of Livingston County reported today.

Churchill, F.D.R. Meet This Week

Washington, Aug. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt returned to Washington today and, as a direct follow-up on the Quebec War Conference, scheduled appointments with diplomatic, state and military officials

The list included Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister; State Secretary Cordell Hull; Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; and Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding army air forces.

Prime Minister Churchill is expected here within a week to pick up some of the loose threads of the Quebec meeting. There was reason to believe that this forthcoming meeting would centre mostly on political aspects of the war and on a post-war program.

Mr. Roosevelt, after delivering an address in Ottawa Wednesday, spent a few days resting before returning to Washington.

One of his first official actions upon reaching the capital today was to grant the commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization the authority to make exceptions, after investigation, for aliens who otherwise would be classified as enemy aliens. Previously the attorney general alone had this power, and he, too, will continue to exercise it, along with the others.

Prospects for a tri-partite meeting among representatives of Great Britain, the United States and Russia, mentioned as a possibility in the joint Quebec communique, may receive their attention, as well as political questions involved in administering temporary governments in liberated countries.

Some officials, however, are inclined to believe the Prime Minister's latest visit here will be confined largely to the gathering up any loose ends or discussing secondary questions that may have remained unsettled at conferences in the Canadian city in the last two weeks.

They based this on the phraseology of the joint communique which said that the Prime Minister and President "were able to receive and approve the unanimous recommendations of the combined chiefs-of-staff" and also had reached agreement on political issues "under-lying or arising out of the military operations".

It has not been announced when Mr. Churchill would reach Washington.

Diving From Skiff Chinese Drowned

Kingston, Aug. 30. (CP)—Provincial Police today took grappling equipment to Cranberry Lake in an effort to recover the body of Victor Lee, 30-year old Kingston Chinese, who was drowned there yesterday. The lake is about 20 miles north of Kingston.

After diving from a skiff rowed by Mrs. Alfred Lee, Belleville, Lee shouted for help and disappeared. Neighbors and friends spent hours last night and early today dragging the lake with improvised grappling iron but at noon today the body had not been recovered.

Twenty-One Dead In Two Explosions

Birmingham, Alta., Aug. 30 (AP)—Twenty-one dead were counted today from two gas explosions which late Saturday and early yesterday tore through the Republic Steel Corporation's No. 2 Sayreton coal mine here.

Twenty-three others were burned, several of them critically.

Origin of the explosions is undetermined.

A company spokesman estimated 100 of the regular night crew of 735 men made their way to safety unhurt between the explosions.

Allied Conquest Of Sicily Cuts Italy's Navy in Two

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 30 —(AP)— The Allied conquest of Sicily has cut what's left of Italian Naval Power in two. One part of Italy's fleet is at the La Spezia Naval Base, 180 miles north of Rome, and the other part is at Taranto, inside the Italian heel.

With Allied domination of the straits of Messina, these two big naval elements are severed and could get together only with great risk of disastrous Allied naval and air attacks.

Badly battered by the Royal Navy and American heavy bombers, the Italian fleet for more than a year has shown extreme reluctance to come out and fight.

Allied naval circles here regard this as clever policy on the part of the Italians rather than cowardice. The Italian warships compel the Allies to keep a sizeable naval strength in the Mediterranean which otherwise might be shifted to the Pacific or some other theatre.

An Important Prize

And despite losses, the Italian fleet remains an important prize which the Allies could turn to good account. In Allied hands, the Italian warships might prove exceptionally useful in any offensive on Japan.

Five of Italy's capital ships are said to be in operation. Her losses in light and heavy cruisers, destroyers and submarines are believed more than 50 per cent, and weaknesses in these craft, especially destroyers, make it difficult for her capital ships to operate effectively.

Before the war, Italy's navy was known as the world's fastest. All of her newer ships can steam 30 knots.

It is douted here Italy will let her fleet fall into German hands if she possibly can avoid it. Her natural interest, it is said, would be to try to hold what remains of her fleet for bargaining with the Allies.

Though there have been reports of German officers taking command of Italian warships, Allied Naval officers here say they have found no evidence to support these.

Three Arrested After Street Fight

As the sequel to a general drunken brawl and fight on Strachan Street on Saturday, two men and a woman were arrested on charges of intoxication, resisting arrest and obstructing a police officer in the pursuit of his duties. Today Chief Probert gave their names as George and Walter Asseltine, Strachan Street, and Jemimia Martin, also of Belleville.

P.C. Carruthers answered a call from a Strachan Street resident who complained that several persons were acting in an intoxicated manner and fighting. When the officer arrived, however, the trio reversed matters and turned their alleged pugnacious tactics towards the constable, who experienced considerable difficulty in subduing the trio, but finally managed to handcuff one of the men. Later Sergt. Doug. Ellis arrived on the scene when peace and order were restored as the two men and the woman were forcibly placed in the police car, but not before many a lusty fist had been tossed and a real old-fashioned street fight terminated. Chief Probert added today that other charges were pending. "We will not tolerate resisting arrest or striking an officer regardless as to the sobriety of the party," warned Chief Probert.

FOUR BOMBER CREWS RESCUED

London, Aug. 30—(CP)—Crews of four United States heavy bombers lost in the Regensburg shuttle raid of Aug. 17, have been rescued from the Mediterranean by the British Air-Sea Rescue Service.

The Air Ministry News Service said today one launch alone brought back 22 survivors. Of the 40 airmen rescued only one needed medical attention.

The planes subsequently flew to bases in North Africa. Twenty-three bombers were lost.

EXTENSION GRANTED OLD BEAR

Bedford, Ind., Aug. 30 —(AP)— Blackie, the Bedford zoo bear, won't have to face "trial" on charges of being old, expensive and dangerous, after all. Mayor Paul Lostutter, who was to have presided at the "trial" before the city council Sept. 7, announced yesterday he has dismissed the case because the defence—100 Bedford children and adults—was "too powerful."

VACATE

Avtion on the Kharkov and Vorosshilovgrad fronts thus seemed to be rapidly blending its one gigantic drive by which the Russians hoped to reach the sweeping eastward bend of the Dnieper River somewhere in the vicinity of Dniepropetrovsk, thus imperilling the whole Nazi position in the Donets Basin. Russian airmen ranging far over German-held territory to bomb and strafe troop concentrations and supply depots reported the Germans were destroying their own military installations in evident preparation for further withdrawals toward the west.

Focal Point

The Russian communique indicated that the southern end of the long eastern battle line was at present the focal point of the summer offensive, but the columns which were stalled temporarily in the advance upon important Nazi base at Bryansk 200 miles southwest of Moscow by unfavorable terrain and heavy German demolitions, were again on the move.

The war bulletin announced the Red Army had advance nine miles and had captured 40 villages in the sector south of Bryansk. The spearhead reaching west in the new battlefront opened last week at Sevsk, 100 miles south of Bryansk, advanced to capture 16 villages, the communique said.

German losses were heavy along the entire front, the Russians announced. In the southern sector around Kharkov and Voroshilovgrad alone 6,000 Germans were reported killed. One thousand Germans were killed in fighting around Bryansk, the Soviet communique added.

The Russians claimed destruction of two German transports totalling 8,000 tons and an enemy patrol ship in the Bavents Sea in the north and a 6,000-ton German transport and a patrol ship in the Black Sea. In the Sea of Azov Soviet air units sank four small ships and damaged eight others, the Russians said.

At Fort Frontenac, men attached to District Depot 3A under Lt.-Col. L. M. Hughes will remain on special duty until the last three prisoners are back in Fort Henry.

Minutes after Thursday's escape military police on all trains in the area began checking all "suspicious characters" on orders from Maj. Edward Watt, District Assistant Provost Marshal. Commandeered launches were patrolling the St. Lawrence an hour after the escape, and searchers combed the river islands.

South of the border United States authorities covered the New York shore and kept in touch with the situation here through Ottawa. Kingston officials said they believed Col. Harvey Streight, Federal Director of war prisoners, was responsible for U. S.-Canadian liaison.

Commenting on the "efficient organization" of the search by military authorities in co-operation with R. C. M. P., Provincial and Municipal Police and Volunteer Workers, Capt. F. H. Wooding, M. D. No. 3 Public Relations Officer, said today the "calmness and lack of apprehension" displayed by district citizens is "conclusive evidence of their confidence in the ability of the authorities to deal with the situation."

ANNOUNCE RATION

becomes effective Oct. 1.

Other details of the new rationing plan announced are:

Hotels, institutions, restaurants, soda fountains and other similar users will be rationed by quota as in the case of other rationed foods.

Industrial users of jams, preserves, such as bakers and confectioners, will also be rationed by quotas, but the industrial use of honey, maple syrup and corn syrup will be severely restricted or eliminated entirely in order to make more of these commodities available to householders.

Infants who need more than the 24 fluid ounces of corn syrup per month provided under the ration will be issued extra "D" coupons against surrender of sugar coupons to local branches of the Ration Administration or to local Ration Boards.

When purchasing goods in containers it will not always be possible for the consumer to get the extra value shown on the chart for his coupon. However, he may purchase two or more containers if the total contents do not add up to more than the total value of the coupons presents.

WILL OPEN SECOND FRONT ONLY WHEN READY

—CHURCHILL

No Political Considerations To Hurry Plans

Meeting With Stalin One of Greatest Desires of Churchill And Roosevelt

PRESS WAR ON JAPAN

Quebec, Aug. 31 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill said today that "nothing is nearer to the wishes of President Roosevelt and myself than to have a threefold meeting with Marshal Stalin," but he declared that an Allied second front would be opened on the Continent only when there was every chance of military success unswayed by political considerations.

The Prime Minister said he did not blame Russia for any criticism it had levelled at the Allies for not having launched a new offensive in Western Europe.

He made it clear, however, that the positive factor of military success was paramount.

"The President and I will persevere in our efforts to meet Marshal Stalin," he said, in a broadcast address.

Refreshed From Labors.

"And in the meantime it seems most necessary and urgent that a conference of the British, United States and Russian foreign ministers or their responsible representatives should be held at some convenient place in order not merely to explore the various important questions connected with the future arrangements for world security, but to carry their discussions to a point where the heads of states and governments may be able to intervene".

The Prime Minister, refreshed from his labors at the Quebec War Council by a week of fishing in the Laurentian Mountains, turned again to the question of a second front in Europe, declaring:

"We once had a fine front in France, but it was torn to pieces by the concentrated might of Hitler, and it is easier to have a front pulled down than it is to build it up again".

However, he went on: "I look forward to the day when British and American liberating armies will cross the Channel in full force and come to close quarters with the German invaders of France.

"You would certainly not wish me to tell you when that is likely to happen or whether it be near or far, but whenever the great blow is struck you may be sure that it will be because we are satisfied that there is a good prospect of continuing success and that our soldiers are expended in accordance with sound military plans and not squandered for political considerations of any kind".

Would Be Advantageous.

Mr. Churchill said a tripartite meeting among Britain, the United States and Russia "would be of very great advantage to everyone, and indeed to the whole free world, if our unity of thought and decision upon practical measures to the longer future as well as upon strategic problems could be reached between the three great opponents of the Hitlerite Tyranny".

Turning to beleaguered Italy, Mr. Churchill said:—

"Mussolini has been overthrown. The war impulse of Italy has been destroyed and that unhappy country is paying a terrible penalty for allowing itself to be misled by false and criminal guides. How much easier it is to join bad companions than to shake them!"

Mr. Churchill said a large number of German troops had lately been drawn from France "in order to hold down the Italian people" and to make Italy a battleground so as to keep the war as far distant from Germany and as prolonged as possible.

By far the greatest part of the German airforce, he said, had been drained from the Russian front and now is being engaged and "worn down with ever growing intensity night and day by British and American and Canadian airmen".

The terrific aerial attack against Germany, Mr. Churchill said, would not have been possible yithout the magnificent stand of the Russians against Hitler's forces.

No country, he declared, ever had withstood such a devastating attack as that thrown at the Russians.

The fate of King Boris of Bulgaria, he pointed out, might serve as a warning to other rulers that "the wages of sin is death."

At present, Mr. Churchill pointed out, Britain's principal activity against Japan must of necessity be centred in India.

He expressed extreme confidence in Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, the new Allied Commander-in-Chief in that theatre.

REBROADCAST SPEECH

A rebroadcast of Prime Minister Churchill's address will be made tonight at 9.00 p.m. over station CBL.

Praises Quebec as Meeting Place

"Quebec was the very place for the two great powers of the sea and air to resolve and shape plans to bring their large and growing army into closer contact and fiercer grips with the common foe," Mr. Churchill declared in a world broadcast.

In Quebec, the capital and heart of French Canada, he continued, "it is right to think of the French people in their agony, to set on book new measures for their deliverance."

"We may be sure that France will rise again, freed, united and independent to stand on guard with others over the generous tolerances and brightening opportunities of the human society we mean to rescue aid rebuild."

Any speculation on when the war would end Mr. Churchill described as "vain and unprofitable."

Mr. Churchill completed his address at 1:30 p.m.

Prime Minister Praised.

Mr. Churchill paid tribute to Prime Minister Mackenzie King as "the experienced statesman who led the Dominion instantly and unitedly into the war", and said that he had been over "the whole ground of the war" in meetings with the Canadian Cabinet and British and Canadian staffs.

He said the contribution which Canada has made to the combined effort of the British Commonwealth and Empire "has deeply touched the heart of the Mother Country and of all other members of our widespread family of states and races".

"From the darkest days the Canadian army, growing stronger year by year, has played an indispensable part in guarding our British homeland from invasion", he said. "Now it is fighting with distinction in wider and widening fields".

Air Training Plan Praised.

Through the Empire Air Training organization Britain "welcomed the flower of the manhood of Great Britain, of Australia, of New Zealand, to her spacious flying fields and to comradeship with her own gallant sons".

At sea the Dominion "has become in the course of this war an important seafaring nation". Ships manned by "hardy Canadian seamen" guard the Atlantic convoys and "our vital lifeline across the ocean".

Mr. Churchill also paid tribute to Canada's large contribution of munitions valued at not less than $2,000,000,000 and donated by Canada to the common cause.

Speaking of Britain's 20-year treaty with Russia, the Prime Minister declared, "You may be sure that we British are resolved to do our utmost to make good with all our strength and national steadiness". He continued:—

Embarrassing Invitation.

"It would not have been suitable for Russia to be represented at this Anglo-American conference, which apart from dealing with the immediate operation of our intermingled and inter-woven armed forces in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, would largely if not mainly be concerned with heating and inflaming the war against the Japanese, with whom the Soviet Government has a five-year treaty of non-aggression.

"It would have been an embarrassing invitation for us to send, but nothing is nearer to the wishes of President Roosevelt and myself than to have a three-fold meeting with Marshal Stalin.

"If that has not yet taken place, it is certainly not because we have not tried our best or have not been willing to lay aside impediment and undertake further immense journeys for that purpose."

Cannot Leave Battlefront

Stalin, said Britain's war leader, cannot at present leave the Russian battlefront where he is directing offensives.

"To judge by the latest news from the Russian battlefronts, Marshal Stalin is certainly not wasting his time.

"The entire British Empire sends him our salute on his brilliant summer campaign and on the victories of Orel, Kharkov and Taganrog, by which so much Russian soil has been relieved and so many hundreds of thousands of its invaders wiped out.

"We shall be very glad to associate Russian representatives with us in the political discussions which arise out of the victories the Anglo-American forces have gained in the Mediterranean," Mr. Churchill said.

"In fact, there is no step which we may take or which may be forced upon us by the unforeseeable course of this war about which we should not wish to consult with our Russian friends and Allies in the fullest confidence and candour.

"It would be a very great advantage to everyone, and indeed to the whole free world, if unity of thought and decision upon practical measures to the longer future as well as upon strategic problems could be reached between the three great opponents of the Hitlerite tyrrany."

Anyone can see how desirable a second front would be, Mr. Churchill said, and "it is quite natural that the Russians bearing the main weight of the German armies on their front should urge us ceaselessly to undertake this task and should in no way conceal their complaints and even reproaches that we have not done it before now."

"I do not blame them at all for what they say," he said. "They fight so well and they have inflicted such enormous injury upon the military strength of Germany that nothing they could say in honest criticism of our strategy or the part we have so far been able to take in the war would be taken amiss by us or weaken our admiration for their own martial courage and achievements."

Mr. Churchill termed the united Allied strategy "the best that was open to us in a practical sense. It has been bold and daring and has brought into play against the enemy the maximum effective forces that could have been deployed up to the present" in view of vast ocean stretches, amphibious warfare and the character of the armies.

PASSENGER TRAIN HITS SWITCHER, 26 ARE KILLED

Live Steam Released From Switch Engine Swirls Thru Coach Trapping Victims

150 PERSONS INJURED

Wayland, N.Y., Aug. 31. (AP)—Twenty-six persons were dead today—many of them from inhaling live steam—after the crack Lackawanna Limited passenger train and a switch engine crashed head-on near this southwestern New York community late yesterday afternoon.

Approximately 150 others of the 500 passengers on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western's New York-to-Buffalo Express were injured, several of them seriously in New York's worst train disaster in more than three years.

The wreck scene is about 50 miles south of Rochester.

Moans of the injured mingled with the escaping steam from the switch engine as scores of volunteers dug into the tangled debris to effect rescues and remove the dead.

Railroad officials hoped to clear the main line track by noon.

The wreck was the most disastrous in New York since the New York Central Lake Shore Limited was derailed at Little Falls April 19, 1940, bringing death for 31 and injuries to 135.

Live steam, loosened from the switch engine which came to rest along side the train, swirled through a wrecked coach, trapping many of the victims.

Twenty-three persons—18 women, three men and two small girls—died instantly and three succumbed to injuries today.

Some of them were scalded and burned so severely that identification may be delayed for many hours.

About 100 suffered superficial injuries.

Fifty-six persons required hospitalization. They were taken to hospitals in Wayland, Bath, Dansville and Corning.

Blood plasma was flown from Rochester, Buffalo and Oswego to Dansville and then taken by car to Wayland.

The accident occurred about 5:45 p.m. (E.D.T.). James E. Leroy of Buffalo, engineer of the Limited, said the train was speeding through Wayland when he saw a switch engine on the siding paralleling the main line westbound track.

"The engineer of the local freight locomotive, apparently was confused and thought the Limited had gone through and started to pull out on the main line to continue switching," he added. "When I saw the other engine pulling out, I slammed on the Limited's emergency brakes, but it was going too fast to avert a collision.

Swedes Indignant Over Rejection of Protest

Stockholm, Aug. 31—(AP)—The Swedish press reported today that protest meetings were being held throughout the country on the Nazi sinking of two Swedish fishing boats Aug. 25 off the coast of Denmark and Germany's subsequent flat rejection of Sweden's protest of the action.

The newspaper Aftonbladet quoted Eskil Karlsson, a fisherman on one of three other boats which escaped from the attack, as saying: "The Germans kept firing their machine-guns while the men from the sunken ships were swimming in the water."

Commenting on the German contention that the fishermen had no right in those waters, the Aftonbladet said, "there is no reason at all for Sweden to swallow such absurd arguments. Its only result is to increase Swedish indignation over what happened."

The newspaper Aftontidningen added: "For the future, it's obviously no use to protest against German actions, it seems one can not have normal diplomatic relations with Germany. Normal diplomatic relations are based on rights, but Germany does not recognize rights or acknowledge responsibility. When Germany argues that Sweden is hemmed in by German armies and must behave politely, all basis for normal diplomatic relations is eliminated."

ALLIES DOWN 37 PLANES IN 114-TON ATTACK ON WEWAK

Total of More Than 300 Jap Planes Destroyed Since Mid-August

JAP CRUISER HIT

By DEAN SCHEDLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 31—(AP)—Allied bombers and fighters in a 114-ton bombing attack on Wewak, New Guinea, have added at least 37 Japanese planes, and possibly 49, to the more than 300 destroyed there since mid-August.

This new air victory, scored Sunday, was reported today by Allied headquarters in a communique which also disclosed that Allied troops hold strong ridge positions above as well as below the airdrome at Salamaua, 350 miles below Wewak.

At Wewak, where the enemy has sent in reinforcements to replace losses which have been mounting since Aug. 17, the bombers wiped out at least 12 planes on the ground while the fighters, in furious battles with 60 zeros, downed 25 for certain, 12 probably, and damaged at least 17 others.

Losses Light

"Our losses were light," the communique said.

Previous communiques on the Salamaua fighting have been concerned mainly with action below the airdrome where Australians and American jungle forces have edged to the southwestern end of the air strip. But today's communique told of Allied forces repulsing Japanese counter-attacks Saturday night and early Sunday on Kila ridge. Kila is a small town above the airdrome and slightly west of Salamaua.

BITTEREST COMBAT OF AIR WAR OVER ITALY IS FOUGHT

Running Battle 100 Miles Out to Sea Costs Axis 17 Planes

AIRFIELD SMACKED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 31—(AP)—Newly-massed concentrations of enemy fighters battled U. S. medium bombers and escorting fighters yesterday in the bitterest combat of the air war over Italy.

The bombers blasted railroad yards at Aversa north of Naples.

Seventy to 75 Germans and Italians jumped the Allied fleets near the coast and over the target, and a great running battle continued afterward more than 100 miles out to sea, with the Axis losing 17 planes.

Heavy bombers meantime smashed the Viterbo airfield north of Rome with a heavy rain of bombs, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Formations of R. A. F. Wellingtons and American planes with fighter escort staged a night and day assault on freight yards at Civita Vecchia northwest of Rome.

Other medium, light and fighter bombers raided railway objectives in Southern City during the day, and fighter-bombers struck at communications in Sardinia.

In all, 21 enemy planes were downed, with 15 Allied aircraft reported missing.

Little Opposition

The heavy bombers, meeting comparatively light opposition, strewed bombs throughout dispersal areas at the strategic Vitero airdrome 40 miles above Rome, leaving hangars and other buildings in flames. They shot down two enemy planes.

At Civita Vecchia, a rail junction for the Rome-Leghorn route and industrial town of Terni, U. S. medium bombers knocked out tracks in the northwest section and scored direct hits on the railroad station, warehouses and locomotive sheds, in daylight.

Night-flying Wellingtons guided by their fires followed up in two sharp attacks, dumping two-ton blockbusters to create a terrible scene of explosions and fires.

An entire train north of the town blew up, and chemicals works and the transformer station suffered direct hits. The glow from the fires was bright enough to be visible to other Wellingtons in the Sardinia area 120 miles away. All planes returned safely.

(The Italian communique, broadcast by Rome and recorded by The Associated Press, claimed 40 Allied planes were downed over the Rome and Naples area. The German radio said Nazi fighters destroyed 26 out of 60 attackers near Naples.

(German planes in a new attack on Augusta harbor in Sicily damaged an Allied merchant ship and hit several landing barges, the Italians added.)

Given Terrific Pounding

The freight yards at Aversa were given a "terrific pounding," it was announced officially. The bombers dropped "tons of high explosives and scored many direct hits in the maze of tracks and on warehouses. Large fires were seen burning among freight and tank cars parked on the sidings."

Fighters made unserviceable a steel railway bridge near Decimomannu airdrome in Sardinia. Two pilots destroyed an 80-foot radio tower at Pula.

GENERAL STRIKES IN NINE CITIES HARASS GERMANS

Nazis Move to Tighten Military Grip by Rounding Up Army And Navy Officers

DANES UNCOWED

By JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Aug. 31—(AP)— Reports received here from Denmark indicated today at least 2,000 persons were killed or wounded in fighting which began before dawn Sunday between Danish soldiers, sailors and civilians and the German occupation army.

Having crushed the last vestiges of the two-day-old military revolt, the harassed German occupation authorities were nevertheless faced with a new threat in a series of general strikes in nine Danish cities against their dictatorship.

Despite conflicting reports it was not believed here that King Christian had abdicated.

With King Christian a prisoner in Sorgenfri Castle, most of the government members jailed or under house arrest and scores of other prominent Danes in prison, Gen. Hermann Von Hannecken moved to tighten the German military grip over the country by rounding up all Danish army and navy officers.

He rushed troops to areas where strikes were reported paralyzing every type of business. The cities affected were Skagen, Jhoerning, Eaeby, Aalborg, Viborg, Aknrhus, Grenaa, Fredericia and Svenborg. Extraordinary efforts were taken to prevent spread of the strikes to other industrial centres.

The strikes indicated the Danes were uncowed by threats of drastic penalties, including death.

With the Sovereign and the government, which resigned within a few hours, apparently powerless, Danish citizens in Stockholm expressed belief that political leaders outside Denmark would form a free Danish government in London and ally it formally with the United Nations.

Free Danish leaders headed by Christmas Moeller have been functioning in London, but until now had not authority to exercise governmental powers.

Danish legal experts in Sweden took the view today that a state of war now exists between Germany and Denmark since the military dictatorship powers which Von Hannecken says he is applying under article 42 of the Hague Convention can be exercised only by an enemy force.

Reports reaching Sweden through rigid Nazi censorship said 1,000 army and 200 navy officers had been interned.

Danes living in Sweden predicted, however, the most stringent Nazi controls would not halt Danish resistance to Col.-Gen. Hermann Von Hannecken's dictatorship. They asserted sabotage would continue.

Already the Danes, besides sinking their own fleet, have blown up all Danish-manned fortifications except those at Midelgrunet. Here, however, the garrison threw all its ammunition into the sea before the Germans had an opportunity to seize it.

Small Deep Underground Room Decision-Centre of Bomber Command

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.A.F. Bomber Command, Somewhere in England, Aug. 31 —(CP)— Deep underground in a map-covered operations room the decisions are made that send thousands of young fliers out on the mass bomber raids of these summer nights. This room is the key spot of Bomber Command, the sanctum of Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, the man who decides whether the bombers go out tonight or stay home.

Here can be seen at a glance the whole picture of Bomber Command, in just what strength the squadrons of Canadian bomber group can be used, or the many R.A.F. bomber squadrons, or those of the Poles or the Czechs or other Dominion forces.

As soon as possible after the conclusion of one air assault each station commander informs this group headquarters how many planes can be ready by nightfall for the next attack. Each group informs Command. When Sir Arthur arrives at the underground operations room he can see in a twinkling just what force he has at his disposal.

Covers Three Blackboards

This chart of Bomber Command strength covers three blackboards 30 feet by 10 feet. It is the master chart of all the charts in operations rooms throughout the Command in group and station headquarters which show the strength of individual squadrons right down to each crew member.

First assault decisions are made in the operations room, covered with maps which are on the walls, on tables and on huge inclined movable frames. Ladders are necessary for close scrutiny of the higher maps.

Moscow Elated Over 2nd Victory In as Many Days

Red Army Lunges Forward Halfway To Mariupol From Taganrog

CLEAR ROSTOV PROVINCE

London, Aug. 31. (CP)—The Soviet army captured the town of Yelnya, 45 miles east of Smolensk, in an important advance toward the northern bastion of the German line in Russia, a Moscow broadcast said today.

The second smashing victory for the Soviet army in as many days on points of the Russian line separated by hundreds of miles, the capture of Yelnya was announced by Premier Joseph Stalin in an order of the day recorded by the Soviet Monitor.

Moscow had just heard the victory guns celebrating the capture of Taganrog on the Sea of Azov in Southern Russia when the guns were ordered again to fire 12 salvoes for Yelnya.

Important Rail Junction.

Yelnya is 35 miles west of Spas Demensk, the last town reported captured on the mainline railroad running from Latvia eastward through Smolensk and into Central Russia.

Stalin called Yelnya an "operationally important large road junction and the most important centre of resistance on the defences in the Smolensk direction".

The city was taken after Soviet troops broke through strongly-fortified German defence lines, Stalin announced.

The capture of Yelnya, a day after the capture of Taganrog more than 600 miles to the south, gave striking proof of the power of the Soviet summer offensive which now has recaptured Orel, Belgorod, Kharkov, Sevsk, Karachev, Taganrog, Yelnya and hundreds of lesser towns.

Advancing Unchecked

In the south the Russian army is smashing unchecked through German defences and is now more than halfway to Mariupol from fallen Taganrog, southern anchor of long German line, dispatches from the front reported today.

All Russia was celebrating the fall of Taganrog, gateway to the Caucasian oil fields and the cannon of Moscow boomed out a 124-gun salute to the Red Army at the orders of Marshal Joseph Stalin, who announced that the drive had cleared the Nazi army from the entire province of Rostov.

The city on the northern coast of the Sea of Azov was captured by cavalry and tank units of the southern Russiah army commanded by Col.-Gen. Tolbukhin.

A Soviet communique recorded in London said the Red Army units also threatened the industrial city of Stalino, 70 miles to the northwest.

Remnants of the Taganog garrison, meanwhile were being methodically wiped out.

15 Places Recaptured

Triumphantly the Russians announced 15 populated places had been recaptured in the great victory which threatened the whole German right wing.

GREAT BOMBER FLEETS HAMMER THE RHINELAND

Duisburg Also Hit During Night and Assaults Continued By Daylight Sweeps

28 BOMBERS LOST

(By E. D. BALL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 31. (AP)—R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers pounded home a heavy, concentrated attack on the German Rhineland last night and mighty fleets of heavy and medium bombers roared across to the continent today to bring the fourth year of the war to a thunderous close.

The war-busy industrial cities of Muenchen-Gladbach and Rheydt were hammered by the R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombers last night, a communique announced, while R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Mosquito bombers raided Duisburg and the low countries at the same time, ending a two-day lull in the aerial offensive.

An almost unbroken procession of raiders began drumming across the coast at daybreak close on the heels of the massive sweep against the sprawling Rhineland industrial area.

It was later announced that American medium bombers escorted by R.A.F., Dominion and Allied Spitfires today raided a German airfield at Lille-Vanderville in France and a power station at Mazingurbe, France. American headquarters called the attacks successful. One bomber and one plane from the escort are missing. Preliminary reports showed three enemy fighters were destroyed.

German broadcasts reported 25 night raiders shot down and said Muenchen-Gladbach and Rheydt had been especially hard hit.

Residents in Panic.

(Vienna dispatches to Swedish newspapers said residents of that city were in a panic as fear of new allied aerial attacks mounted.

(Refugees from Hamburg who have arrived in Vienna added to the unrest, the dispatches stated, with stories of the devastation caused when the city was all but wiped out.

(Placards tacked up around Vienna warned all persons whose residence in the city was unessential to leave immediately. Persons who had to work in the city were spending their nights in the surrounding countryside, the reports added.)

As the day wore on heavy aerial traffic continued across the English Channel, with the allied raiders heading again for France, Belgium and The Netherlands. Nazi airfields apparently were the chief targets of the daylight shuttle operations.

"The population suffered losses and considerable damage was caused to churches, schools, hospitals, residences and public buildings", the Germans asserted.

Muenchen-Gladbach and Rheydt are about 18 miles west of Duesseldorf proper in an area which has been raided some 50 times in all. Both places have great war factories and acres upon acres of warehouses.

Toronto Car Found Stripped of Tires

Marmora, Special — On Sunday evening Constable W. D. Lavender was notified by Albert Burridge that what was possibly a stolen car was parked on land of John Rombough on the eastern outskirts of the village between No. 7 highway and the old Madoc Road. Investigating the constable found that a 1939 Ford Coach bearing licence No. D1054 had been stripped of its wheels and tires and had no space tire in the trunk. The car was conveyed to Forestell's garage and Provincial Police Headquarters upon being notified, stated there was no record of the theft there. Early Monday morning Constable Lavender got in touch with the Department of Highways Branch, to be informed that the car belonged to Dr. Ward Reddick, 1069 Avenue Rd., Toronto. The car was evidently stolen solely for the purpose of procuring the tires, as apart from that, there was no damage done to it. A doctor's kit in the glove compartment had not been meddled with. The thief or thieves chose a spot between trees well-hidden from the highway to do their stripping.

COUNCIL TO OPEN TREE CUTTING PROGRAM IN CITY

All Decayed and Dying Trees Will be Cut for Fuel

TO WIDEN STREET

A tree cutting program by the Corporation will be undertaken in the near future according to a recommendation passed by the City Council on Monday evening, when that body resumed deliberations after the summer holiday. The trees cut down under the supervision of a foreman and six workmen, who will be directed by the Public Works Department will be those on city property, which are dying or decayed, all trees in front of any taxpayer's property upon written request from the owner. The council will consider the advisability of taking out the boulevard on Pinnacle Street from Dundas to Station Street at some future date in order to widen the street and the trees on the said boulevard to be taken out now. The council also requested in the recommendation that the Parks Board plant a new tree where one is taken out. This wood will provide a certain amount of fuel for residents during the winter and will also beautify the city to a great extent.

A Short Session.

The business session was a short one the members being out of the City Hall in an hour after the opening of the committee meeting. The members decided to institute cash relief to those now receiving the same and this system of payment will begin on September 16th. This procedure was suggested by the comptroller. Alderman Thomas Marshall who has attended but a few of the meetings of the year to date was given another three months' leave of absence by the Council. A resident of 45 Catherine Street requested a driveway into the property and Aldermen Armstrong and Woodley were appointed a committee to inspect the situation and report back to council. The members were agreed the property owner should have a driveway into the property. A grant was requested for the Playgrounds and the members moved that the request be referred to the trustees of the Ritchie fund for this purpose. The expenses of conducting the playgrounds this season will be about $600.

Thanked For Bandstand.

Manager of the Belleville Municipal Band Harry Moorman addressed a letter to the City Council thanking the members most sincerely for the portable bandstand that was erected for the organization. He stated that it filled a long-felt want in the city and that it was perfect in every respect. The bread inspector gave a report to the council stating that all bake shops in the city had been inspected and found in a clean and sanitary condition. Under the heading of inquiries, Ald. Potter asked the Mayor if there had been more than one tender for the new reservoir and received an affirmative reply. He also asked if the lowest tender was accepted and again he was answered in the affirmative. The mayor stated there were only two tenders submitted and the one accepted was nearly $15,000 lower than the other. Ald. Pringle asked if the City Letter had gone out families, who had casualties in their families due to war and the Mayor stated this was being attended to. Ald. Follwell asked how long the Tourist Camp was to be kept open and Ald. Chamberlain stated about September 15th. The members were agreed the camp should remain open longer if the weather was favorable. Ald. Allin asked about the progress of the waiting room at the bus terminal and the Mayor stated the delegation was going to Peterborough to look over the waiting room and setup at that point.

Before the council terminated, Mayor Rollins moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Upper and all her women volunteers for the excellent job that was done in issuing the new ration books. Ald. H. J. Clarke, vice chairman of the Ration Board seconded the motion. A letter will be sent by the clerk to Mrs. Upper expressing the appreciation of the Council. There were no by-laws and the council adjourned.

Sights Too Much For Bancroft Girl

Coming to the city to take in the sights, 20-year-old Zella Cooney, of Bancroft, became somewhat involved with demon liquor yesterday with the result she viewed city streets from the confines of the cell block at the city police station all night.

Unaccustomed to her feelings of a false nerve, the woman gave exuberant vent to her feelings by completely wrecking the plumbing and sleeping cot in the women's cell block.

Today it was a much different story for 20-year-old Zella Cooney, when she stood on the police court docket before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd charged with intoxication and also of the wilful destruction of plumbing fixtures in the Belleville Police Station to the value of $30.00.

When Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., arraigned the girl and read the charge of intoxication she merely replied: "When was that, judge, yesterday?" The reply being in the affirmative, Zella added, "Guilty, I guess."

Deputy Chief Harman told of the girl's condition when she was brought to the station house and added she subsequently became quite boisterous and after wrecking the plumbing in the women's cell, had to be secured in the steel cage cell inside the men's confine for a short time.

Zella will spend the next 14 days as the guest of the city in the county jail in default of payment of a ten dollar fine assessed under the L. C. A. On the charge of wilfully destroying city property His Worship reserved judgment for one week during which time Zella said she would endeavour to raise sufficient money to make restitution for the damage.

Two Men And Woman Remanded On Assault Charge

Facing charges of assaulting police officers, common assault and intoxication, Walter and Gordon Asselstine, Strachan St., and Jemina Martin, Belleville, all were remanded in custody for one week when they appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court today. The trio were arrested by Sgt. Ellis and P.C. Carruthers on Strachan St. last Saturday following a brawl during which all three are said to have assaulted police officers and generally resisted arrest. Police alleged the trio were drunk at the time while the defendants allege police damaged the Asselstine home on Strachan St. during the fracas. At the time of arrest P.C. Carruthers answered a call reporting fistic encounters in the vicinity of North Front and Strachan Sts. Later Sgt. Ellis arrived to assist in the arrest.

Gordon Asselstine today appeared on two charges of assault occasioning bodily harm, one count of assaulting a police officer and one of intoxication. His brother, Walter, was arraigned on a charge of assaulting a police officer and also of being drunk.

When it came to Jemina Martin, however, she was charged on two counts of assaulting Sgt. Ellis and P.C. Carruthers, one of assault occasioning actual bodily harm and a fourth of drunkenness. Gordon Asselstine was spokesman for the three and informed the court arrangements for a defence lawyer had been completed in defence of the charges.

30,000 "Fags" In One Shipment Sent by Veterans

Another 30,000 cigarettes were sent overseas to Belleville and district boys by the Army and Navy Veterans, unit 201, this week. The addition brings the aggregate total of Canadian cigarettes sent overseas by the local Veterans Association to 585,000 fags, Secretary James Lazenby announced today.

As is the case with all such cigarettes funds replies tendering thanks for cigarettes already received continually stress the hopes of the continuance of the fund. For instance an airgraph letter from Lieut. F. P. Clarke in North Africa, who says there is nothing to take the place of a Canadian cigarette in the "dust bowl of Africa". Similar messages were received by Secretary Lazenby from A. W. Welch, who wrote—"Do keep them coming," when tendering his thanks for cigarettes already received.

Details Given on Operation Of Reservoir When Completed; Construction Now Under Way

With the characteristic rattling and rumbling associated with the operation of powerful excavating machinery, ground work operations for the construction of the new 1,000,000-gallon water storage reservoir at the Belleville Water Purification Plant are now under full swing, it was revealed Monday afternoon during a visit to the scene of activity.

W. J. McFarland Company, Picton, has a large diesel bulldozer and earth mover on the scene with excavating at the site of the tank well under way. Schedule of construction calls for the completion of the tank in approximately four months. Wartime priorities may, however, delay shipments of reinforcement steel or other materials needed in the construction.

To be Enclosed

Details of the tank's construction were explained fully to a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer during the visit, it being learned dimensions of the new proposed tank will be 156 feet by 76 feet. The tank is placed immediately to the east of the pumping plant, its west wall being approximately 190 feet from the filtration plant. The site lies between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the bay shore, with shale rock at present being excavated. In all probability it will be necessary to blast to complete excavating.

Plans call for a completely enclosed tank with reinforced concrete comprising the floor, sides and top. Covering the concrete tank will be eighteen inches of sodded earth fill. A hand-placed stone retaining wall with fill will encompass the tank proper on three sides while on the north the top of the tank will only be a few feet above the regular terrain. Thirty-six concrete pillars will support the concrete tank top.

Depth of 15 Feet

On completion of the reservoir filtered water will be pumped into the tank adjoining the west wall of the reservoir, while the water will run by gravity back to the high pressure pumps for pumping into the city mains. Depth of water in the tank when full will be approximately 15 feet.

Supplying a city of 20,000 with filtered water means much more than merely pumping water into the mains, it was learned during a tour of Belleville's modern water filtration plant. That clear and taste-free water which runs into a basin at the turn of a tap in the home is the result of measured science.

From the time raw water is pumped into the plant from the bay until it is ready for distribution through the city mains is a period of check and double check on the part of the plant operators. First blackalum and chlorine are added to free the water of foreign solids; then after a period of detention in the settling beds the water is filtered through filtering beds of sand or coal base preparations and then on into the clear water reservoir. During the entire process operators have a complete picture of the process through dials and gauges which record rate of filtration, condition of filtration beds and a dozen other intricate operations.

Can Use Auxiliary Pump

From the clear reservoir four electrically operated pumps and one huge gasoline motor may be turned on separately to force the water through the city mains. The various sized electric pumps are used in accordance with the demand for water in the city with one or two being in operation at all times. When a fire alarm is rung in, operators immediately start the gasoline engine in readiness to supply any varied amount of extra water. The speed of the gasoline motor can be altered to supply any amount of water, while the speed of the electric motors is constant, it was explained.

During the tour of the plant, the reason for the need of the new storage reservoir was clearly explained by Mr. Scott. At present the clear water storage at the plant is only 225,000, of which only 180,000 gallons may be used without expectancy of trouble from the pumps. In case of a breakdown in the filter bed operation only 180,000 gallons of filtered water would be available before it would be necessary to pump raw water into the mains.

Need Sufficient Storage

"Operation of a public utility is vastly different than that of a store or other business," explained Mr. Scott. "When a merchant is out of any commodity his customers must go without, but that cannot be in the case of a public utility. We must be able to supply water or electricity at all times."

"Inadequate water storage facility has always been the case at the Belleville Water Filtration Plant. The extra storage facility was recommended by the engineers when the plant was first constructed but it was thought the added expense might block its construction."

Mr. Scott termed the new storage reservoir as a form of insurance that city residents would at all times be guaranteed a constant supply of filtered water. When the new tank is in operation it will be possible, if it is ever necessary, to close all four filter beds for repairs for an entire night and still assure residents all needed water.

Impressive Decoration Service Held Under Auspices of Canadian Legion

Marmora (Special)—The annual Decoration Service under auspices of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion was held on Sunday afternoon at the Memorial Building under ideal weather conditions. The Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band under Lieut. W. F. Ketcheson was present to assist in the musical portion of the service and to furnish marches for the parade to the two cemeteries of the village.

A detachment of the regiment under Lieut. W. Dickson also took part in the parade which was attended by many ex-service men under President T. E. Pritchard of the Legion as well as by men of the active forces home on weekend leaves. Beatrice Caldwell of the R.C.A.F. Trenton, who happened to be the only woman member of the forces home on leave, also joined the parade which was in charge of Lt. Col. A. V. Yates M.C., V.D. The service at the Memorial building was conducted by Comrade W. J. Cottrell.

Wreaths Placed

At the close of the service wreaths were placed beneath the two honor roles by Lieut. William Regan and Reeve W. R. Linn. The Last Post and Reveille with two minutes silence intervening was then sounded by Comrade G. Brooks after which the parade visited the Sacred Heart cemetery. After flowers had been placed upon the graves of deceased comrades and their names with those of comrades in distant cemeteries had been read by President Pritchard, prayer for the repose of their souls was offered by Rev. Father H. J Farrell who also gave a short address.

Last Post, the two minutes silence and Reveille were also a part of the ceremonies here as in the Protestant cemetery next visited. After all graves had been decorated the parade passed through the main streets of the village before its dismissal at the Memorial building.

The names of those remembered are as follows: Sacred Heart cemetery: Charles Morrison, William Murphy, C. Brawley, Vincent Callery, L. Shannon, Alex. McFarlane, A. McCallum, C. Feeney, H. Devine, F. Speaker Opposes Open Door Policy On Immigration

"Canada has every reason to be optimistic regarding future immigration possibilities; she is a country of enormous natural resources and is capable of sustaining under present standards of living a population of at least fifty millions."

So Rev. Gordon Maxwell of Campbellford, former immigration official at Quebec City, told Belleville Rotarians Monday noon when at their regular weekly luncheon meeting he pointed out the past mistakes of the Canadian immigration policy and the policies she must adopt in the future if she is to be assured of her rightful place in the post-war world.

Condemning Canadian immigration policy in the period before the First Great War which saw transportation companies subsidized for dumping thousands of undesirable arrivals from Central Europe into this country where they were left to work out their own destinies, the speaker declared he was strictly opposed to such "open-door" system.

Needs People of Character

"What Canada needs," he declared, "is people of character and with pioneer spirit and stick-to-itiveness; we need an influx of British blood to maintain democratic principles. Such will be available after the war in the form of present war refugees and the thousands of young airmen from various countries who have stated they will return to Canada after the war is over."

Canada should adopt the policy of bringing out English school children with character, he said. To these persons the government should provide free transportation, should see that they are settled satisfactorily and then "stand by them." They should be given income tax exemption for a specified period to enable them to adjust themselves.

In contrast to this policy recommended for the future Mr. Maxwell described the system prior to the First Great War when transportation companies were subsidized in bringing thousands of immigrants of every conceivable type.

Millions of people now living in war-torn Europe will be clamboring for admission into Canada at the close of the war to get away from a system of extreme nationalism. These people will look to Canada as their land of golden opportunity, he said.

Canada's size appeals greatly to the people of over-populated Europe in that it gives them undreamed of opportunities of pioneering and of travel. As an illustration it was pointed out that Canada is 18 times as large as pre-war Germany; is as large as the entire continent of Europe with the exception of the Grecian peninsula; yet it has a population of only one-ninth that of the Germany of before the war.

Climate Varied

Admitting that Canada's climate is extremely varied, it was claimed this variation is conducive toward strength and endurance as is that of no other country. Canada's potential assets include the possibility of increasing her present wheat acreage fourfold; she has the longest coastline of any nation in the world and has immense resources of lumber, wood and coal. Her waterpower possibilities are estimated at 33 millions of horsepower, of which only ten millions are at present developed.

"But what of markets,? you may ask," commented the speaker. "The answer is in a greater population."

Rotarians were reminded, however, that with the bringing in of immigrants, the job of the nation was only then beginning. It was a task for Rotarians, he concluded, to be on hand to welcome these new arrivals and then to stay beside them; to extend a hand of friendship and justice. "If we fail in this task it will be the nation's undoing."

J. Owen Herity introduced the guest speaker, while Rotarian appreciation was expressed by Percy McGuire. Past President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair while guests, including air cadet officers from Peterborough and Cobourg now taking officers' training courses at Trenton, were introduced by Harry Ackerman and the club welcome was extended by Ed. Bernstein. Sandy Burrows was song leader and Chas. Allin pianist. Gene Ilsey, former Bank of Commerce manager in this city, was included among the guests.

'We Are Ready' McNaughton Reports After Visiting Canadians in Sicily

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 31—(CP Cable)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, describing Canadian troops in Britain as a "large, strategic reserve," declared they are ready for use "in whole or in part" as the high command desires, "and can fit into any scheme right from the drop of the hat."

The commander of the Canadian Army overseas met Canadian war correspondents at army headquarters and reported his recent visit to North Africa and Sicily, from which he returned Saturday.

"We are ready," Gen. McNaughton said.

"The great thing that has come from the Sicilian campaign is that it has been a check and audit on our training organization.

"The result of observations by senior commanders is that we have every right to take satisfaction in what has been done. We are assured by independent judges, that our basic training has been right. The same thing applied to our organization."

Few Changes Necessary

Experience had shown a few small changes are necessary, Gen. McNaughton added and action has been taken to make these. Basically, however, Canadian methods had proved correct.

Sicily had shown that Canadians can put men in with other Allied formations if need be without trouble, he said, describing this as "a pretty satisfactory state of affairs."

"The policy of employment of the Canadians will have been settled in Quebec in principle and details probably are being worked out now," he said. "The Canadian Army is ready to implement those principles in whole or in part."

Asked about the future movement of Canadians, he said: "Where we go from here is what the enemy wants to know—there is where we have to ask the people of Canada to be patient."

Don't Press for Information

"We do not mind the Germans knowing there is a very heavy threat hanging over their heads," he said, "but people must appreciate the importance of not pressing for information which would compromise operations and put our forces in great danger."

The general who saw something of every fighting and administrative Canadian unit in the Mediterranean said he had never seen troops in better shape than the Canadians in Sicily and the men who fought in North Africa.

Discussing the medical side of the campaign, Gen. McNaughton said that anti-malarial discipline had been of the highest order and preventable cases were kept exceedingly small.

Where the men had to fight during hours when mosquitoes were about there had been some cases of illness.

Early surgery in the forward areas saved many lives, he said. "The energy and devotion to duty shown by the medical services in all walks was something beyond praise."

Asked why the Canadians had been spared the final Sicilian engagements, Gen. McNaughton said they had attained their objectives and their withdrawal from action was "perfectly normal."

"My Girls are the real Glamour Girls

"I've never been one to think that clothes make the man—or the girl either, for that matter. That goes for uniforms too.

"It's what they represent that's glamourous to me. And that's why I say my three girls—and all the other girls in the armed forces—are the real glamour girls today. They know there's a war on.

"Those uniforms of navy, khaki and air force blue are smart—but they tell the bigger story of women doing an important job.

"I'll never forget how proud I felt when I found that my girls were eager to do their share, and were not content to stay at home and let others do it for them."

The Brave Danes

Denmark's action in scuttling all her navy vessels which could not get away from the Germans wins the admiration of the free peoples of the world. With the action goes the Nazi hope that their ideas would attract a democratic people.

This small nation refused to meet the German demands that saboteurs be turned over to them for punishment which, of course, meant shooting. The Danes felt, however, they could not surrender their courts of justice to the Nazis without losing the loyalty of the nation. Another matter that has caused great friction was the behavior of German soldiers, mostly from the Russian front, who forgot discipline and became embroiled in rows with Danes who accused them of molesting women. Clashes became more common until finally Gen. Von Hannecken proclaimed the military dictatorship for the country on August 29. This is the first time in 79 years that the Danes have actively engaged in conflict with an enemy.

Denmark was the Nazi's "model protectorate" which was to serve as a pattern for treatment of occupied countries under Hitler's "New Order" and since April 9, 1940, has been the best treated country in Europe.

When we compare the Danish action with Vichy's subservience to the Nazis we can see the extent of national courage when there is a will to defy the enemy. It is the more remarkable because of the smallness of the country, and also, the Danes have seen what grim things happen to people who dare to take matters in their own hands. We all hope they will not have to pay too high a price for their defiance and that the shape of things to come will not protract their ordeal over too long a time.

What! No Hot Dogs!

Last week's order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board forbidding the baking of hot dog rolls after a certain date must have caused consternation among the younger folk of the country. If they were to be deprived of these delicacies then they understand that the war had finally reached Canada in a very definite way. Gone would be the evening confabs at some soft drink stand with a hot dog in one hand and a bottle of their favorite drink in the other discussing the happenings of the evening or their ideas of which orchestra leader could provide the best jive, and other matters beyond the understanding of their elders.

We hope the Board will think over this matter in a more serious way and make it possible for the youngsters to get their delicacy otherwise we may have a revolution on our hands of no mean proportions. Important matters like this should not be decided by snap judgment.

The Loon

The experience a couple of anglers had a few days ago of having a loon grab their bait and hold on to it until it came to the surface when it dropped the bait, it must have been a minnow, and flew away was an uncommon one. Generally this bird is fairly shy and keeps its distance from human beings.

We recall another unusual incident connected with the loon which was related to us a few years ago. This occurred on a lake in the northern part of the county. One morning at an early hour an American camper was awakened from his sleep by the frantic cries of a loon in distress.

Rushing to the window he saw the loon threshing the water with its wings from something that had a hold of its leg and uttering the most pitiful cries any creature could make. He immediately hurried to his boat, but before he was able to get to the scene the bird was pulled beneath the surface and disappeared from sight. He suspected that a large turtle was the villain in the tragedy and since then has waged a private war of his own on turtles.

The loon is, also, known as the great northern diver and nearly every northern lake has a pair or more of these interesting birds. Their weird calls at night, if heard at a distance, are occasionally mistaken for a wolf howling and some people think that if loons exchange calls over a considerable length of time that rain is not far away.

This splendid bird is no fool even though we use the simile "as crazy as a loon." This arises from the fact that its call at times has an eerie sound we associate with the insane. It is always on watch for danger from under the water, dipping its head under the surface at frequent intervals so that it may observe the approach of anything that may appear unusual.

While the loon is generally extremely shiy it loses some of its fear of humans if not molested in any way and at times will approach to within fifteen or twenty feet of a boat when one may observe the rich plumage of black and gray with the white ring around the neck and rapier-like beak that would be a formidable weapon against anything but a turtle. After making a casual inspection it dips under the surface and comes up several hundred feet away within a few seconds. While they they are most often seen pairs sometimes flocks up to a dozen or more will gather for brief periods.

They are protected by law from shooting and rightly so for they are no use as food and their presence on any water is part of the charm of Canadian lakes for so many who like to get away from the noise and every-day life of the busy communities in which we live.

Dog's Instinct

(From "Our Dumb Animals" Magazine)

Several years ago T. A. Fee, a Vancouver architect, shipped his dog, Canadian Airedale, by express from his British Columbia home to his brother-in-law, Thomas Paton, at Ardrossan, a station on the Canadian National Railway, 16 miles east of Edmonton, Alta. The charges were prepaid and money given for food and care for Buster all the way to his destination.

Time passed, however, and Buster failed to show up. The railroad company produced a receipt showing that the Airedale had been delivered to Edmonton. But after that the train ran out. Buster was given up for lost.

Imagine Mr. Fee's surprise and joy six weeks later when his Airedale came walkingto the yard! Buster was thin and tired and foot-sore, as if he had been travelling without any rest.

When his master came to check distances, he found the dog had covered 770 miles. From Edmonton to Vancouver there was no travelled road except the railroad track, and this passes through and over three chains of mountains. Add to that the fact that two-thirds of the way hadn't any homes along the way except the railroad section houses, and it became clear what a feat Buster had achieved.

How this Airedale had been able to pick the right one of 12 railroads converging on Edmonton; how he had managed to find food through all those long weeks and how, strangest of all, he had known those steel tracks would surely lead him home, will always remain one of the great mysteries of superhuman animal intelligence!

Floating Power Plants

(Electrical News and Engineering)

A few days ago newspapers carried an item which suggested that the Germans had withdrawn some of their submarines from the Atlantic in order to supply power and communications in areas which had been damaged by air raids. It was recalled that during a strike in England some years ago submarines were used to provide communications and supply power to keep large meat refrigerators in operation.

It may not be generally realized just how much power is generated by Diesel-electric surface ships and in that connection it is interesting to note that the Westinghouse Company announced some time ago that 900 U.S.A. ships built or under construction in 1942 developed over 6,000,000 h.p.

ULTIMATE WORTH

Will only the triumphs count in the day when all things are clear?
Is man to be judged at the last as his fellows have judged him here?
Is there only one goal to be reached and only one way to win?
Then what will be said for the ones who lose when the records of all are in?

And what of those gentler souls who never quite mastered skill,
Who had none of the champion's strength and none of the will to kill;
Who rejoiced in the gift of life, its friendships, its laughter and song,
And were well content with the lesser joys which unto the meek belong?

Will only the scores be seen? Will grandeur alone be grand?
Will only what men call fine the praise of the Lord command?
Will they measure the distance run and the time, as is done on earth,
Or will laughter and love and faith be the ultimate proof of worth?

Australian Letter

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 31 —(CP Cable)— The tumult and excitement of the Australian Federal election are almost over. The final results are not yet known but there is one feature already established that the Commonwealth has never known before.

There is certain to be at least one woman in Parliament for the first time and there may be three or four.

In all 23 women were candidates for the House of Representatives or the Senate. The one certain to go to Parliament House at Canberra is Dorothy Tangney, a teacher in western Australia. She will be a member of the Labor team her state is sending to the Senate. She is a Bachelor of Arts and holds a diploma of education, is in her thirties, is regarded intellectually brilliant and is an active Labor worker in her state.

Another well-known woman who seems to have a strong chance of holding the seat of her late husband in Tasmania is Dame Enid Lyons. Her husband, Joseph A. Lyons, began political life as a Labor man but like the veteran statesman and First Great War prime minister, W. M. Hughes, he switched over to the opposition a number of years ago. Then Lyons became prime minister as leader of the United Australia Party.

Lyons and his wife brought up a family of 11 children. Dame Lyons nevertheless throughout the long political career of her late husband maintained an active interest in politics herself. She is a graceful and charming speaker. During the election campaign she advocated national unity, no party strife and an all-party government.

Dame Lyons says "my experience has shown me there is a growing feeling that women are not unfitted for political life. It was always my husband's wish that I should stand for election but at the time of his death I was too ill to consider it."

One well-known Sydney woman is likely to win for Labor what generally has been regarded as a fairly safe Anti-Labor Sydney suburban seat. This is Mrs. Jessie Street, the wife of a judge of the State Supreme Court. She has been active in many phases of public life. Mrs. Street is chairman of the Federal Council of Sydney's Russian Medical Aid and Comforts Committee and is a grandmother.

GARBAGE COLLECTION

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

I think it was a step in the right direction when the city took over the collection of garbage, and I hope their new covered wagon will work.

Former collectors were very tough with garbage cans and were unduly independent. They would not accept old stope pipes, plaster, used Christmas trees, etc. It is to be hoped the city's attitude will be different. We resident pay for just that that rubbish will be removed, and of course we want it done.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

ENJOYED BAND CONCERT

80 Dundas St. E.
Belleville.

To the Editor
Ontario Intelligencer;

Dear Sir:

I wish to express my feelings toward the splendid Band Concert that was given on Sunday evening August 29th.

First of all I should like to congratulate both bands masters on their excellent performance.

Tonal qualities of the bands were of a high order and one would have to go a long way to hear such high qualities produced by a similar organization.

A word of praise to the soloists. These men must work hard to bring out such fine qualities of tone which I am sure the public appreciated last night.

One thing I should like to see is a seating capacity for the public so that the music could be more fully enjoyed.

I wish as a citizen to express my appreciation to the bands, total effort of displaying a fine technique also to the bands' management for the fine program.

Your Sincerely,
Jack Green.

Board Recommends Conservation Board

Toronto, Aug. 31 —(CP)— The appointment of an Ontario Conservation Board, composed of scientifically-trained men from within and outside the government, and representing all the sciences included in a complete conservation program, has been recommended as the first step in a rehabilitation program in the Ganaraska watershed in Durham County.

This recommendation and others were included in reports from Federal and Provincial committees which were set up to investigate how the watershed — 103 square miles lying north and west of Port Hope — could be brought back to its former condition, possibly as a post-war rehabilitation project.

Once heavily-wooded, the watershed of the Ganaraska River contained valuable agricultural ground and forests. Because af extensive lumbering, however, erosion caused many acres of agricultural ground to literally blow away, caused annual floods in Port Hope and caused district wild life to become practically extinct.

Quincy, Massachusetts, is the only town in the United States that has the distinction of being the birthplace of two Presidents. Both John Adams, the second President, and his son, John Quincy Adams, the sixth President, were born there.

Wasps were the original papermakers. In making paper for their nests these insects use the same basic materials used by industrial paper manufacturers.

The slaughter of a large number of victims is popularly called a "hecatomb." Literally this word means "a hundred oxen." In Greek mythology the hecatomb was the sacrifice of a hundred cattle to a god at one time.

Pennsylvania Avenue, the historical street running between the White House and the Capitol in Washington, is 160 feet wide.

According to early Christian tradition the name of the penitent thief crucified with Jesus is "Dysmas." He is regarded as a saint and his relics are claimed for Bologna in Italy. In some church calendars his feast day is commemorated on March 25. The "good thief" is represented in art with a cross beside him. According to the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus, the impenitent thief at the same time was named "Gestas."

The idea of burning or hanging a person "in effigy" instead of in person to show hatred or contempt is believed to have originated in France, where in olden times the public executioner used to hang a representation of a criminal when the criminal himself could not be found.

George Guess, known to the world as Sequoyah, invented a syllable alphabet of the Cherokee Indian language that is said to be the most perfect alphabet ever devised for any language. Sequoyah's famous Cherokee alphabet consists of 85 characters, each representing a single sound.

Martin Van Buren left an estate valued at $400,000 and was one of the wealthiest men who have been President of the United States.

The word "buckwheat" is a corrupted form of "beech-wheat." This plant was so called because its triangular-shaped seeds resemble the mast or nuts of the beach-tree. Buckingham in England got its name from the great number of beech-trees found there.

James Monroe, who gave his name to the Monroe doctrine, was completely "broke" when he died and his funeral expenses were paid by his friends.

SALVAGED

A gas range and an iron sink,
Were lying side by side;
When a keen-eyed junky spied them
And took them for a ride!
As he glimpsed their use-worn figures
A smile becurled his lips;
He knew that iron was needed
For tanks and shells and ships.

So carting them to his junk shop
He placed them on the floor
With some pots, tin cans and kettles
And dishpans by the score;
Then mused, and said: Old iron sink,
You're classified as "Scrap"
But some day you'll be "curtains" to
A Nazi or a Jap!

We need the iron range and sink,
All metal odds and ends;
Because, our hope in freedom now
On such as these depends,
A gun without a shell is lost
Its power spent and gone
Victory's well worth the cost
Get busy, Ev'ry one!

Friends, Neighbors Honor Couple Before Departure

Friends and neighbors in the Avondale district gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blackburn on Monday evening, when at a surprise party they expressed heartfelt regret in the coming departure of Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn from the community. Having sold their farm on the Trent Road Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn this week will take up residence in Deseronto.

Mr. Frank Reid acted as chairman for the evening with Mr. Dick Cameron reading an address prior to the presentation of a nest of mahogany tables and a table lamp by Mrs. Stewart Lough. The Neighbors' Aid, of which Mrs. Blackburn is a member, presented to Mrs. Blackburn a lovely cup and saucer. Both recipients replied in a fitting manner to the gesture of kindness on the part of their neighbors, expressing regret at leaving the community. Impromptu speeches were heard from many present while a period of community singing during which old time favorites were sung, was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. Blackburn has farmed in the Avondale community for approximately 20 years having come there from Bonarlaw at that time. Prior to his residence in Bonarlaw he had lived in Wollaston township.

Belleville Reliance Scores Six Runs in First Frame And Defeats Trenton by 8-4 Count

Only Need Another Game to Clinch Second Round of Playdowns

PLAY ON WEDNESDAY

Scoring six runs in the initial frame the Belleville Reliance needed their head start to beat Trenton 8 to 4 in the first game of the second round Intermediate O. A. S. A. playdowns at the Exhibition Park last evening. The second game will be played in Trenton on Wednesday night.

Trenton opened the scoring with a single counter in their half of the first, but "Spike" Pryke's Reliance bounced back with six counters of which only two were of the earned run nature. As a matter of fact each team only earned fifty per cent of the runs to cross the plate in their favour, which still would leave Reliance out in front insofar as the scoring was concerned. Trenton got one in the sixth and two in the seventh to pull up within a brace of knotting the count, but Reliance came back in their half of the eighth with two more to cinch the piece. In the ninth inning Trenton had the tying runs on the runways, but Pitcher Freddie Vasil made Pinch-hitter Anderson hit into the only two-ply killing of the game to end the contest.

Both Give Eleven Hits

Freddie Vasil hurled for the homesters, while an Air Force lad from No. 6 Repair Depot, was on the Trenton hilltop. Both pitchers were touched for eleven safeties, T. Henn's first inning double being the only extra base hit of the 22 base knocks registered. Then to add insult to their defensive work the Trenton nine kicked in with six errors to two boots committed by the Pryke-led nine. Russell failed to strike out a single Belleville batter, while Vasil whiffed four. Russell walked three to Vasil's quartette of free tickets, but in his wildness Russell was charged with five wild pitches while Vasil got away with one.

Every member of the home team counted at least one safe blow, except Jimmie Barriage, Henn getting a single and the game's only extra base clout, LaBonne counting two singles and Green a brace of one-base knocks. The Trenton hitting was confined pretty much to four batters, Maxwell and Long getting three each, while Craig and McColl hit two singletons. Defensively Barney McColl's throw to the plate to nip Murney Green, who tried to score from second on Vasil's hit in the eighth, was the sterling play of the night, although Green got even with Barney by making a sensational running catch in the fifth to rob Barney of what looked like a sure double. McColl, Maxwell and Bowden all played strong defensive ball for the losers, while Vasil fielded strong for his own cause, as did the Belleville inner works headed by Teddy Henn.

Trio of Errors Help

Hits by Craig, McColl and a passed ball gave Trenton the first counter of the game. A trio of errors, a walk and two wild pitches before LaBonne, Green and Loft hit in succession gave Reliance a start before Henn smashed his double and before the dust had settled Belleville had counted six runs in their half of the first. Hits by Long and Girling gave the visitors another in the sixth, while Maxwell opened the seventh with a single moved to third on Craig's one-base blow. Vasil purposely passed McColl to fill the sacks and Long singled to score Maxwell, Craig coming in on the passed ball, that followed. The next two went out to LaBonne to end the threat. Henn's single, a fielder's choice on Cy Barriage's play left two aboard and Henn scored on a wild pitch, Cy going to second and scoring on LaBonne's timely hit. The only double play of the game halted Trenton's ninth inning rally with two aboard when Pinch-hitter Anderson lined to Henn, who doubled Long off first.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—Class distinction in cricket took a verbal beating from a famed player in the 1943 Wisden, handbook of the game just off the press.

Recommending "total deletion" of all distinction between professionals and amateurs, R. C. Robertson-Glasgow wrote he believed "the hour is ripe, indeed over-ripe; for the sweeping away of anarchronisms and the exploding of humbug."

"To me such questions as the position of a cricketers initials and the precise gate from which he is to enter the field have long seemed vastly absurd," he said. "Once on the field a bowler is as good as a batsman, and a wicket-keeper probably better than either." (Professionals and amateurs must enter the field by different gates.)

Oxford University and Somerset player Robertson-Glasgow added that "all professionals whom I have known are fond of cricket and regard it as a pastime as well as a living; and many amateurs, besides being fond of cricket, play it forthe equivalent of money, namely for the publicity which attracts clients to themselves or to the business for which they may be working.

"The only difference is that the professional's pay is direct and the amateur's indirect. To both, cricket is, in fact, whatever it may be in law, their source, partly or entirely, of livelihood. To distinguish between these two sorts of cricketer on any commercial consideration is surely humbug."

Robertson-Glasgow found support in at least one London newspaper when the editor of the weekly Reynolds News commented that the article carried a frankness "that must be painful to the old School Ties."

"Coming from the source," the editor added, "I regard the view of utmost value to the armory of those who have struggled for years to bring democracy to sport, particularly cricket. The absurdities Robertson objects to are, in fact, class absurdities which should have been hit for six long ago."

Yankees Will be Favorites to Defeat Champions in the World Series

FIELDING FALTERS

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

A month ago St. Louis Cardinals were being talked of as probable favorites in the world series, but if the annual classic were opening now the New York Yankees almost certainly would be odds-on choices.

They probably will be when the world series opens in October, too.

The Yankees have been picking up momentum on the home stretch while the Cardinals have been slowing down. The difference between them was shown again yesterday when the Yankees beat Boston Red Sox 3-1 while St. Louis split a doubleheader with Pittsburgh Pirates in the only games played in the Major Leagues.

The Pirates won the opener, 4-3, but the Cardinals came back with an 8-3 triumph.

At New York Rookie Charley Wensloff pitched four-hit ball and Roy (Stormy) Weatherly punched the winning ticket with a two-run homer, his third in two days.

This gave the Yanks their 13th consecutive series and a record of having won 42 out of 59 games since the streak started July 5.

They now have plenty of power and good fielding along with the best pitching in the major leagues.

The Cardinals have their spectacular speed and sharp hitting, but their fielding has faltered and their pitching has become uncertain.

In losing four of their last six games they have made 11 errors, five yesterday and at least one in every contest.

TORONTO NEEDS FIVE MORE WINS

First Pennant in 17 Years in Grasp of Men Led by Grimes

(By The Associated Press)

If Toronto gets five more victories in the next two weeks, the Maple Leafs will have garnered their eighth International League pennant since 1887 but their first since 1926.

The Leafs, leaders from the start of the present campaign, have been kept off the top perch for the last 17 years although they won the Governors' Cup play-offs in 1934 after placing third behind Newark.

Much of the Leafs' success this season can be traced to the rejuvenation of a pair of former Major League hurlers, Luke Hamlin and Nick Strincevich. Hamlin, whose home-run ball cut short his National League visits, now has a record of 19 victories and eight losses while Nick Strincevich has 14 triumphs out of 20 decisions.

The Leafs, idle yesterday as were all the clubs in the circuit, are at Buffalo tonight for an arc light competition.

TUNNEY SHOOTING WORKS ON CARD

Healy Meets Monohan and Morgan Takes on Martinez in the Prelims

When Promoter Frank Tunney decides to put on a champion wrestling show he never does it in a halfway manner. Mister Tunney goes the limit for his title-bout shows and the announcement of the preliminaries for Wednesday night's British Empire heavyweight wrestling championship show proves beyond question Tunney is shooting the works for this one.

Not satisfied in prying "Whipper Billie" Watson away from Montreal tomorrow night to meet "Gentleman Jack" Claybourne in a title bout in which Watson defends his Empire crown, Promoter Tunney has added two outstanding preliminaries.

In the opener Pat Healy, who was with the United States Army in North Africa one year ago and is back home on furlough, meets Jerry Monahan. Healy comes to Canada well recommended as a master of wrestling holds and a suitable opponent for the rough Monahan. Then in the semi-final Pedro Martinez, that mad Mexican, returns to Canada for a bout with the popular "Toar" Morgan, the fighting Marine, and if that isn't a top-ranking show name your own ticket.

Of course the feature attraction will be the Empire title bout between those two agile grapplers Watson and the colored sensation, Claybourne.

Toronto, Aug. 31 (CP)—Pete Slobodian, one-time New York Americans hockey defenceman, did some frank talking during a furlough at Regina. Slobodian, it seems, figures the Allan Cup can be shipped to Toronto right now. He's stationed with the R.C.A.F. at Toronto and the airmen have many other stars in the same camp, including Bus Wycherley, Eddie Bush, Johnny Chad, Lloyd Gronsdal, Roy Conacher, Johnny Quilty and Ab Collings. And it's expected that Johnny Mowers, Detroit's Vezina Trophy winner, will join the Toronto camp for goal duties.

Prospectus:

Grapevine reports indicate the Air Force may concentrate its hockey talent in five teams next winter—Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg and two in the East. Last year the R.C.A.F. had 10 major teams — Victoria, Vancouver, Calgary, Lethbridge, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Halifax . . . Jack Park of the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder, an authority on Quebec senior league doings, hears that Tommy Gorman of the Montreal forum is trying to discourage operation of service teams in Montreal this season. Park says Gorman's hope is to have a civilian league with two Montreal teams and one each from Quebec and Ottawa. There may be something to this rumor because evidently Ottawa Commandos, Allan Cup champions, do not intend to operate this year. Commando players have been scattered to all parts of the Dominion and there are no reports of replacements. Park suggests Jim McCaffrey may operate a combined army-civilian team in Ottawa, possibly under the old name of Senators.

Incidentally:

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson comes up with proof the hockey players of the 1920's were plenty tough. Sprague Cleghorn, who helped Ottawa Senators and Montreal Canadiens win the Stanley Cup, works in a Montreal defence plant. A steel bar weighing 1,200 pounds fell on his leg. The steel bar was badly bent. Sprague suffered a few torn muscles and tendons . . . There was quite a furore last fall when Tommy Cooper, former Winnipeg and Moose Jaw hockey star, refused a Toronto Maple Leafs contract because he was employed in essential industry at St. Catharines. Now Tommy has joined the R.C.A.F. . . . Ontario junior hockey clubs were scrambling for services of Vernon Kaiser of Preston, Ont. He has finally located at Port Colborne.

What's Doing in Sport

Hamilton (CP)—In a senior "B" game of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association playdowns last night, St. Catharines pounded two pitchers, Cadman and Brant, to win 5-4 from the locals. The Saints secured 13 hits.

Simpson, N.Y.—(AP)—The U. S. naval training station took on all comers in baseball, including major league teams, and won 14 straight until Rochester Red Wings appeared on the scene yesterday to win 8-6. At that, the Gobs secured 13 hits but 14 men were stranded on the bases.

Guelph (CP)—The R.C.A.F.'s Guelph entry in the O.A.S.A. worked out a 7-6 decision over Brantford Cockshutts last night in the first round of the senior "B" softball playdowns, the Airmen coming from behind in the eighth inning with a four-run rally.

Toronto (CP)—Pitcher Cam Ecclestone, one of Canada's premier softball hurlers, has been suspended by the Beaches fast-ball league for refusal to pitch for Peoples against Tip Tops in a league game at Acorn Park last night. Ecclestone's refusal was because umpire Wes Balmer was behind the plate. The game was forfeited to Tip Tops and the case forwarded to the Toronto Amateur Softball Association for further consideration.

St. Louis (CP)—Grace L. Durocher yesterday filed suit for divorce from Leo E. Durocher, Manager of Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Baseball League. Mrs. Durocher alleged that her husband was "constantly of a nagging disposition.... was possessed of a very uneven temperament....And has grown very cold and indifferent."

New Aircraft Carrier 'Hornet' Launched in Va.

Newport News, Va., Aug. 31—(AP)—A great name in the history of the United States Navy was reborn with the launching of the aircraft carrier "Hornet" amid cheers of spectators who a moment later heard Navy Secretary Knox hint broadly at plans for larger scale aerial blows against Tokyo.

Last year's bombing of the Rising Sun capital was "only a small sample of far bigger raids to come," Knox said in a speech a moment after his wife sent a bottle of champagne foaming over the bow of the ship which replaces the flat-top of the same name sunk last year in the Santa Cruz islands.

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

Very Silly.

I happened to meet my friend, Dumb Dora on the street and I asked her where she was going.

"I'm going shopping", she told me. "I'm going to buy a mirror".

"A hand mirror?"

"Don't be silly! Who wants to look at their hands in a mirror?"

One in the Bag.

"Spike" Pryke's Reliance took their first meeting with Trenton in the O.A.S.A. by an 8 to 4 count. It was rather an odd game to say the least. Trenton garnered in an unearned run in the initial frame and Belleville bounced back to score six, but only two were of the earned-run nature. Those six runs saved the day for the homesters, as they were out-scored and out-hit for the remainder of the game. We are not suggesting Trenton is a better nine than Reliance, but they could have easily lost last night's tussle. We expect the locals to take the series in two straight now.

But, as the score sheet shows each team collected eleven hits, Teddy Penn's being the only one of the extra base nature. Trenton booted the ball for six glaring errors in the field, while Belleville only had two behind Fred Vasil. "Rusty" Russell, Trenton's imported hurler from No. 6 Repair Depot, chalked up five wild pitches while Vasil only came through with one.

Something of Note.

Russel failed to strike out a single Belleville batter, while Vasil whiffed four. It is seldom around these parts that a pitcher doesn't send at least one batter down via the three strike count, but Russell proved the exception last night.

Getting back to the actual scoring Pryke's charges weren't pressed after getting a sextette of counters in the first. However, the locals showed their real offensive strength in the eighth after Trenton had moved the score board to 6-4, when they bounced back with the clinchers, two runs.

In the fifth inning Murney Green raced miles to rob Barney McColl of what seemed a sure double. The Trenton centre fielder got back on even terms with Murney in the seventh when a perfect throw from deep centre nipped Green at the plate, as he tried to score from second on Vasil's single. They were both sterling plays and received the acknowledgment of the fans.

Hockey Star Dies.

Many local hockey fans regretted to learn of the death of Harold "Shrimp" McDougall who played a lot of hockey for Peterborough and who will be long remembered for his shiftiness and clever play-making while helping to beat Belleville hockey teams down through the years. Of course Shrimp's greatest feat was leading the old Owen Sound Greys to Memorial Cup championship.

Fred Craig, of the Peterborough Examiner paid the following tribute to the little hockey ace who did so much for the puck sport and his home city:

"Peterborough hockey fans will be saddened by the news of the death in Toronto of Harold 'Shrimp' McDougall. The former hockey star, whose exploits on the ice here and in Owen Sound had made his name a familiar one, was one of the outstanding players of more recent years to be developed in Peterborough." He began his career as a player at 15 years of age in Peterborough City League and his stick-handling even at that time made him notable. He played junior O.H.A. hockey in Peterborough, and then was grabbed off by Owen Sound where he soon won country-wide fame as a star centre ice man with the Greys, his playing when the Owen Sounders grabbed off Dominion honors being sensational. After graduating from junior hockey, McDougall played for some time in the Ontario Professional League but his lack of weight was a handicap there. He also played in the North for some time and wound up his career as player and coach with Peterborough teams. At his peak one of the flashiest stick-handlers in the game, "Shrimp" made up for his small poundage by his speed and trickiness. He could make the opposition look foolish when he was going at his best. He was always popular with local fans and his passing will be deeply regretted. The sympathy of the sporting public will go out to the bereaved relatives.

Remember When.

Toronto Maple Leafs, hottest team in the International Baseball League this year, were shut out in both games of a doubleheader by the Bisons at Buffalo two years ago today. The Leafs finished in last place that season, 53 games behind the league leading Bears. Whatta difference a couple of years make, this year the Grimesmen should win the league handily.

Some Changes Made.

In order not to conflict with last night's Trenton-Reliance O.A.S.A. saw-off the Girls League postponed their Reliance-SWACO third and final semi-final game until tonight and moved the Bell Sargent-Bristol final meeting to Wednesday evening. The girls' executive could just as well have evaded the Wednesday night date also and given the fans the chance of seeing the return game between the Oshawa kids with Army and Navy juniors here. At that a good number of softball fans will not miss the opportunity of seeing the Motor City kids battle Townsend's charges here in Belleville if for no other reason than to see how good Scribe George Campbell's Oshawa crew really is.

THIS AND THAT . . . P/O. Warren's No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" didn't advance as far in the No. 1 Training Command softball finals this year as they did in 1942 . . . The local Airmen were eliminated in the Command semi-finals 4 to 3 by the Guelph Airmen, who went on to win the Command title by beating Sky Harbor Saturday . . . The No. 5 "Flyers" were leading Guelph Airmen going into the seventh when Guelph tied matters up and went on to score the odd run in the ninth . . . The Bata "Shoemen" journey to Grimsby for the first game of the Intermediate "B" semi-finals in the O.A.S.A. on Wednesday . . . Joe Louis says he'll resume boxing after the war guns have been silenced . . . Yes, if he isn't stuck on some far away Pacific island . . . Mrs. Leo Durocher, wife of the famed "Lippy Leo," is seeking a divorce . . . She says Leo has become "cold and indifferent" . . . Well, who wouldn't managing the Daffinessmen?

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 163

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

How is your appetite for another bridge rule? The last one I fed you was lesson number 33 in Horse Sense bridge. That was about a month ago.

Remember that rule? It reads: Raise once for each trick not previously consumed. That becomes part of the new rule I am about to give you.

The other part of the next rule is something I have been telling you about for more than a week. It is: Each voluntary no-trump bid consumes another no-trump trick.

A combination of these two ideas form lesson number 34 in Horse Sense bridge. It reads: Each raise consumes another suit trick; each voluntary no-trump bid consumes another no-trump trick.

You have this responding hand:

♠A K 9 5
♥9 6 3
♦8 5 4 2
♣K 7

Your hand contains four suit tricks; an ace, two kings, and one short card in clubs. Your three high cards are three no-trump tricks. So you have enough for two raises in suit; one voluntary no-trump bid.

Suppose partner starts with an opening bid of one heart. With not more than two tricks, you would have passed. Your first response is a takeout to one spade.

Your one spade bid was not a raise. So, you did not consume any of your tricks in excess of two. You still have two unconsumed suit tricks; enough for two future suit raises, if necessary.

Suppose partner then bids two spades. You have no more takeouts. Your only assist is in your assisted suit. You are thus able to raise twice in spades over your partner's two spade bid.

When partner opens one heart and you say one spade, suppose he then bids a non-forcing one no-trump. With no more takeouts and no assist, bid two no-trump to show your third no-trump trick.

If you keep your bids straight, it pays most of the freight.

LESSON NO. 166

Get set for another rule of rules.

It is one of the master rules in Horse Sense bridge. In one short sentence it covers a multitude of the sins usually found in other systems of bidding.

To lead up to this paragraph, look back at an earlier rule with which you have become familiar. You know it as: A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round.

Its corollary is: A non-jump no-trump bid or a non-jump assist or a non-jump rebid in a suit is not forcing. In other words, no non-jump bid is forcing unless it is a takeout to a new suit.

This leads to the fact that the force in a new suit takeout is wiped out by any other type of non-jump. Or, when the chain of takeouts to new suits has been broken, the force no longer exists.

That resolves itself into lesson number 35 in Horse Sense bridge. It reads: A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round if the chain of new suit takeouts is unbroken.

Look at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A K 9 5
♥J 4
♦A Q 8 4 2
♣8 6
NORTH
♠8 4 2
♥A Q 6
♦7 5 3
♣Q 9 4 2

South starts with an opening bid of one diamond, the longer of two different length biddable suits. With no takeout or assist, north responds with one no-trump. He has just enough high cards for it.

South now makes a second round bid of two spades, showing his short biddable suit. With six suit tricks, he has enough. The raise consumed his sixth trick.

The south two spades bid was a takeout to a new suit. And a new suit takeout is forcing for one round. But not if the chain of new suit takeouts has been broken.

The north one no-trump bid was not a takeout. Thus, the chain of new suit takeouts was broken. Consequently, the south new suit takeout of two spades does not force north to bid again.

A chain of non-jump bids is no stronger than its weakest link.

AT THE BELLE

"Background to Danger"

A plain white envelope is the magnet for murder, kidnapping, wild pursuits and breath-taking suspense in "Background to Danger," the new Warner Bros. film scheduled for the Belle Theatre.

George Raft is cast as a tough, hard-hitting G-Man who runs head-on into trouble galore when he is given the envelope, supposedly containing money and securities, by pretty Ana Remzi (Oso Massen) whom he meets on a Bagdad-Istanbul express, nearing Ankara, in Turkey.

The envelope contains, however, material that a sinister crew of Nazi agents are after at any cost. Headed by the suavely ruthless Colonel Robinson (Sydney Greenstreet), they put Raft into hot water.

Raft is kidnapped by the Gestapo but is rescued by Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall, playing two Russian counter-espionage agents. Raft learns that the envelope, stolen from his hotel room, contains Nazi-forged plans of an alleged Russian plan to attack Turkey. Determined to thwart this scheme to win Turkey over as an Axis ally, Raft tracks down the Nazi agents and successfully foils the plot.

Besides Raft, "Background to Danger" stars Sydney Greenstreet, master of villainy, who scored in "The Maltese Falcon," "Across the Pacific" and "Casablanca." A strong supporting cast is headed by Peter Lorre and pretty, Brenda Marshall, who is cast as a beautiful Russian counter-espionage agent. Others in the cast include Daniel Ocko, Kurt Katch, Frank Puglia, Turhan Bey, Willard Robertson and Osa Massen.

Brilliant Surrounding Show

A brilliant surrounding show is announced including "The Canadian Movietone News of the World," a distinctive featurette, "Vodvil Days" presenting the cream of the vaudeville stage in a big fun and melody show and an M-G-M comicolor cartoon "Tale of Two Kittens."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Hard Way"

Dennis Morgan, a rather peaceable guy at heart, totalled up and discovered that he has had fights with five different women in his last four pictures. Brenda Marshall, Ann Sheridan, Bette Davis, and Olivia de Havilland were among his verbal antagonists, and pretty good ones, too, until he ran up against Ida Lupino in his current Warner Bros. assignment, "The Hard Way."

In this one, Morgan and Miss Lupino argue violently from the time they first meet until the final scene. They're always at verbs' points over Joan Leslie. Morgan wants to marry the youngster, and Miss Lupino wants her to keep on with her career. It's all in the script that way.

"Some players," said Morgan, sadly, "are the kind girls dream about. But I'm turning out to be just an old maid's nightmare!"

"Dr. Broadway"

Paramount's "Dr. Broadway" which received an affectionate reception when it opened at the Capitol Theatre last night, is what the doctor ordered in the way of entertainment. It's got fast-flowing, exciting action, it's quick on the up-take as the dialogue and it's got a good cast which takes maximum advantage of the crisp, colorful story.

Macdonald Carey, who scored impressively as Fred MacMurray's much-married romantic rival in "Take a Letter, Darling," turns in a performance that boosts his stock sky high. Jean Phillips, who is beautiful to look at and has plenty of talent, does a top-notch job with her combination romance-drama-comedy assignment.

In important featured spots, J. Carrol Naish is both sinister and comic as a gangster; Richard Lane is shrewd and convincing as a detective, and Edward Ciannelli is gripping as a rackets' boss with only a few weeks to live.

Against the background of Broadway, "Dr. Broadway" presents the story of Macdonald Carey, a young doctor, who is known up and down the street as a fellow who knows all the angles. That is, he does—until he meets and falls in love with Jean Phillips and gets himself charged with the murder of Edward Ciannelli.

In a series of thrilling episodes, Carey turns sleuth, clears himself of the murder charge, and then settles his own "heart" problem with Jean Phillips.

You'll find "Dr. Broadway" the kind of entertainment you need these days.

Hearing Test in Village Schools and Rural Communities

On reading the school report of her son, a mother called to the boy from another room and received no answer. As this had occurred more than once, she decided that "corporal" punishment was needed. As she entered the room the boy was reading a school book. On her asking why he had not answered her call, the boy replied that he had not heard her. Investigation showed that he was partially deaf and he admitted that he could not hear all the teacher told the class. By correcting a catarrhal condition and sitting nearer the front of the room, there was an immediate improvement in his school report.

In cities, provision is made for tests of the hearing of the school children by means of an audiometer which measures the amount and kind of hard of hearing present. The entire class can be tested at the one time. In smaller towns and in rural communities no means is provided for handling the occasional case of hard of hearing.

In the Pennsylvania Medical Journal Dr. Lewis T. Buckman, Wilkes-Barre, states that the physician realizes that if anything is to be done about deafness, it should be done early. And, since much of childhood deafness is caused by catarrh, which can be cured, there is reason to expect that results can be obtained from intelligent and thorough medical effort. Dr. Buckman describes a routine for handling such children and a method of testing for deafness in the school child.' In the test a phonograph with an electrical pick-up using a constant level phonograph record, set at 10 decibels, is used. A decibel is the lowest sound that can be heard by the human ear. Each child is examined separately with a pair of earphones using a switch for selecting right and left ears. The child has only to answer the numbers he hears, without writing down the answers, without using a large series of numbers, avoiding useless paper work and setting up of a classroom with a series of 20 to 40 phones with expensive equipment. It was found that one child could be examined in 30 to 45 seconds.

While a large number of children can be examined at the one time by means of the audiometer, it is gratifying to know that in villages and rural communities, a youngster suspected of hard of hearing can be tested in this simple manner.

Until I Stopped "Dosing" and Got Right at the Cause
Constipation really had me on the ropes! I'd take purgatives and get temporary relief—but soon, the old trouble would be back—bad as ever!
Then I discovered mine was the common type of constipation—due mainly to lack of "bulk" in my diet. So I began eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day and drinking plenty of water. It's a swell-tasting cereal—mighty good in muffins, too—and it got right at the cause of my constipation by supplying "bulk" I needed for natural regularity. whose advice he needs for completion of attack plans. The deputy commander-in-chief, Air Vice-Marshal R. H. M. S. Saundby, is there along with the Command meteorological officer, the controller of operations who has direct telephone lines with all bomber groups and the Air Ministry in London, and other experts connected with armament, signals and intelligence.

Opinion Must be Favorable

As a rule the meteorological expert is the first speaker. A civilian, his opinion must be favorable or there is no use going ahead. The bombers are not asked to fight the Hun and the weather too. He is probably the best-informed man in the country on the weather over Europe.

The Intelligence officer provides all possible information about the target, up-to-date news of the area's defences and the latest reconnaissance photographs.

Then it is up to Sir Arthur. If everything is favorable he may turn to Saundby: "This is your target. I want so many aircraft on this operation, a concentrated attack lasting only so many minutes."

The whole plan in detail then is worked out by Saunby, including the precise time at which the attack will begin, the types of aircraft to be employed, the proportion of high explosive bombs to incendiaries and other details. Take-off times have to be decided for aircraft all over the Command so as to get them above the target within the prescribed time with a minimum chance of collision.

All this done, the "action sheet" is presented to the commander-in-chief and, once approved, is passed on by secret telephone to various group headquarters by the controller of operations. The communication system is like a giant spider's web, from Command to groups, from groups to stations, from stations to squadrons and finally from squadron O.C.S. to crewmen.

And so efficient is the organization that should the weather change over the selected target another target can be selected during the day and all arrangements made for sending the bomber force out just the same to the second-choice target.

Medical Aid Inaccessible To Population

New York, Aug. 31. (AP)—Tass, Soviet News Agency, said today that at least 3,550 persons—2,000 of them children—died of typhus and dysentry in epidemics which swept Kharkov from March to June this year while the Ukrainian City was in German hands.

The report, broadcast from Moscow and recorded here by the United States foreign broadcast intelligence service, said the bodies of 20 to 25 persons were admitted daily to the morgue and that many other victims were "simply buried in the streets".

"The Germans", the broadcast continued, "destroyed all boathouses, polyclinics, hospitals, etc. All valuable medicines were taken away from the chemists. Medical Aid became inaccessible to the population".

Impression Prevails Robinson Pulled Punches Against Henry

(By The Canadian Press)

Indirect confirmation of the retirement of Henry Armstrong, one-time three-crown champion of the ring was contained in the announcement at Hollywood last night by Promoter Joe Lynch that he had offered $15,000 to Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia to replace Hank in a bout at the coast Sept. 18.

Previous to his fight with Ray (Sugar) Robinson at Madison Square Garden Armstrong had been signed for a 10-round go with Luther (Slugger) White of Baltimore at the Hollywood Baseball Park. The move by Promoter Lynch indicated that the veteran Armstrong could be considered on the retired list whether he wanted to step down from the ring or not. The impression prevails in New York fight circles that Robinson pulled his punches in the concluding rounds of his match with the Ol' Man of the Squared Circle out of respect to his venerable opponent—even as Armstrong had done when he disposed of the fading Barney Ross for the title. Ross battered and weary refused to quit and so Armstrong allowed him to retire standing up.

Armstrong, long on a financially-successful comeback campaign, had said he would call it quits about Jan. 1, 1944. The bout with Robinson last Friday night decided the matter for him four months ahead of desired schedule.

Catcher Harry Camelli 27 a seven-years' veteran of the minor leagues has been purchased by Pittsburgh Pirates from Albany, N.Y., of the Eastern League, it was announced last night. Camelli is batting around .290 and his 71 hits include 11 doubles and seven triples.

Sgt. Joe Louis world's heavyweight champ and his retinue, started out yesterday from Boston on a 100-day exhibition tour of U.S. Army Camps for morale-building after which he may visit the overseas troops. Louis weighing 215 pounds said he would return to the ring after the war.

Lieut. Rex. Carey of Vancouver, wounded while serving in Sicily with the Princess Pats, has been awarded the Military Cross, according to word received last night by his mother, Mrs. A. M. Carey. He is known as an amateur boxer and won the Canadian Army Middleweight title in 1941.

Los Angeles is away out in front in the Pacific Coast Baseball League race up-to-date statistics revealing that the club has 101 games and lost 36 for a .737 percentage, 17 full games ahead of San Francisco. Seattle is third in the standing and Portland fourth.

Helen Nicol, former Calgary hurler, bids fair to lead the pitching brigade of the All-American Girls Softball League out Chicago way, with a record of 15 victories and two defeats on the mound for Kenosha, Wis., for the second half of the league campaign.

Tony (two-ton) Galento, 242, puffed into the third round and cuffed 250-pound Babe Sharkey of Texas to sleep in their scheduled six-round affair at Wilmington last night, Galento using his so-called phantom punch, which spectators usually fail to discern, for the kill.

Two track records were smashed in the Grand Circuit racing at Empire City track yesterday when Lew McKinney, six-year-old Maine gelding paced the five furlongs in 1:14 and the mile in 2:02 1-2 in the classified event, the driver being Frank Safford. The horse cut a full second off each mark, winning the short race by four lengths.

The soccer eleven of the R.C.A.F., Jarvis, outscored Guelph Wireless School 2-1 last night at Hamilton in the zone final of the Services Soccer league and qualified to meet the Mount Hope Blues Wednesday, the winner to compete in the provincial final at Toronto Saturday.

Bear Mountain, N.Y., Aug. 31.—(AP)— If you don't think its appropriate that Bears should be an important topic of conversation up here where the Giants and Dodgers are getting ready for the pro football season, you should have seen Steve Owen in a cage with a couple of them yesterday. . . Someone had the idea that it would be a natural hookup for pictures—Bear Mountain and the Giants' Exhibition against those big bad Chicago Bears at Buffalo Sunday, get it. . . Anyway, Steve and Tuffy Leemans, who's spherical Steve's only assistant this season, consented to pose with a couple of roly-poly black bear cubs. . . ."They're cute little fellas', Owen admitted as he came out with his not inconsiderable area of skin undamaged. . . And he and Tuffy agreed the Giants will be lucky to do as well Sunday. . . Just then the naturalist in charge of the Interstate Park Zoo came along. . . "We have a nice tame skunk, too", he remarked. "No thanks", said Steve. "We've got enough pictures."

Outside Wing Joins Ottawa

Ottawa, Aug. 31. (CP)—Joss Gordon, for three years a standout outside wing with Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., made his first appearance at Ottawa Combines' Training Camp at Lansdowne Park last night as the city's entry in the Ontario Rugby Football Union resumed preparations for the opening game here Sept. 18.

Arnie McWaters former kicking halfback with Ottawa Rough Riders, also reported for his first workout. McWatters worked in the backfield, and Gordon was given a spot to fill in the front line of one of the two teams concentrating on formations.

PLANES SEED TROUT WATERS

Quebec Has Big Scheme for Re-stocking Lakes and Streams for Post-War Fishing

St. Jovite, Que., Aug. 31—(CP)—The greatest post-war trout re-stocking program in history is under way in the province of Quebec and assures plenty of sport for the next few years. Airplane delivery speeds the task and delivers the fish healthier than any other modern method.

The high-jumping fellows are dropped by the hundreds of thousands from planes flying low over the prime streams and lakes. Quebec's giant new fish hatchery at St. Jovite is a model of modern methods and provides millions of trout fingerlings for the restocking program.

Baby trout hit the water like machine gun shots from the low flying plane. Oxygenation prevents death during their few seconds out of the water. It's scientific trout re-stocking at its peak.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 17

Inspector Hare arrived about five minutes after the ambulance men, and Chris Hall, who was at his office and got the police call, barely five minutes after that.

I suppose it was obvious that any questioning of Pete Raymond would have to be done at once, right on the spot. There was no reviving Howell, his pulse was almost gone and he was terribly injured. Raymond must have fallen on him, or had the fall broken in some way, for in spite of the bullet in his shoulder, he was in far better shape. After the doctor gave him a hypo he talked very coherently for a little while.

"I came to see my wife," he said, "and was with her two or three hours. She was very quiet, dozing, I think. I got a hunch somebody was out in the hall, so I opened the door. It was this guy. I knew he'd been trailing me—"

"Why was he trailing you?" Hare asked.

Pete mumbled something about Howell being no good.

"So you fought, and in the scuffle you went over the banister. But who had the gun?"

"He did. Turned on me. Shot at me, tried to push me over the railing," Pete said. His voice was failing.

"How long have you known Gilbert Castle, Mr. Raymond?" Hare asked.

"Long enough, the so-and-so," Pete gasped, but he did not say so-and-so.

"Why did you kill him?"

Pete opened his eyes again and I think his lips formed the words "didn't" and then he was out. The doctor gave the stretcher-bearers the signal.

"Why did he kill him?" Hare asked Emilie, quietly.

"Oh, he didn't," she said. "It's impossible. I know he didn't."

"Why did he hate him?"

It was a crime to question her, for now that it was all over her little strength was gone, her whole body was shaking, her face gray, in the dim hall light.

"I don't know, Mr. Hare. I'm just as surprised as you are at what he said. I didn't even know that he knew him."

"O.K." Hare said. I don't think that even he doubted her. She was too sick, too distracted to lie.

Chris Hall picked her up and carried her upstairs, and this time she made no objection. Peg and I made her as comfortable as we could, and called her doctor, and one by one all the others came in to see if they could help. Miss Martin offered a hot-water bottle, Mrs. Strom an egg-nog, "with plenty of schnapps to give her strength, poor thing," and even Mr. Fissel ventured to inquire if there was anything he could do.

Once more all our little animosities were forgotten. When I came out of the room with the doctor even Mr. McMurray and Madame Hurd, the arch enemies, were talking like bosom friends.

"She will have to go to a hospital at once," the doctor said. "She can't be nursed here, and the sooner she is moved the better. Of course, I don't know anything about her finances—"

"I'll take care of it," Peg promised recklessly.

Dear Peg, she'd give the shirt off her back to anyone in trouble.

"She can be moved to the county hospital later," the doctor said, "if she can't manage it."

"I'll manage it," Peg repeated firmly.

"I can help after pay-day, Monday," I said, "and I'm sure Jan—"

"Don't run to Jan with everything. Let Jan get a night's rest for once," Peg said. "Just go ahead and order the ambulance, doctor."

So the third stretcher went out of the Roller building that night.

"She looks like death," Mrs. Strom said, shaking her head, after they had taken Emilie away.

"Don't say that, Lena, don't say it," Strom cried, "it's bad luck!"

"Well, I can only say what I feel. I am glad though they left the lights on."

"Me, too!" Miss Martin said, looking up at the dim light gratefully.

"I'm glad they've got the murderer, that's what I'm glad of," Utz said. He was back again. "Whew! Now maybe we can sleep nights."

Strom said, "You think it was this fellow, Miss Raymond's husband, then?"

"Think? Didn't he as good as admit it?"

"He did not!" I said, "and I heard him talk. You didn't!"

"Oh, if you're going to wait for him to confess," Utz grinned, "but they'll get it out of him, never fear. Inspector Hare knows what he's doing. He's got his man!"

Peg took me by the hand and pulled me away. She was afraid I was going to boil over and tell what I knew about Inspector Hare and Utz.

I heard Strom say, "But it was the bald-headed one who had the gun and shot Miss Raymond's husband. How does that fit in?"

"Oh, self defence. Or it might have been suicide. He might have shot himself when he saw the jig was up."

"For heaven's sake, come!" Peg said. "I can't stand any more of it."

We had been in the fourth floor hall, all of us, just outside of Emilie's room and now as Peg and I started upstairs, Chris Hall came out of our open door. "Hope you don't mind my using your telephone," he said. "What's doing now?"

"Nothing. Just Utz gloating that Emilie's husband did the job. We have had enough of it. Good night."

But I couldn't leave the Express man on the job. I hesitated there on the stairway, watching, as he joined the group on the landing below. He went right over to Madame Hurd, who stood with her pal, Miss Martin, a little withdrawn from the others.

"Madame Hurd," he said to her, "it seems to me that this man Pete Raymond, answers your description of the man you saw coming out of the building Monday night. Or it might even have been the other one, this henchman of his, Ben Howell. Have you thought of the possibility?"

Umhum, I thought, there he goes trying to build up a story for the Express! And she'll fall for it, she is just the type!

I leaned over the banister, looking down on them indignantly.

Madame Hurd is a thin, oldish woman with a trembly chin and wattles, that she tries to hide in chiffon scarves and drapery effects, and her head shakes when she is upset. She looked up at Chris, her head shaking, her beads rattling now. "It couldn't be," she said unhappily, "it couldn't be that I was that near the murderer He wore a different suit and his hat was over his eyes. But his ear . . I saw it when he sort of turned his head away from me and it didn't have any lobe. I kept noticing Mr. Raymond's funny kind of ear, when he lay with his head on his wife's lap on the landing down there and it . . oh, it was just the same. It was the same man! I don't want to make any trouble for anybody, but it was, it was!"

The next day, Saturday, was the day of the funeral.

It was also Madame Hurd's field day, the biggest day she'd had in about 20 years.

Of course I moved right in on Chris Hall's story. He HAD something there and did his jaw drop when he saw I was right on the job and not upstairs, safely tucked in bed, as he had thought.

Like the old trouper she was, Madame Hurd made the most of it. Out of her musty old trunk came picture after picture. Pictures of her as Carmen, with castanets, as Rosaura, with hoop skirts, as Marguerite, with pigtails, as Tosca, with a bonnet. Chris and I thought we grabbed them all, but she was smart enough to hold out a few for the other papers, too.

She told us about her debut with the La Scala Opera Company, her association with Farrar and the de Reszes. If it was true, she'd come a long way from her heyday in opera to a one-room studio in the Roller building. Once, when she was telling us about a gala performance with Dufranne in Paris, she looked young and lovely for a moment and then the moment faded and she was Madame Hurd again, Madame Hurd, teacher of voice, in the Roller building.

I felt old and sad . . . where would I be in twenty years? Where would we all be?

"Well, the old girl was young and gay once .How about us going out and making merry while there's yet time?" Chris asked me.

Nothing seemed to get him down. But I kept seeing those two broken forms on the mosaic floor below. I kept seeing Emilie being carried downstairs on the stretcher, gray blankets to her chin. And in my mind's eye, back of everything, there was always Gil Castle, long limbed and graceful, his beautiful dark head in a sticky pool on Jan Proust's Persian rug.

I shook my head. My knees were weak again, my chin wobbling.

He walked up to our door with me, his arm around my waist and me crying into his handkerchief, a fine sight, I'm sure. "There, there, take it easy," he was saying. Of course, he wanted to take it easy—so he could scoop me!

Before he left me he took a little bottle of tablets out of his pocket, took out two and put them in the palm of my hand. "Sleeping tablets, perfectly harmless," he said. "You look as if you haven't slept for a week. Better take these, you have got a big day ahead of you."

After I'd called Josh again, and given the photographs to the messenger he sent for them, I set the alarm for six o'clock, ,took the tablets and slept like a log. Peggy had a bad time trying to get me awake in the morning and told me I was a fool to have taken the tablets. "Suppose they'd killed you," she said indignantly "and then where would I be?"

"Unless it was catching you'd be all right—I'd be the dead one," I said, trying to be funny, but she wouldn't laugh.

"You said yourself that man might be the murderer," she scolded "and then you swallow a pill he hands out. It might very well have been poison!"

Little Benny's Note Book

It got 9 o'clock and ma said, Benny, it's bedtime.

Meaning mine, and I said, Aw ma, I mean G roozalem, and ma said to pop, William is that the kind of obedience we're going to encourage around here?

Most emfatically not, we're encouraging the other kind, pop said. But just a same, an important act like going to bed probably calls for important language. I mean if the command to retire was couched in high sounding legal frazeology, Benny might be more likely to realize the seriousness of its import, he said, and ma said, I dont care how he's told I'd like to see him march off to bed without a single contrary murmur for land sakes.

Hear ye, hear ye, an important public announcement is hereby, herewith and herein brought to the attention of one Benny Potts, sun and air of William P. Potts and Pawleen Potts and inhabiting the premises thereof but subject to certain distinctive laws and regulations befitting his age and station in life, pop said, and I said, Jimminy, pop, that sounds swell.

Hear ye, hear ye, pop said. Whereas the hours of the day have lengthened to the hour of the night generally accepted in fee simple as the time of nocturnal retirement for the said Benny Potts, hereafter to be known as the party of the first part-it is hereby agreed and understood and accepted in good faith that the said party of the first part promptly ascend the construction known to all and sundry as the stairway and assume a recumbent and relaxed position in the article of furniture designed as a receptable for the disrobed form of the said party of the first part, he said.

Meaning go to bed, and I said, Well gosh, pop.

If I may descend to a tecknicality, scram, pop said.

Which I did, proving you cant beat plain English.

ENEMY SUFFERS HEAVILY

Chungking, Aug. 31 (AP)—Clashes around Japanese - held Kinhwa, railway town in Chekiang Province, were reported today in a Chinese high commond communique which stated that in one section, "the enemy suffered heavily before retreating."

The Chinese attacked and killed more than half the Japanese troops convoying a salt-carrying boat near Tsinan and took booty, including more than 100 rifles, the communique said.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Never since Hitler broke his pledged word and attacked Russia has the position of his armies on the eastern front been so precarious as it has become with the loss of his right wing anchor—Taganrog, on the sea of Azov.

That right wing now is like a pennant on a flag-pole, its fluttering loose end subject to the winds that sweep across it. Of course, that's an unmilitary and exaggerated figure of speech, but it will have served its purpose if it emphasizes the danger of the Nazi position.

Having taken this major stronghold one of the vital parts of the gateway to the oil fields of the Caucasus, the Red Army today is reported crushing its way steadily westward along the coast of the sea of Azov.

Having been torn loose from his Taganrog anchor, the Fuehrer now is faced with two nasty alternatives:-

1. He must stage a heavy counter-attack in the Donets Basin to the North of Taganrog and fling the Reds back, thus restoring his previous positions.

2. Failing in this, he must continue his withdrawal until his whole vast front from the sea of Azov northward to Leningrad, a distance of more than 1,000 miles, has been pulled back under fierce Russian attack to the line of the great Dnieper River.

If the Germans have the strength they may be expected to counterattack. I was chatting on this point with my colleague Brig.-Gen. H. S. Sewell, the Distinguished British Military expert, and he remarked that "heavy counter-attacks must be expected in the Donets, and failure in this respect may well be regarded as a sign of Nazi weakness."

That seems to sum the matter up neatly. If the invaders don't counter-attack, or if they make the attempt and fail, it will be significant as showing that the German war machine has lost a tremendous amount of the striking power which used to terrify the world.

Should the Germans be forced to retire to the line of the Dnieper, one would expect them to make a back-to-the-wall stand to hold the Crimea. The Dnieper bulges out to the east, just north of the Crimea. There's a railway which touches the point of this bulge by Zaporozhe and runs south through Melitopol into the Crimea.

It's logical to expect the Germans to try to hold along that railway, if they get pushed back that far.

Carmel
Mrs. Harrison Guest Speaker at W.M.S.

Carmel—The W.M.S. held an open meeting in the church on Sunday afternoon, August 15th. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Homan. The choir sang with Mrs. Blake Pitman at the piano. Mrs. Wallace Simmons then took charge. Miss Mildred Jones gave a very interesting reading. Mrs. Summers introduced Mrs. Harrison who opened her discourse with a talk to the children. Speaking on her next subject, based on Christian stewardship, Mrs. Harrison pointed out very clearly the responsibility of W.M.S. workers along that line. Her talk was most interesting and instructive. Mrs. W. Sills and Mrs. M. Wootton then sang a duet. The offering was received and Mrs. Homan gave the offertory prayer. Mrs. Simmons closed the program with a reading.

Labor Council To Protest Ruling

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 31 — (CP) —Windsor Labor Council, comprising representatives of 18 unions with an estimated membership of 30,000 will forward a protest to Prices Board officials at Ottawa against reduction to six months of the notice required for a tenant when the house he is living in has been sold, it was announced today.

Previously a 12-month notice was required.

The Labor Council is chartered by the Canadian Congress of Labor and is affiliated with the C.I.O. in Canada.

Officials said the council also will ask federal authorities for complete publicity on reports submitted to the Department of Labor by the War Labor Board on labor relations in Canada.

Takes Responsibility For Abortive Revolt

Panama, Aug. 31 —(AP)— Dr. Jose Pezet, former vice-president in the regime of Arnulfo Arias and a former Panamanian ambassador to Costa Rica, took sole responsibility today for an abortive revolt against the government of President Adolfo De La Guardia.

Dr. Pezet and several others were rounded up for questioning after authorities nipped the budding revolt Sunday morning.

Pezet was reported to have made a confession to Judge Carlos Quevara.

The only purpose of the plot, he was reported to have said, was to establish himself as president of Panama, because he believed that the present regime which overthrew President Arias in 1941 is "unconstitutional."

OLD TIME TONIC USED AS BEVERAGE

Reminiscent of the old prohibition days of the roarin' 20's, Belleville police gazed in surprise at the contents of the pocket of an inebriate who was arrested in a downtown restaurant last night. Protruding from his hip pocket was a bottle of beef, iron and wine, generally sold for medicinal purposes but during those hectic days of prohibition was quite often consumed in lieu of more potent intoxicants.

"That's the first time I've seen a bottle of beef, iron and wine taken from a drunk in this police station in near 20 years," remarked one veteran policeman as William Harrison, Trenton, was searched and incarcerated on a drunk count after the "medicine bottle" had been taken from his person last evening. Only a portion of the contents had been consumed.

Orders De Marigny Held for Trial

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 31—(CP) —Magistrate F. E. Field today ordered Alfred De Marigny held for jury trial on a charge of murdering his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

He ordered the tall, bearded De Marigny, husband of Sir Harry's eldest daughter, Nancy, committed after hearing 28 witnesses testify at a preliminary hearing which began July 12, four days after Sir Harry's bludgeoned and burned body was discovered in a bed at his sea-side estate, Westbourne.

Attorney General Eric Hallinan said he will file an indictment when the Bahamas Supreme Court opens its next term Oct. 6.

Just before Field announced his ruling, the defence introduced its one witness, a former prison physician, to strike at prosecution testimony that burned hairs were found on De Marigny's arms and hands.

Dr. Ulrich Oberwarth said he examined De Marigny July 10, the day after his arrest, and "I didn't find any singes, burns or scalds."

Capt. James O. Barker of the Miami police previously had testified that the night of July 8, some 14 or 16 hours after Sir Harry's body was found, he subjected De Marigny to a microscopic examination and found burned hairs on the accused man's arms and hands.

Dr. Oberwarth testified that he made a naked eye examination and declared under prosecution questioning it would be possible that burned hairs might not be detected save by an examination under lenses.

The case is expected to be brought to trial in October.

Where Is Ciano?

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—A good part of Europe joined the guessing game today over the whereabouts of Count Galeazzo Ciano, former Italian Foreign Minister and son-in-law of Mussolini who apparently has escaped from house arrest at his home in Rome.

He was variously reported arrested near the French frontier, hiding in the Spanish Embassy in Rome, and at Innsbruck in Germany.

At least two reports had Ciano at Innsbruck. A Reuters News Agency dispatch from the Italian frontier said the latest word was that he had gotten over the border "with the assistance of foreign friends" and that his escape was causing great indignation throughout Italy. This coincided with the German underground radio Atlantik report, which said Ciano was at Innsbruck.

Simultaneously a DNB, German News Agency, report quoted Stafani News Agency as saying that both Ciano and Count Dino Grandi, member of the Fascist Grand Council, had been placed on the "retired list."

The London Daily Express quoted unconfirmed reports from Berne that Ciano, his wife Edda, and their three children had been arrested near the French frontier.

The dispatch said Ciano was dressed as a peasant and had large bundles of French, Italian and Spanish currency in his possession.

Danish Soldiers Seize Boats To Aid Escape

Stockholm, Aug. 31 —(AP)— Danish soldiers commandeered boats at pistol point to escape from Denmark to Sweden Sunday.

The captain of a motor fishing craft told this story at Hoeganaes: "I docked at the little port of Gilleleje because of a storm. Sleeping in my bunk, I was awakened by the clatter of persons coming on board, and then two officers walked into my cabin, pointed pistols at me and said 'we are going to Sweden.'

"Fifty-six infantry soldiers came aboard along with two other officers. Two Danish policemen were at the wharf. One ran back home and got his wife and they came aboard too.

"Then a 16-year-old boy came along, begging to go. All crowded aboard without any belongings and we headed into the stormy night expecting to be shot at any moment.

"Germans were patrolling all the waters between Denmark and Sweden with fast coastal boats. But we got across without trouble."

Blast Factories And River Craft

New Delhi, Aug. 31. (CP)—Royal Air Force fighters and dive-bombers continued to range over Burma yesterday, shooting up Japanese troops positions and blasting factories and river craft, an Allied communique announced today.

A formation of Vengeances swept down on troop positions at Maungdaw, scoring direct hits, the communique reported, while rolling stock and locomotives were pounded at Ingin and two factories left in flames at Kyangin.

Hurricanes bombed about 100 river craft on the Irrawaddy river near Pagan, severely damaging a large number, while Beaufighters damaged nine steamers between Pakokku and Mandalay.

Beaufighters also attacked a number of boats near Kanaung farther south and seriously damaged four barges and two factories at Nyanaung.

No planes were lost.

How He Eluded German Prisoner Told by Cyclist

Montreal, Aug. 31. (CP)—Harold Pugash, 15-year-old Strathcona Academy student told yesterday how he eluded one of the German prisoners who made their escape from Kingston Internment Camp Friday morning and how he aided in the capture of three others.

One of a party of ten Montrealers and three Quebec cyclists, Pugash said the German dashed out of the bushes near his bicycle as he rode past.

"He ran out of a barn near the side of the road and stopped me", he said. "He was a big fellow. . . about five feet eleven. He was in civies but they didn't fit him. He spoke English and simply asked me if I was alone.

"It was my bike he wanted, but I managed to break away and got out of sight. I don't think I ever pedalled so fast in my life".

Shortly after, Pugash said, he met an army sergeant on a motorcycle and he told him of his escape. He said that half an hour later a party of soldiers rounded up three of the prisoners near the same spot.

Dome Mines and Consolidated Laundries were among a handful of issues getting into high ground for 1943. In front were Bethlehem, U.S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, Pepsi-Cola, Western Union, Homestake Mining, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, American Telephone and Standard Oil (New Jersey.)

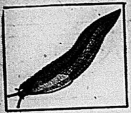
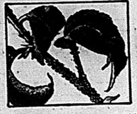
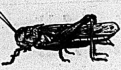
Hunting Prospects Good—In Own Backyard







Crawling, slimp slugs, clustering aphids and leaping grasshoppers may not be the pleasantest things to look at or think about, but the determined Victory gardener will not think about these destructive pests but get busy and do something about them. (1) Late evening, preferably after dark, is the best time to attack the night-feeding slug who announces his presence by the slimy trail he leaves behind him on the earth and plants. Infested plants and the soil beneath them should be dusted slightly with hydrated lime. The area should be gone over three or four times as the lime loses its efficacy when it becomes wet with dew. Treatment should be repeated at intervals of three or four days. (2) Aphids cluster in dense masses on new growth of many plants. They are sap-suckers, stunting the growth of the plants and often causing the leaves to curl up. They come in a good range of colours, green, blue, black, grey and red. They are easily brought under control by spraying; the most commonly used spray is made by adding 2 teaspoonfuls nicotine sulphate to 1 gallon soapy water. Spraying should be thorough and be done on a warm, calm day, repeating at intervals of a week, if necesary. (3) In late summer and early fall, gardens may be invaded by a plague of grasshoppers who have a particular affinity for potatoes. Poison bait spread in the early morning, not on very hot or cold and windy days, will check the invader. It should also be spread in adjoining fields. The bait formula is 12½ lbs. bran, 12½ lbs. sawdust, 1 lb. Paris green, 2½ gallons water. The bait should be just moist enough to be crumbly and should be spread about 20 lbs. to the acre. Crops may also be protected against 'hoppers with a dust of 1 part (by weight) lead arsenate to 6 parts hydrated lime or by spraying with a mixture of 2 lbs. calcium arsenate, 2 lbs. hydrated lime and 40 gallons water.

John W. Tibbs, CP Feature Editor, Dies Suddenly

Toronto, Aug. 31. (CP)—John W. Tibbs 63, Feature Service Editor of The Canadian Press and widely known throughout the newspaper profession in Canada, died suddenly early last night of a heart attack.

Mr. Tibbs left his office at the CP apparently in good health and had just reached his home, (12 Melrose Avenue) in the northern end of the city, when he collapsed and died.

Mr. Tibbs, a veteran of the Boer War, joined the CP Sept. 1, 1917. He served in many capacities—as news manager, as assistant to former general manager J. F. B. Livesay soon after nationalization of the CP Service, and as Ontario superintendent.

Before his association with the CP he worked for four years with the old Toronto News and for 11 years with the Toronto Star.

Primarily a desk-man and news-organizer, Mr. Tibbs still found time to get out on the street for an occasional story. Most recent of those he covered were the Royal visit to Canada in 1939 and the Labatt kidnapping case in 1934.

He laid the foundation for the election-coverage organization by which the CP compiles results in national voting.

Helped Young Newsmen.

In the early days of The Canadian Press he was active in development of service to daily newspapers, especially in Ontario. He was particularly known for the generous help he gave young men entering newspaper work.

Mr. Tibbs was an active worker in the United Church.

John William Tibbs was born Sept. 23, 1879, at Lechmore Hearth, Herts, England, and came to Toronto as a child with his parents. He attended Toronto public and high schools and in his youth worked as a law office clerk and as a bookkeeper before serving in the South African campaign as a gunner for 18 months. Among veteran newspapermen he still was familiarly known as "gunner".

He is survived by his widow, Violet Lavery Tibbs, and two sons, AC2 John L. Tibbs and LAC. Edgar Tibbs of the Royal Canadian Air Force. When war-guest children were brought to Canada from England, Mr. Tibbs took into his home Jean Imock, now 14.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at three p.m. (at Miles Funeral Chapel). Burial will be in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

12-Year-Old Boy Lands 32 lb. 'Lunge

Trenton — (Special) — Another big fish was landed in the Bay of Quinte on Sunday just off the pier of Trenton's new park at the east end of the town. While rowing along and trolling with a 35-foot line and a Lucky Strike spoon, 12-year-old Bill Turland, son of W.O.1 Turland of the R.C.A.F., hooked a 32-pound 'lunge. With the aid of an airman who was in the boat with him at the time the muskie was landed successfully and when later measured proved to be four feet two inches long.

MANY TIMES SYNTONA HAS BEEN A GREAT HELP TO ME

Have Used It For Five Years Whenever I Feel Out of Sorts, Says Mr. Braun. Tells of Relief From Kidney Troubles, Getting Up Nights, Dizziness and Nervousness.

MR. DAVID F. BRAUN

There is scarcely a person who at one time or another has not suffered from disorders of stomach, kidneys, liver or bowels and wherever Syntona is known, hundreds of men and women tell of its real usefulness in relieving them of such common symptoms as gas, indigestion, backache, getting up nights, nervousness and rheumatic aches and pains.

The following experience of Mr. David F. Braun, Stoney Creek, Ontario, is a typical example:

"I first used Syntona 5 years ago when I was badly rundown," said Mr. Braun. "I had suffered a long time with stomach disorders, gas, indigestion and heartburn. After trying a lot of things, I got some Syntona and it helped me so much that I've been taking it off and on ever since whenever I feel the need of it. Many times it has been a great help to me."

"My most recent experience with Syntona was just a few weeks ago. My kidneys started giving me a lot of trouble. I was getting up several times each night. I'd get awfully dizzy and my nerves were bad. During the day I felt tired and had no energy. So I got some more Syntona and, sure enough, after taking a bottle or two, I was feeling better again. Now my kidneys do not trouble me as they did. I sleep soundly, my nerves have calmed down and I feel better in every way.

"I think more people should know about this fine herb and root medicine and I, for one, can highly recommend it."

Go to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

"YOU BET, I'LL BUY GOODYEARS"

● A recent independent, nation-wide poll amongst Canadian motorists shows that more than one-half of them prefer Goodyears.

Now that motorists have found it necessary to get every last mile out of their tires, they're finding out for themselves just how much extra mileage and how many "lasting qualities" Goodyears have.

Of course, it has always been true that Goodyears could deliver a plus in mileage and service. It's true, because Goodyear has always built extra stamina, quality and value into Goodyear tires.

That's going to be true, too, when you can buy your next set of Goodyears. It may be some time before those new Goodyears will be available ::: maybe not until after the war ::: but, you can bank on this, they'll still be Canada's "first choice" tire.

Here is the
